To the Reader.

I have endeavored to explain the changes in the heads of the law in several learned and noble communities, the wealth and the wisdom of which I esteem with a very high preference to those of our own. If I have not been able to avoid the mistakes which a learned controversy is liable to, I have, at least, avoided one great sin, viz. that of publishing a work for which I have not been prepared. The first edition of the present was intended to be a trial, and the second at most a permanent correction of the errors I might have been guilty of, had it been published at first. If I have been happy enough to have received good advice in the meantime, it is not my business to complain. As I have not been guilty of anything which is not of a nature to hurt my character, I will, upon any future occasion, be so good as to publish my books without the trouble of submitting them to the censure of the learned, who are too sensible of the inconvenience it is to the public to be forced to read the errors of others without seeing them corrected by the authors. I am, etc.
To the Reader.

This Figure, that thou here seest put,
   It was for gentle Shakespeare cut;
Wherein the Grauer had a strife with Nature, to out-doo the life:
O, could he but haue drawne his wit
   As well in brasfe, as he hath hit
His face; the Print would then furpasse
   All, that vvas euer vvrit in brasfe.
But, since he cannot, Reader, looke
   Not on his Pìcture, but his Booke.

of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

Hilè we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many fauors we haue received from your L.L.
we are faine upon the ill fortune, to mingle
two the most diuerse things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the succeffe. For, when we valew the places your H.H. sustaine, we cannot but know their dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue depriu'd our felues of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L.L. haue beene pleas'd to thinke these trifles some-thing, bereetofore; and haue prosequuted both them, and their Authour liuing, with so much fauour: we hope, that (they out-liuing him, and be not hauing the fate, common with some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you haue done unto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Booke choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L.L. likings of the severall parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We haue but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of selfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of so worthy a Friend, & Fellow alioe, as was our S H A K E S P E A R E, by bum-ble offer of his playes, to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue justly observ'd, no man to come neere your L.L. but with a kind of religious addresse; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the present worthy of your H.H. by the perfection. But, there we must also craue our abilities to be considered, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach foorth milke, creame, fruites, or what they haue: and many Nations (we haue heard) that had not gummes & incense, obtained their requests with a leauened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what meanes they could: And the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most bumbly consecrate to your H.H. these remaines of your fervant Shakespeare; that what delight is in them, may be euer your L.L. the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre so carefull to shew their gratitude both to the liuing, and the dead, as is

Your Lordshippes most bounden,

To the great Variety of Readers.

From the most able, to him that can but spell: There you are numbered. We had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Bookes depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well! it is now publique, & you will stand for your priuiledges wee know: to read, and censure. Do so, but buy it first. That doth best commend a Booke, the Stationer saies. Then, how odde doeuer your braines be, or your wifedomes, make your licence the fame, and spare not. Judge your fixe-pennorth, your shillings worth, your fue shillings worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the just rates, and welcome. But, what euer you do, Buy. Censure will not driue a Trade, or make the Jacke go. And though you be a Magistrate of wit, and sit on the Stage at Black-Friers, or the Cock-pit, to arraigne Playes dailie, know, thefe Playes haue had their triall alreadie, and stood out all Appeals; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of commendation.

It had bene a thing, we confeffe, worthie to haue bene wilfed, that the Author himelsfe had liu'd to haue set forth, and overfeen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwife, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envie his Friends, the office of their care, and paine, to haue collected & publisht them; and fo to haue publisht them, as wher (before) you were abus'd with diuerfe ftolne, and surreptitious copies, maimed, and deformed by the frauds and theftes of injurious imposter, that expos'd them: even thofe, are now offer'd to your view cur'd, and perfect of their limbs; and all the rest, abolute in their numbers, as he conceived the. Who, as he was a happie imitator of Nature, was a moft gentle exprefser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he uttered with that easinesse, that wee haue scarce receuied from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our prouince, who onely gather his works, and glue them you, to praiе him. It is yours that reade him. And there we hope, to your diuers capacities, you will finde enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be loft. Reade him, therefore; and againe, and againe: And if then you doe not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to vnderf tand him. And fo we leaue you to other of his Friends, whom if you need, can bee your guides: if you neede them not, you can leade your felues, and others. And fuch Readers we with him.

To the memory of my beloved,

The AUTHOR

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:

And what he hath left vs.
Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughty Rome sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
Triumph, my Britaine, thou hast one to show,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Muses still were in their prime,
When like Apollo be came forth to warme
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm.
Nature her selfe was proud of his designs,
And joy'd to weare the dressing of his lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As since, she will vouchsafe no other Wit.
The merry Grecke, tart Ariftophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
But antiquated, and deserted lye
As they were not of Natures family.
Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part.
For though the Poets matter, Nature be,
His Art doth give the fashion. And, that be,
Who dares to write a living line, must sweat,
(such as thine are) and strike the second beat
Vpon the Muses anuile: turne the same,
(And himselfe with it) that he thinkes to frame;
Or for the lawrell, he may aigne a scorne,
For a good Poet's made, as well as borne.
And such wert thou. Looke how the fathers face
Lines in his issue, even so, the race
Of Shakespeares minde, and manners brightly shines
In his well torned, and true-filed lines:
In each of which, be seemes to shake a Lance,
As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Auon! what a sight it were
To see thee in our waters yet appeare,
And make those flights upon the banke of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our lames!
But say, I see thee in the Hemisphere
Aduan'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or chere the drooping Stage;
Which, since thy flight far hence, both mourn'd like night,
And despaire's day, but for thy Volumes light.

BEN: IONSON.
Vpon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenicke Poet, Master WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Hose hands, which you so clapt, go now, and wring
You Britaines braue; for done are Shakespeares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of heau'n and earth to ring.
Dry'de is that veine, dry'd is the Thespian Spring,
Turn'd all to teares, and Phoebus clouds his rayes:
That corp's, that coffin now bestowed those bayes,
Which crown'd him Poet first, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue haue,
All those he made, would scarce make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the grawe (Deaths publique tyring-houfe) the Nuncius is.
For though his line of life went soone about,
The life yet of his lines shall neuer out.

HVGH HOLLAND.
TO THE MEMORIE
of the deceased Author Maister
W. SHAKESPEARE.

Hake-shpeare, at length thy pious fellowes giue
The world thy Workes: thy Workes, by which, out-live
Thy Tombe, thy name must: when that stone is rent,
And Time dissolves thy Stratford Moniment,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This Booke,
When Brass and Marble fade, shall make thee looke
Fresht to all Ages: when Pofteritie
Shall loath what's new, thinke all is prodegie
That is not Shake-shpeares; eu'ry Line, each Verje
Here shall reviue, redeeme thee from thy Herse.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Nafsaid,
Of his, thy wits fraught Booke shall once invade.
Nor shall I e're beleue, or thinke thee dead
(Though mist) untill our bankrout Stage be sped
(Impossible) with some new straine t'out-do
Pasions of Tulliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I heare a Scene more nobly take,
Then when thy halfe Sword parlying Romans speake.
Till these, till any of thy Volumes rest
Shall with more fire, more feeling be expresst,
Be sure, our Shakespeare, thou canst never dye,
But crown'd with Lawrell, liue eternally.

L. Digges.

To the memorie of M. W. Shake-shpeare.

VEE wondred (Shake-shpeare) that thou went'ft so soon
From the Worlds Stage, to the Graue-Tyring-room.
Wee thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tells thy Spectators, that thou went'ft but forth
To enter with applause. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and liue, to acte a second part.
That's but an Exit of Mortalitie;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard: Enter a Ship-master, and a Botefwaine.

Master.

Botef. Heere Master: What cheere?
Mafi. Good: Speake to th'Mariners: fall too, yarely, or we run our felues a ground, or to theire, or to theire.

Enter Mariners.

Botef. Heigh my hearts, yarely, yarely my harts: yare, yare: Take in the toppe-sale: Tend to th'Masters whistler: Blow till thou burft thy winde, if roome enough.

Enter Alonfio, Sebastiano, Antinio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Botefwaine haue care: where's the Master? Play the men.
Botef. I pray now keepe below.
Ant. Where is the Master, Bofon?
Botef. Do you not heare him? you marre our labour, Keepe your Cabines: you do aslant the storme.

Gonz. Nay, good be patient.
Botef. When the Sea is: hence, what cares these roapers for the name of King? to Cabine; silence: trouble vs not.

Gen. Good, yet remember whom thou haft aboard.
Botef. None that I more love then my selfe. You are a Counsellor, if you can command these Elements to silence, and worke the peace of the present, wee will not hand a rope more, vfe your authoritie: If you cannot, give thanks you have liu'd so long, and make your selfe readie in your Cabine for the mischance of the houre, if it so hap. Cheereuly good hearts: out of our way I say.

Gen. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning marke upon him, his complexion is perfect. Gallowes: stand fast good Fate to his hanging, make the rope of his definity our cable, for our owne doth little advantage: If he be not borne to bee hang'd, our cafe is miserable.

Enter Botefwaine.

Botef. Downe with the top-Mast: yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Maine-coure. A plague—

_A try within._ Enter Sebastiano, Antinio & Gonzalo.

Upon this howling: they are lower then the weather, or our office: yet againe? What do you heere? Shal we glue ore and drown we, haue you a minde to finke?

Sebaf. A pox of your throat, you bawling, blasphemous incharitable Dog.

Botef. Worke you then.

Ant. Hang cur, hang, you whoreon insolent Nobleman, we are leffe afraid to be drownede, then thou art.

Gonz. I'le warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no stronger then a Nutt-shell, and as leaky as an vnfinshed wench.

Botef. Lay her a hold, a hold, set her two course off to Sea againe, lay her off.

Enter Marineres yet.

Marti. All loft, to prayers, to prayers, all loft.

Botef. What muft our mouths be cold?

Gonn. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's affift them, for our cafe is as theirs.

Sebaf. I'am out of patience.

Ant. We are meerely cheated of our liues by drunkards, this wide-chopt-racally, would thou mightst lye drowning the washing of ten Tides.

Gonz. He'll be hang'd yet, though every drop of water sweare against it, and gape at width to glut him. _A confused noye within._

Mercy on us.

We split, we split, Farewell my wife, and children, Farewell brother: we split, we split, we split.

Ant. Let's all finke with King

Seb. Let's take leue of him.

Gonz. Now would I gie a thousand furlongs of Sea, for an Acre of barren ground: Long heath, Browne firs, any things the wills aboue be done, but I would faine dye a dry death.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Troffero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my deere father) you have put the wild waters in this枯燥ay them:

The skye it feemes would powre down thinking pitch, But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheeke, Difhers the fire out. Oh! I have suffered With those that I few suffere: A braue vefell

_A (Who_
The Tempest.

(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)
Dafh'd all to peeces: O the cry did knocke
Against my very heart: poore soules, they perish'd.
Had I bryn any God of power, I would Haue funkne the Sea within the Earth, or ere it should the good Ship to haue swallow'd, and
The fraughting Soules within her.
Prof. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your piteuous heart
there's no harme done.
Mira. O woe, the day.
Prof. No harme:
I haue done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my deere one; thee my daughter) who Art ignorant of what thou art . naught knowing
Of whence I am: nor that I am more better
Then Poverforo, Master of a full poore cell,
And thy no greater Father.
Mira. More to know
Died neuer medle with my thoughts.
Prof. 'Tis time
I should informe thee farther: Lend thy hand
And plucke my Magick garment from me: So,
Lye there my Art: wipe thou thine eyes, haue comfort,
The direfull spectacle of the wracke which touch'd
The very vertue of compation in thee: I haue with such pronifion in mine Art
So safely ordered, that there is no foule
No not so much perdition as an hayre
Betid to any creature in the vessell
Which thou heardest cry, which thou faw'rt finke: Sit
For thou must now know farther. [downe,
Mira. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but flopt
And left me to a bootlefle Inquisition,
Concluding, fly: not yet.
Prof. The hour's now come
The very minute byds thee ope thine eare,
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came vnto this Cell?
I doe not thinke thou canst, for then was not
Out three yeeres old.
Mira. Certainly Sir, I can.
Prof. By what? by any other house, or perfon?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Mira. 'Tis farre off:
And rather like a dreame, then an affurance
That my remembrance warrants: Had I not
Fowre, or five women once, that tended me?
Prof. Thou hast; and more Miranda: But how is it
That this lives in thy minde? What feeth thou els
In the dark-backward and Abiffe of Time?
Yf thou remembr'ft ought ere thou can'tt here,
How thou can'tt here thou maid.
Mira. But that I doe not.
Prof. Twelve yer eince (Miranda) twelve yer eince, Thy father was the Duke of Milaine and
A Prince of power:
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Prof. Thy Mother was a piece of vertue, and
She faid thou waft my daughter: and thy father
Was Duke of Milaine, and his only heere,
And Princepe; no worfe lifyed.
Mira. O the heauens,
What fowle play had we, that we came from thence?
Or bleffed waft' we did?
Prof. Both, both my Girle,
By fowle-play (as thou faith) were we haund thence,
But bleffedly holpe hither.
Mira. O my heart bleedes
To thinke thee trene that I haue turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance, pleafe you, farther;
Prof. My brother and thy vnkle, call'd Antonio: I pray thee marke me, that a brother should
Be fo perifious: he, whom next thy felfe
Of all the world I lou'd, and to him put
The mannage of my flate, as at that time
Through all the fignories it was the firft,
And Poverforo, the prime Duke, being fo reputed
In dignity; and for the liberal Artes,
Without a parrelle; I thofe being all my ftdie,
The Government I caft vpon my brother,
And to my State grew strangre, being transported
And rapt in fecretfteudies, thy falfe vnkle
(Do'ft thou attend me?)
Mira. Sir, moft heedfully.
Prof. Being once perfected how to graunt fuites, how to deny them: who t'advance, and who
To traff for over-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I fay, or chang'd 'em,
Or els new form'd 'em: hauing both the key,
Of Officer, and office, fet all hearts ith flate
To what tune pleas'd his eare, that now he was
The Luy which had hid my princely Trunck,
And fuctk my verdure out on't: Thou attend'ft not?
Mira. O good Sir, I doe.
Prof. I pray thee marke me:
I thus negligence worldly ends, all dedicated
To clofenes, and the bettering of my mind with that, which but by being fo retir'd
Ore-prize'd all popular rate:in my falfe brother
Awak'd an euill nature, and my truth
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falfehood in it's contrarie, as great
As my truth was, which had indeede no limit,
A confidence fans bound. He being thus Lorded,
Not onely with what my reuenew yeelded,
But what my power might els exact. Like one
Who hauing into truth, by telling of it,
Made fuch a fynner of his memore
To credite his owne lie, he did beleue
He was indeed the Duke, out o' th' Subftitution
And executing th'outward face of Roidalte
With all prorogatives: hence his Ambition growing:
Do'ft thou hear?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure defacenesse.
Prof. To have no Screeene between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needes will be Abolute Milaine, Me (poore man) my Librarie
Was Dukedome large enough: of temporall realities
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(fo dre he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To give him Annuall tribute, doe him homage
Subiect his Coronet, to his Crowne and bend
The Dukedom yet vnbow'd (ala poore Millaine)
To moft ignoble flooping.
Mira. Oh the heauens:
Prof. Marke his condition, and th'euen, then tell me
If this might be a brother.
Mira. I shou'd finne
To thinke but Noble of my Grand-mother, Good
The Tempest.

Good wombs have borne bad fowes.

Pro. Now the Condition.

This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me innsate, hearken my Brothers suit, Which was, That he in lieu o' th' premisses, Of homage, and I know not how much Tribute, Should presently extirpate me and mine Out of the Duke's Commen, and confer faire Millaine With all the Honors, on my brother Whereon A treacherous Armie leued, one mid-night Fated to th' purpose, did Antiochus open The gates of Millaine, and th' dead of darkennesse The ministers for th' purpose hurried thence Me, and thy crying felfe.

Mir. Alack, for pity: I not remembering how I cride out then Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint That wrings mine eyes too't.

Pro. Heare a little further, And then I'le bring thee to the preuent businesse Which now's vpon's: without the which, this Story Were most impertinent.

Mir. Wherefore thev they not That howre destroy't?

Pro. Well demanded, wench: My Tale provokes that question: Deare, they durt not, So deare the loue my people bore me: nor fet A marke so bloudy on the businesse; but With colours fairer, painted their soule ends. In few, they hurried a board a Barke, Bore vs some Leagues to Sea, where they prepared A rotten carkaffe of a But, not rigg'd, Nor tacke, fayle, nor moufe, the very rats Infinitelie have quitted it: There they hoynt vs To cry to th' Sea, that road to vs; to figh To th' windes, whose pitty fighing backe againe Did vs butlowing wrong.

Mir. Alack, what trouble Was I then to you?

Pro. O, a Cherubin Thou wast that did preferue me; Thou didft smile, Infu'd with a fortitude from heavens, When I haue deck'd the sea with drops full fat, Vnder my battern groan'd, which ra'lld in me An vndergoing ftomacks, to bare vp Against what fhould enue.

Mir. How came we a shore?

Pro. By prouidence diuine, Some food, we had, and some fresh water, that A noble Neapolitan Gonalo Out of his Charity, (who being then appointed Master of this deigne) did glue vs, with Rich garments, linnen, fpiffes, and necessaries Which fince haue ftewed much, fo of his gentlenesse Knowing I lou'd my bookes, he furnished me From mine owne Library, with volumes, that I prize above my Duckedome.

Mir. Would I might But euer fee that man.

Pro. Now I arie, Sit fyll, and heare the laft of our sea-forrow: Here in this Land we arriu'd, and heere Haue I, thy Schoolemafter, made thee more profit Then other Princefle can, that haue more time For vainer howeres; and Tutors, not fo carefull.

Mir. Heuens thank you for't. And now I pray you Sir, For still 'tis beating in my minde; your reafon For rayling this Sea-ftorme?

Pro. Know thus far forth, By accident moft strange, bountifull Fortune (Now my dreere Lady) hath mine enemies Brought to this thore: And by my prefience I finde my Zenith doth depend vpon A moft aupitious ftarr, whose influence If now I count not, but omit; my fortunes Will euer after droope: Heare ceafe more questions, Thou art inclinde to sleepe: 'tis a good dulneffe, And glue it way: I know thou canst not chufe: Come away, Seruant, come; I am ready now, Approach my Artel. Come.

Ari. All hales, great Maffer, graue Sir, halle: I come To answere thy beft pleasure; be't to fly, To swim, to die into the fire: to ride On the curd clowds: to thy strong bidding, takest

Ariel, and all his Quality.

Pro. Haft thou, Spirit, Performed to point, the Tempest that I bad thee. Ar. To every Article. I boorded the Kings fhip now on the Beake, Now in the Waffe, the Decke, in every Cabyn, I fam'd amazement, sometime I'd duide And burne in many places; on the Top-maft, The Yards and Bore-spirit, would I fame diftinctly, Then meete, and loyne. Jove Lighting, the precurers O'th dreadfull Thunder-claps more momentarie And fight out-running were not; the fire, and cracks Of sulphurous roaring, the moft mighty Neptune Seeme to befiege, and make his bold waves tremble, Ye, his dread Tridents haile.

Pro. My brave Spirit, Who was fo fime, fo confitant, that this coyle Would not infect his reafon?

Ar. Not a fould But belt a Feauer of the madde, and piald Some tricks of defperation; all but Mariners Plung'd in the foaming bryne, and quitt the vellif; Then all a fire with me the Kings fonne Ferdinand With harte vp-flarering (then like reeds, not haire) Was the firft man that leapt: cride hell is emptie, And all the Diuels are heere.

Pro. Why that's my fpirit: But was not this nye thore?

Ar. Clofe by, my Maffer.

Pro. But are they (Ariel) fafe?

Ar. Not a haire perill'd:

On their fulfaining garments not a blemiff, But frether then before: and as thou badft me, In troops I haue difperfed them 'bout the ifle: The Kings fonne haue I landed by himselfe, Whom I left cooling of the Ayre with fighes, In an odd Angle of the ifle, and fitting His armes in this fad knot.

Pro. Of the Kings fhip,
The Marriners, fhew how thou haft difpoft, And all the reft of thy Fleete?

Ar. Safely in harbour Is the Kings fhippe, in the deeppe Nooke, where once Thou caull'd me vp at midnight to fetch dewe From the flill-vext Bermouipes, there th' is hid; The Marriners all vnder hatches flowed, Who, with a Charme loynd to their fuffed labour I haue left afleep: and for the reft o'th' Fleete

Which
The Tempest.

(Which I dispers'd) they all have met againe, And are upon the Mediterranean Flote Bound suddenly home for Naples, Supposing that they saw the Kings ship wrackt, And his great perfon perift. Pro. Ariel, thy charge

Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work: What is the time o' th' day? Ar. Paft the mid season. Pro. At least two Glaffes: the time 'twixt fix & now Must by vs both be spent most preciously. Ar. Is there more toyle? Since y doft glue me pains, Let me rememb're thee what thou haft promis'd, Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now? moodie? What is't thou canst demand? Ar. My Libertie. Pro. Before the time be out? no more: Ar. I prethee, Remember I have done thee worthy seruice, Told thee no lyes, made thee no miftakings, serv'd Without or grudge, or grumblings; thou did promise To bate me a full yeere.

Pro. Do't thou forget From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No. Pro. Thou do'st: & thinke't it much to tread y Ooze Of the salt deeps; To run vp on th' sharp winds of the North, To doe me bufinesse in the veins o'th' earth When it is bak'd with frost.

Ar. I do not Sir. Pro. Thou haft: where was the born? speake: tell me! Ar. Sir, in Argier. Pro. Oh, was the fo: I must

Once in a moneth recount what thou haft bin, Which thou forget't. This damn'd Witch Sycorex For mischifes manifold, and forcreries terrible To enter humane hearing, from Argier Thou know'ft it was banish'd: for one thing she did They wold not take her life: Is not this true? Ar. I, Sir. Pro. This blew ey'd hag, was hitther brought with And here was left by th'Saylors; thou my flue, (child) As thou repor'tst thy felie, was then her feruant, And for thou waft a Spirit too delicate To acht her earthly, and abord commands, Refusing her grand hefts, she did confine thee By helpe of her more potent MinifTERS, And in her moft vnmitigable rage, Into a clouen Pyne, within which rife Impifion'd, thou didst painefullly remaine A dozen yeeres: within which space the di'd, And left thee there: where thou didst not wyt thy groanes As faft as Mill-wheiles frike: Then was this Iland (Saue for the Son, that he did littoor heere, A frekellid whelpe, bag-borne) not honour'd with A humane shape.

Ar. Yes: Caliban her fonne.

Pro. Dull thing, I fay fo: he, that Caliban Whom now I keepe in seruice, thou know'ft now'That torment I did finde thee in; thy groanes Did make wolfes howle, and penetrate the breata Of euer-angry Beares; it was a torment

To lay vpon the damn'd, which Sycorex Could not againe vnfoe: it was mine Art, When I arriu'd, and heard thee, that made gape The Pyne, and let thee out. Ar. I thanke thee Mafter.

Pro. If thou more murmur'ft, I will rend an Oak And peg thee in his knotty entrailes, till Thou haft howl'd away twelve winter. Ar. Pardon, Mafter, I will be correpondent to command And doe my spryting, gently.

Pro. Doe fo: and after two daies I will discharge thee.

Mir. 'Tis a villaine Sir, I doe not loue to looke on. Pro. But as 'tis We cannot misfte him: be do's make our fire, Fetch in our wood, and ferues in Offices That profitt vs: What hoa: flue: Caliban:

Ar. My Lord, it shal be done. Exit. Pro. Thou payfonous flue, got by y diuell himfelfe Vpon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban. Cal. As wicked dewe, as ere my mother brufh'd With Rauens feather from vnwholefome Fen Drop on you both: A Southwift blow on ye, And bliffer you all ore.

Pro. For this be frost, to night thou shalt haue cramps, Side-ditches, that tallen thy breath vp, Vrchnis Shall for that vaft of night, that they may worke All exercife on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd As thicke as hony-combe, each pinch more flinging Then Been that made 'em.

Cal. I must eat my dinner: This Iland's mine by Sycorex my mother, Which thou tak't from me: when thou cam't first Thou stroak't me, & made much of me: wouldst give me Water with berries in't; and teach me how To name the bigger Light, and how theiffe That burne by day, and night: and then I lou'd thee And shew'd thee all the qualities o'th' life, The freh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertill, Curs'd be I that did do: All the Charmes Of Sycorex: Toades, Beetles, Batts light on you:

For I am all the Subiects that you have, Which first was min owne King; and here you flye-me In this hard Rocke, whiles you doe keepe from me The reft o'th' Iland.

Pro. Thou.
The Tempest.

Pro. Thou most lying flae,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I haue vs'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine owne Cell, till thou didst fecke to violate
The honor of my childre.
Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, wouldn't ha been done:
Thou didst preuent me, I had popeel'd elfe
This Isle with Calibans.
Mira. Abhorred Slave,
Which any print of goodnesse wilt not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pittied thee,
Took pains to make thee speake, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not (Savage)
Know thin owne meaning; but wouldst gibble, like
A thing moft brutish, I endow'd thy purpose
With words that made them knowne: But thy vild race
(Tho thou didst learn) had that in't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore waft thou
Deferuedly confin'd into this Rockes, who hadst
Defend'd more then a prifon.
Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your Language.
Prof. Hag-feed, hence:
Fetch vs in Fewell, and be quicke thou'rt best
To anwer other businesse: thrug't haue thou (Malice)
If thou neglidge, or doft vnwillingly
What I command, Ile racke thee with old Crampes,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee sore,
That beafts thilme tremble at thy dyn.
Cal. No, I'pray thee,
I must obey, his Art is of such pow'r,
It would control my Dama god Seetebos,
And make a vassalle of him.
Pro. So shall, hence. Exit Cal.
Enter Ferdinand & Ariel, inuincible playing & singing.
Ariel Song. Come unto these yellow sands, and then take bands:
Carted when you bate, and kist
the wilde wombs voubi.
Foste it feastly bears, and there,
and sower Sprites hear the burthen.
Burthen elsefide.
Harpe, barke, boughd vouchsow: the watch-Dogges barke, bough-vaugh.
At. Hark, hark, I heare, the straiens of strutting Chamicles cry cockaldidle-dove.
Far. Where hold this Muick be? I'th aire, or th'earth?
It founds no more: and sure it waytes upon
Some God 'oth Ilランド, fitting on a banke,
Weeping against the King my Fathers wracke.
This Muickbe crept by me vpon the waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion
With it's sweet ayre: thence I have follow'd it (Or it hath drawne me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.
Ariell Song. Full fadom fие thy Fader lies,
Of his bones are Corall made:
Toffe are pearies that were bi eies,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a Sea-change
Into something rich, & strange:
Sea-Nimphe's baurly ring his knell.
Burthen: ding dong.
Harke now I heare them, ding-dong bell.
Far. The Ditty do's remember my drown'd father,
This is no mortall busines, nor no found
That the earth owes: I heare it now aboe me.
Pro. The fringed Curtaine of thine eye adance,
And say what thou fee'lt yond.
Mira. What is't a Spirit?
Lord, how it looks about: Beleeue me sir,
It carries a braue forme. But 'tis a spirit.
Pro. No wench, it cats, and sleeps, & hath such senses
As we haue: such. This Gallant which thou seest
Was in the wracke: but hee's something about
With greefe (that's beauties canker) ye might't call him
A goodly perion: he hath left his fellows,
And frayses about to finde 'em.
Mira. I might call him
A thing dionine, for nothing natural
I euer saw fo Noble.
Pro. It goes on I see
As my foule prompts it: Spirit, fine spirit, Ie free thee
Within two dayes for this.
Far. Moft sure the Goddesse
On whom these ayres attend: Vouchsafe my pray'r
May know if you remaine vpon this Island,
And that you will some good instruction gue
How I may haue me here? I pray my prime requst (Which I do last pronounce) is (O you wonder)
If you be Mayd, or no?
Mira. No wonder Sir,
But certainly a Mayd.
Far. My Language? Heauens:
I am the beft of them that speake this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
Pro. How? the beft?
What wen'thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Far. A fingle thing, as I am now, that wondren
To hear thee speake of Naples: he do's heare me,
And that he do's, I wepe: my felfe am Naples,
Who, with mine eyes (neuer fince at ebe) beheld
The King my Father wrack't.
Mira. Alacke, for mercy.
Far. Yes faith, & all his Lords, the Duke of Millaine
And his braue fonne, being twaine.
Pro. The Duke of Millaine
And his more brauer daughter, could controll thee
Now if 'twer fe Fit to do's: At the firft fight
They haue chang'd eyes: Delicate Ariel,
Ie let thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I feare you have done your felfe some wrong: A word.
Mira. Why speaks my father fo vagently? This
Is the third man that ere I faw: the firft
That ere I figh'd for: pity moue my father
To be encl'd my way.
Far. O, if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queene of Naples.
Pro. Soft sir, one word more.
They are both in eythers pow'rs: But this Swift buineses
I muft vneece make, leaft too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do'ft heere vferpe
The name thou owfit not, and haft put thy felfe
Upon this Island, as a fpy, to win it
From me, the Lord on't.
Far. No, as I am a man.
Mira. Ther's nothing ill, can dwell in such a Temple,
If the ill-spirit haue fo fayre a houfe,
Good things will frus to dwell with't.
Pro. Follow me.
The Tempest.

Profl. Speake not you for him: hee's a Traitor: come, Ile miracle thy necke and feete together: Sea water shalt thou drinke: thy food shall be The freth-brooke Muffels, withi'd roots, and huskes Wherein the Acornre cradled. Follow.

Fer. No,
I will refite such entertainment, till Mine enemy ha's more pow'r.

Mira. O deere Father,
Make not too rash a triall of him, for Hee's gentle, and not fearfull.

Prof. What I say,
My foote my Tutor? Put thy sword vp Traitor,
Who mak'it a shew, but dar'it not strike: thy conscience
Is fo poiffeit with guilt: Come, from thy ward,
For I can heere dispare thee with this sticke,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mira. Beleeche you Father.

Prof. Hence: hang not on my garments. Mira. Sir haue pity, Ille be his fortune.

Prof. Silence: One word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: What An advocate for an Impofor? Huf: Thou think't there is no more fuch fapes as he, (Hauing feene him and Caliban:) Foolifh wench,
To th'moft of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.

Mira. My affections
Are in the moft humble: I have no ambition
To fee a goodlier man.

Prof. Come on, obey:
Thy Nerues are in their infancy againe.
And have no vigour in them.

Seb. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dreame, are all bound vp:
My Fathers loft, the weakeffe which I feele,
The wracke of all my friends, nor this mans threats,
To whom I am fubdude, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prifon once a day
Behold this Mayd: all corners elfe o'th'Earth
Let liberty make vfe of: fpace enough
Haue in fuch a prifon.

Prof. It worke: Come on.
Thou haft done well, fine Ariel: follow me,
Harke what thou elfe doft meee.

Mira. Be of comfort,
My Father of a better nature (Sir)
Then he appeares by speech: this is unwanied
Which now came from him.

Prof. Thou shalt be as free
As mountaine winxes; but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ariel. To th'ftillable.

Prof. Come follow: speake not for him. Exceunt.

Is much beyond our loffe; our hint of woe
Is common, every day, fame Saylors wife,
The Masters of some Merchant, and the Merchant
Hau'ft our Theame of woe: But for the miracle,
(I meane our prefervation) few in millions
Can speake like vs: then wifely (good Sir) weigh
Our sorrow, with our comfort.

Aloft. Prethee peace.

Seb. He receiues comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The Villitor will not give him ore fo.

Seb. Looke, he's winding vp the watch of his wit,
By and by it will strike.

Gen. Sir.

Seb. One: Tell.

Gen. When evergree is entertained,
That's offer'd comes to th'entertainer.

Seb. A dollor.

Gen. Doulour comes to him indeed, you have spoken truer then you purpos'd.

Seb. You have taken it wifelier then I meant you should.

Gen. Therefore my Lord.

Ant. fie, what a spend-thrift is he of his tongue.

Aloft. I pre-thee fpare.

Gen. Well, I haue done: But yet

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he, or Adrian, for a good wager, Firt begins to crow?

Seb. The old Cocke.

Ant. The Cockrel.

Seb. Done: The wager?

Ant. A Laughter.

Seb. A match.

Adr. Though this Ifland feeme to be defert.

Seb. Ha, ha, ha.

Ant. So: you paid.

Adr. Vininhabitable, and almoft inacceffible.

Seb. Yet

Adr. Yet

Ant. He could not mifle't.

Adr. It muft needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. I, and a subtle, as he moft learnedly deliu'r'd.

Adr. The ayre breathes vpvn vs here moft sweetly.

Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a Fen.

Gen. Heere is every thing advantageous to life.

Ant. True, faie means to liue.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gen. How lufh and lufty the graffe looke's?

How greene?

Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of greene in't.

Ant. He miffe's not much.

Gen. No: he doth but miftake the truth totally.

Gen. But the variety of it is, which is indeed almost beyond credit.

Seb. As many vouched rarities are.

Gen. That all our garments being (as they were) drencht in the Sea, hold notwithstanding their frethenesse and gloffe, being rather new dy'd then strain'd with fiate water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speake, would it not fay he lyes?

Seb. I, or very falfely pocket vp his report.

Gen.
The Tempest.

Gen. Me thinkes our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Affricke, at the marriage of the kings faire daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis. Sheb. "Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our returne.

Adri. Tunis was neuer graa'd before with such a Pagon to their Queene.

Ant. Widow? A pox o'that! how came that Widdow in? Widdow Dido!

Seb. What if he had flied Widdowet Aneas too?

Good Lord, how you take it?

Adri. Widdow Dido fald you? You make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gen. This Tusin Sir was Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harpe.

Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houfes too.

Ant. What impossible matter wil he make easy next?

Seb. I thinke hee will carry this Island home in his pocket, and give it his fonne for an Apple.

Ant. And fowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gen. I.

Ant. Why in good time.

Gen. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seeme now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queene.

Ant. And the rareft that ere came there.

Seb. Bate (I beeche you) widdow Dido.

Gen. Is not Sir my doublet as freh as the firft day I wore it? I meane in a fort.

Ant. That fort was well fih'd for.

Gen. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram these words into mine eares, against the flamacke of my fene: I could have neuer married my daughter there: For comming thence My fonne is lost, and (in my rate) thee too, Who is so farre from Italy removed, I ne'er againe shal fee her: O thou mine heire Of Naples and of Millaine, what strange fih Hath made his meale on thee?

Fran. Sir he may lyve.

I saw him beate the furges vnder him, And ride vpon their backs; he trode the water Whose enmyt he flung aside: and brent

The furge most twolne that met him: his bold head 'Boue the contentious waues he kept, and oared HIMSELF with his good armes in lulty broke To th' thore; that ore his waue-worne baits bowed As flopping to releuice him: I not doubt He came alieue to Land.

Alon. No, no, hee's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your felfe for this great lofe, That would not beflue our Europe with your daughter, But rather lofe her to an African, Where she at leaft, is banifh'd from your eye, Who hath caufe to wet the greefe on't.

Alon. Pre-thee peace.

Seb. You were kneell'd too, & importun'd otherwife By all of vs, and the faire foule her felfe. Waught' betweene loathneffe, and obedience, at Which end o'behame should bow: we haue loot your I feare for evet: Millaine and Naples have (fon, Mo widdowes in them of this buifineffe making, Then we bring men to comfort them:
Ant. We two my Lord, will guard your person,
While you take your rest, and watch your safety.

Ari. Thank you; Wondrous heavy.

Seb. What a strange drownes postels they?

Ant. It is the quality o'the Climate.

Seb. Why

Doth it not then our eye-lids fiyne? I finde
Not my selfe dispost'd to sleepe.

Ant. Nor I, my spirits are nimble:
They fell together all, as by content
They dropt, as by a Thunder-stroke: what might Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? no more:
And yet, me thinks I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be: th'occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination see's a Crowne
Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What? art thou wak'ning?

Ant. Do you not heare me speake?

Seb. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy Language; and thou speakest
Out of thy sleepe: What is it thou didst say?
This is a fringe repose, to be asleep,
With eyes wide open: standing, speaking, mouing:
And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou lea'th thy fortune sleepe: die rather: winking
Whilest thou art waking.

Seb. Thou do'st more distinctly,
There's meaning in thy nores.

Ant. I am more ferious then my custome: you Must be so too, if heed me: which to do,
Trebles thee o're.

Seb. Well: I am standing water.

Ant. Ieie teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so: to ebb.

Hereby Sloth instructs me.

Ant. O!
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thou mocking it: how in tripping it
You more ineusit; it ebbing men, indeed
(Most often) do so near the bottome run
By their owne fearoe, or Sloth.

Seb. 'Pre-thee say on,

The letching of thine eye, and checque proclaime
A matter from thee: and a birth, indeed,
Which throwes thee much to yeeld.

Ant. Thus Sir:
Although this Lord of weake remembrance; this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almost perswaded
(For hee's a Spirit of persuasion, one)
Profeffes to perswade) the King his Sonne's alue,
'Tis as impossible that hee's vndrown'd,
As he that sleepees heree, flies.

Seb. I have no hope
That hee's vndrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope haue you? No hope that way, is Another way to note: that euery
Ambition cannot pierce a witcke beyond
But doubt dicovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd.

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. Then tell me, who's the next heire of Naples?

Seb. Claribell.

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis: she that dwels

Ten leagues beyond mans life: she that from Naples
Can hau'e no signes, vntill the Sun were set:
The Man l'th Moone's too floow, till new-born chimes
Be rough, and Razor-able: She that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast againe,
(And by that definy) to performe an act
Whereof, what's past is Prologue; what to come
In yours, and my discharge.

Seb. What fluffe is this? How say you?
'Tis true my brothers daughter's Queene of Tunis,
So is the heyre of Naples, 'twixt which Regions
There is some space.

Ant. A space, whole eu'ry cubit
Seemes to cry out, how shall that Claribell
Measure vs backe to Naples? keep in Tunies,
And let Sebastian wake. Say, this was death
That now hath faile'd them, why they were no worfe
Then now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleepe's: Lords, that can prate
As amply, and vnneecefully
As this Gonzaloe: I my selfe could make
A Chough of so deepe chat: O, that you bore
The minde that I do; what a sleepe were this
For your aduancement? Do you understand me?

Seb. Me thinks I do.

Ant. And how do's your content
Tender your owne good fortune?

Seb. I remember
You did appall your Brothet Prospero.

Ant. True:
And looke how well my Garments fit upon me,
Much fatter then before: My Brothers feraunts
Were then my fellowes, now they are my men.

Seb. But for your conscience.

Ant. I Sir: where lies that? If 'twere a kybe
'Twould put me to my flipper: But I feele not
This Delit in my bosome: 'Twentie confidences
That fland 'twixt me, and Mililaine, candied be they,
And melt ere they mollett: Heere lies your Brother,
No better then the earth he lies vpon,
If he were that which now hee's like (that's dead)
Whom I with this obedient sleepe (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetuell winke for aye might put
This ancient morfell: this Sir Prudence, who Should not vpbraid our course: for all the reft
They'll take fugacion, as a Cat laps milke,
They'll tell the clocke, to any businesse that
We say befoes the houre.

Seb. Thy cafe, deere Friend
Shall be my preident: As thou go'st Mililaine,
I'll come by Naples: Draw thy fward, one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pailst,
And I the King shall loue thee.

Ant. Draw together:
And when I reaer my hand, do you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word.

Enter Ariell with Musick and Song.

Ari. Now Mafter through his Art fore adec the danger
That you (his friends) are in, and tenders me forth
(For else his project dies) to keepe them liuing.

Sings in Gonzaloes ear.

While you here do frowning lies,
Open-ey'd Conftitute
His time doth take:

If
The Tempest.

If of Life you keep a care;
Shake off slumber and beware.

Awoke, awoke.

Ant. Then let us both be bodeine.

Gen. Now, good Angels preferre the King.

Alo. Why how now haos; awake? why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gen. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here feuring your repose,

(Euen now) we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like Bulls, or rather Lyons, didn't not wake you?

It strokeo mine eare moft terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monferers ears;
To make an earthquake: sure it was the roare
Of a whole heard of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Gonsals?

Gen. Vpon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming,

(And that a strange one too) which did awake me:
I shak'd you Sir, and cride: as mine eyes open,
I faw their weapons drawne: there was a noyle,
That's verily: 'tis best we stand upon our guard;
Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground & let's make further search
For my poor fonne.

Gen. Heaunes keep him from thefe Beasts:
For he is fure 'tis fland.

Alo. Lead away.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of Wood (a noyfe of Thunder heard.)

Cal. All the infections that the Sunneuckyes vp
From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By ych-meale a disease: his Spirits hearre me,
And yet I needes must curfe.But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with Vrchyn-thews, pitch me 'tis mere,
Nor lead me like a fire-brand, in the darke
Out of my way, vnlefe he bid 'em; but
For every triffe, are they fet upon me,
Sometimes like Apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like Hedg-hogs, which Lye tumbling in my bare-foote way, and mount
Their pricks at my foot-fall: sometime am I
All wound with Adders, who with clouen tongues
Doe hifice me into madness: Lo, now Lo,

Enter

Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me Trinculo.

For bringing wood in lowly: I'le fall flat,
Perchance he will not minde me.

Tri. Here's neither bush, nor shrub to beare off any weather at all: and another Storme brewing, I hearre it Sing iht' winde: yond fame blacke cloud, yond huge one, looke as a foule bumbard that would file his liquor: if it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond fame cloud cannot choofe but fall by palle-fuls. What haue we here, a man, or a fish? dead or alive? a fish, hee smels like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like flmell: a kind of, not of the newtest poor John: a strange fish: were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted: not a holiday-foole there but would glue a pece of filuer:

there, would this Monfter, make a man: any strange beast there, makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieue a lame Begger, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian: Leg'd like a man; and his Finnede like Armes: warme o'th mouth: I doe now loofe my pinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Hander, that hath lately suffered by a Thunderbolt: Alas, the storme is come againe: my bell way is to creepe under his Gafterone: there is no other shelter hereabout: Milery acquaints a man with strange bedfellowes:
I will here throwd till the dregges of the storme be paft.

Enter Stephano singing.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea, here shall I dye asoare.
This is a very furious tune to sing at a maws

Funerall: well, here's my comfort.

Drinkes.

Sing. The Majer, the Swabber, the Beate-juwaine & I;
The Gunner, and his mate

Lo'd Maller, Meg, and Marrian, and Margeris,
But none of us car'd for Kate.

For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailor goe bang:
She lou'd not the favoure of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Toddor might scratch her bwure ere she did itch.

Then to Sea Boyes, and let her goe bang.

This is a furious tune too:
But here's my comfort.

Cal. Doe not torment me: oh.

Ste. What's the matter?

Have we diuels here?

Doe you put tricks vpons with Saluages, and Men of Inde? ha? I have not scap'd drowning, to be afear now of your foure legges: for it hath bin said; as proper a man as euer went on foure legs, cannot make him ghie ground: and it shall be soid so againe, while Stephano breathes at nofrills.

Cal. The Spirit torments me: oh.

Ste. This is some Monfter of the Isle, with foure leggs; who hath got (as I take it) an Ague: where the diuell should he learne our language? he will give him some relifie if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keepe him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a Present for any Empourer that euer trod on Neates-leather.

Cal. Doe not torment me prethee: I'le bring my wood home after.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and doe's not talk after the wight; hee shall take of my Botlle: if hee haue neuer drunkne wine afore, it will goe neere to remove his Fit:
if I can recover him, and keepe him tame, I will not take too much for him; hee shall pay for him that hath him, and that foundly.

Cal. Thou don't me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Prosper workes vpon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth: here is that which will gie language to you Cat; open your mouth; this will make thy flashing, I can tell you, and that foundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Tri. I should know that voyce:
It should be,
But hee is dround; and thefe are diuels; O defend me.

Ste. Fourre legges and two voyces; a moft delicate Monfer: his forward voyce now is to speake well of his friend; his backward voyce, is to utter foule speeches, and to deftract: if all the wine in my bottle will recour him, I will helpe his Ague: Come: Amen, I will poure some in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stepbano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a diuell, and no Monfer: I will leave him; I have no long Spone.

Tri. Stepbano: if thou beest Stepbano, touch me, and speake to me: for I am Trinculo; be not aixard, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou bee't Trinculo: come forth: I'le pull thee by the leffer legges; if any be Trinculo's legges, these are they: Thou art very Trinculo indeed: how cam'thou to be the thiefe of this Moone-calfe? Can he be Trinculo's?

Tri. I tocque him to be kil'd with a thunder-strok; but art thou not dround Stepbano? I hope now thou art not dround: Is the Storme ouer-blowne? I hid mee vnder the dead Moone-Calfe Gaberdine, for feare of the Storme: And art thou liuing Stepbano? O Stepbano, two Neapolitaines fcape'd?

Ste. Pre'thee doe not turne me about, my stomacke is not conbufant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not fprights: that's a braue God, and bearers, Celeftiall liquor: I will kneele to him.

Ste. How did it thou scape? How cam'thau hither?

Stepbano: by this Bottle how thou cam'th hither: I fcape'd vpon a But of Sacke, which the Saylors heaud o'reboard, by this Bottle which I made of the barke of a Tree, with mine owne hands, since I was caft a'flore.

Cal. I'le fwear vpon that Bottle, to be thy true fubfe, for the liquor is not earthy.

Ste. Heree: swear then how thou efcape'd.

Tri. Swom afore (man) like a Ducke: I can swim like a Ducke I'le be sworne.

Ste. Here, kiffe the Booke.

Though thou canst swim like a Ducke, thou art made like a Goofe.

Tri. O Stepbano, ha'ft any more of this?

Stepbano: the whole But (man) My Cellar is in a rokke by th'ea-fide, where my Wine is hid:

Cal. How now Moone-Calfe, how do's thine Ague?

Cal. Ha'ft thou not dropt from heauen?

Ste. Out o'th Moone I doe affure thee. I was the Man ith' Moone, when time was.

Cal. I haue feene thee in her: and I doe adore thee: My Miftris fhew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Bulfe.

Ste. Come, swear to that: kiffe the Booke: I will furnifh it anon with new Contents: Sware.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very fhallo Monf'ter: I afear of him? a very weake Monf'ter:

The Man ith' Moone?

A moft poore croudulous Monf'ter: Well drawne Monf'ter, in good footh.

Cal. I'le fhew thee every fertill ynh 'oth Island: and I will kiffe thy fote: I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a moft perfidious, and drunken Monf'ter, when's god's a feeppe he'll rob his Bottle.
Hee's faie for thefe three houres,
For O moft deere Miftres,
The Sun will fet before I fhall discharge
What I exceflive to do.
Mir. If you'l fhit downe
Ile beare your Logges the while: pray give me that,
Ile carry it to the pile.

Fer. No precious Creature,
I had rather crake my finewes, breake my backe,
Then you fhould fuch difhonour mynconference,
While I fit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me
As well as it do's you; and I fhould do it
With much more eafe: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is againft.

Pro. Poor worme thou art infected,
This visitation thenews it.

Mir. You looke wearely.

Fer. No, noble Miftres, 'tis freft morning with me
When you are by at night: I do befeech you
Chiefely, that I might fet it in my prayers,

What is your name?

Mir. Miranda, O my Father,
I have broke your heft to fay fo.

Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeethe top of admiration, worth
What's deereft to the world: full many a Lady
I may eu'y with beft regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues, hath into bondage
Brought my too dilgent ear: for feuerall virtues
Have I lik'd feuerall women, neuer any
With fo full soule, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the nobleft grace the ow'd,
And put it to the gulle. But you, O you,
So perfeft, and fo peetifte, are created.

Of euery Creatures belft.

Mir. I do not know
One of my fexe; no womans face remember,
Saue from my glaffe, mine owne: Nor haue I feene
More that I may call men, then you good friend,
And my deere Father: how features are abroad
I am skilliffe of; but by my modelfe
(The Jewell in my dower) I would not with Any Companion in the world but you:
Nor can imagination forme a flape
Befides your felfe, to like of: but I prattle
Something too wildely, and my Fathers precepts
I therein do forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I do thinke a King
(I would not fo) and would no more endure
This wodden flauerie, then to fatter
The fleath-flie blow my mouth: heare my foule speake.
The verie infant that I faw you, did
My heart fte to your feruice, there refides
To make me flue to it, and for your fake
Am I this patient Logge-man.

Mir. Do you loue me?

Fer. O heauen ; O earth, beare witness to this found,
And crowne what I profefle with kinde event
If I fpeak true: if hollowly, inward
What beft is boadde me, to miffchiefe: I,
Beyond all limit of what elfe 1' th world
Do loue, prize, honor you.

Mir. I am a foole
To wepe at what I am glad of.

Pro. Faire encounter
Of two moft rare affections: heauens raine grace
On that which breeds betweene 'em.

Fer. VVherefore wepe you?

Mir. At mine vnworthiness, that dare not offer
VVhat I desire to glue: and much leffe take VVhat I fhall die to want: But this is tripping,
And all the more it feeks to hide it felfe,
The bigger bulke it thwes. Hence baftfull cunning,
And prompt me plaine and holy innocence.
I am your wife, if you will marrie me;
If not, Ile die your maid: to be your fellow
You may denie me, but Ile be your Seruant
VVhether you will or no.

Fer. My Miftres (deerefl)
And I thus humble euer.

Mir. My husband then?

Fer. I, with a heart as willing
As bondage ere of freedome: heere's my hand.

Mir. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewell
Till halfe an houre hence.

Fer. A thousand, thoufand.

Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
VVho are surpriz'd with all; but my rejoyning
At nothing can be more: Ile to my booke,
For yet ere fupper time, muft I performe
Much businesse appertaining.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the But is out we will drinke water, not a drop before; therefore beare vp, & board'em! Seruant Monfter, drinke to me.

Trin. Seruant Monfter? the folly of this Iland, they fay there's but fieue upon this Ille; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like vs, the State totten.

Ste. Drinke seruant Monfter when I bid thee, thy eyes are almoft fet in thy head.

Trin. VVhere fhould they bee fet elfe? hee were a braue Monfter indeede if they were fet in his taile.

Ste. My man-Monfter hath drown'd his tongue in facke: for my part the Sea cannot drowne me, I swam ere I could recover the shore, fure and thirtie Leagues off and on, by this light thou shalt bee my Lieutenant Monfter, or my Standard.

Trin. Your Lieutenant if you lift, hee's no standard.

Ste. VVeel not run Monfieur Monfter.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie like dogs, and yet fay nothing neither.

Ste. Moorene-calfe, speake once in thy life, if thou bee a good Moorene-calfe.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me licke thy fhoue:
Ile not ferve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou lief't most ignorant Monfter, I am in cafe to jullte a Contable: why, thou deboch't Fith thou, was there euer man a Coward, that hath drunk fo much Sacke as I to day? wilt thou tell a monftrous lie, being but halfe a Fith, and halfe a Monfter?

Cal. Loc, how he mocks me, wilt thou let him my Lord?

Cal.
Enter Ariell invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am fumble to a Tirant, a Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the Island.

Ariell. Thou liest. Cal. Thou liest, thou lying Monkey thou! I would my valiant Mafter would destroy thee. I do not lyce. Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth. Trin. Why, I said nothing. Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed. Cal. I say by Sorcery he got this isle from me, he got it. If thy Greatnifie will revenge on them, (for I know thou darst!) But this thing dare not. Ste. That's most certaine. Cal. Thou shalt be Lord of it, and Ile ferve thee. Ste. How now shall this be compact? Canst thou bring me to the party? Cal. Yea, yea my Lord, Ile yeeld him thee asleepe, where thou maist knocke a nail into his head. Ariell. Thou liest, thou canst not. Cal. What a myde Ninnies this? Thou fcuruy patch: I do befeech thy Greatnifie give him blows, and take his bottle from him: When that's gone, he shall drink noke but brine, for Ile not fweem him where the quicke Frethe are. Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: Interrupt the Monfter one word further, and by this hand, Ile turne my mercie out o'doores, and make a Stockfish of thee. Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing: He go farther off. Ste. Didst thou not fay he lyed? Ariell, Thou liest. Ste. Do I? Take thou that, as you like this, give me the lye another time. Trin. I did not give the lie: out o'your wittes, and hearing too? A pox o'your bottle, this can Sacke and drinking doo: a murren on your Monfter, and the diuell take your fingers. Cal. Ha, ha, ha.

Stre. Now forward with your Tale: prethee fland further off. Cal. Beate him enough: after a little time I beate him too. Ste. Stand farther: Come proceed. Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a cuftome with him I' the afternoone to sleepe: there thou maift braine him, Haing firft fhe'd his bookees: Or with a logge Batter his skull, or pounce him with a flake, Or cut his wexand with thy knife. Remember first to poffefle his bookees; for without them

Hee's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not One Spirit to command: they all do hate him As rootedly as I. Burne but his Bookees, He ha's braue Ventenif (for fo he calleth them) Which when he ha's a house, he'll decke withall. And that moft deeply to confider, is The beautie of his daugther: he himfelfe Cal's her a non-parcell: I neuer saw a woman But onely Sycorax, my Dam, and she; But the as farre furpaffeth Sycorax, As great't do's leaf. Cal. Is it so braue a Laffe? Cal. I Lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant, And bring thee forth braue brood. Ste. Monfter, I will kill this man; his daugther and I will be King and Queene, faue our Graces: and Trinculo and thy fefle shall be Vice-royes: Dofi thou like the plot Trinculo? Trin. Excellent. Ste. Give me thy hand, I am sorry I beate thee: But while thou li'ft keep a good tongue in thy head. Cal. Within this halfe hour will he be asleepe, Wilt thou defroy him then? Ste. I on mine honour. Ariell. This will I tell my Mafter. Cal. Thou mak'lt me merry: I am full of pleasure, Let vs be iocund. Will you troule the Catch you taught me but whileare? Ste. At thy requeft Monfter, I will do reaon, Any reaon: Come on Trinculo, let vs finge. Sings.

Flout'em, and cou't'em: and skow't'em, and floot'em, Thought is free. Cal. That's not the tune.

Ariell plaies the tune on a Tabor and Pipe. Ste. What is this fame? Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaid by the picture of No-body. Ste. If thou beeft a man, fhew thy felfe in thy likenes: If thou beeft a diuell, take'ft as thou lift. Trin. O forgive me my finnes. Ste. He that dies payes all debts: I defie thee; Mercy vpon vs. Cal. Art thou affreud? Ste. No Monfter, not I. Cal. Be not affreud, the Ile is full of noyfes, Sounds, and sweet aires, that glue delight and hurt not: Sometimes a thoufand twangling Instrument Will hum about mine eares, and sometimies voices, That if I then had wak'd after long sleepe, Will make me sleepe againe, and then in dreaming, The clouds methought would open, and thew riches Ready to drop vpon me, that when I wak'd I cri'de to dreame againe. Ste. This will prove a braue kingdome to me, Where I shall haue my Muflcke for nothing. Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd. Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the throte. Trin. The found is going away, Lets follow it, and after do our worke. Ste. Leade Monfter, Weel' follow: I would I could fee this Taborer, He lays it on. Trin. Wilt come? Ile follow Stephano.

Exeunt. Scena
Scena Tertia.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, &c.

Gen. By'r lakin, I can goe no further, Sir,
My old bones akers: here's a maze trod indeece
Through fourth rights, & Meanders: by your patience,
I needs must reft me.

Al. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who, am my selfe attach'd with wearesnife
To the droller of my spirits: sit downe, and rest:
Even here I will put off my hope, and keepe it
No longer for my Flatterer: he is droun'd
Whom thou shalt tray to finde, and the Sea mocks
Our fruitreare found on land: well, let him goe.

Ant. I am right glad, that he's so out of hope:
Doe not for one repulse forgoe the purpose
That you reso'd t'effect.

Seb. The next advantage will we take throughly.

Ant. Let it be to night:
For now they are oppreßd with trouaille, they Will not, nor cannot vfe such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Solemn and strange Musick: and Proser on the top (invitible:) Enter fouerall strange shapes, bringing in a Banquet:

and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, and inviting the King, &c. to eate, they depart.

Seb. I say to night: no more.

Al. What harmony is this? my good friends, harke.

Gen. Marvellous sweet Musick.

Al. Glue vs kind keepers, heauens: what were these?
Seb. A luing Drolerie: now I will beleue
That there are Vincornes: that is Arabia.

There is one Tree, the Phenix throne, one Phenix
At this houre reining there.

Ant. I beleue both:
And what do's elfe want credit, come to me
And I belewe 'ts true: Travellers euer did lye,
Though foole at home condemne 'em.

Gen. In naples
I should report this now, would they beleue me?
If I shou'd fly I saw such Ilands;
(For certes, these are people of the Iland)
Who though they are of monstrous shape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle, kinde, then of
Our humane generation you shall finde
Many, nay a most any.

Pro. Honett Lord,
Thou hast laid well: for some of you there prestant;
Are worse then duels.

Al. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, suche gefure, and such sound expressing (Altho' they want the vfe of tongue) a kinde
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing.
Fr. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since
They have left their Viands behind; for wee have flo-
Wilt please you talle of what is here?

Al. No. Nor I. (Boytes)

Gen. Faith Sir, you neede not feare: when wee were
Who would beleue that there were Mountayneeres,
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whose throats had hanging at'em
Wallets of Spees? or that there were such men

Whose heads stond in their brests? which now we finde
Each putter out of flue for one, will bring vs
Good warrant of.

Al. I will stand to, and feede,
Although my laft, no matter, since I feele
The left is paft: brother: my Lord, the Duke,
Stand too, and doe as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariel (like a Harpie) claps his wings upon the Table, and with a quiet devise
The Banquet vanishes.

Ar. You are three men of finne, whom deftiny
That hath to infrument this lower world,
And what is in': the neuer surfeited Sea,
Hath caus'd to beelch vp you; and on this Iland,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongt men,
Being moft vnfit to live: I have made you mad;
And even with such like valour, me muddle, and droune
Their proper felues: you foolees, I and my fellows
Are minifters of Fate, the Elements
Of whom your fwords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winde, or with bemockt-att-Stabs
Kill the fill cloathing waters, as diminifh
One dowlle that's in my plume: My fellow minifters
Are like-invulnerable: if you could hurt,
Your fwords are now too maffe for your strengths,
And will not be vplifed: But remember
(For that's my businesse to you) that you three
From Millaine did supplant good Prosero,
Expos'd vnto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him, and his innocent childe: for which foule deed,
The Powres, delaying (not forgetting) have Inensus'd the Seas, and Shores; yea, all the Creatures
Against your peace: Then of thy Sonne, Alfon
They have bereft; and doe pronounce by me
Lingering perdition (words then any death
Can be at once) shall ftep, by ftep attend
You, and your wayes, whose wrathes to guard you from,
Which here, in this moft defolate Ile, efe fals
Vpon your heads, is nothing but hearts-forrow,
And a cleere life enfuing.

He vanishes in Thunder: then (to thef Furies) Enter the Shapes againe, and daunce (with mocks and mowers) and Carry out the Table.

Pro. Braucely the figure of this Harpie, haft thou
Perform'd (my Ariel) a grace it had devouring:
Of my Infraction, haft thou nothing bated
In what thou had't to say: so with good life,
And obferuation strange, my meane minifters
Their feuerall kindees have done: my high charmes work,
And thefe (mine enemies) are all knit vp
In their diffrations: they now are in my powre;
And in thefe fits, I leaque them, while I will Yong Ferdinand (whom they suppose is droun'd)
And his, and mine lou'd darling.

Gen. I' th name of something holy, Sir, why stand you
In this strange flare?

Al. O, it is monstrou's: monstro's:
Me thought the billowes spake, and told me of it,
The winde did fing it to me: and the Thunder
(That deeps and dreadfull Organ-pipe) pronounc'd
The name of Proser: it did bafe my Trefpass, Therefore my Sonne i'th Ozee is bedded: and I'll feke him deeper then ere plummet founded,
And with him there eye mudded.

Exit.

Seb. But one fenn at a time,
Ile fight their Legions ore.

Ant.
Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too authorily punish’d you, Your compensation makes amends, for I have given you here, a third of mine owne life, Or that for which I live: who, once again I tender to thy hand: All thy vexations were but my trials of thy love, and thou haft strangely flown the test: here, afore heaven I ratifie this my rich guilt: O Ferdinand, doe not smile at me, that I boast her, for thou shalt finde she will out-frip all praise and make it halt, behind her. Fer. I doe believe it Against an Oracle.

Pro. Then, as my guest, and thine owne acquisition Worthily purchas’d, take my daughter: But if thou do’st break her Virgin-knot, before All fandimonious ceremonies may With full and holy right, be miniftred, No sweet asperion shall the heauens let fall To make this contract grow; but barraine hate, Sower-e’y d’ difdain, and difcord shall befrew The unio of your bed, with weede so loathly That you shall hate it both: Therefore take heed, As Hymens Lamps shall light you. Fer. As I hope For quiet days, faire Issue, and long life, With such love, as ’tis now the muskied den, The moft opportune place, the strangst figgfeation, Our worfer Genius can, shall neuer melt Mine honor into luft, to take away The edge of that days celebration, When I shall thinke, or Peabou Steeds are founderd, Or Night kept chain’d below.

Pro. Fairly spokke; Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine owne: What Ariell? my induftious fervant Ariell. Enter Ariell. Ar. What would my potent master? here I am.

Pro. Thou, and thy meeker fellows, your laft service Did worthyly performe: and I must vfe you In Such another tricke: goe bring the rable (Ore whom I glue thee powre) here, to this place: Incite them to quicke motion, for I must beftow upon the eyes of this young couple Some vainty of mine Art: it is my promife, And they expect it from me. Ar. Preferently? Pro. I: with a twinkke. Ar. Before you can fay come, and goe, And breathe twice; and cry, So, So: Each one tripping on his toe, Will be here with mop, and mowe. Doe you love me Mafter? no?

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariell: doe not approach Till thou do’st heare me call.

Ar. Well: I conceuie.

Pro. Looke thou be true: doe not glue dalliance Too much the raigne: the strangst oathes, are straw To th’fire ith’ blood: be more abtenious, Or else good night your vow.

Fer. I warrant you, Sir, The white cold virgin Snow, vpon my heart Abates the ardour of my Lier.

Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, thy rich Leas Of Wheate, Rye, Barley, Fitches, Oates and Pafe; Thy Turpifh-Mountains, where liue nibling Sheepe, And flat Medes thetched with Stouter, them to kepe: Thy bankes with plowed, and twilled brims Which fpunge Ariell, at thy heft betrime; To make cold Nymphes chaft crownes; & thy broome- Whofe shadow the diffimied Batchelor loues, (groues; Being laffe-lorne: thy pole-clipt vineyard, And thy Sea-marge ferrile, and rockey-hard, Where thou thy selfe do’st ayre, the Queene o’th Skle, Whose watry Arch, and messanger, am I. Bids thee leaue thefe, & with her foueraigne grace, Iuuo Here on this graffe-plot, in this very place defembs. To come, and fpore: here Peacocks eye amaine: Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertaine. Enter Ceres. Cer. Haile, many-coloured Messenger, that here Do’tes disobey the wife of Jupiter: Who, with thy faffon wings, vpon my flourres Diffuifte hony drops, refrehing flourres, And with each end of thy blew bowe do’t crowne My bokkie acres, and my vnfrubd downe, Rich fearp to my proud earth: why hath thy Queene Summond me hither, to this short gras’d Greene? Ir. A Contract of true Love, to celebrate, And some donation freely to eflate On the ble’sd Louers.

Cer. Tell me heauenly Bowe, If Venus or her Sonne, as thou do’st know, Doe now attend the Queene? since they did plot The meanes, that duskie Dis, my daughter got, Her, and her blind-Boyes scandall company, I have forworne. Ir. Of her societe Be not afraid: I met her delite Cutting the clouds towards Paphos: and her Son Done-drawn with her: here thought they to have done Some wanton charme, vpon this Man and Maide, Whose vowes are, that no bed-right shall be paid Till Hymens Torch be lighted: but in vaine, Marfes hot Minion is returnd againe, Her wafipish headed fonne, has broke his arrows, Swears he wil shoote no more, but play with Sparrows, And be a Boy right out.

Cer. Highes Queene of State, Great Juno comes, I know her by her gate. Inu. How do’s my bountifull sifter? goe with me To bleffe this twaine, that they may prosperbe, And honourd in their Ifuue. They Sing.

Inu. Honor, riches, marriage, blesfing, Long continuance, and encreas’d, Heartely ioyes, be fill upon you,
The Tempest.

I am fancies.

Enter certaine Reapers (properly habited:) they joyn with the Nymphes, in a gracefull dance, towards the end whereof, Prospero startis solaine and speakes, after which to a strange bolowe and confused noise, they beauty warrant.

Pro. I had forgot that foulc conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come: Well done, auido: no more.

Fer. This is strange: your fathers in some passion
That workes him strongly.

Mir. Neuer till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, so distemp'd.

Pro. You doe looke (my fon) in a mou'd fort,
As if you were dismaid: be chearefull Sir,
Our Reuels now are ended: Tho'fe our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into Ayre, into thin Ayre,
And like the baselesse fabricke of this vifion
The Clowd-capt Towres, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The solemne Temples, the great Globe it felfe,
Yea, all which it inheriteth, shall dissolue,
And like this insubstantiall Pageant faded
Leave not a racke behinde: we are such fluffe
As dreams are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a fleer: Sir, I am vert,
Bear with my weaknesses, my old braine is troubled:
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity,
If you be pleas'd, retire into my Cell,
And there repose, a turne or two, Ile walke
To fill my beating minde.

Fer. Mir. We with your peace.

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee Ariel: come.

Enter Ariel.

Ar. Thy thoughts I cleaue to, what's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit: We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ar. I my Commander, when I prefent Ceres
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Leaft I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave those varlets?
Ar. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valour, that they imote the ayre
For breathing in their faces: beate the ground
For kifing of their feete: yet always bending
Towards their proiect: then I beate my Tabor,
At which like vnback'd colts they prick't their eares,
Aduan'd their eye-ids, lifted vp their noyes
As if they fnelt mucifie, so I charm'd their eares
That Calfe-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Tooth'd brarcs, sharpe firees, pricking goffe, & thorns,
Which entred their fraile thighs: at a I left them
I'th filthy mantled poole beyond your Cell,
There dancing vp to th'chins, that the fowle Lake
Or-drunck their feet.

Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy shape inuifible retaine thou fill:
The trumpery in my houfe, goe bring it hither
For flate to catch these theeves. Ar. I go, I goe.

Exit. Pro. A Deuill, a borne-Deuill, on whole nature
Nurture can neuer ficke: on whom my paines
Humanely taken, all, all lofj, quite lofj,
And, as with age, his body ouglier grows,
So his minde cankers: I will plague them all,
Even to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.

Enter Ariel, laden with glifering apparel, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all vert.

Cal. Pray you tread softly, that the blinde Mole may not heare a foot fall: we now are neere his Cell.

St. Monfier, your Fairy, w you fay is a harnes Fairy,
Has done little better then plaid the lacke with vs.

Trin. Monfier, I do flmell all horfe-plife, at which My nofe is in great indignation.

Stc. So is mine. Do you heare Monfier: If I shou'd
Take a displeasure against you: Looke you.

Trin. Thou went but a loft Monfier.

Cal. Good my Lord, give mee thy favour fill,
Be patient, for the prize Ile bring thee too
Shall hudwinke this milchfane: therefore speake softly,
All's hufet as midnight yet.

Trin. I, but to looke our bottles in the Poole.

Stc. There is not onely difgrace and dishonor in that Monfier, but an infinite loffe.

Tr. That's more to me then my weting:
Yet this is your harneleffe Fairy, Monfier.

Stc. I will fetch off my bottle,
Though I be o're eares for my labour.

Cal. Pre-thee (my King) be quiet. Seefth thou heere
This is the mouth o'th Cell: no noife, and enter:
Do that good milcheere, which may make this ifland
Thine owne for euer, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.

Stc. Glue me thy hand,
I do begin to hawe bloody thoughts.

Trin. O King Stephano, O Peere: O worthy Stephano, Looke what a wardrobe heere is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone thou foole, it is but true.

Tri. Oh, ho, Monfier: wee know what belongs to a frippery, O King Stephano.
Enter Prospero (in his Magician robe) and Ariel.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head: My charms cracke not: my Spirits obey, and Time Goes vpright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ari. On the first hower, at which time, my Lord You said our works should cease.

Pro. I did say so.

When first I rais'd the Tempest: say my Spirit, How fares the King, and 's followers?

Ari. Conf'd together

In the same fashion, as you gave in charge, Luft as you left them; all prisoners Sir In the Line-grave which weather-fends your Cell, They cannot budge till your releas: The King, His Brother, and yours, abide all three distraught, And the remnant mourning over them, Brim full of sorrow, and dismay: but chiefly Him that you term'd Sir, the good old Lord Gomzaio, His teares runs downe his beard like winters drops From eaves of reeds: your charm so strongly works 'em That if you now beheld them, your affection Would become tender.

Pro. Doft thou thinkke fo, Spirit?

Ari. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall be.

Hath thou (what art but aire) a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions, and shall not my selfe, One of their kinde, that reliish all as sharply, Passion as they, be kindlier mou'd then thou art? Thogh with their high wrongs I am froom to th' quick, Yet, with my nobler reason, gainst my furie Doe I take part: the rarer Action is In vertue, then in vengeance: they, being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frowne further: Doe, releafe them Ariell, My Charms Ile breaeke, their fences Ile restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ari. Ile fetch them, Sir.

Pro. Ye Elues of hils, brooks, flading lakes & groues, And ye, that on the sands with printelefe foote Doe chafe the ebbing-Neptune, and doe file him When he comes backe: ye deny-Puppets, that By Moone-shine doe the greene lowre Ringlets make, Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whose paltime Is to make midnight-Moartrumps, that rejoyce To hear the solemne Carfewe, by whom ayde (Weake Maters though ye be) I haue bedym'd The Noone-tide Sun, call'd forth the mutenes winds, And twixt the greene Sea, and the azur'd vault Set roaring warre: To the dread ratling Thunder Haue I gien fire, and rifted Iowe float Oke With his owne Bolt: The strong bas'd promonorie Haue I made shake, and by the lipus pluckt vp The Pyne, and Cedar. Graues at my command Haue wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth By my so potent Art. But this rough Magicke I heere abiure: and when I have requir'd Some heavenly Musick (which eu'n now I do) To worke mine end vpon their Sences, that This Aye-charme is for, I'le breake my staffe, Bury it certaine fadomes in the earth, And deeper then did euer Plument found Ile drowne my booke.

Solemne musick.

Here enters Ariel before: Then Alonso with a fanctific ge- sture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Antonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Franciaco: They all enter the circle wobib Prospero bad made, and there stand charm'd: wobib Prospero offering speeches.

A solemne Ayre, and the best comforter, To an vnsetted fancie, Cure thy braines (Now vileffe) boile within thy skull: there stand For you are Spell-fowt. Holy Gonzalia, Honourable man, Mine eyes ev'n fociable to the shew of thine Fall fellowly drops: The charme diffilues space, And as the morning firecalues upon the night (Melting the darkenesse) fo their rising fencas Begin to chace the ignorant rumes that mantle Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalia My true preferuer, and a loyal Sir, To him thou follow'st: I will pay thy graces Home both in word, and deede: Moit cruelly

Didst
The Tempest.

Did thou, Ariel, vie me, and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the Aél.
Thou art pinch'd for't now Scæfilan. Fleb, and bloud,
You, brother mine, that entertaine ambition,
Expell'd remorse, and nature, whom, with Scæfilan
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong)
Would heere haue kill'd your King: I do forgive thee,
Vnnaturall though thou art: Their vnderstanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore
That now ly foule, and mudy: not one of them
That yet lookes on me, or would know me: Ariel,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell,
I will dische me, and my selfe present
As I was sometime Millaine: quickly Spirit,
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel sings, and helps to attire him.
Where the Bee jacks, there juck I,
In a Couspins bell, I lie,
There I couch when Owles doe cri,
On the Raie backe I doe sit,
After summer merry,
Mercily, mercilly, shall I live now,
Under the blossem that hangs on the Bow.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariel: I shall misse
Thee, but yet thou shalt haue frendome: so, so, so,
To the Kings ship, inuincible as thou art,
There shalt thou finde the Marriners affeepe
Vnder the Hatches: the Master and the Boat-swaine
Beinge awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I preache.
Ariel. I drinkke the aire before me, and returne
Or ere you pulfe twice beate. Exit.

Gen. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabitst heere: some heauenly power guide vs
Out of this fearefull Country.

Pro. Behold Sir King
The wronged Duke of Millaine, Prospero:
For more affurance that a living Prince
Do's now speake to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy Company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alc. Where thou be't he or no,
Or some inchanted trifle to abuse me,
(As late I haue bene) I not know: thy Pule
Beats as of fleb, and blood: and since I saw thee, Th'affiction of my minde amends, with which
I feare a madneffe held me: this must craue
(And if this be at all) a most strange fory.
Thy Dukedome I reigne, and doe entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: But how shold Prospers
Be liuing, and be heere?

Pro. First, noble Frend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honor cannot
Be meafur'd, or confin'd.
Gen. Whether this be,
Or be not, I're not fware.
Pro. You doe yet taue
Some subleties o'th'ile, that will nor let you
Beleeue things certaine: Welcome, my friends all,
But you, my brace of Lords, were I'mo minded
I heere could plucke his Highneffe frowne vpon you
And juftifie you Traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.

"The Diuell speakes in him:
Pro. No:

For you (moft wicked Sir) whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankell fault; all of them: and require
My Dukedome of thee, which, perforce I know
Thou must restore.

Alc. If thou beest Prospers
Guie vs particulars of thy preteruation,
How thou haft met vs heere, whom three howres since
Were wracket vpon this shore? where I haue lof't (How tharp the point of this remembrance is)
My deere fonne Ferdinand.

Pro. I am wee for't, Sir,
Alc. Irreparable is the losse, and patience
Saires, it is paft her cure.

Pro. I rather thinke
You haue not sought her helpe, of whose soft grace
For the like losse, I haue her foueraigne aid,
And reft my felle content.

Alc. You the like losse?

Pro. As great to me, as late, and supportable
To make the deere losse, haue I meanes much weaker
Then you may call to comfort you; for I
Haue lost my daughter.

Alc. A daughter?

Oh heauens, that they were lying both in Naipes
The King and Queene there, that they were, I wish
My felle were muddled in that oo-zie bed
Where my fonne lies: when did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this lat Tempete. I percieue thefe Lords
At this encounter doe so much admire,
That they devour their reafon, and scarce thinke
Their eies doe offices of Truth: Their words
Are natural breath: but howfoeu'r you haue
Beene iuftled from your fences, know for certain
That I am Prospers, and that very Duke
Which was thrift forth of Millaine, who moft strangely
Vpon this shore (where you were wracket) was landed
To be the Lord on't: No more yet of this,
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a break-faut, nor Reffiting this firft meeting: Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court: heere haue I few attendants,
And Subiefts none abroad: pray you lookie in:
My Dukedome since you haue given me againe,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At length bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much, as me my Dukedome.

Here Prospers discouers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at Chess.

Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me falle.
Fer. No my dearest loue,
I would not for the world. (wrangle,
Mir. Yes, for a score of Kingdomes, you should
And I would call it faire play.

Alc. If this proue
A vision of the Iland, one deere Sonne
Shall I twice call
Seb. A most high miracle.
Fer. Though the Seas threatne they are mercifull,
I haue curs'd them without caufe.

Alc. Now all the bleslings
Of a glad father, compaffe thee about:
Arife, and say how thou cam't heere.

Mir. O wonder!

How many goodly creatures are there heere?
How beauteous mankinde is? O braue new world

B 3

That
The Tempest.

That has such people in't.

Pro. This new to thee. (play?)

Ab. What is this Maid, with whom thou was't at Your el'd acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is she the goddess that hath (feuer'd vs,
And brought vs thus together?

Fer. Sir, she is mortal;
But by immortal prudence, she's mine;
I chose her when I could not ask my Father
For his advice: not thought I had one: She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Millaine,
Of whom, so often I have heard renowne,
But never saw before: of whom I have Receu'd a second life; and second Father
This Lady makes him to me.

Ab. I am hers.
But O, how odly will it found, that I
Must ask my childe forgivenesse?

Pro. There Sir stop,
Let vs not burchen our remembrances, with
A barneinne that's gon.

Gon. I have inly wept,
Or shoul have spake ere this: looke downe you gods
And on this couple drop a beffed crowne;
For it is you, that haue chalk'd forth the way
Which brought vs hither.

Ab. I say Amen, Gonnello.

Gon. Was Millaine thrust from Millaine, that his Issue
Should become Kings of Naples? O reioyce
Beyond a common joy, and let it downe
With gold on lafting Pillers: In one voyage
Did Claribell her husband finde at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother, found a wife,
Where he himfelfe was loft: Prospero, his Dukedome
In a poore Ile: and all of vs, our felues,
When no man was his owne.

Ab. Glue me your hands:
Let grieve and allow still embrace his heart,
That doth not with you ly.

Gon. Be it fo, Amen.

Enter Arieil, with the Master and Boatfwayne amusedly following.

O looke Sir, looke Sir, here is more of vs:
I prophesied, if a Growles were on Land
This fellow could not drowne: Now blaffemy,
That swear'd Grace ore-board, not an oath on shore.
Haft thou no mouth by land?
What is the newes?

Bot. The bef newes is, that we have safely found
Our King, and company: The next: our Ship,
Which but three glaffe finsce, we gave out split,
Is yte, and yare, and bravely rig'd, as when
We firft put out to Sea.

Ar. Sir, all this feruice
Hau'e I done since I went.

Pro. My trickfey Spirit.

Ab. These are not natural events, they strengthen
From frange, to franger: say, how came you hither?

Bot. If I did thinke, Sir, I were well awake,
I'd strue to tell you: we were dead of sleepe,
And (how we know not) all clapt under hatches,
Where, but euen now, with frange, and feuerall noyces
Of roring, shreeking, howling, gingling chaines,
And mo dieriffte of founds, all horrible.
We were awak'd: straught way, at liberty;
Where we, in all our trim, freely beheld

Our roylall, good, and gallant Ship: our Master
Carping to eye her: on a trice, fo please you,
Euen in a dreame, we were diuided from them,
And were brought moaping hither.

Ar. Was't well done?

Pro. Bravely (my diligence) thou shalt be free.

Ab. This is as strange a Maze, as ere men trod,
And there is in this Barneinne, more then nature
Was euer conduct of: some Oracle
Muft reftifle our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my Leige,
Doe not infet thy minde, with beating on
The stranegneffe of this Barneinne, at pickt leisure
(Which shall be shortly fingle) I'll refole you,
(Which to you shall feeme probable) of euer
These happend accidents: till when, be cheerefull
And think of each thing well: Come hither Spirit,
Set Caliban, and his companions free:
Wayte the Spell: How fars my gracious Sir?
There are yet miffing of your Companie
Some few odd Lads, that you remember not.

Enter Arieil, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo in their faine Apparel.

Ste. Every man shift for all the reft, and let
No man take care for himfelfe; for all is
But fortune: Coragio Bully-Monfter Carago.

Tri. If thee be true fpies which I weare in my head, here's a goody fight.

Cal. O Strakes, thefe be braue Spirits indeede
How fine my Master is? I am afraid
He will chaftife me.

Seb. Ha, ha:
What things are thefe, my Lord Anthony?
Will money buy em?

Ar. Very like: one of them
Is a plane Fih, and no doubt marketable.

Pro. Marke but the badges of thefe men, my Lords,
Then fay if they be true: This miffitem knaue;
His Mother was a Witch, and one fo ftrong
That could controle the Moone: make flourves, and ebs,
And deale in her command, without her power:
These three hau'e robd me, and this demy-duell;
(For he's a baftard one) had plotted with them
To take my life: two of thefe Fellowes, you
Muft know, and owne, this Thing of darkennefe, I Acknowledg mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Ab. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?

Seb. He is drunke now;
Where had he wine?

Ab. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they Finde this grand Liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How can't thou in this pickle?

Tri. I haue bin in fuch a pickle since I faw you laft,
That I feare me will neuer out of my bones:
I shall not feare fly-blowing.

Seb. Why how now Stephano?

Ste. O touch me not, I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.

Pro. You'd be King o' the Ile, Sirfa?

Seb. I shou'd haue bin a fore one then.

Ab. This is a frange thing as ere I look'd on.

Pro. He is as disproportionate'd in his Manners
As in his shape: Goe Sirfa, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you looke
To haue my pardon, trim it handfomely.

Cal. I that I will: and Ile be wife hereafter,
The Tempest.

And feake for grace: what a thrice double Aske
Was I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worship this dull foole?
Pro. Go to, away.
(Alc. Hence, and beftow your luggage where you
&b. Or flole it rather.
Pro. Sir, I intue your Highnesse, and your traine
To my poore Cell: where you shall take your reft
For this one night, which part of it, Ie waite
With fuch discourse, as I not doubt, fhall make it
Goe quicke away: The story of my life,
And the particular accidents, got by
Since I came to this faire: And in the morne
I'll bring you to your ship, and fo to Naples,

Where I haue hope to fee the nuptiall
Of thefe our deere-belou'd, folemnized,
And thence retire me to my Millaines, where Every third thought fhall be my graue.
Alc. I long
To heare the fory of your life; which muft
Take the care finamely.
Pro. I'll deliver all,
And promife you calm Seas, auspicious gales,
And faile, fo expeditious, that fhall catch
Your Royall flete farre off: My Ariel; chicke
That is thy charge: Then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well: pleafe you draw neere.
Exeunt omnes.

EPILOGUE,
spoken by Prospero.

Now my Charmes are all ore-browne,
And what ftreng'th I haue's mine owne.
Which is moft faint: now 'tis true
I muft be here confinde by you,
Or bent to Naples, Let me not Since I haue my Dukedom got,
And pardon't the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Island, by your Spell,
But release me from my bands
With the helpe of your good bands:
Gentle breath of yours, my Sailes
Muit fill, or else my proueit failles,
Which was to pleafe: Now I want
Spirits to enforce: Art to incant,
And my ending is defpaire,
Venfle I be releiu'd by prayer
Which pierces fo, that it assaults
Mercy it felle, and frees all faultes.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence fet me free.
Exit.

FINIS.
THE
Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Valentine : Proteus, and Speed.

Valentine.

Eafe to perfwade, my louing Proteus;
Home-keeping-youth, haue euere homely wits,
We't not affection chaines thy tender days.
To the sweet glances of thy honoure Louise,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To fee the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (liuing duly fuggardis'd at hone)
Wearie thy youth with shapelefle idlenefe.
But fince thou lou'ft; loue full, and thrive therein,
Even as I would, when I to loue begin.

Pro. Will thou be gone? Sweet Valentine ad ew,
Thinke on thy Proteus, when thou (hap'ly) feefet
Some rare note-worthy obiect in thy traveile.
With me partake in thy happinesse,
When thou do't mee good hap; and in thy danger,
(If euere danger doe environ thee)
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadel-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a loue-booke pray for my fucceffe?

Pro. Upon fome booke I loue, I'le pray for thee.

Val. That's on fome shallow Storie of deepje loue,
How yong Leander croft the Hellefpont.

Pro. That's a deepje Storie, of a deeper loue,
For he was more then ouer-thoos in loue,

Val. 'Tis true; for you are ouer-bootes in loue,
And yet you never fwoon the Hellefpont.

Pro. Ouer the Bootes? nay glue me not the Boots.

Val. No, I will not; for it bootes thee not.

Pros. What? (grones)

Val. To be in loue; where fcorne is bought with Coy looks, with hart-fere fighes: one fiding moments
With whyte watchfull, weary, tedious nights; (mirth,
If hap'ly won, perhaps a hapleffe gaine;
If loft, then a grieuous labour won;
How euere; but a fолly bought with wit,
Or elfe a wit, by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumftance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumftance, I fcare you'll profe.

Pro. 'Tis Loue you caull at, I am not Loue.

Val. Loue is your mafter, for he mafter you;
And he that is fo yoked by a fool,
Me thinkes fhoold not be chronicled for wife.

Pro. Yet Writters fay; as in the sweeteft Bud,
The eating Canker dwells; fo eating Loue
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writters fay; as the moft forward Bud

Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow,
Even fo by Loue, the yong, and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blazifg in the Bud,
Loofing his verdure, even in the prime,
And all the faire effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waffe I time to counfaiue thee.
That art a votary to fond defire?
Once more adieu: my Father at the Road
Expects my comming, there to fee me ship'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no: Now let vs take our leave:
To Millaine let me heare from thee by Letters
Of thy fucceffe in loue; and what newes elfe
Betideth here in abfence of thy friend:
And I likewife will vitife thee with mine.

Pro. All happinesfe bechance to thee in Millaine.

Val. As much to you at hone: and fo farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after Honour hunts, I after Loue;
He leaues his friends, to dignifie them more;
I loue my felfe, my friends, and all for loue:
Thou Julia thou haft metamorphiz'd me:
Made me negleét my Studies, loose my time;
Warre with good counfaile; let the world at nought;
Made Wit with mufing, weake; hart fick with thought.

Sp. Sir Proteus: faue you; faue you my Mafter?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarke for Millaine.

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already,
And I have plaid the Shephef in loofing him.

Pro. Indeed a Sheepe doth very often stray,
And if the Shepheard be awhile away,

Sp. You conclude that my Mafter is a Shepheard then,
And I Sheepe?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my horses are his horses, whether I wake or sleepe.

Pro. A filly anfwer, and fitting well a Sheepe.

Sp. This profees me still a Sheepe.

Pro. True: and thy Mafter a Shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumftance.

Pro. It fhall goe hard but lie profe it by another.

Sp. The Shepheard feekes the Sheepe, and not the Sheepe the Shepheard; but I feek my Mafter, and my Mafter feekes not me: therefore I am no Sheepe.

Pro. The Sheepe for foddor follow the Shepheard,
The Shepheard for foode followes not the Sheepe: thou for waffes fowleft thy Mafter, thy Mafter for waffes followes not thee: therefore thou art a Sheepe.

Sp. Such another profe will make me cry baà.

Pro. But do'ft thou heare: gau'lt thou my Letter to Julia?

Sp. I
Scena Secunda.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say Lucetta (now we are alone)
Would'th thou then counsaille me to fall in love?
Luc. I Madam, so you stumble not veinheadly.
Jul. Of all the faire reftort of Gentlemen,
That every day with parle encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthieft love?
Lu. Pleafe you repeat their names, ile flew my minde,
According to my shallow fimple skill.
Lu. What think'th thou of the faire ft Eglamure?
Lu. As of a Knight, well-spoken, near, and fine;
But were I you, he never should be mine.
Lu. What think'th thou of the rich Mercatia?
Lu. Well of his wealth; but of himselfe, fo fo.
Lu. What think'th thou of the gentle Proteus?
Lu. Lord, Lord: to fee what folly reignes in vs.
Lu. How now? what means this passion at his name?
Lu. Pardon dear Madam, 'tis a palling flame,
That I (vnworthy body as I am)
Should confine thus on loyely Gentlemen.
Lu. Why not on Proteus, as of all the reft?
Lu. Then thus: of many good, I thinke him best.
Tul. Your reafon?
Jul. I haue no other but a womens reafon:
I thinke him fo, because I thinke him fo.
Tul. And would'th thou haue me call my love on him?
Lu. I: if you thought your love not call away.
Lu. Why he, of all the reft, hath never mould me.
Lu. You he, of all the reft, I thinke best loves ye.
Tul. His little ftpeaking, fhes his love but small.
Lu. Fire that's clofeft kept, burns moft of all.
Lu. They doe not love, that doe not fhew their love.
Lu. Oh, they loue leaft, that let men know their loue.
Jul. I would I knew his minde.
Lu. Perufe this paper Madam.
Tul. To Julia: fay, from whom?
Lu. That the Contents will shew.
Tul. Say, fay: who gave it thee?
Lu. Sir Valentines page: & fent I thinke from Proteus;
He would have gien it you, but I being in the way,
Did in your name receuie it: pardon the fault I pray.
Tul. Now (by my modesty) a goodly Broker:
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper, and confpire against my youth?
Now truft me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place:
There: take the paper: fee it be return'd,
Or elfe return no more into my fight.
Lu. To plead for loue, deferues more fee, then hate.
Tul. Will ye be gon?
Lu. That you may ruminatte.
Exit.
Tul. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter;
It were a shame to call her backe againe,
And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her.
What 'foole is she, that knowes I am a Maid,
And would not force the letter to my view?
Since Maides, in modesty, fay no, to that,
Which they would have the profferer conftrue, I.
Fie, fie: how way-ward is this foolifh loue;
That (like a teftle Babe) will scratch the Nurfe,
And prefently, all humbled kiffe the Rod?
How churlithly, I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly, I would have had her here?
How angrily taught my brow to frowne,
When inward joy endure'd my heart to fmile?
My penance is, to call Lucetta backe
And ask remiflion, for my folly paft.
What hoe: Lucetta.
Lu. What would your Ladifhip?
Jul. Is't neere dinner time?
Lu. I would it were,
That you might kill your flamacke on your meat,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

And not upon your Maid.
Lu. What is it that you Took vp so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Lu. Why didst thou stoop then?
Lu. To take a paper vp, that I let fall.
In. And is that paper nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
In. Then let it lie, for there that it concerns.
Lu. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Vnleffe it have a false Interpreter.
In. Some love of yours, hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu. That I might sing it (Madam) to a tune:
Glue me a Note, your Ladisship can set
In. As little by fuch toyes, as may be possibile:
Beft sing it to the tune of Light O, Loue.
Lu. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
In. Heavy? belike it hath some burden then?
In. I: and melodious were it, would you sing it,
In. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach so high.
Lu. Let's see your Song:
How now Minion?
Lu. Kepe tune there still; so you will sing it out:
And yet me thinke I do not like this tune.
Lu. You do not?
Lu. No (Madam) is too sharpe.
Lu. You (Minion) are too faucie.
Lu. Nay, now you are too flat;
And marre the concord, with too harsh a defect!
There wanteth but a Meane to fill your Song.
In. The meanes is dround with you vnruely base.
Lu. Indeed I bid the bafe for Protheus.
In. This bable shall not henceforth trouble me;
Here is a coile with protestation;
Goe, get you gone; and let the papers lye:
You would be finging them, to anger me.
Lu. She makes it strainge, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so angred with another Letter.
Lu. Nay, would I were so angred with the famc:
Oh hatefull hands, to teare fuch louing words;
Inulurious Wafpes, to feede on fuch sweet hony,
And kill the Bees that yeeldle it, with your flings;
Ile kiffe each feueller paper, for amends:
Looke, here is writ, kinde Iulia: vnkinde Iulia,
As in reuenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruizing-flones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy diffaine.
And here is writ, Loue wounded Protheus:
Poore wounded name: my bosome, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd:
And thus I search it with a fouraigne kiffe.
But twice, or thrice, was Protheus written downe:
Be calme (good winde) blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter, in the Letter,
Except mine own name: That, some whirle-winde beare
Vnto a ragged, fearfull, hanging Rocke,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea.
Loe, here in one line is his name twice writ:
Poore forlorn Protheus, paffionate Protheus:
To the sweet Iulia: that iie teare away:
And yet I will not, fith fo prettily
He couples it, to his complaining Names;
Thus will I fold them, one upon another;
Now kiffe, embrace, contend, doe what you will.
Lu. Madam: dinner is ready: and your father flaines.

Lu. Well, let vs goe.
Lu. What, shall thse papers lye, like Tel-tales here?
Lu. If you refpeict them; beft to take them vp.
Lu. Nay, I was taken vp, for laying them downe.
Yet here they shall not lye, for catching cold.
Lu. I see you have a months minde to them.
Lu. I do (Madam) you may fay what lights you see;
I fsee things too, although you judge I winke.
Lu. Come, come, wilt pleafe you goe.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antonio and Pantbino. Protheus.

Ant. Tell me Pantbino, what fad talke was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloyfter?
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Protheus, your Sonne.
Ant. Why? what of him?
Pan. He wonderd that your Lordship
Would suffer him, to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of flander reputation
Put forth their Sonses, to feke preferment out.
Lu. Some to the warres, to try their fortune there;
Some, to dilcouer Ilands farre away:
Some, to the studious Vniverseeties;
For any, or for all these exercifes,
He faid, that Protheus, your Sonne, was meet;
And did requert me, to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachement to his age,
In hauing knowne no trauaille in his youth.
Ant. Nor need't you much importune me to that Whereon, this month I have bin hammering:
I haue confider'd well, his loffe of time,
And how he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried, and tutord in the world:
Experience is by industry achto'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then tell me, whether were I beft to fend him?
Pan. I thinke your Lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthfull Valentius,
Attends the Emperour in his royall Court.
Ant. I know it well.
Pan. 'Thither, were good, I thinke, your Lordship fend him
There shall he prafticke Titls, and Tunemants;
Heare sweet discourfes, confuerue with Noble-men,
And be in eye of every Exercife
Worthy his youth, and noblenesse of birth.
Ant. I like thy confanaile: well haft thou aduis'd:
And that thou maft perceiue how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make knowne;
Even with the fpeedieft expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperors Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it pleafe you, Don Alphonfo,
With other Gentlemens of good efteme
Are iournyng, to salute the Emperors,
And to commend their fervice to his will.
Ant. Good company: with them shall Protheus goe:
In and good time: now will we breake with him.
Pro. Sweet Loue, sweet lines, sweet life,
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for loue, her honors paune;
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

O that our Fathers would applaud our loues
To fear, their happynesse with their content.

Pro. Oh heavenly Iulia.

Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?

Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Deilier'd by a friend, that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me see what newes.

Pro. There is no newes (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he liues, how well-belou'd,
And daily grace by the Emperor;
Withking me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something forted with his wish:
Mute not that I thus foadily proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end:
I am refol'd, that thou shalt fpend some time
With Valentine, in the Emperors Court:
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibitions thou that haue from me,
To morrow be in readinesse, to goe,
Excite it not: for I am peremptory.

Pro. My Lord I cannot be fo fome provid'd,
Please you deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look what thou want'st halfe fent after thee:
No more of flay: to morrow thou muft goe;
Come on Pantomus, you shall be implo'd,
To haften on his Expedition.

Pro. Thus have I thund the fire, for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the fee, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to fiew my Father Iulius Letter,
Leaff he should take exceptions to my loue,
And with the vantage of mine owne excufe
Hath he excepted against my loue.
Oh, how this fpring of loue refembles
The unceraine glory of an April day,
Which now fiewes all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Pro. Sir Proutbus, your Fathers call's for you,
He is in haf, therefore I pray you go.

Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thoufand times it answer's no.

Exeunt. Finis.

Actus secundus: Scæna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Scæna Silvaia.

Val. Sir, your Gloue.

Valen. Not mine: my Gloues are on.

Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one.

Val. Ha? Let me fee: I glue it me, it's mine:
Sweet Ornament, that deckes a thing diuine,
Ah Silvaia, Silvaia.

Speed. Madam Silvaia: Madam Silvaia.

Val. How now Sirha?

Speed. Shew is not within hearing Sir.

Val. Why Sir, who bad you call her?

Speed. Your worship sir, or elfe I mitooke.

Val. Well; you'll fill be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was laft children for being too slow.

Val. Goe to, fir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvaia?

Speed. Shee that your worship loues?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in loue?

Speed. Marry by thefe speciall markes: firft, you haue learn'd (like Sir Proutbus) to wretche your Armes like a Male-content: to relifh a Loue-fong, like a Robin-red brest: to wakke alone like one that had the pellifene:
to figh, like a Schoole-boy that had loft his A. B. C.
to weep like a yong wench that had buried her Grandam:
to falt, like one that takes diet: to watch, like one that feares robbing: to speake puling, like a beggar at Hal low-Maffe: You were wont, when you laughe, to crow like a cocke; when you walk'd, to wakke like one of the Lions: when you fainted, it was prefently after dinner:
when you look'd fadly, it was for want of money: And now you are Metamorphis'd with a Miftria, that when I looke on you, I can hardly thinke you my Mafter.

Val. Are all these things perceiued in me?

Speed. They are all perceiued without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without you I say, that's certaine: for without you were both simpfe, none elfe would: but you are fo without these folfies, that these folfies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an Vrinal: that not an eye that sees you, but is a Phyfician to comment on your Malady.

Val. But tell me: do't thou know my Lady Silvia?

Speed. Shee that you gaze on fo, as the fits at fupper?

Val. Haft thou obler'd that? even the I meane.

Speed. Why Sir, I know her not.

Val. Do'th thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'rt her not?

Speed. Is the not hard-favour'd, or?

Val. Not fo faire (boy) as well fauour'd.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What doft thou know?

Speed. That shee is not fo faire, as (of you) well-fa wour'd?

Val. I mean that her beauty is esquisite,
But her fauour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the oth er out of all count.

Val. How painted: and how out of count?

Speed. Marry fir, fo painted to make her faire, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How eftem'd thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never faw her fince she was deform'd.

Val. How long hath the beene deform'd?

Speed. Euer since you lopt'd you go.

Val. I have lou'd her euer fince I faw her,
And thilfe I fee her beaufull.

Speed. If you loue her, you cannot fee her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because Loue is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your owne eyes had the lights they were wont to haue, when you chidde at Sir Proutbus, for going vn garter'd.

Val. What should I fee then?

Speed. Your owne prefent folly, and her paffing de formitie: for hee beeing in loue, could not fee to garter his hofe: and you, beeing in loue, cannot fee to put on your hofe.

Val. Belike (boy) then you are in loue, for laft mor-
You could not fee to wipe my fhoes.

Speed. True fir: I was in loue with my bed, I thank you, you fwing'd me for my loue, which makes mee the bolder bolder to chide you, for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Left night the enjoiy'd me,
To write some lines to one the loues.

Speed. And haue you?

Val. I haue.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No (Boy) but as well as I can do them:
Peace, here she comes.

Speed. Oh excellent motion; oh exceeding Puppet:
Now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam & Miftres, a thousand good-morrows.

Speed. Oh, 'tis ye-good- ev'n: heer's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine, and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. He should give her interest: & she gives it him.

Val. As in joynd me; I haue writ your Letter
Vnto the secret, nameslee friend of yours:
Which I was much vnwillings to proceed in,
But for my duty to your Ladiship. (done.)

Sil. I thank you (gentle Servant) 'tis very Clerkly-

Val. Now truft me (Madam) it came hardly-off:
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No (Madam) fo it need you, I will write (please you command) a thousand times as much:
And yet——

Sil. A pretty period: well: I gheffe the sequell;
And yet I will not name it: and yet I care not.
And yet, take this againe: and yet I thank you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. And yet you will: and yet, another yet.

Val. What means your Ladiship?
Do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But (since unwillingly) take them againe.

Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. I, I: you writ them Sir, at my request,
But I will none of them: they are for you:
I would have had them writ more mouingly;

Val. Pleaflue you, Ile write your Ladiship another.

Sil. And when it's writ: for my fake read it over,
And if it please you, fo: if not: why fo:

Val. If it pleae me, (Madam?) what then?

Sil. Why if it pleae you, take it for your labour,
And fo good-morror Servant. Ext, Sil.

Speed. Oh left ye feeene: infrucible: insuable,
As a nose on a mans face, or a Wethercokke on a fleape:
My Mafter fues to her: and she hath taught her Sutor,
He being her Pupill, to become her Tutor.
Oh excellent deuite, was there euer heard a better?
That my master being sribe,
To himselfe shoulde write the Letter?

Val. How now Sir?

What are you reasoning with your selfe?

Speed. Nay: I was raming: 'tis you haue the reason.

Val. To doe what?

Speed. To be a Spokef-man from Madam Silvia.

Sil. To whom?

Sil. To you selfe: why, she woe you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a Letter, I shoulde say.

Val. Why the hath not writ to me?

Speed. What need she,
When shee hath made you write to your selfe?

Val. Why, do you not perceive the left?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No beleaueing you indeed fir:
But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why she hath given you a Letter.

Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And ye letter hath she deliuer'd, & there end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. Ile warrant you, 'tis as well:
For often haue you writ to her: and she in modesty,
Or elle for want of iule time, could not againe reply,
Or fearing els some meffiger, y might her mind difcouer
Her self hath taught her Loue himself, to write vnto her:
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it. (louer.
Why mufe you sir, 'tis dinner time.

Val. I haue dyn'd.

Speed. I, but hearken sir: though the Cameleon Loue
Can feed on the ayre, I am one that am nourish'd by my Vietaus; and would faile haue meate: oh bee not like your Milutrefe, be moued, be moued. Extant.
Sonnet, and am going with Sir Protbeut to the Imperialills Court; I think e Crab my dog, be the sawret nature dogge that rules: My Mother weeping: my Father wayling: my Sifer crying: our Maid howling: our Catte wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexitie, yet did not this cruel-heartt Curred shedde one teare: he is a stone, a very pibbe stone, and has no more pitty in him then a dogge: a lew would haue wept to haue seene our parting: why my Grandam hauing no eyes, looke you, wept her felse blinde at my parting:
nay, Ilc shew you the manner of it. This shooe is my father: no, this left shooe is my father; no, no, this left shooe is my mother: nay, that cannot bee fo nether:
yes, it is fo, It is fo: it hath the worfer sole: this shooe with the hole in it, is my mother: and this my father:
a veng'ance on't, there tis: Now fir, this staffe is my fisfer: for, looke you, the is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan our maid: I am the dogge: no, the dogge is himselfe, and I am the dogge:
oh, the dogge is me, and I am my felse: I; fo; fo: now come I to my Father: Father, your bleffing: now should not the shooe speake a word for weeping: now should I kiffe my Father: well, hee weeps on:
Now come I to my Mother: Oh that the could speake now, like a would-woman: well, I kiffe her: why there tis; here's my mothers breath vp and downe:
Now come I to my fifter; marke the moane she makes:
now the dogge all this while feds not a teare: nor speake a word: but see how I lay the duft with my teares.
Phant. Launt, away, away: a Boord: thy Master is flip'd, and thou art to poll after with oares: what's the matter? why weep't thou man? away afe, you'l looze
the Tide, if you tarry any longer.
Launt. It is no matter if the tide were lost, for it is the vknideft Tide, that euer any man tide.
Phantb. What's the vknideft tide?
Launt. Why, he that's tide here, Crab my dog.
Phant. Tut, man: I meane thou'lt looze the flood, and in loosing the flood, loose thy voyage, and in loosing thy voyage, loose thy Master, and in loosing thy Master, loose thy fervice, and in loosing thy fervice: —— why doft thou fllop my mouth?
Launt. For feare thou shoul'dst loose thy tongue.
Phantb. Where should I looze my tongue?
Launt. In thy Tale.
Phant. In thy Tale.
Launt. Loofe the Tide, and the voyage, and the Master, and the Seruice, and the tide: why man, if the River were drie, I am able to fill it with my teares: if the winde were dowe, I could drive the boate with my fighes.
Phant. Come: come away man, I was fent to call thee.
Launt. Sir: call me what thou dar't.
Phant. Wilt thou goe?
Launt. Well, I will goe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, Duke, Protbeut.
Sil. Servant.
Val. MiftrefTe.

Spec. Mafter, Sir Thurio frownes on you.
Val. I Boy, it's for loue.
Spec. Not of you.
Val. Of my Miftrfes then.
Spec. 'Tis well you knockt him.
Sil. Servant, you are fad.
Val. Indeed, Madam, I feeme fo.
Thur. Seeme you that you are not?
Val. Ha'ly I do.
Thur. So doe Counterfeys.
Val. So doe you.
Thur. What feeme I that I am not?
Val. Wife.
Thur. What infance of the contrary?
Val. Your folly.
Thur. And how quao you my folly?
Val. I quoa it in your Jerkin.
Thur. My Jerkin is a doublet.
Val. Well then, Ie double your folly.
Thur. How?
Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour?
Val. Give him leave, Madam, he is a kind of Camileum.
Thur. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, than live in your ayre.
Val. You have said Sir.
Thur. I Sir, and done too for this time.
Val. I know it well fir, you alwayes end ere you begin.
Sil. A fine volly of words, gentleme, & quickly shut off
Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the guier.
Sil. Who is that Servant?
Val. Your felle (sweet Lady) for you gave the fire,
Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships lookes,
And spends what he borrowes kindly in your company.
Thur. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I fhall make your wit bankrupt.
(works,
Val. I know it well fir: you have an Exchequer of
And I thinke, no other trefure to give your followers:
For it appereas by their bare Luieries
That they live by your bare words.
Sil. No more, gentleme, no more:
Here comes my fader.
Duk. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beft.
Sir Valentine, your fater is in good health,
What say you to a Letter from your friends
Of much good newes?
Val. My Lord, I will be thankfull,
To any happy meeffenger from thence.
Duk. Know ye, Don Antonio, your Countriman?
Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman
To be of worth, and worthy estimation,
And not without defert fo well reputed.
Duk. Hath he not a Sonne?
Val. I, my good Lord, a Son, that well deferves
The honor, and regard of such a father.
Duk. You know him well?
Val. I knew him as my felle: for from our Infancie
We have conuerfed, andspent our houres together,
And though my felle have beene an idle Trewant,
Omitting the fweete benefit of time
To clothe mine age with Angel-like perfecion:
Yet hath Sir Protbeut (for that's his name)
Made vfe, and fave advantage of his daies:
His yeares but yong, but his experience old:
His head vn-mellowed, but his Judgement ripe;
And in a word (for far behinde his worth Comes all the praifes that I now bellow.)

C. He
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

He is compleat in feature, and in minde, With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.

Duk. Behold me fit, but if he make this good He is as worthy for an Empresse love, As meet to be an Emperors Councillor:

Well, Sir: this Gentleman is come to me With Commendation from great Potentates, And here he means to spend his time a while, I think 'tis no vn-welcome news to you.

Ual. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had beene he.

Duk. Welcome him then according to his worth: Silvia, I speak to you, and you Sir Thurio,

For Valentine, I need not cite him to it, I will fend him hither to you presently.

Val. This is the Gentleman I told your Ladiship Had come along with me, but that his Mistrefse Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Chriftall looks.

Sil. Be-like that now the hath enfanchis'd them Upon some other pawne for fealty.

Val. Nay sure, I thinkne' the holds them prisoners fill.

Sil. Nay then he should be blind, and being blind How could he fee his way to feek out you?

Ual. Why Lady, Loue hath twenty paire of eyes.

Thur. They say that Loue hath not an eye at all.

Val. To fee such Louers,thuris, as your felfe, Upon a homely obiect, Loue can winke.

Sil. Have done, have done: here comes' gentleman.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus: Miftris, I befeech you Confirm his welcome, with some speciall fauer.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hether, If this he be you oft haue wish'd to hear from.

Ual. Miftris, it is: I sweet Lady, entertaine him To be my fellow-feruant to your Ladiship.

Sil. Too low a Miftris for fo high a feraunt.

Pro. Not fo, I sweet Lady, but too meane a feraunt To have a looke of such a worthy a Mistrefle.

Val. Leave off difcouer of diffability:

Sweet Lady, entertaine him for your Seruant.

Pro. My diftice will I hoast of, nothing elfe.

Sil. And dutie neuer yet did want his meed.

Seruant, you are welcome to a worthlesse Mistrefle.

Pro. Ile die on him that faies fo but your felfe.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. That you are worthlesse.

Thur. Madam, my Lord your father wold speake with

Sil. I wait vpon his pleafure: Come Sir Thuris,

Goe with me: once more, new Seruant welcome; Ile leave you to confer of home affairs,

When you have done, we looke too heare from you.

Pro. We'll both attend vpon your Ladiship.

Val. Now tell me: how do al from whence you came?

Pro. Your frends are wel, & have th'e much comended.

Val. And how doe yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your Lady? & how thrives your loue?

Pro. My tales of Loue were wont to weary you, I know you loy not in a Loue-discouer.

Val. I Proteus, but that life is alter'd now,

I have done penance for contemming Loue, Whole high emiprious thoughts have punifh'd me With bitter farts, with penitentiall grones, With nightly tears, and daily hart-fore fighes, For in reuenge of my contempt of loue, Loue hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes, And made them watchers of mine owne hearts forrow.

O gentle Proteus, Loue's a mighty Lord,

And hath so humbled me, as I confesse

There is no woe to his correction,

Nor to his Seruice, no such joy on earth:

Now, no difcouer, except it be of loue:

Now can I breake my fait, dine, fup, and sleepe,

Upon the very naked name of Loue.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:

Was this the Idol, that you worship fo?

Val. Even She; and is she not a heavenly Saint?

Pro. No; But she is an earthly Paragon.

Val. Call her diuine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O flatter me: for Loue delights in praiers.

Pro. When I was fick, you gave me better pilis,

And I must minifter the like to you.

Val. Then speake the truth by her; if not diuine, Yet let her be a principalitie, Soueraigne to all the Creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my Mistrefse.

Val. Sweet: except not any,

Except thou wilt except against my Loue.

Pro. Haue I not reafon to prefer mine owne?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her to:

Shee shall be dignified with this high honour,

To beare my Ladies traine, left the bafe earth Should from her veture chance to fleale a kiffe,

And of fo great a fauer growing proud,

Disdain to roote the Sommer-dwelling flowre,

And make rough winter everlaftingly.

Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadifme is this?

Val. Pardon me (Proteus) all I can is nothing,

To her, whose worth, make other worthies nothing;

Shee is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world: why man, she is mine owne,

And I as rich in hauing such a jewell

As twenty Seas, if all their fand were pearle,

The water, Nadar, and the Rocks pure gold.

Forgive me that I do not dreame on thee,

Because thou feest I doate vnpon my loue:

My foolish Riuall that her Father likes

(Onely for his poffefions are fo huge)

Is gone with her along, and I must after,

For Loue (thou know'lt is full of jealoufie,)

Pro. But the loues you?

Val. 1, and we are betroothd: say more, our mariage

With all the cunning manner of our flight

Determine' of: how I must climbhe her window,

The Ladder made of Cordes, and all the means

Plotted, and 'greed on for my happynesse.

Good Proteus goe with me to my chamber,

In thefe affairs to aid me with thy counfaile.

Pro. Goe on before: I shall enquire you forth:

I must vnto the Road, to dif-embarke

Some neceffaries, that I needes must vie,

And then Ile prefently attend you.

Val. Will you make hafe?

Pro. I will.

Euen as one heate, another heate expels,

Or as one naile, by strengh draws out another.

So the reemberance of my former Loue

Is by a newe object quite forgotten,

It is mine, or Valentines prail?

Her true perfection, or my faile transgresion?

That makes me reafonleff, to reaon thus?

Shee is faire: and fo is Julia that I love,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

(That I did loue, for now my loue is thaw'd, Which like a waxen Image 'gainst a fire Beares no impression of the thing it was,) Me thinkes my zeale to Valentine is cold, And that I loue him not as I was wont: O, but I loue his Lady too-too much, And that's the reason I loue him so little. How shall I doate on her with more advice, That thus without advice begin to loue her? 'Tis but her picture I haue yet beheld, And that hath dazeI'd my reason light: But when I looke on her perfections, There is no reason, but I shall be blinde. If I can checke my erring loue, I will, If not, to commaspe her Ile vfe my skill.

Speed. Louer, by mine honesty welcome to Padua.

Laurence. Foreweare not thy felis, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwayes, that a man is never found till hee be hang'd, nor never welcome to a place, till some certaine shot be paid, and the Hostes say welcome.

Speed. Come-on you mad-cap: Ile to the Ale-houe with you presently: where, for one shot of fiue pence, thou shalt haue fiue thousand welcomes: But firsha, how did thy Master part with Madam Julia?

Laurence. Marry after they clos'd in earneft, they parted very fairely in left.

Spee. But shall the marry him?

Laurence. No.

Speed. How then? shall he marry her?

Laurence. No, neither.

Spee. What, are they broken?

Laurence. No; they are both as whole as a fishe.

Spee. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Laurence. Marry thus, when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Spee. What an affe art thou, I vnderstand thee not.

Laurence. What a blooke art thou, that thou canst not? My stiffe vnderstands me?

Spee. What thou sayst?

Laurence. I, and what I do too: looke thee, Ile but leane, and my stiffe vnderstands me.

Spee. It stands vnder thee indeed.

Laurence. Why, vnder-stands and vnder-stands is all one.

Spee. But tell me true, wilt't be a match?

Laurence. Ask my dogges, if he say I, it will: if hee say no, it will: if hee shake his talle, and say nothing, it will.

Spee. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laurence. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Spee. 'Tis well that I get it fo: but Launce, how saith thou that my master is become a notable Louer?

Laurence. I never knew him otherwise.

Spee. Then how?

Laurence. A notable Lubber: as thou reportest him to bee.

Spee. Why, thou whorfon Affe, thou mistak'st me,

Laurence. Why Foolie, I meant not thee, I meant thy Master.

Spee. I tell thee, my Master is become a hot Louer.

Laurence. Why, I tell thee, I care not, though hee burne himselfe in Loue. If thou wilt goe with me to the Ale-house: if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Chrifian.

Spee. Why?

Laurence. Because thou haft not so much charity in thee as to goe to the Ale with a Chrifian: Will thou goe?

Spee. At thy service.

Pro. To leaue my Iulah shall I be forsworne? To loue faire Siluis, shall I be forsworne? To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworne. And ev'n that Powre which gave me firft my oath Prouokes me to this three-fold perjurie. Loue bad mee forweare, and Loue bids mee for-sware; O sweet-fuggeth Loue, if thou haft fnd'd, Teach me (thy tempted fluidet) to excele it. At firft I did adore a twinkling Starre, But now I worship a celeftiall Sunne: Vn-heedfull vowes may heedfully be broken, And he wants wit, that wants refoled will, To leare his wit, echange the bad for better; Fie, fie, vnreuerend tongue, to call her bad, Whole foueraignty fo oft thou haft preferv'd, With twenty thousand foulle-confirming oaths. I cannot leaue to loue; and yet I doe: But there I leaue to loue, where I shoule loue. Julia I loose, and Valentine I loose, If I keep them, I needs must loofe my felfe: If I looofe them, thus finde I by their loffe, For Valentine, my felfe: for Julia, Silua. I to my felfe am deere then a friend, For Loue is fill mof tall precious in it felfe, And Silua (witness heauen that made her faire) Shewes Julia but a swarthy Ethiope. I will forget that Julia is alie, Remembering that my Loue to her is dead, And Valentine Ile hold an Enemie, Aying at Silua as a sweeter friend, I cannot now proue contrant to my felfe, Without some treachery vs'd to Valentine. This night he meaneth with a Corded-ladder To clime celeftiall Silua's chamber window, My felfe in counfaile his competitor. Now prefently Ile give her father notice Of their difguifing and pretended flight: Who (all inrag'd) will banifie Valentine: For Thorio he intends shall wed his daughter, But Valentine being gon, Ile quickly croffe By some fte tricks, blunt Thorio's dull proceeding. Loue lend me wings, to make my purpose swift As thou haft lent me wit, to plot this drif.

Enter Iulia and Lucetta.

Iul. Cousinfaile, Lucetta, gentle girlie affiit me,
And eu'n in kinde loue, I doe coniure thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Charakter'd, and engrau'd,
To leffon me, and tell me some good meane
How with my honour I may vnertake
A journey to my loving Protheus.

Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.
Iul. A true-devoted Pilgrime is not weary
To measure Kingdomes with his feelke steps,
Much leffe shall the that hath Loues wings to flie,
And when the flight is made to one fo deere,
Of such diuine perfection as Sir Protheus.

Luc. Better forbear, till Protheus make returne.
Iul. Oh, know'lt y' not, his looks are my soules food?
Pitty the dartt that I have pined in,
By longing for that food fo long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of Love,
Thou wouldest as soone goe Kindie fire with snow.
As fekke to quench the fire of Loue with words.
Luc. I doe not sekke to quench your Loues hot fire,
But qualfie the fires extreme rage,
Left it should burne above the bounds of reason.

Iul. The more thou dam'lt it vp, the more it burnes:
The Current that with gentle murmure glides
(Thou know'lt) being flup'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his faire courfe is not hindered,
He makes sweet muickke with thenamelled ftones,
Giving a gentle kiffe to eveuy fedge
He ouer-taketh in his pilgrimage.
And fo by many winding nookes he flaries
With willing spurt to the wilde Ocean.
Then let me goe, and hinder not my courfe:
Ile be as patient as a gentle streame,
And make a paffime of each weary step,
Till the laft yet have brought me to my Loue,
And there Ile ref, as after much turmoilie
A bleffed soule doth in Etern.

Luc. But in what habbit will you goe along?
Iul. Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loofe encounters of lasciuious men:
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with fuch weedes
As may befeme some well reputed Page.

Luc. Why then your Ladiffip must cut your hair.
Iul. No girlie, Ile knitt it vp in filken stringes,
With twentie od-conceited true-loue knots:
To be fantaftique, may become a youth
Of greater time then I shall feew to be.

(chees)

Luc. What fashion (Madam) shal I make your bree-
Iul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compaffe will you weare your Fahrtingale?

Luc. Why eu'n what fashion thou beft liketh (Lucetta.)

Luc. You must needs haue the with a cod-peece (Ma-
Iul. Out, ou', (Lucetta) that wilbe illfaour'd. (dam)

Luc. A round hoof (Madam) now's not worth a pin Vntill you have a cod-peece to flack pins on.

Iul. Lucetta, as thou lou'dt me let me haue
What thou thinke'st meet, and is moft mannerly.
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For vnertaking fo vnfaid a journey?

I fear me it will make me scandaliz'd.
Luc. If you thinke fo, then flay at home, and go not.
Iul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dreame on Infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your journey, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone:
I fear me he will forse be pleas'd with all.

Iul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my feare:
A thousand oaths, an Ocean of his teares,
And infances of infinite of Loue,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.

Luc. All thefe are ferrants to deceifull men.
Iul. Baie men, that vie them to fo bafe effect;
But truer ferres did gouerne Protheus birth,
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His loue fincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His teares, pure messengers, fent from his heart,
His heart, as far from fraud, as heauen from earth.

Luc. Pray heau'n he prove fo when you come to him.
Iul. Now, as thou lou't me, do him not that wrong,
To beare a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely deferue my loue, by louing him,
And priendly goe with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I fland in need of,
To furnifh me vpon my longeing journey:
All that is mine I leaue at thy dipofe,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation,
Onely, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; anfwere not: but to it prefently,
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, Valentine, Launcet, Speed.

Duke. Sir Thurio, glue vs leaque (I pray) a while,
We have some secrets to confer about.
Now tell me Protheus, what's your will with me?

Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I wold difcouer,
The Law of friendship bids me to conceale,
But when I call to minde your gracious favours
Done to me (vndeferuing as I am)
My dutie pricks me on to vter that
Which elfe, no worldly good should draw from you.
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to fleale away your daughter:
My felfe am one made priuy to the plot.
I know you have determ'nd to befnow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates,
And should the thus be flone away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus (for my duties fake) I rather chofe
To croffe my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of forrowes, which would preffe you downe
(Being vnpreuented) to your timelieffe grage.

Duke. [who] I thank you for this honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This loue of theirs, my felfe have ofte seenes,
Haply when they haue iudg'd me faft aleepe,
And ofteentimes haue purpos'd to forbid

Sir

28
Sir Valentine her companion, and my Court.
But fearing left my jealous ayme might erre,
And so (unworthily) disgrace the man
(A raineffe that I euer yet have thun’d)
I gaue him gentle lookes, thereby to finde
That which thy felfe haft now disclos’d to me.
And that thou maifst perceiue of me this
Knowing that tender youth is foones suggetted,
I fightly lodge her in an upper Towre,
The key whereof, my felfe haue euer kept:
And thence she cannot be conuay’d away.

Pro. Know (noble Lord) they haue deu’d a meane
How he her chamber-window will afcend,
And with a Corded-ladder fetch her downe:
For which, the youthfull Louer now is gone,
And this way comes he with it prefently.
Where (if it pleafe you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it fo cunningly
That thy difcouery be not aimed at:
For, love of you, not hate vnto my friend,
Hath made me publifer of this pretence.

Duke. Vpon mine Honor, he shall neuer know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my Lord, Sir Valentine is comming.

Duk. Sir Valentine, whether away so fayt?

Val. Pleafe it your Grace, there is a Medfleenger
That fayes to bewaye my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duk. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenure of them doth but signifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.

Duk. Nay then no matter: fay with me a while,
I am to brake with thee of some affairs
That touch me neere: wherein thou muft be fecret.
’Tis not vnown to thee, that I have fought
To match my friend Sir Tharius, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well (my Lord) and fure the Match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of Vertue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Beseeching such a Wife, as your faire daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fance him?

Duk. No, truft me, She is peeuifh, fullen, froward,
Prowd, difobedient, flubborne, laking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my childe,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her father:
And may I fay to thee, this pride of hers
(Vpon atrue) hath drawne my loue from her;
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should heene been cherifh’d by her child-like dutie,
I now am full resolv’d to take a wife,
And turne her out, to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding dowre:
For me, and my poifficions he eftimates not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to do in this?

Duk. There is a Lady in Verona heere
Whom I affect: but the he is nice, and coy,
And naught eftimates my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I have thee to my Tutor
(For long agone I have forgot to court,
Besides the fashion of the time is chang’d)
How, and which way I may beftow my felfe
To be regarded in her fun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if the refpeft not words,
Dumbe Jewels often in their faile know
More then quicke words, doe move a womans minde.

Duk. But she did force a prefent that I fent her,

Val. A woman fometime fcorne what beft covent her.
Send her another: neuer gue her ore,
For fcorne at first, makes after-lore the more.
If she doe frowne, ’tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you.
If she doe chide, ’tis not to haue you gone,
For why, the foolees are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, what euer the doth fay,
But get you gone, the doth not meane you.
Platter, and praffe, commend, extoll their graces:
Though nere fo blacke, fay they haue Angels faces,
That man that hath a tongue, I fay is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duk. But she I meane, is promis’d by her friends
Vnto a youthfull Gentleman of worth,
And kept feuerely from refort of men,
That no man hath accesse by day to her.

Val. Why then I would refort to her by night.

Duk. I, but the dores and keyses kept fad,
That no man hath refourses to her by night.

Val. What lets but one may enter at her window?
Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built fo sheluing, that one cannot climb it
Without apperant hazard of his life.

Val. Why then a Ladder quantiy made of Cords
To caft vp, with a paire of anchoring hookes,
Would ferue to fcale another Here’s rowre,
So bold Leader would adventure it.

Duk. Now as thou art a Gentleman of blood
Adufe me, where I may haue fuch a Ladder.

Val. When would you vfe it? pray fir, tell me that.

Duk. This very night; for Loue is like a childle
That longs for every clock, that he can come by.

Val. By feauen a clock, ille you get you a ladder.

Duk. But harbke thee: I will goe to her alone,
How shall I beft conuey the Ladder thither?

Val. It will be light (my Lord) that you may beare it
Vnder a cloake, that is of any length.

Duk. A cloake as long as thine will ferue the turne?

Val. I my good Lord.

Duk. Then let me fee thy cloake,
Ile get me one of fuch another length.

Val. Why any cloake will ferue the turn (my Lord)

Duk. How fhall I fashion me to weare a cloake?
I pray thee, how me fay thy cloake vpon me.

What Letter is this fame? what’s here? to Silvia?
And here he an Engine fit for my proceeding,
Ile be fo bold to breake the fcale for once.

My thoughts do barbour with my Silvia nightly,
And flaues they are to me, that fend them flying.
Oh, could their Master come, and give us liberty,
Himfelfe would lodge, wheres (forcelles) they are lying.
My Herald Thoughts, in thy garb befome refh-them,
While I (thir King) that tillfer them importune
Dece ferue the grace, that with fafe grace bath bleft them,
Because my felfe doe want my servants fortune.
I curse my felfe, for they are fent by me,
That they should barbour where their Lord fhould be.

What’s here? Silvia, this night I will enfrachife thee.
’Tis fo: and here’s the Ladder for the purpole.
Why Pheoton (for thou art Mephos fonne)
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly Car?
And with thy daring folly burne the world?
Wilt thou reach flars, because they shine on thee?

Goethe
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Goe bafe Intruder, over-weening Slaue,
Befow thy fawning similes on equall mates,
And thinke my patience, (more then thy defect)
Is priviledge for thy departure hence.

Thanke me for this, more then for all the fowers
Which (all too-much) I have beforowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then twittest expedition
Will glue thee time to leave our royall Court,
By heauen, my wrath shall farre exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thy felle.

Be gone, I will not heare thy vaine excuse,
But as thou loue'th thy life, make speed from hence.

Val. And why not death, rather then luying torment?
To die, is to be banish'd from my felle,
And Silvia is my felle: banish'd from her
Is felle from felle. A deadly banishment:
What light, is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Vnleffe it to be thinke that she is by.
And feed vnpon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no muficke in the Nightingale.
Vnleffe I looke on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to looke vnpon.
Shee is my effence, and I leau to be;
If I be not by her faire influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alioe.
I file not death, to file his deadly doome,
Tarry I heere, I but attend on death,
But file I hence, I file away from life.

Pro. Run (boy) run, run; and fecke him out.
Lau. So-hough, Soa hough.

Pro. What feele thou?
Lau. Him we goe to finde, there's not a hairre on his head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Villaine, forbearre.
Pro. Sirha, I fay forbearre: friend Valentine, a word.
Val. My eares are ftope, & cannot hear good newes,
So much of bad already hath poffett them.

Pro. Then in dumbe silence will I bury mine,
For they are bards, vn-tunecable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead? Pro. No, Valentine. Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia, Hath the forfoworne me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forfoworne me.
What is your news?

Lau. Sir, there is a proclamation, you are vanished.
Pro. That thou art banish't: oh: that's the newes,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.
Val. Oh, I have fed vnpon this woe already,
And now exceffe of it will make me furfet.

Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?
Pro. I, I: and she hath offered to the doome

(Which vn-reuerft hands in effectuall force)
A Sea of melting pearle, which some call teares;
Thofe at her fathers churffhe fette he tenderd,
With them vnpon her knees, her humble felle;
Wringer her hands, while thine fefrenfes to become them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held vp,
Sad sighes, deep Groanes, nor fliuer-fhedding teares
Could penetrat her vncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tane, must die.

Befides, her interceffion cha'd him fo,
When she for thy repeale was fuppliant,
That to clofe prifon he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.

Val. No more: vntles the next word that thou speake'st
Have some malignant power vpon my life:
If fo: I pray thee breath it in mine eare,
As ending Antheme of my endlefe dolor.

Pro. Ceafe to lament for that thou canft not helpe,
And stydy helpe for that which thou lament'st,
Time is the Nurfe, and breeder of all good;
Here, if thou say, thou canft not fee thy love:
Befides, thy faying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a louers flaffe, walkes hence with that
And manage it, against defpairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliuer'd
Even in the milke-white bofomy of thy Loue.
The time now hertus not to expotulate,
Come, Ie conveye thee through the City-gate.
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concernce thy Loue-affaires:
As thou loue'th Silvia (though not for thy felle)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Val. I pray thee Launce, and if thou feeft my Boy
Bid him make hafte, and meet me at the North-gate.

Val. Oh my deere Silvia; haplesfe Valentine.
Launce. I am but a fooloe, looke you, and yet I haue the wit to thinke my Master is a kinde of a knaue: but that's all one, if he be but one knaue: He liues not now that knowes me to be in loue, yet I am in loue, but a Teeme of horfe shall not plucke that from me: nor who 'tis I loue: and yet 'tis a woman: but what woman, I will not tell my felle: and yet 'tis a Milke-maid: yet 'tis not a maid: for thee haue had Goiffips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Masters maid, and furues for wages. Shee hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, which is much in a bare Chrifian: Heere is the Cate-log of her Condition. Inprima. Shee can fetch and carry: why a horfe can doe no more: say, a horfe cannot fetch, but only carry, therefore is thee better then a Iade. Item.
Shee can milke, looke you, a fweet vertue in a maid with clean hands.

Speed. How now Signior Launce? what news with your Mastership?
La. With my Mastership: why, it is at Sea:
Sp. Well, your old vice fill: miachte the word: what news then in your paper?
La. The black'ft newes that ever thou heard'st,
Sp. Why man? how by horfe?
La. Why, as blacke as Inke.
Sp. Let me read them?
La. Fn on thee Jolit-head, thou canft not read.
Sp. Thou leeft: I can.
La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?
Sp. Marry,
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Sp. And more faults then haires.
La. That's monstruous: oh that that were out.
Sp. And more wealth then faults.
La. Why that word makes the faults gracious:
Well, he have her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.
Sp. What then?
La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master's flays for thee at the North gate.
Sp. For me?
La. For thee! Is, who art thou? he hath saied for a better man then thee.
Sp. And must I go to him?
La. Thou must run to him; for thou hast said so long, that going will scarce serve the turne.
Sp. Why didn't not tell me sooner? 'pox of your love Letters.
La. Now will he be swing'd for reading my Letter; An unmannishly flue, that will thwart himself into secrets: He after, to rejoice in the boyes correctio. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Proteus.

Du. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that the will love you
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.
Th. Since his exile the hath defpis'd me most,
Forbore my company, and raill'd at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.
Du. This weake imprisell of Love, is as a figure
Trenched in ice, which with an hours heat
Dissoles to water, and doth loose his forme.
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthilie Valentine shall be forgot.
How now sir Proteus, is your countryman
(According to our Proclamation) gon?
Pres. Gon, my good Lord.
Du. My daughter takes his going grievously?
Pres. A little time (my Lord) will kill that griefe.
Du. So I beleue: but Thurio thinkes not so:
Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee,
(For thou hast shewn some signe of good defect)
Makes me the better to confer with thee.
Pres. Longer then I proue loyal to your Grace,
Let me not live, to looke upon your Grace.
Du. Thou know'st how willingly, I would effect
The match betwixt sir Thurio, and my daughter?
Pres. I doe my Lord.
Du. And alfo, I thinkes, thou art not ignorant
How she opposes her against my will?
Pres. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.
Du. I, and peruerily, she perueres fo:
What might we doe to make the girlie forget
The love of Valentine, and love sir Thurio?
Pres. The best way is, to slander Valentine,
With falsehood, cowardize, and poore difcent:
Three things, that women highly hold in hate.
Du. I, but she'll think, that it is spoke in hate.
Pres. I, if his enemy deliuer it.
Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken
By one, whom the etteemeth as his friend.
Du. Then you must undertake to slander him.

Pro.
The two Gentlemen of Verona

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to doe:
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your flander never can endanger him;
Therefore the office is indiffirent,
Being intreated to by your friend.
Pro. You have preuss'd (my Lord) if I can doe it
By ought that I can speeke in his dispraise;
She shall not long continue loure to him:
But say this weepe her louse from Valentine,
It follows not that she will louse for Thoria.
Th. Therefore, as you vnwinde her louse from him;
Left it should rune, and be good to none,
You must prouide to botome it on me:
Which must be done, by praiing me as much
As you, in worth dispraise, sir Valentine.
Du. And Probeat, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already loues firme votary,
And cannot soone rouelt, and change your minde.
Upon this warrant, shall you have accesse,
Where you, with Silvia, may conferre at large.
For she is lumpiish, heaun, melanchollony,
And (for your friends fake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perfwation,
To hate yong Valentine, and loue my friend.
Pro. As much as I can doe, I will effect:
But you for Thoria, are not harpere enough:
You must lay Lime, to tangle her desires
By walefull Sonnets, whose compos'd Rimes
Should be full fraught with seruiceable vows.
Du. I, much is the force of heauen-bred Poesie.
Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears
Mouit it againe : and frame some feeling line,
That may discouer such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute, was furnished with Poets finewes,
Whose golden touch could soften steales and stone:
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leuathans
Forfake vnfounded deepes, to dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet Comfor\; To their Instruments
Tune a deploring dumpe : the nights dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grievance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Du. This discipline, showes thou haft bin in loure.
Th. And thy aduice, this night, lie put in praetice:
Therefore, sweet Probeat, my direction-guer,
Let vs into the City prefently
To forte some Gentlemen, well skil'd in Muskicke.
I haue a Sonnet, that will ferue the turne
To glue the on-let to thy good aduice.
Du. About it Gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait upon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certaine Out-laws.

2. Out. If there be ten, shrinke not, but down with'um.
3. Out. Stand fir, and throw vs that you have about'ye.
If not : we'll make you fit, and rifle you.
Sp. Sir we are vndone; these are the Villaines
That all the Trauilers doe feare so much.
Val. My friends.
1. Out. That's not fo, fir : we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace ; we'll heare him.
3. Out. I by my beard will we : for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know that I have little wealth to lose ;
A man I am, crof'd with aduerfite :
My riches, are thefe poore habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and subfance that I have.
2. Out. Whether trauell you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Milane.
2. Out. Have you long fojourn'd there ?
Val. Some sixeene moneths, and longer might haue
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2. Out. For what offence ?
Val. For that which now tormentes me to rehaerse;
I kil'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I flew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treschery.
1. Out. Why nere repent it, if it were done fo;
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doome.
2. Out. Have you the Tongues?
Val. My youthfull trauail, therein made me happy,
Or else I often had beene often miferable.
3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin Hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wilde faction.
1. Out. We'll have him ; Sirs, a word.
Sp. Matter, be one of them.
It's an honourable kinde of theeuer.
Val. Peace villaine.
2. Out. Tell vs this : haue you any thing to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of vs are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of vn gouern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awful men.
My felte was from Verona banish'd,
For praflifying to steale away a Lady,
And heire and Neece, alide vnto the Duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I flab'd vnto the heart.
1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as thefe.
But to the purpose : for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawlesse liues ;
And partly seeing you are beautifide
With goodly shape ; and by your owne report,
A Linguift, and a man of fuch perfection,
As we doe in our quality much want.
2. Out. Indeede because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, aboe the ref, we parley to you.
Are you content to be our Generall?
To make a vertue of necessity,
And liue as doe we in this wildernesse?
3. Out. What fait thou? wilt thou be of our confort?
Say I, and be the captaine of vs all :
We'll doe thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Louve thee, as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out.

Enter Proteus, Thurio, Iulia, Hof, Mufian, Silvia.

Pro. Already have I bin false to Valentine, And now I must be as vnliu to Thurio, Under the colour of commending him, I haue acceffe my owne loue to prefer. But Silvia is too faire, too true, too holy, To be corrupted with my worthleffe guifts; When I protest true loyalty to her, She twits me with my falsehood to my friend; When to her beauty I commend my vowes, She bids me thinke how I haue bin forsworne In breaking faith with Iulia, whom I lou'd; And notwithstanding all her sodaine quips, The leaf whereof would quell a louers hope: Yet (Spaniel-like) the more she spurnes my loue, The more it growes, and fawmeth on her still; But here comes Thurio; now muft we to her window, And giue some euening Mufique to her eare. Th. How now, sir Proteus, are you crept before vs? Pro. I gentlly Thurio, for you know that loue Will creepe in seruice, where it cannot goe. Th. I, but I hope, Sir, that you loue not here. Pro. Sir, but I doe: or else I would be hence. Th. Who, Silvia? Pro. I, Silvia, for your fake. Th. I thank you for your owne: Now Gentlemen Let's tone: and too it luftily a while. Ho. Now, my yong guest; me thinks your' allycholly; I pray you why is it? In. Marry (mine Hof) because I cannot be merry. Ho. Come, we'll haue you merry: he bring you where you shall haere Mufique, and fee the Gentleman that you ask'd for. In. But shall I heare him speake. Ho. I that you shall. In. That will be Mufique. Ho. Harke, harke. In. Is he among these? Ho. I: but peace, let's heare m.

Song.

Who is Silvia? what is she? That all our Swaines commend her? Holy, faire, and wife is she, The beaunf sub grace did lend her, that the might admired be. Is she kindes as she is faire? For beauty liues with kindnesse: Love durft to her eyes repaire, To beleve him of his blindnesse:

---

Pro.

And being help'd, inhabits there. Then to Silvia, let vs fing, That Silvia is excelling; She excels each mortal thing Upon the dull earth dwelling, To her let vs Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you fadder then you were before; How doe you, man? the Muficke likes you not.
In. You mistake: the Mufitian likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
In. He plaies falle (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings.
In. Not fo: but yet
So falle that he grieues my very heart-strings.
Ho. You haue a quicke eare. (heart.)
In. I, I would I were deafe: it makes me haue a flow
Ho. I perceiue you delight not in Mufique.
In. Not a whif, when it iars fo.
Ho. Harke, what fine change is in the Mufique.
In. I: that change is the fpring.
Ho. You would haue them alwaies play but one thing.
In. I would alwaies have one play but one thing.
But Hoft, doth this Sir Proteus, that we talke on, Often refert vnto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce his man told me, He lou'd her out of all nicke.
In. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to feekte his dog, which to morrow, by his Maffers command, hee muft carry for a preffent to his Lady.
In. Peace, fland afide, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, feare not you, I will fo pleade, That you shall fay, my cunning drift excells.
Th. Where meete we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good eu'n to your Ladifhip.
Sil. I thank you for your Mufique (Gentlemen) Who is that that fpeakes?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth, You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Proteus (gentle Lady) and your Servant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compasse yours.
Sil. You have your will: my will is eu'n this, That prefently you bie you home to bed: Thou fubtile, periu'd, falle, difoyal man: Think'ft thou I am fo shallow, fo conceitiffle, To be seduced by thy flatterie, That has deceived so many with thy vowes? Returne, returne and make thy loue amends: For me (by this pale queene of night I fware) I am fo farre from granting thy request, That I defpife thee, for thy wrongfull fute; And by and by intend to chide my felfe, Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (sweet loue) that I did loue a Lady, But she is dead.
In. 'Twere falle, if I should fpake it; For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that the be: yet Valentine thy friend Suruines; to whom (thy felle art winneffe) I am betroth'd: and art thou not afham'd To wrong him, with thy importunity?

Pro.
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

Pro. I like wife hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I, for in her grave
Affire thy felfe, my loue is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy Ladies grave and call hers thence,
Or at the least, in hers, repulcher thine.

Iul. He heard not that.

Pro. Madam i if your heart be so obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your Picture for my loue,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that ile speake, to that ile figh and weep:
For fine the substance of your perfect felfe
Is elle deouted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow, will I make true loue.

Iul. If twere a subinance you would fure deceiue it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loath to be your Idoll Sir;
But, since your falscheall shall become you well
To worship shadowes, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and ile fend it:
And fo, good reft.

Pro. As wretches haue ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne.
Iul. Hoh, will you goe?
Ho. By my hallidome, I was fat sleepe.
Iul. Pray you, where hes Sir Prothene?
Ho. Marry, at my howfe:
Truft me, I thinke 'tis almost day.
Iul. Not fo: but it hath bin the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the moft heauiefst.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Siluia.

Eg. This is the houre that Madam Siluia
Entreated me to call, and know her minde:
There's some fowre matter she'll employ me in,
Madam, Madam.

Sil. Who cal's?

Eg. Your ferman, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladihps command.

Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thowand times good morrow.
Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your felfe:
According to your Ladihps impofe,
I am thus early come, to know what fervice
It is your pleafure to command me in.

Sil. Oh Eglamore, thou art a Gentleman:
Thinke not I flatter (for I aware I doe not)
Valiant, wife, remorseful, well accomplisht.
Thou art not ignorant what deere good will
I beare unto the baniff'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vaine Thario (whom my very foule abhor'd.)
Thy felfe haft lou'd, and I have heard thee fay
No griefe did euer come fo neere thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-loue dide,
Vpon whole Graue thou wot'st pure charitie;
Sir Eglamore: I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where I heare, he makes abode;
And for the wales are dangerous to paffe,
I doe defire thy worthy company,

Vpon whole faith and honor, I repofe,
Vrge not my fathers anger (Eglamoure)
But thinke vpon my grieue (a Ladies grieue)
And on the liufice of my flying hence,
To keepe me from a moft vn holy match,
Which heauen and fortune fill rewards with plagues.
I doe defire thee, even from a heart.
As full of sorrowes, as the Sea of sands,
To beare me company, and goe with me:
If not, to hide what I haue faid to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grieuances,
Which, since I know they vertuoufly are plac'd,
I glue confent to goe along with you,
Wreaking as little what betideth me,
As much, I with all good befornte you.
When will you goe?

Sil. This euening comming.
Eg. Where shall I meeite you?
Sil. At Frier Patrickes Cell,
Where I intend holy Confession.
Eg. I will not fayre your Ladihpi:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)

Sil. Good morrow, kinde Sir Eglamoure.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Laurence, Prothene, Iulia, Siluia.

Lau. When a mans ferman shall play the Curre with him (looke you) it goes hard: one that I brought vp of a puppy: one that I fau'd from drowning, when three or foure of his blinde brothers and fitters went to it: I haue taught him (even as one would fay prefitely, thus I would teach a dog) I was fent to deliuer him, as a preftent to Miftris Siluia, from my Mafter; and I came no fooner into the dyning-chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and feales her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keepe himfelfe in all compaines: I would have (as one fhould fay) one that takes vp on him to be a dog indeede, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, to take a fault vpon me that he did, I thinke verily hee had bin hang'd for't: sure as I live he had fuffer'd for't: you shall ludge: Hee thrufts me himfelfe into the company of three or foure gentleman-like-dogs, vnder the Dukes table: hee had not bin there (bleffe the marke) a pifling while, but all the chamber fmetal him: out with the dog (faies one) what cur is that (faies another) whipp him out (faies the third) hang him vp (faies the Duke,) I hauing bin acqainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that呼びs the dogges: friend (quot h) you meane to whip the dog: I marrie doe I (quot h) you doe him the more wrong (quot h) 'twas I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Mafter would doe this for his Seruant? nay, ile be fware I haue fent in the flockes, for puddings he hath flone, otherwife he had bin executed: I haue ftood on the Pillorie for Griefe he hath kill'd, otherwise he had fuffer'd for'ts thou think't not of this now: nay, I remember the tricke you feru'd me, when I tooke my leve of Madam Siluia: did not
To plead for that, which I would not obtain;
To carry that, which I would have refused;
To praise his faith, which I would have displeased.
I am my Master's true confirmed Loue,
But cannot be true servaut to my Master,
Vnleffe I proue false trairor to my felle.
Yet will I woe for him, but yet so coldly,
As (heauen it knowes) I would not have him speed.
Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my meane.
To bring me where to speake with Madam Silvia.
Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?
Iul. If you be she, I doe intrest your patience
To heare me speake the message I am sent on.
Sil. From whom?
Iul. From my Master, Sir Probesius, Madam.
Sil. Oh: he swends you for a Picture?
Iul. I, Madam.
Sil. Vnfulia, bring my Picture there,
Goe, give your Master this: tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget
Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.
Iul. Madam, please you peruse this Letter;
Pardon me (Madam) I haue vnada'sd
Delier'd you a paper that I should not;
This is the Letter to your Ladiship.
Iul. I pray thee let me looke on that againe.
Iul. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.
Sil. There, hold:
I will not looke vpon your Masters lines:
I know they are flout with protestations,
And full of new-found oathes, which he will breeke
As easilly as I doe teare his paper.
Iul. Madam, he swends your Ladiship this Ring.
Sil. The more shame for him, that he swends it me;
For I haue heard him say a thoundred times,
His Julia gave it him, at his departure:
Though his falle finger haue prophan'd the Ring,
Mime shall not doe his Julia so much wrong.
Iul. She thankes you.
Sil. What fai'th thou?
Iul. I thank you Madam, that you tender her:
Poore Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much.
Sil. Do'ft thou know her?
Iul. Almost as well as I doe know my felle.
To vplode vpon her woes, I doe protest;
That I haue wept a hundred feuerall times.
Sil. Belike the thinks that Probesius hath forlook'd her?
Iul. I think she doth: and that's her caufe of forrow.
Sil. Is the not paffing falre?
Iul. She hath bin fairer (Madam) then she is,
When she did swends my Master lowd her well;
She, in my judgement, was as faire as you.
But since she did neglecd her looking-glaffe,
And threw her Sun-expelling Masque away,
The ayre hath staru'd the roes in her cheekes,
And pinch'd the illy-tintur'd of her face,
That now she is become as blacke as I.
Sil. How tall was she?
Iul. About my stature: for at Pentecost,
When all our Pigeants of delight were plaid,
Our youth got me to play the womens part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Julias gowne,
Which serued me as fit, by all mens judgements,
As if the garment had bin made for me:
Therefore I know she is about my height,
And at that time I made her weape a good,

Alas poor Probesius, thou haft entertain'd
A Foxe, to be the Shepherd of thy Lambs;
Alas, poor foolo, why doe I pity him?
That with his very heart desiplefeth me?
Because he loues her, he defiples her,
Because I love him, I must pity him.
This Ring I gave him, when he parted from me,
To binde him to remember my good will:
And now am I (vnhappy Meffenger)
The two Gentlemen of Verona.

For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam) 'twas Ariadne, paffioning
For Thyfius periury, and vnliet flight;
Which I most liuely acted with my tears:
That my poor Miftris mowed therewithall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If in my thought felt not her very sorrow.

Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas (poore Lady) defolate, and left;
I wepe my selfe to thinke upon thy words:
Here youth: there is my purfe; I give thee this (well.
For thy sweet Miftris fake, because thou lou'ft her.
Fast...

And the hall thanke you for't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull.
(her.
I hope my Masters fult will be but cold,
Since she respects my Miftris loue fo much.
Alas, how love can trifle with it felfe:
Here is her Picture: let me fee, I thinke
If I had fuch a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as lowely, as is this of hers;
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Vnleefe I flatter with my felfe too much.
Her haire is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow:
If that be all the difference in his flove,
Ile get me fuch a coulour'd Perrywig:
Her eyes are grey as glaffe, and fo are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What fhould it be that he respects her,
But I can make reftcheate in my felfe?
If this Lord Loue, were not a blinded god.
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow vp,
For 'tis thy riuell : O thou fencelfe forme,
Thou shalt be worship'd, kits'd, lou'd, and ador'd;
And were there fence in his Idolatry,
My fubfance fhould be statice in thy head.
Ile vie thee kindly, for thy Miftris fake
That vs'd me fo: or else by Loue, I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your vnfeeling eyes,
To make my Master out of loue with thee.

Enter Eglamoure, Siluia.

Egl. The Sun begins to build the western skie,
And now it is about the very hour.
That Siluia, at Fryer Patricks Cell should meet me,
She will not faile; for Louers brake not houres,
Vnleefe it be to come before their time,
So much they fpur their expedition.
See where the comes : Lady a happy eveneing.
Sil. Amen, Amen: goe on (good Eglamoure)
Out at the Poitierne by the Abbey wall;
I fear I am attended by some Spies.
Egl. Fare or not: the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recover that, we are sure enough.

Enter Thurius, Proteus, Iulia, Duke.

Th. Sir Proteus, what fales Siluia to my fult?

Pro. Oh Sir, I finde her milder then she was,
And yet the takes exceptions at your perfon.

Th. What? that my leg is too long?

Pro. No, that it is too little.

Th. Ile weare a Boot, to make it somewhat roun-

Pro. But loue will not be fpur'd to what it loathes.

Th. What fales fhe to my face?

Pro. She fales it is a faire one.

Th. Nay then the wanton lies: my face is blake.

Pro. But Pearles are faire; and the old faying is,

Blanke men are Pearles, in beauteous Ladies eyes.

Th. 'Tis true, fuch Pearles as put out Ladies eyes,
For I had rather wince, than looke on them.

Th. How likes she my difcourfe?

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.

Th. But well, when I difcourfe of loue and peace.

Iul. But better indeede, when you hold you peace.

Th. What fayes fhe to my valour?

Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.

Iul. She needs not, when she knowes it cowardize.

Th. What fales fhe to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deri'd.

Iul. True: from a Gentleman, to a fool.

Th. Confiders the my Poffeffions?

Pro. Oh, I: and pittees them.

Th. Wherefore?

Iul. That fuch an Affe should owe them.

Pro. That they are out by Leaf.

Iul. Here comes the Duke.

Du. How now Sir Proteus: how now Thurius?

Which of you saw Eglamoure of late?

Th. Not I.

Pro. Nor I.

Du. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

Du. Why then

She's fled vnto that pezant, Valentine;
And Eglamoure is in her Company:
'Tis true: for Fryer Laurence met them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he knew well: and guefst that it was she,
But being mask'd, he was not sure of it.
Befides she did intend Confession
At Patricks Cell this evuen, and there she was not.
These likelihoods confirme her flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you ftrand, not to difcourfe,
But mount you prefently, and meete with me.
Upon the rifing of the Mountain foote
That leads toward Mantua, whether they are fied:
Dispatch (sweet Gentlemen) and follow me.

Th. Why this it is, to be a penuith Girle,
That flies her fortune when it follows her:
Ile after: more to be reueng'd on Eglamoure,
Then for the loye of reck-jeffe Siluia.

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silua loue
Then hate of Eglamoure that goes with her.

Iul. And I will follow, more to croffe that loue
Then hate for Silua, that is gone for loue.

Val. How vile doth breed a habit in a man?
This shadowy defart, vnrequestwooded
I better Brooke then flourishing people Townes:
Here can I sit alone, vn-seene of any,
And to the Nightingales complaining Notes
Tune my disrestites, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my brest,
Leave not the Manion so long Tenant-leffe,
Left growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was,
Repair me, with thy prevence, Silvia:
Thou gentle Nymph, cherish thy for-lorne swaine.
What hallowing, and what dire is this to day?
Thise are my mates, that make their wills their Law,
Have some vnhappy passenger in chace;
They love me well: yet I have much to doe
To keepem from vncliquel outrages.
Withdraw thee Valentine: who's this comes heere?
Pro. Madam, this feruice I have done for you (Though you repext not aught of your fervent do.)
To hazard life, and reskew you from him,
That would haue forc'd your honour, and your loue,
Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one faire looke:
(A smaller boone then this I cannot beg,
And leffe then this, I am sure you cannot glue.)

Val. How like a dreame is this? I see, and heare:
Louv, lend me patience to forbear a while.
Sil. O miserable, vnhappy that I am.
Pro. Vnhappy were you (Madam) ere I came:
But by my comming, I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approch thou mak'tt me moit vnhappy.
Iul. And me, when he approcheth to your presence.
Sil. Had I beene ceaazed by a hungry Lion,
I would have beene a break-fait to the Beaf,
Rather then haue fals Protheus reskue me:
Oh heauen be judge how I loue Valentine,
Whole life's as tender to me as my foule,
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I doe deteft fals periu'd Protheus:
Therefore be gone, follicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stoot it next to death
Would I not vndergoe, for one calme looke:
Oh 'tis the curfe in Loue, and still approu'd
When women cannot loue, where they're below'd.
Sil. When Proteus cannot loue, where he's below'd:
Read ower Iulie's heart, (thy first bett Loue)
For whole deare fake, thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oathes; and all those oathes,
Defended into purierty, to loue me,
Thou haft no faith left now, vnleste thou'dt two,
And that's farre worse then none: better haue none
Then plurlall faith, which is too much by one:
Thou Counterfeyt, to thy true friend.

Pro. In Loue,
Who repexts friend?
Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of mouing words
Can no way change you to a milder forme;
Ile woore you like a Souldier, at armes end,
And loue you 'gainst the nature of Loue: force ye.
Sil. Oh heauen.
Pro. Ilfe force thee yeeld to my desire.
Val. Ruffian: let goe that rude vnciuill touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.

Pro. Valentine.
Val. Thou cōmon friend, that's without faith or loue,
For such is a friend now: treacherous man,
Thou haft beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have perfwaded me: now I dare not say
I have one friend aliue; thou wouldst diquirre me:
Who should be trusted, when ones right hand
Is persuad to the bosome? Proteus
I am forry I mutt neuer truth thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy fake:
The private wound is deepest: oh time, molt accrue:
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worke?
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me:
Forgive me Valentine: if hearty forrow
Be a sufficient Ranfome for offence,
I tender't heere: I doe as truely suffr,
As ere I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid:
And once againe, I doe receive thee honeft,
Who by Repenteance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heauen, nor earth; for these are pleead:
By Penitence th'Eternalls wrath's appeas'd:
And that my loue may appeare plaine and free,
All that was mine, in Silvia, I giue thee.
Iul. Oh me vnhappy.
Pro. Look to the Boy.
Val. Why, Boy?
Iul. O good sir, my mater charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia: w (out of my neglegt) was neuer done.
Pro. Where is that ring? boy?
Iul. Heere 'tis: this is it.

Pro. How? let me see.
Why this is the ring I gauie to Iulia.
Iul. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I haue midtooke:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

Pro. But how cam'tt thou by this ring? at my depart
I gauie this vnto Iulia.
Iul. And Iulia her selfe did giue it me,
And Iulia her selfe hath brought it hither.

Pro. How? Iulia?
Iul. Behold her, that gauie ayne to all thy oathes,
And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart.
How oft haft thou with periuery cleft the roote?
Oh Proteus, let this habit make thee blush.

D Be
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Be thou aham'd that I have tooke vpon me,
Such an immodest rayment; if flame true
In a disguife of loue?

It is the leeter blot modelye findes,
Women to change their shapes, then men their minds.
Pro. Then men their minds? 'tis true: oh heuen, were man
But Constant, he were perfect; that one error

Fills him with faults: makes him run through all the'ns;
Inconstancy falls-off, ere it begins:

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spie
More freth in Iulia's, with a constant eye?

Val. Come, come: a hand from either:

Let me be bleft to make this happy clofe:

'Twere pitty two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witnes (heauen) I have my wish for ever.

Val.  And I mine.

Val. Forbeare, forbeare I say: It is my Lord the Duke.

Your Grace is welcome to a man disfanc'd,

Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine?

Val. Yonder is Silvia: and Silvia's mine.

Val. Tburio glue backe; or else embrace thy death:

Come not within the measure of my wrath:

Doe not name Silvia thine: if once againe,

Verona shall not hold thee: here he standes,

Take but poiffion of her, with a Touch:

I dare thee, but to breath vpon my Loue.

Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:

I hold him but a foole that will endanger

His Body, for a Girl that loves him not:

I claine her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou

To make fuch meanes for her, as thou haft done,

And leave her on fuch flight conditions.

Now, by the honor of my Ancestry,
I doe applaud thy spirit, Valentine,

And think thee worthy of an Empresse loue:

Know then, I heere forget all former greeses,

Cancell all grudge, repeale thee home againe,

Plead a new state in thy vn-rual'd merit,

To which I thus subcribe: Sir Valentine,

Thou art a Gentleman, and well deri'd,

Take thou thy Silvia, for thou haft deferu'd her.

Val. I thank your Grace, I gift hath made me happy:

I now beseech you (for your daughers sake)

To grant one Boone that I shall aske of you.

Duke. I grant it (for thine owne) what ere it be.

Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withall,

Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:

Forgive them what they haue committed here,

And let them be recall'd from their Exile:

They are reform'd, cuill, full of good,

And fit for great employment (worthy Lord.)

Duke. Thou haft preuaild, I pardon them and thee:

Dispoze of them, as thou knowest their detears.

Come, let vs goe, we will include all larres,

With Triumphes, Mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And as we walke along, I dare be bold

With our discours, to make your Grace to smile.

What thinke you of this Page (my Lord?)

Duke. I think the Boy hath grace in him, he blushes.

Val. I warrant you (my Lord) more grace, then Boy.

Duke. What meane you by that sayeing?

Val. Pleese you, Ile tell you, as we passe along,

That you will wonder what hath fortun'd:

Come Protheus, 'tis your pennisance, but to heare

The story of your Loues discouered.

That done, our day of marriage shall be yours,

One Feat, one house, one mutuell happinesse.

THE
Merry Wives of Windsor.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, Sir Hugh Evans, Master Page, Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, Anne Page, Mistress Ford, Mistress Page, Simple.

Shallow.

It is Hugh, perfwade me not: I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it, if he be twenty Sir John Falstaff, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow Esquire.

(Coram.)

Slen. In the County of Gloucester, Justice of Peace and Shal. (Coven Slender) and Caff-actorum.

Shal. I, and Rato torum too; and a Gentleman borne (Master Parfon) who writes himselfe Armigero, in any Bill, Warrant, Quittance, or Obligation, Armigero.

Shal. I that I doe, and have done any time these three hundred yeares.

Slen. All his succifcoris (gone before him) hath don't: and all his Ancestors (that come after him) may: they may give the dozen white Luces in their Coate.

Shal. It is an olde Coate.

Evans. The dozen white Lowies doe become an old Coat well: it agrees well paffant: It is a familiar beaft to man, and dignifies Loue.

Shal. The Lufe is the fresh-fish, the salt-fish, is an old Coate.

Slen. I may quarter (Cooz).

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans. Yes per-lady: if he ha's a quarter of your coat, there is but three Skirts for your felfe, in my simple con- ciecrures; but that is all one: if Sir John Falstaff haue committed diifparages vnto you, I am of the Church and will be glad to do my beneuolence, to make attone- ments and compleatly betwene you.

Shal. The Counsell shall hear it, it is a Riot.

Evans. It is not meet the Counsell hear a Riot: there is no feare of Got in a Riot: The Counsell (looks you) shall defire to hear the feare of Got, and not to hear a Riot: take your viza-mients in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were yong againe, the sward should end it.

Evans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another deuide in my praine, which peraduenture prings gout diiferences with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? she has browne hair, and speakes small like a woman.

Evans. It is that ferrif perfon for all the orld, as iuft as you will defire, and feuen hundred pounds of Moneyes, and Gold, and Siluer, is her Grand-fyre vpon his deathbed, (Got deliuer to a joyfull refurreftions) glue, when she is able the huerlake feventeen yeares old. It were a gout motion, if we leue our priibles and prabbles, and defire a marriage betweene Master Abraham, and Mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her Grand-fire leue her feuen hundred pound?

Evans. And, her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young Gentewoman, she has good gifts.

Evans. Seuen hundred pounds, and possibilities, is good gifts.

Shal. Wel, let vs see honest M. Page: is Falstaffe there?

Evans. Shall I tell you a lye? I doe defifie a lye, as I doe defifie one that is falle, or as I defifie one that is not true: the Knight Sir John is there, and I beleffe you be ruled by your well-willers: I will peat the doore for M. Page. What ha? Got-pleffe your houfe here.

M. Page. Who's there?

Evans. Here is go's pleffing and your friend, and Ju- stice Shallow, and heere yong Master Slender: that perad-uentures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

M. Page. I am glad to see your Worships wel: I thanke you for my Venilxon Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good doe it your good heart: I wish'd your Venilon better, it was ill kill'd: how doth good Mistress Page? and I thanke you alwaies with my heart, la: with my heart.

M. Page. Sir, I thanke you.

Shal. Sir, I thanke you: by yea, and no I doe.

M. Pa. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Shal. How doe your fawall Greyhound, Sir, I heard fay he was out-run on Caffall.

M. Pa. It could not be judg'd, Sir.

Shal. You'll not conffeice you'll not conffeice.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault: 'tis a dogge.

Shal. Sir: hee's a good dog, and a faire dog, can there be more fald? he is good, and faire. Is Sir John Falstaffe heere?

M. Pa. Sir, hee is within: and I would I could doe a good office be twayne you

Evans. It is spoke as a Chriftians ought to speake.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Master Page).

M. Pa. Sir, he doth in fome fort conffece it.
Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed; is not that so (Mr. Page)? he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath: believe me, Robert Shallow Esquire, faith he is wronged.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the King?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my deere, and broke open my Lodge.

Fal. But not kill'd your Keepers daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin: this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answere it strait, I have done all this: That is now answer'd.

Shal. The Councell shall know this.

Fall. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsell; you'll be laugh'd at.

Eu. Pauca verba; (Sir John) good works.

Fal. Good works? good Cabidge; Slen, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry fir, I have matter in my head against you, and against your cony-catchings Ralcafs, Bardolf, Nym, and Piffell.

Bar. You Banbery Cheefe.

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Pifl. How now, Mr. Shalloweswhip? Slen. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say; pauce, pauce; Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple my man? can you tell, Cozen?

Eua. Peace, I pray you: now let vs vnderstand: there is three Vnuries in this matter, as I vnderstand; that is, Master Page (fidelicet Master Page,) & there is my selfe, (fidelicet my selfe) and the three party is (lastly, and finallly) mine Hoft of the Gater.

Ma. Pa. We three to hear it, & end it between them.

Euan. Ferry go't, I will make a prcie of it in my note-booke, and we will afterwards orke vpon the caufe, with as great disirely as we can.

Fal. Piffell.

Pifl. He heares with eares.

Euan. The Teull and his Tam: what phrase is this? he heares with eare? why, it is affectations.

Fal. Piffell'd, did you pickle M. Sleners purfe?

Slen. I, by these glouses did hee, or I would I might never come in mine owne great chamber againe elle, of straenge goates in mill-expences, and two Edwurd Shoelboords, that cost me two shilling and two pece a piece of Tred Miller: by these glouses.

Fal. Is this true, Piffell?

Euan. No, it is false, if it is a picke-purfe.

Pifl. Ha, thou mountaine Forrenyer: Sir John, and Maffier mine, I command challenge of this Latine Bilboe: word of denall in thy labors here; word of denall; froth, and fcum thou lief.

Slen. By these glouses, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be aux'd fir, and paffe good humours: I will say marry trap with you, if you runne the nut-hooks humor on me, that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunke, yet I am not altogether an affe.

Fal. What say you Scarliet, and John?

Bar. Why fir, (for my part) I say the Gentleman had drunke himselfe out of his fiew fentences.

Eu. It is his fiew fences: fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being fap, fir, was (as they say) caheered: and so conclusions past the Car-eyes.

Slen. I, you spake in Latten then to: but 'tis no matter; Ile nere be drunk whilft I liue againe, but in honett, cliuill, godly company for this tricke: if I be drunke, Ile be drunke with thole that have the seare of God, and not with drunken knaues.

Euan. So pricke me, that is a vertuous minde.

Fal. You heare all these matters den'd, Gentlemen; you heare it.

Mr. Page. Nay daughter, carry the wine in, we'll drink within.

Slen. Oh heauen: This is Milfrette Anne Page.

Mr. Page. How now Milfrie Ford?

Fal. Milfrie Ford, by my troth you are very wel met: by your leave good Milfrie.

Mr. Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome: come, we have a hot Venion pafty to dinner; Come gentle- men, I hope we shall drinke downe all vnkindnesse.

Slen. I had rather then forty shilling I had my booke of Songs and Sonnets here: How now Simple, where have you beene? I must wait on my selfe, must I? you have not the booke of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Booke of Riddles? why did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake vpon Alhallowmas laft, a fortnight afo- re Michaelmas.

Skal. Come Coze, come Coze, we play for you: a word with you Coze: marry this, Coze: there is as twere a tender, a kindes of tender, made a farre-off by Sir Hugh here: doe you vnderstand me?

Slen. I Sir, you shall finde me reasonable: if it be so, I shall doe that that is reason.

Skal. Nay, but vnderstand me.

Slen. So I doe Sir.

Euan. Glue ear to his motions; (M.'Slen) I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will doe as my Cozen Shallow fales: I pray you pardon me, he's a Judic of Peace in his Coun- trie, simple though I stand here.

Euan. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Skal. I, there's the point Sir.

Eu. Marry is it: the very point of it, to Mi. An Page.

Slen. Why if it be so; I will marry her upon any reason- able demands.

Eu. But can you affection the 'o-man, let vs command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for diuers Philosphers hold, that the lips is parcell of the mouth: thereof precicly, can you carry your good wil to ? maid?

Sh. Cozen Abraham Slener, can you love her?

Slen. I hope Sir, I will do as it shall become one that would doe reason.

Eu. Nay, got's Lords, and His Ladies, you must speake poiffible, if you can carry-her your desires towards her.

Skal. That you must:

Will you, (vpon good dowry) marry her?

Slen. I will doe a greater thing then that, vpon your reques't (Cozen) in any reason.

Skal. Nay conceive me, conceive mee, (sweet Coze): what I doe is to pleafure you (Coze): can you loue the maid?

Slen. I will marry her (Sir) at your reques't; but if there bee no great lone in the beginning, yet Heauen may decreafe it vpon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope upon familiarity will grow more content; but if you fay mary-her, I will marry-her, that I am frely difsolvs, and disfully.

Qu. Peace, I pray you.
Ca. Peace-a-your tongue: speake-a-your Tale.
Si. To defire this honest Gentlewoman (your Maid) to speake a good word to Miftris Anne Page, for my Master in the way of Marriage.
Qu. This is all indeede-la: but ile nere put my finger in the fire, and neede not.
Qu. I
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Qu. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had bin throughly mowed, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy: but notwithstanding man, Ile doe youe your Master what good I can, and the very yea, the no is, y French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, looke you, for I keepe his house; and I wash, ring, brew, bake, iowere, dresse meat and drinke, make the beds, and doe all my selfe.) Simp. 'Tis a great charge to come vnder one bodies hand.

Qu. Are you a-us'd o'those? you shall finde it a great charge: and to be vp early, and down late: but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your care, I wold have no words of it,) my Master himselfe is in love with Miftris Anne Page: but notwithstanding that I know Ann mind, that's neither heere nor there.

Caius. You, Jack 'Nape: give a letter to Sir Hugh, by gar it is a challenge: I will cut his troot in de Parke, and I will teach a scurril Jack-a-nape Priest to meddle, or make you may be gon: it is not good you tarry here: by gar I will cut all his two tfoles: by gar, he shall have a tfole to throw at his dogge.

Qu. Alas! he speakes but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter a ver dat: do not you tell a-me dat I shall have Anne Page for my selfe? by gar, I will kill de Jack-Priest: and I have appointed mine Hoft of de Iartee to measure our weapon: by gar, I wil my selfe haue Anne Page.

Qu. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shal bee well: We must glue folkes leaque to prate: what the good-ler.

Caius. Rugge, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turne your head out of my dont: follow my helmet, Rugge.

Qu. You shall haue An-fooles head of your owne: No, I know Ann mind for that: neuer a woman in Wind-foer knows more of Ann mind then I doe, nor can doe more then I doe with her, I thank haue.

Fenten. Who's with in there, hooa?

Qu. Who's there, I troa? Come neere the house I pray you.

Fen. How now (good woman) how doth thou? Qu. The better that it pleases your good Worship to ask?

Fen. What newes? how do? pretty Miftris Anne?

Qu. In truth Sir, and shee is pretty, and honeft, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praffe haueen for it.

Fen. Shall I doe any good think you? shall I not loose my self?

Qu. Truth Sir, all is in his hands aboue: but not-withstanding (Mafter Fenton) Ile be sworne on a booke thee looses you: haue not your Worship a warre aboue your eye?

Fen. Yes marry haue I, what of that?

Qu. Wel, thereby hangs a tale: good faith, it is such another Nan: (but (I detest) an honest maid as ever broke bread: wee had an howres talke of that warre: I shall never laugh in that maids company:but (indeed) shee is given too much to Allicholy and musing: but for all that wee ought to goe tooo.

Fen. Well: I shall haue her to day: hold, there's mony for thee: Let mee haue thy voice in my behalf: if thou feest her before me, commend me.

Qu. Will I? I faith that wee will: And I will tell your Worship more of the Wart, the next time we haue confidence, and of other woorers.

Fen. Well, fare-well, I am in great haste now.

Qu. Fare-well to your Worship: truely an honeft Gentleman: but Anne loves him not: for I know Ann mind as well as another doe: out vpnot I what have I forgot.

Miff. Page. What, haue fap'd Loue-letters in the holly-day-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? let me fee?

Aske me no reaon why I love you, for though Loue as Rea-son for bis preciition, bee admits him not for bis Consiouer: you are not yong, no more am I: goe to then, there's simpatiche: you are mercie, fo am I: but, bythen there's more simpatiche: you love fackes, and fo do I: would you defire better simpatiche? Let it juftifie thee (Miftris Page) at the leafl if the Loan of Souldier can juftifie, that I love thee: I will not say pity mee, 'tis not a Souldier-like phrase: but I say, love me:

Miff. Ford. Miftris Page, trueft mee, I was going to your house.

Miff. Page. And trust mee, I was comming to you: you looke very ill.

Miff. Ford. Nay, Ile nere beleeve that: I haue to fiew to the contrary.

Miff. Ford. Well: I doe then: yet I fay, I could flow you to the contrary: O Miftris Page, give mee some coungail.

Miff. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Miff. Ford. O woman: if it were not for one trifling repect, I could come to such honour.

Miff. Page. Hang the trifle (woman) take the honour:
what is it? difpence with trifles: what is it?

Miff. Ford. If I would but goe to hell, for an eternal moment, or fo; I could bee knighted.

praise womens modesty: and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to al vncomelynesse, that I would have sworne his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they doe no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Psalms to the tune of Green-sleeues: What tempest (I troo) threw this Whale, (with so many Tuns of oyle in his belly) a'flowre at Windsor? How shall we be revenged on him? I thinke the best way were, to entertaine him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his owne grace: Did you ever hear the like?

Melf. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs: to thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, heere's the twyn-brother of thy Letter: but let thine inheret first, for I protest mine never shall: I warrant he hath a thousand of these Letters, writ with blanke-space for different names (fure more): and these of the second edition: hee will print them out of doubt: for he cares not what hee puts into the preffe, when he would put vs two: I had rather be a Glanzeff, and lye vnder Mount Pelion: Well; I will find you twenti lafcullous Turtles ere one chaft man.

Melf. Ford. Why this is the very fame: the very hand: the very words: what doth he think of vs?

Melf. Page. Nay I know not: it makes me almost readie to wrangle with mine owne honesty: Ile entertaine my felle like one that I am not acquainted withall: for fure vnleffe hee know some ftranfe in mee, that I know not my felle, hee would never have boorded me in this furie.

M. Page. So will I: if hee come vnder my hatches, Ile neuer to Sea againe: Let be reueng'd on him: let's appoint him a meeting: give him a show of comfort in his Suit, and lead him on with a fine bated delay, till hee hath pawn'd his horfes to mine Hoft of the Garter.

M. Ford. Nay, I will confent to act any villany against him, that may not fully the charineffe of our honesty: oh that my husband saw this Letter: it would give eternall food to his iealousie.

M. Page. Why look where he comes; and my good man too: hee's as farre from iealousie, as I am from looking him caufe, and that (I hope) is an vnmeasurable distance.

M. Ford. You are the happier woman.

M. Page. Let's confult together against this greafte Knight: Come lither.

Ford. Well: I hope, it be not fo.

Pif. Hope is a curtail-dog in some affairs:

Sir Iohn affects thy wife.

Ford. Why sir, my wife is not young.

Pif. He woeos both high and low, both rich & poor, both yong and old, one with another (Ford) he loues the Gally-mawfty (Ford) perpend.

Ford. Love my wife?

Pif. With liss, burning hot: present:
Or goe thou like Sir Afehn he, with Ring-wood at thy heele: $O$, odious is the name.

Ford. What name Sir?

Pif. The horne I say: Farewell: Take heed, have open eye, for theeues doe foot by night. Take heed, ere commer comes, or Cuckoo-birds doe finge.
Away sir Corporall Nim:

Beleeue it (Page) he speakes fencce.

Ford. I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nim. And this is true: I like not the humor of lying: hee hath wronged mee in some humors: I should have borne the humour'd Letter to her: but I have a sword: and it shall bite vpon my necessitie: hee loues your wife: There's the short and the long: My name is Corporall Nim: I speak, and I auoch; 'tis true: my name is Nim: and Falstaffe loyes your wife: adieu, I love not the humor of bread and cheefe: adieu.

Page. The humour of it (quoth'a) heere's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

Ford. I will secke out Falstaffe.

Page. I neuer heard such a drawing-affec ting rogue.

Ford. If I doe finde it: well.

Page. I will not beleeue such a Cajatan, though the Prieff o' th' Towne commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good fenfible fellow: well.

Melf. Page. Whether goe you (George?) harke you.

Melf. Ford. How now (sweet Frank) why art thou melancholy?

M. Ford. I melancholy? I am no melancholy:
Get you home: goe.

Melf. Ford. Faith, thou haft some crochets in thy head, Now: will you goe, Melfris Page?

Melf. Page. Haue with you: you'll come to dinner George? Looke who comes yonder: thee shall bee our Meilenger to this patrie Knight.

Melf. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her: the'll fit it.

Melf. Page. You are come to fee my daughter Anne?

Que. I Prfooth: and I pray how do's good Miftreffe Anne?

Melf. Page. Go in with vs and see: we have an hours talke with you.

Page. How now Master Ford?

For. You heard what this knave told mee, did you not?

Page. Yes, and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Doe you thinke there is truth in them?

Pag. Hang 'em flaus: I doe not thinke the Knight would offer it: But theeue that accuse him in his intent towards our wiiue, is a yoake of his discarded men: very rogues, now they be out of seruice.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it neuer the better for that,
Do's he lye at the Garter?

Page. I marry do's he: if hee should intend this voyage toward my wife, I would turne her looef to him; and what hee gets more of her, then sharpe words, let it lye on my head.

Ford. I doe not misloombt my wife: but I would bee loath to turne them together: a man may be too confident: I would have nothing lye on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Looke where my ranting-Hoft of the Garter comes: there is eyther liquor in his pate, or mony in his purife, when hee lookes so merrily: How now mine Hoft?

Shal. I follow, (mine Hoft) I follow: Good-euen, and twenty (good Master Page) Master Page, wil you go with vs? we haue sport in hand.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, betweene Sir Hugh the Welch Frieft, and Gains the French Docthor.

Ford. Good.
Ford. Good mine Hoyt o"t"Garter: a word with you.
Hoyt. What faith thou, my Bully-Rooke?
Shal. Will you goe with vs to behold it? My merry Hoyt hath had the measuring of their weapons; and (I thinke) hath appointed them contrary places: for (believe mee) I hearre the Parfon is no letter: harke, I will tell you what our sport shall be.
Hoyt. Haft thou no suit against my Knight? my gueft-Cauaileure?
Shal. None, I protest: but Ie gleue you a pottle of burn"d facke, to give me recouerfe to him, and tell him my name is Brome: onlye for a left.
Hoyt. My hand, (Bully:) thou shalt haue egriffe and regiffe (told I well?) and thy name shall be Brome. It is a merry Knight: will you goe An-heires?
Shal. Haue with you mine Hoyt.
Page. I haue heard the French-man hath good skill in his Kapler.
Shal. Tut fir: I could haue told you more: In these times you {stand on} {depend on} your Paffes, Stoccoado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Master Page) 'tis heere, 'tis heere: I haue feene the time, with my long-fword, I would haue made you fowre tall fellows, skippe like Rattes.
Hoyt. Heere boyes, heere, heere: shall we wag?
Page. Haue with you: I had rather heare them scold, then fight.
Ford. Though Page be a fecure foole, and {stands} so firmly on his wifes frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion fo eafily: she was in his company at Pages houfe: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will looke further into't; and I haue a difguife, to found Falstaffe; if I finde her honest, I looke not my labor: if the be other-wife, 'tis labour well befowed.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.
Pifh. Why then the world's mine Oyter, which I, with word will open.
Fal. Not a penny: I haue beene content (Sir,) you should lay my countenance to paunce: I haue grated vp or my good friends for three Repreces for you, and your Coach-fellow Nym; or elfe you had look'd through the grate, like a Geminy of Baboones: I am damn'd in hell, for swearing to Gentlemen my friends, you were good Souldiers, and tall-fellowes. And when Miftresse Briger loft the handle of her Fan, I took't upon mine honouer thou hadst it not.
Pifh. Didst not thou have? hadst thou not fifteene pence?
Fal. Reason, you roague, reason: thinkst thou Ie en danger my foule, grate? at a word, hang no more about mee, I am no gibbet for you: goe, a short knife, and a thong, to your Mannor of Pick-tbatch: goe, you'll not beare a Letter for mee you roague? you stand vpon your honor: why, (thou vnconfifiable bafeneffe) it is as much as I can doe to keepe the termes of my hononour precife: I, I, I, my selfe sometymes, leaing the feare of heauen on the left hand, and hiding mine honor in my necellity, am faine to shufifie: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will en-licence your rags; your Cat-a-Mountain-lookes, your red-lattice phrales, and your bold-beating-cathes, under the shelter of your honor? you will not doe it? you?
Pifh. I doe releant: what would thou more of man?
Robin. Sir, here's a woman would speake with you.
Fal. Let her approach.
Qui. Glue your worship good morrow.
Fal. Good-morrow, good-wife.
Qui. Not fo, an'd please your worship.
Fal. Good maid then.
Qui. Ile be sworne,
As my mother was the first hour I was borne, I do beleue the swaret; what with me?
Qui. Shall I vouch-safe your worship a word, or two?
Fal. Two thousand (faire woman) and ile vouchsafe thee the hearing.
Qui. There is one Miftrresse Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little neerer this waies: I my felle dwell with M.Doctor Caius:
Fal. Well, on; Miftrresse Ford, you say.
Qui. Your worship faies very true: I pray your wor- ship come a little neerer this waies.
Fal. I warrant thee, no-bodie heares: mine owne people, mine owne people.
Qui. Are they fo? heauen-blesse them, and make them his Seruants.
Fal. Well; Miftr esse Ford, what of her?
Qui. Why, Sir; shee's a good-creature; Lord, Lord, your Worship's a wanton: well: heauen forfve you, and all of vs, I pray—
Fal. Miftr esse Ford: come, Miftr esse Ford.
Qui. Marry this is the short, and the long of it: you have brought her into such a Canaries, as 'tis wonderfull: the best Courtier of them all (when the Court lay at Windsor) could neuer haue brought her to such a Canarie: yet there has beeene Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, smelings so sweetly; all Muske, and so rulhing, I warrant you, in filke and golde, and in such alligant termes, and in fuch wine and fugg of the beft, and the fairest, that would haue wonne any womans heart: and I warrant you, they could neuer get an eye-winke of her: I had my felle twentie Angels given me this morning, but I defe all Angels (in any fuch fort, as they sfay) but in the waye of honesty: and I warrant you, they could neuer get her fo much as fippe on a cup with the prowdfee of them all, and yet there has beeene Earles: nay, (which is more) Pitioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.
Fal. But what faies thee to mee? be brefee my good thee-Mercurie.
Qui. Marry, the hath receu'd your Letter: for the which the thankes you a thousand times; and shee {glues} you to notifie, that her husband will be abidence from his house, betwene ten and eleuen.
Fal. Ten, and eleuen.
Qui. I, fortooth: and then you may come and fee the picture (the fayes) that you wot of: Malfier Ford her husband will be from home: alas, the sweet woman needs an ill life with him: hee's a very lealoufie-man; he leads a very frampold life with him, (good hart.)
Fal. Ten, and eleuen.

Woman
Woman, commend me to her, I will not fail her.

Qul. Why, you say well: But I have another messenger to your worship: Miltrisse Page hath her hearty commendations to you to: and let mee tell you in your ear, she's as forthwith a chaste modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not misse you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windor, who ere bee the other: and thee bade mee tell your worship, that her husband is feldome from home, but the hopes there will come a time.

I neuer knew a woman so doate upon a man: surely I think you have charmes, la: yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I affure thee; letting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charmes.

Qul. Blessing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this: has Fords wife, and Pages wife acquainted each other, how they loue me?

Qul. That were a left indeed: they have not so little grace I hope, that were a tricke indeed: But Mithia Page would desire you to fend her your little Page of al loues: her husband has a maruellous infectio to the little Page: and truely Mafter Page is an honest man: neuer a wife in Windor leads a better life then the do's: doe what thee will, say what thee will, take all, pay all, goe to bed when the lift, rife when the lift, all is as the will: and truly she deferves it: for if there be a kinde woman in Windor, she is one: you must fend her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qul. Nay, but doe fo then, and looke thee, bee may come and goe betwixt you both: and in any cafe have a nay-word, that you may know one another minde, and the Boy neuer neede to vnderstand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickednes: olde folkes you know, haue discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Farethee-well, commend mee to them both: there's my purfe, I am yet thy debter: Boy, goe along with this woman, this news doth distract me.

P.B. This Pumcke is one of Captains Carriers.
Clap on more soldiers, pursuie: vp with your fights.
Gue fire: she is my prize, or Ocean whelme them all.

Fal. Saife thou fo (old Jack) goe thy waies: Ie make more of thy olde body then I have done: will they yet looke after thee? wilt thou after the expence of so much money, be now a gainer? good Body, I thank thee: let them say'ts grossely done, so it be fairely done, no matter.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Mafter Brome below which faine speake with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath fent your worship a mornings draught of Sacke.

Fal. Brome is his name?

Bar. Sir.

Fal. Call him in: such Brooms are welcome to mee, that ore flowes such liquor: ah ha, Miltrisse Ford and Miftriss Page, haue I encompass'd you? goe to, via.

Ford. Bleffe you Sir.

Fal. And you Sir: would you speake with me?

Ford. I make bold, to preffe, with fo little preparation vpon you.

Fal. You're welcome, what's your will? glue vs leaue Drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that haue spent much, my name is Brome.

Fal. Good Mafter Brome, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you, for I must let you vnderstand, I thinke my felfe in better plight for a Lender, then you are: the which hath something emboldned me to this vnseason'd intrusion: for they fay, if money goe before, all waies doe lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Soulsier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money heere troubles me: if you will help me to bear it (Sir Iohn) take all, or haile, for eating me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may defeere to bee your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you Sirs, if you will give mee the hearing.

Fal. Speake (good Mafter Brome) I shall be glad to be your Servaunt.

Ford. Sir, I heare you are a Scholler: (I will be briefe with you) and you have been a man long knowne to me, though I had neuer fo good means as defire, to make my felfe acquainted with you. I will difference a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine owne imperfection: but (good Sir John) as you have one eye up on my follies, as you heare them unfolded, turne another into the Register of your owne, that I may passe with a reprofe the eafier, fith you your felfe know how cafe it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Towne, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I haue long lou'd her, and I protest to you, bestowed much on her: followed her with a doating obseruance: Ingrofs'd opportunities to mee her: fee'd euer flight occasion that could but nigardly gie mee flight of her: not only bought many preffents to give her, but haue giuen largely to many, to know what fhee would have gien: briefly, I haue pursu'd her, as Loue hath pursu'd mee, which hath beene on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my minde, or in my meenes, mee I am fure I have receiued none, vnlesse Experience be a Jewell, that I have purchas'd at an infinite rate, and that hath taught mee to fay this,

"Loue like a foadoe flies, when substance Loue pursueth, Pursuie that flies, and flying subat pursueth."

Fal. Have you receiued no promife of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpofe?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Of what quallity was your loue then?

Ford. Like a fair horse, built on another mens ground, so that I have loft my edifice, by mistaking the place, where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpofe have you vnfolded this to me?

For. When I have told you that, I have told you all: Some fay, that though the appeare honest to mee, yet in other places thee enlargeth her minde fo farre, that there is ferved conftruction made of her. Now (Sir Iohn) here is the heart of my purpofe: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authenticke in your place and perfon, generally allow'd for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Beleeue it, for you know it: there is money, spend it, spend it, spend more; spend all I have, onely give Caius. I pray you bear witness, that me have flay, fixe or feuen, two tree howres for him, and hee is no-come.

Shal. He is the wifer man (M.Doctor)he is a curer of foules, and you a curer of bodyes: if you should fight, you goe against the haire of your professions: is it not true, Master Page?
Page. Master Shallow: you haue your felse beene a great fighter, though now a man of peace.
Shal. Body-kins M. Page, though I now be old, and of the peace; if I see a fword out, my finger itches to make one: though wee are Iutrices, and Doctors, and Church-men (M. Page) wee have some falt of our youth in vs, we are the fons of women (M. Page.)
Page. Tis true, Mr. Shallow.
Shal. It will be found so, (M.Page) M.Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home: I was wont of the peace; you haue shou'd your felse a wife Physician, and Sir Hugh hath owne himfelfe a wife and patient Church-man: you must goo with me, M.Doctor.

Scena Tertia.

Ford. Good Sir.
FAL. If you pay you shall.
Ford. Want no money (Sir)you shall want none.
FAL. Want no Mistress Ford (Master Brome) you shall want none: I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her owne appointment, even as you came in to me, her affiant, or goe-between, parted from me: I say I shall be with her betwixt ten and eleuen: for at that time the ileanious-racally-knaue her husband will be forth: come you to me at night, you shall know how I speed.
Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance: do you know Ford Sir?
FAL. Hang him (poore Cuckoldly knaue) I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poore: They say the ileanious wittolly-knaue hath maffes of money, for the which his wife feemes to me well-fauourd: I will vfe her as the key of the Cuckoldly-rogues Coffier, & ther's my harref-home.
Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might aoid him, if you saw him.
FAL. Hang him, mechanick-falt-butter rogue; I will flare him out of his wits: I will awre him with my cudgell: it shall hang like a Meteor ore the Cuckolds horns: Master Broome, thou shalt know, I will predominate over the peazant, and thou shalt lye with his wife. Come to me tome at night: Ford's a knaue, and I will aggruate his fille: thou (Master Brome) shalt know him for knaue, and Cuckold. Come to me foon of night.
Ford. What a devil and Epicurian-Rascall is this? my heart is ready to cracke with impatience: who faies this is improued ileanious? my wife hath fent to him, the howre is fiet, the match is made: would any man have thought this? fee the hell of having a falle woman: my bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ranfack'd, my reputaions gnawne at, and I shall not onely receive this villainous wrong, but fland under the adoption of abominable termes, and by him that does me this wrong: Termes, names: Amaimon founds well; Lucret, well; Barkofen, well: yet they are Diuels additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittoll, Cuckold? the Diuell himself hath not such a name. Page is an Afe, a fecute Afe; hee will truft his wife, hee will not be ileanious: I will rather truft a Fleming with my butter, Parfon Hugh the Weighman with my Cheefe, an Irishman with my Aqua-vitae, a Threate to walke my ambling gelding, then my wife with her felle. Then the plots, then the euei uates, then thee deuiles: and what they think in their hearts they may effect: they will breake their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be prais'd for my ileanous: eleuen o'clock the howre, I will preuent this, detect my wife, bee reueng'd on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three hours too foon, then a minute too late: fie, fie, fie : Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold.

Exit.
Enter Evans, Simple, Page, Shallow, Slender, Hoist, Caius, Rugby.

Evans. I pray you now, good Master Slender serving-man, and friend Simple by your name; which way have you look'd for Master Caius, that calls himselfe Doctor of Phisickes.

Sim. Marry Sir, the pittie-ward, the Parke-ward: every way: olde Windor way, and every way but the Towne-way.

Evans. I most vehemently desyre you, you will also looke that way.

Sim. I will sir.

Evans. 'Pleffe my soule: how full of Chollors I am, and tremping of minde: I shal be glad if he have deuiced me: how melancholy I am? I will knog his Vrinal a-bout his knaues coffard, when I have good opportunities for the orke: 'Pleffe my soule: To shallow Riuers to subste falls: melodious Birds sing Madrigalls: There will we make our Peds of Roses: and a thousand fragrant posytes. To shallow: Mercie on mee, I have a great dispositions to cry.

Meleodious Birds sing Madrigalls:—When as I sat in Pablon: and a thousand vragram Posies. To shallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is comming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Evans. Hee's welcome: To shallow Riuers, to subste falls: Heuen profere the right: what weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, Sir: there comes my Master, Mr. Shallow, and another Gentleman; from Froghmore, over the file, this way.

Evans. Pray you gie mee my gowne, or else keepe it in your armes.

Shal. How now Master Parfon? good morrow good Sir Hugh: keepe a Gameffler from the dice, and a good Student from his booke, and it is wonderful.

Sim. Ah sweet Anne Page.

Evans. Pleece you from his mercy-fake, all of you.

Shal. What? the Sword, and the Word? Doe you study them both, Mr. Parfon?

Page. And youthfull skill, in your doublet and hose, this raw-ramutickie day?

Evans. There is reasons, and caufes for it.

Page. We are come to you, to doe a good office, Mr. Parfon.

Sim. Pleece you.

Page. Fery-well: what is it?

Evans. Yonder is a most reuerend Gentleman; who (be-like) having receu'de wrong by some perfon, is at moft odds with his owne gravity and patience, that euer you faw.

Shal. I haue liued fourre-score yeeres, and vpward: I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, to wide of his owne repect.

Evans. What is he?

Page. I thinke you know him: Mr. Doctor Caius the renowned French Physician.

Evans. Got's will, and his passion of my heart: I had as lief you would tell me of a meffe of porredge.

Page. Why?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, and hee is a knaue beides: a cowardly knaue, as you would desyre to be acquainted withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man should fight with him.

Sim. Oh sweet Anne Page.

Shal. It appeares so by his weapons: keepe them a-funder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Evans. Nay good Mr. Parfon, keepe in your weapon.

Shal. So doe you, good Mr. Doctor.

Hoist. Diuarme them, and let them question: let them keepe their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Cai. I pray you let-a-mee speake a word with your eare; wherefore will you not meet-a me?

Evans. Pray you vie your patience in good time.

Cai. By-gar, you are de Coward: de Jack dog: de John Ape.

Evans. Pray you let vs not be laughing-focks to other mens humors: I defyre you in friendhip, and I will one way or other make you amends: I will knog your Vrinal about your knaues Cogs-combe.

Cai. 'Dialbe: Jack Rugby: mine Hoft de Karter: haue I not fray for him, to kill him? haue I not at de place I did appoint?

Evans. As I am a Christiane-foule, now looke you: this is the place appointed, Ile bee judgement by mine Hoft of the Karter.

Hoist. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gauls, French & Welch, Soule-Curer, and Body-Curer.

Cai. I,
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Cai. I, dat is very good, excellant.

Hoff. Peace, I say! heare mine Hoit of the Garter, Am I pricke? Am I fable? Am I Machiuell? Shall I loose my Doctor? No, hee gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loose my Parfon? my Priet? my Sir Hugh? No, he gives me the Proverbs, and the No-verbes. Gee me thy hand (Celestiall) so: Boyes of Art, I have deceu'd you both: I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skinnes are whole, and let burn'd Sacke be the ifue: Come, lay their fwords to payne: Follow me, Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shak. Trust me, a mad Hoit: follow Gentlemen, follow.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Cai. Ha! do I perceive dat? Haue you makea:de:of of vs, ha, ha?

Eua. This is well, he has made vs his vlaming:so I defire you that we may be friends: and let vs knog our praines together to be reuenge on this fame scall-cur-y-coggery-companion the Hoit of the Garter.

Cai. By gar, with all my heart: he promise to bring me who is Anne Page: by gar he deceuie me too.

Euan. Well, I will limite his noddles: pray you follow.

Scena Secunda.

Mif. Page, Robin, Ford, Page, Shallow, Slennder, Hoff, Euan, Caius.

Mif. Page. Nay keepe thy way (little Gallant) you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a Leader: whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your masters heeetes?

Rob. I had rather (forfoth) go before you like a man, then follow him like a dwarge. (Courtier.

M.Pa. O you are a flattering boy, now I fee you'll be a Ford.Well met miftris Page, whether you go.

M.Pa. Truly Sir, to fee your wife, is the at home?

Ford. I, and as idle as she may hang together for want of company: I thinke if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

M.Pa. Be sure of that, two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cocke?

M.Pa. I cannot tell what (the dickens) his name is my husband had of, what do you call your Knights name?

Rob. Sir John Falstaffe.

M.Pa. Sir John Falstaffe.

M.Pa. He,he,he, can never hit on's name; there is such a league betweene my goodman, and he: is your Wife at Ford. Indeed the is. (home indeed)

M.Pa. By your leave sir, I am fcke till I see her.

Ford.Has Page any braines? Hath he any eyes? Hath he any thinking? Sure they sleepe, he hath no vfe of them: why this boy will carry a letter twenty mile as eafe, as a Canon will shoot point-blanke twelue score: hee peces out his wifes inclination: hee gives her folly motion and advantadge: and now she's going to my wife, & Falstaffe boy with her: A man may heare this showre fing in the winde; and Falstaffe boy with her: good plots, they are laide, and our resoluted wifes share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, plucke the borrowed vallie of modestie from the fo-fee-ming Mif. Page, divulge Page himselfe for a secure and willfull Acteon, and to these violent proceedings all my neighbors shall cry ayme. The clocke gives me my Qu, and my affurance bids me search, there I shall finde Falstaffe: I shall be rather praifd for this, then mock'd, for it is as poifine, as the earth is firme, that Falstaffe is there: I will go.

Ford. Trust me, a good knotte; I have good cheere at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse my felle Mf. Ford.

Slen. And fo must I Sir, We have appointed to dine with Miftris Anne, And I would not breake with her for more mony Then lle speake of.

Shal. We have linger'd about a match betweene An Page, and my cozen Slennder, and this day wee shall have our anwer.

Slen. I hope I have your good will Father Page.

Page. You have Mf. Slennder, I stand wholly for you, But my wife (Mr. Doctor) is for you altogether.

Cai. I be-gar, and de Maid is loue-a-me: my nurf-a-Quickly tell me so muth.

Hoff. What say you to yong Mr. Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has ies of youth: he writes veries, hee speaks holiday, he emes April and May, he will carry's, he in his buttons, he will carry's.

Page. Not by my conent I prome you. The Gentleman is of no hauing, hee kept companie with the wilde Prince, and Points: he is of too high a Region, he knowes too much: no, hee shall not knit a knot in his fortunes, with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simpely: the wealth I have waits on my conent, and my conent does not go that way.

Ford. I bechef you heartily, some of you goe home with me to dinner: besides your cheere you shall have sport, I will shew you a monter: Mr. Doctor, you shall go, so shal you Mf. Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Slen. Well, fare you well:

We shall haue the freer woing at Mf. Pages.

Cai. Go home John Rugby, I come anon.

Hoff. Farewell my heartes, I will to my honeit Knight Falstaffe, and drinke Canarie with him.

Ford. I thinke I shall drinke in Pipe-wine firft with him, ile make him dance. Will you go, Gentles?

All. Haue with you, to fee this Monter. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Mf. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the buck-basket——

M. Page. Give your men the charge, we must be briefe, Mf. Ford.Mariage, as I told you before (John & Robert) be ready here hard-by in the Brew-house, & when I fo- dally call you, come forth, and (without any pruif, or flaggering) take this basket on your shoulders: · y done, be trudge with it, till haft, and carry it among the Wist- fere in Dotchet Mead, and there empty it in the muddie ditch, clofe by the Thames fide.

M. Page. You will do it? (direction.

M. Ford. I ha told them ouer and ouer, they lacke no E Be
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Be gone, and come when you are call'd.
M. Page. Here comes little Robin.

(with you?)
M. Ford. Now now my Eyas-Musket, what newes
Rob. My M. Sir John is come in at your backe doore (Mift. Ford, and requests your company.
M. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, haue you bin true to us
Rob. I, Ile be sworne: my Mafter knowes not of your being here: and hath threatened to put me into everlaing liberty, if I tell you of it: for he sweares he'll turne me away.
Mift. Pag. Thou'rt a good boy: this secrecy of thine shall be a Tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and boste. Ile go hide me.
M. Ford. Do so: go tell thy Mafter, I am alone: Miftras Page, remember you your Quy.
M. Ford. I warrant thee, if I do not act it, hisse me.
M. Ford. Go-too then: we'll vs this vnwholsome humidity, this groffe-watry Pumpion; we'll teach him to know Turtles from Iayes.
Fal. Haue I caught thee, my heuenly Jewell? Why now let me die, for I haue liu'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this Heffed hour.
M. Ford. If, I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Mift. Ford) now shall I fin in my wife; I would thy Husband were dead, Ile speake it before the beft Lord, I would make thee my Lady.
M. Ford. I your Lady Sir John? Asl, I should bee a pitfull Lady.
Fal. Let the Court of France shew me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou haft the right arched-beauty of the brow, that becomes the Ship-tyre, the Tyre-vaillant, or any Tire of Venetian admittance.
M. Ford. A plaine Kerchiefe, Sir John:
My browes become nothing elfe, nor that well neither.
Fal. Thou art a tyrant to say so: thou wouldst make an abloute Courtier, and the firme fixture of thy foote, would give an excellent motion to thy gate, in a femicircled Farthingale. I see what thou wert if Fortune thy foe, were not Nature thy friend: Come, thou canst not hide it.
M. Ford. Beleeue me, there's no such thing in me.
Fal. What made me looe thee? Let that perfwade thee. Ther's something extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and fry thou art this and that, like a manie of these lifping-hauhorne buds, that come like women in mens apparrel, and smell like Bucklers-berry in simple time: I cannot, but I looe thee, none but thee; and thou deferu'ld it.
M. Ford. Do not betray me sir, I fear you loue M. Page.
Fal. Thou mightst as well say, I loue to walke by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me, as the reeke of a Lime-kill.
M. Ford. Well, heauen knowes how I loue you, And you shall one day finde it.
Fal. Kepee in that minde, Ile defeire it.
M. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you doe; Or else I could not be in that minde.
Rob. My M. Sir John's here: Miftras Page at the doore, sweateing, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speake with you profently.
Fal. She shall not fee me, I will enconce mee behinde the Arras.
M. Ford. Pray you do so, she's a very tattling woman. What's the matter? How now?

M. Page. O miftras Ford what have you done?
You'r sham'd, y'are ouerbrownne, y're vndone for ever.
M. Ford. What's the matter, good miftras Page?
M. Page. O weladay, mif. Ford, having an honest man to your husband, to give him such caufe of sufpcion.
M. Ford. What caufe of sufpcion?
M. Page. What caufe of sufpcion? Out vpon you:
How am I mistooke in you?
M. Ford. Why (alias) what's the matter?
M. Page. Your husband's comming hether (Woman) with all the Officers in Windsor, to search for a Gentleman, that he layes is heere now in the houfe; by your conftent to take an ill advantage of his abfence: you are vndone.
M. Ford. 'Tis not fo, I hope.
M. Page. Pray heauen it be not fo, that you have such a man here: but 'tis moft certayne your husband's coming, with halfe Windsor at his heelles, to serch for such a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your felfe cleere, why I am glad of it: but if you haue a friend here, conuey, conuey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your fentes to you, defend your reputation, or bid farwell to your good life for ever.
M. Ford. What shall I do? There is a Gentleman my deere friend: and I feare not mine owne shame fo much, as his perill. I had rather then a thouand pound he were out of the houfe.
M. Page. For shame, neuer stand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's heere at hand, bethinke you of some conueyance: in the houfe you cannot hide him. Oh, how haue you deecided me? Looko, heere is a basket, if he be of any reasonable fature, he may crepe in heere, and throw fowle linnen vpon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whitening time, fend him by your two men to Datchet-Mead.
M. Ford. He's too big to go in there: what shall I do?
Fal. Let me fee's, let me fee's, O let me fee's:
Ile in, Ile in: Follow your friends counsell, Ile in.
M. Page. What Sir John Faithaffe? Are thefe your Let-ers, Knight?
Fal. I loue thee, helpe mee away: let me creepe in heere: Ile neuer—
M. Page. Help to couer your mafter (Boy:) Call your men (Mift. Ford:) You diciembling Knight.
M. Ford. What John, Robert, John; Go, take vp thefe cloathes heere, quickly: Wher's the Cowle-affe? Look how you droumble: Carry them to the Landrefse in Datchet mead: quickly, come.
Ford. 'Pray you come nere: if I suspeft without caufe, Why then make bot to me, then let me be your lef, I deferue it: How now? Whether heare you this? Scr. To the Landrefse fortooth?
M. Ford. Why, what have you to doe whether they heare it? You were beft meddle with buck-washing.
Gentlemen, I haue dreame'd to night, Ile tell you my dreame: heere, heere, heere bee my keyes, ac fend my Chambers, fearch, feeke, finde out: Ile warrant we'e vnkennel the Fox. Let me flop this way firft: so, now vncape.
Page. Good mafter Ford, be contented:
You wrong your felle too much.
Ford. True (mafter page) vp Gentlemen,
You shall fee fpor anon: Follow
Follow me, Gentlemen.

Enter Ford, Anne, Page, Shallow, Slender, Quickly, Page, Mist. Page.

Ford. I see I cannot get thy Fathers love, Therefore no more turne to me (sweet Nan.)
Anne. Alas, how then?
Ford. Why thou must be thy selfe.
He doth oblige, I am too great of birth, And that my state being gall'd with my expence, I seek to heal it onely by his wealth.
Besides these, other barret he lays before me, My Riotics pass, my wide Societies,
And tells me 'tis a thing impossible
I should love thee, but as a property.
An. May be he tells you true.
No, heaven fo speed me in my time to come, Albeit I will confefle, thy Fathers wealth
Was the first motter, that I wou'd thee (Anne)
Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more valew
Then flampe in Cold, or fumme in sealed bagges:
And 'tis the very riches of thy selfe,
That now I ayme at.
An. Gentle M. Fenton, Yeet seeke my Fathers love, still seeketh it still,
If opportunity and humblyt fuite
Cannot attaine it, why then harke you hither.
Shal. Break their tale Mistirs Quickly,
My Kindman shall speake for himselfe.
Slen. Ile make a shaft or a bolt on't, sild, tis but ventu-
Shal. Be not dismayd, (ring)
Slen. No, the shall not dismay me
I care not for that, but that I am affoard.
Qui. Hark ye, M. Slender would speake a word with you
An. I come to him. This is my Fathers choice:
O what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults
Lookest handsome in three hundred pounds a yeere?
Qui. And how do's good Master Fenton?
Pray you a word with you.
Shal. Shee's comming; to her Coz:
O boy, thou hardst a father.
Slen. I had a father (M. An) my vnkle can tell you good lefs of him: pray you Vnkle, tel Mist. Anne the left how My Father ftole two Geefe out of a Pen, good Vnckel.
Shal. Mistirs Anne, my Cozen louses you.
Slen. That I do, as well as I loue any woman in Glocentehshire.
Shal. He will maintaine you like a Gentlemewan.
Shal. I that I will, come cut and long-taile, vnder the degree of a Squire.
Shal. He will make you a hundred and fiftie pounds loynerty.
Anne. Good Master Shallow let him woo for himselfe.
Shal. Marrie I thank you for it: I thank you for that good comfort: the cats you (Coz) Ile leave you.
Anne. Now Master Slender.
Slen. Now good Mistirs Anne.
Anne. What is your will?
Slen. My will? Odd's-hart-lings, that's a prettie lefs indeede: I ne're made my Will yet (I thank Hea-uent:) I am not such a tickely creature, I give Heauen prail.

Exeunt.
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Anne. I mean (M. Slenor) what wold you with me? Slen. Truely, for mine owne part, I would little or nothing with you: your father and my uncle hath made motions: if it be my lucke, so; if not, happy man bee his dole, they can tell you how things go, better then I can: you may ask your father, heere he comes. Page. Now M' Slenor; Loue him daughter Anne. Why how now? What does M' Fenter here? You wrong me Sir, thus fill to my housfe. I told you Sir, my daughter is distroyd of. Fen. Nay Mr Page, be not impatient. Mifht. Page. Good M. Fenton,come not to my child. Page. She is no match for you. Fen. Sir, will you hear me? Page. No, good M. Fenton. Come M. Sollow: Come fonnie Slenor, in; Knowing my minde, you wrong me (M. Fenton.) Qui. Speake to Miftris Page. Fen. Good Mifht. Page, for that I loue your daughter In such a righteous fashion as I do, Performe, against all chekkes, rebukes, and manneres, I must advance the colours of my loue, And not retire. Let me have your good will. An. Good mother, do not marry me to yond foole. Mifht. Page. I meane it not, I feake you a better husband. Qui. That's my matter, M. Doctor. An. Alas I had rather be feit quick 7th earth, And bow'd to death with Turnips. Mifht. Page. Come, trouble not your selfe good M. Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy: My daughter will I question how she loues you, And as I finde her, so am I affected: Till then, farewell Sir, she must needs go in, Her father was angry. Fen. Farewell gentle Miftris: farewell Nan. Qui. This is my doing now: Nay, sayde I, will you cast away your childe on a Foole, and a Phyfitian? Lookke on M. Fenton, this is my doing. Fen. I thanke thee: and I pray thee once to night, Give me my sweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy pains. Qui. Now heauen send thee good fortune, a kinde heart he hath: a woman would run through fire & water for such a kinde heart. But yet, I would my Maifter had Miftris Anne, or I would M. Slenor had her: or (in tooth) I would M. Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three, for fo I haue promis'd, and Ile bee as good as my word, but speeciously for M. Fenton. Well, I muft of another errand to Sir John Falstaffe from my two Mistrefles: what a beast am I to taskke it.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Bardolph, Quickly, Ford. Fal. Bardolph I say. Bar. Heere Sir. Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sacke, put a tot in't. Haue I liu'd to be carried in a Basket like a barrow of burchers Offall? and to be throwne in the Thames? Wel, if I be feru'd such another tricke, Ile haue my braines 'tane out and butter'd, and glue them to a dogge for a New-yeares gift. The rouges flighted me into the river with as little remorse, as they would have drown'd a blinde bitches Puppies, fifteen i'th litter: and you may know by my face, that I have a kinde of alacrity in sink: ing: if the bottome were as deepe as hell, I shold down. I had beene drown'd, but that the shore was sheluy and shallow: a death that I aborre: for the water fwelles a man; and what a thing should I haue beene, when I had beene fwell'd? I should have beene a Mountains of Mummie. Bar. Heres M. Quickly Sir to speake with you. Fal. Come, let me pourre in some Sack to the Thames water: for my bellies as cold as if I had swallow'd snow-bals, for pilles to coole the reina. Call her in. Bar. Come in woman. Qui. By your leaue: I cry you mercy? Give your worship good morrow. Fal. Take away thefe Challlices: Go, brew mee a potte of Sacke finely. Bard. With all good Sir?

Fal. Simple of it selfe: Ile no Pullet-Sperrinse in my breweage. How now? Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worship from M. Ford. Fal.Mifht. Ford? I haue had Ford enough: I was thrown into the Ford; I haue my belly full of Ford. Qui. Alas the day, (good-heart) that was not her fault: she do's to take on with her men; they mifitoke their creation. (promife. Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish Womans Qui. Well, she laments Sir for it, that it would your heart to see it: her husband goes this morning a birding; she desires you once more to come to her, betweene eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly, she'll make you amends I warrant you. Fal. Well, I will visit her, tell her so: and bidde her thinke what a man is: Let her consider his frailtiye, and then judge of my merit. Qui. I will tell her. Fal. Do fo. Betweene nine and ten slait thou? Qui. Eight and nine Sir. Fal. Well, be gone Sir, I will not misse her. Qui. Peace be with you Sir. Fal. I mursile I heare not of M. Brooms: he sent me word to fay within: I like his money well. Oh, heere be comes. Ford. Bleffe you Sir. Fal. Now M. Brooms, you come to know What hath past betwene me, and Fords wife. Ford. That indeed (Sir John) is my businesse. Fal. M. Brooms I will not lye to you, I was at her housfe the houre she appointed me. Ford. And spead you Sir? Fal. Very ill-favouredly M. Brooms. Ford. How so sir, did the change her determination? Fal. No (M. Brooms) but the peaking Curnuto her husband (M. Brooms) dwelling in a continual larum of leolufe, coms me in the infant of our encounter, after we had embray, kift, proteted, & (as it were) spoke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his hecets, a rabble of his companions, thither provooced and inflagited by his dittemer, and (forbod) to ferch his hous for his wifes Loue. Ford. What? While you were there? Fal. While I was there. For. And did he search for you, & could not find you? Fal. You shall hearre. As good lucke would haue it, comes in one Mifht. Page, gives intelligence of Fords approches: and in her invention, and Fords wifhes intrearion, they coney'd me into a bucke-basket.
Ford, A buck-basket?

Fal. Yes: a buck-basket: sam'd mee in with foule shirts and smockes, socks, four stockings, greefiy napkins, that (Master Broome) there was the rankest compound of villanous smell, that ever offended no.-strill.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear (Master Broome) what I haue suffer'd, to bring this woman to eull, for your good: Being thus cram'd in the Basket, a couple of Fords knewes, his Hindes, were cal'd forth by their Mi-

Fords, to carry mee in the name of foule Cloathes to Datchet-lane: they tooke me on their shoulderes: met the jealous knewe their Master in the doore; who asked them once or twice what they had in their Basket? I quak'd for feare least the Lunaticke Knaue would haue search'd it: but Fate (ordining he should be a Cuckold) hold his hand: well, on went hee, for a search, and away I for foule Cloathes: But marke the seuell (Master Broome) I suffered the pangs of three feuerall deaths: First, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten Bell-weather: Next to be compas'd like a good Bilbo in the circum-

Ference of a Pecke, hilt to point, heele to head. And then to be stop't in like a strong distillation with flin-

King Cloathes, that fretted in their owne grease: thinke of that, a man of my Kidney; thinke of that, that am as subjeckt to heate as butter; a man of contin-iual dissolution, and thaw: it was a miracle to scape suffocation. And in the height of this Bath (when I was more then halfe strew'd in grease (like a Dutch-nish) to be throwne into the Thames, and could, glowing-hot, in that sarge like a Hersefho; thinke of that; bissing hot: thinke of that (Master Broome).

Ford. In good fauour Sir, I am sorry, that for my fake you haue suffer'd all this.

My fauie then is desperate: You'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Master Broome: I will be throwne into Ena, as I have beene into Thames, ere I will leave her thus; her Husband is this morning gone a Biriding: I haue receiv'd from her another ambiffle of meeeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the houre (Master Broome).

Ford. 'Tis past eight already Sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address mee to my appointment: Come to mee at your conuenient leasure, and you shall know how I speeded: and the conclusion shall be crownd with your enjoying her: adieu: you shall haue her (Master Broome) Master Broome, you shall cuckold Ford.

Ford. Hum. ha? Is this a vifon? Is this a dreame? doe I sleepe? Master Ford awake, awake Master Ford: there's a hole made in your best coate (Master Ford) this 'tis to be married; this 'tis to have Lynnen, and Buck-baskets: Well, I will proclaime my selfe what I am: I will now take the Leacher: hee is at my house: hee cannot feape me: 'tis impossible hee shoulde: hee cannot ereepe into a halfe-penny purfe, nor into a Pepper-

Boyce: But leafe the Doll e that guides him, should side him, I will search impossibl places: though what I am, I cannot auoide; yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: If I have horses, to make one mad, let the prouerbe goe with me, Ile be home-mad.

 singly.

Mist. Pag. Ile be with her by and by: Ile but bring my yong-man here to Schoole: looke where his Master comes; 'tis a playing day I see: how now Sir Hugh, no Schoole to day?

Eua. No: Master Slender is let the Boys leaye to play.

Qu. Blessing of his heart.

Mist. Pag. Sir Hugh, my husband sakes my fonne profits nothing in the world at his Booke I pray you ask him some queftions in his Accidence.

Eua. Come hither William; hold vp your head: come. Mist. Pag. Come on Sirra; hold vp your head; anfwer to your Master, be not afraid.

Eua. William, how many Numbers is in Nownes?

Will. Two.

Qu. Truely, I thought there had bin one Number more, because they say od's Nownes.

Qu. Powlcatts? there are fairer things then Powlcatts.

Eua. You are a very simplicitie o'man: I pray you peace.

Eua. And what is a Stone (William)? Will. A Peccele.

Eua. No: it is Lapi: I pray you rememuer in your praine.

Will. Lapi.

Eua. That is a good William: what is he (William) that do's lend Articles.

Will. Articles are borrowed of the Pronounes; and be thus declined. Singulariter nominatius hic, hee, he.

Eua. Nominatius big, bag, bog: pray you marke: genitius bius: Well: what is your Accusatiue-cafe?

Will. Accusatiue binc.

Eua. I pray you haue your remembrance (childe) Accusatiue bing, bang, bog.

Qu. Hang-hogs, is latten for Bacon, I warrant you.

Eua. Leave your prables (o'man) What is the Foca-tiue cafe (William)?

Will. 0, Vocatiue, 0.

Eua. Remember William, Vocatiue, is caret.

Qu. And that's a good roote.

Eua. What is your Genitiue cafe plural (William)?

Will. Genitiue cafe?

Eua. I.

Will. Genitiue barum, barum, barum.

Qu. Vengeance of Giynes cafe; fie on her; never name her (childe) if she be a whore.

Eua. For shafe o'man.

Qu. You doe ill to teach the childe such words: hee teaches him to hie, and to hac; which they'll doe fast enough of themselues, and to cal bargum; fie on you.

Eua. O'man.
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Euan. O'man, art thou Lunates? Hath thou no understandings for thy Cares, & the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures, as I would desires.

Mi. Page. Pre'thee hold thy peace. Euan. Shew me now (William) some declensions of your Pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot. Euan. It is Quy, que, quod; if you forget your Quies, your Quies, and your Quods, you must be preaches: Goe your wives and play, go.

M. Page. He is a better scholler then I thought he was. Euan. He is a good spreak-memory: Farewel Mis. Page. Mi. Page. Adieu good Sir Hugh: Get you home boy, Come we stay too long. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Fal. Mist. Ford, Your forrow hath eaten vp my suf- ferance; I fee you are obsequious in your loue, and I professe requittal to a haires breadth, not onely Mist. Ford, in the simple office of lobe, but in all the accruement, complemet, and ceremony of it: But are you sure of your husband now?

Mist. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his olde line againe: he fo takes on yonder with my husband, so ralles against all married mankinde; fo curles all Eues daughters, of what compleccion fouer: and so buffettes himselfe on the for-head: crying peere-out, peere-out, that any madneffe I euer yet beheld, feem'd but tame- neffe, ciuility, and patience to this his dissembler he is in now: I am glad the fat Knight is not heere.

Mist. Ford. Why, do'o he talke of him?

Mist. Page. Of none but him, and sweares he was caried out the laft time hee search'd for him, in a Basket: Protefs to his husband he is now heere, & hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his fulpition: But I am glad the Knight is not heere; now he shall fee his owne foo- lerie.

Mist. Ford. How neere is he Mistris Page?

Mist. Page. Hard by, at street end; he will be here anon. Mist. Ford. I am vndone, the Knight is heere.

Mist. Page. Why then are you vitterly sham'd, & hee's but a dead man. What a woman are you? Away with him, away with him: Better flame, then murther.

Mist. Ford. Which way shoud he go? How should I belfow him? Shall I put him into the basket againe?

Fal. No, Ile come no more i'th Basket:

May I not go out ere he come?

Mist. Page. Alas: three of Mr. Ford's brothers watch the doore with Pifols, that none shall iusue out: other-wise you might flip away ere hee came: But what make you heere?

Fal. Where is it?

Mist. Ford. He will secke there on my word: Neyther Preffe, Cofer, Chef, Trunke, Well, Vault, but he hath an abtract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. Ile go out then.

Mist. Ford. If you goe out in your owne semblance, you die Sir John, vnleefe you goe out disguis'd.

Mist. Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mist. Page. Alas the day I know not, there is no woman gowne bigge enough for him; other-wise he might put on a hat, a mufffer, and a kerschief, and fo escape.

Fal. Good hearts, deulfe someting: any extremity, rather then a milchefe.

Mist. Ford. My Maids Aunt the fat woman of Brain- ford, has a gowne aboue.

Mist. Page. On my word it will ferue him: sh'ee's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her mufffer too: run vp Sir John.

Mist. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: Mistris Page and I will looke some linnen for your head.

Mist. Page. Quicke, quicke, we'le come dreffe you straight: put on the gowne the while.

Mist. Ford. I would my husband would meette him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford: he sweares she's a witch, forbard her my houfe, and hath threatened to beate her.

Mist. Ford. But is my husband comming?

Mist. Page. I in good falneffe is he, and talkes of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mist. Ford. We'll try that: for Ile appoint my men to carry the basket againe, to meette him at the doore with it, as they did laft time.

Mist. Page. Nay, but he'll be heere prefently: let's go dreffe him like the witch of Brainford.

Mist. Ford. Ile firft direct direc't my men, what they shall doe with the basket: Goe vp, Ile bring linnen for him straight.

Mist. Page. Hang him dishonest Varlet, We cannot misufe enough:

We'll leaue a proffe by that which we will doo, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:
We do not acte that often, left, and laugh,
'Tis old, but true, Still Swine eats all the draugh.

Mist. Ford. Go Sirs, take the basket againe on your shouldeurs: your Mafter is hard at doore: if hee bid you fet it downe, obey him: quickly, dispitch.

1 Ser. Come, come, take it vp.
2 Ser. Pray heauen it be not full of Knight againe.
1 Ser. I hope not, I had liefe as beare so much lead.

Ford. I, but if it proue true (Mist. Page) have you any way then to vnfoole me againe. Set downe the basket villaines: some body call my wife: Youth in a basket: Oh you Panderly Rafeals, there's a knot: a gin, a packe, a conspiracie against me: Now shal the diuell be sham'd.

What wife I say: Come, come forth: behold what ho- neft neft clothes you fend forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this paffes M. Ford: you are not to goe loofe any longer, you must be pinnion'd.
Enans. Why, this is Lunaticks: this is madde, as a mad dogge.
Shall. Indeed M. Ford, thi is not well indeed.
Ford. So fay I too Sir, come hither Miftris Ford, Miftris Ford, the honett woman, the modest wife, the vertuous creature, that hath the jealous foole to her husband: I fuppeaf without caufe (Miftris) do I?
Miftris Ford. Haue men my wittesse you doe, if you fuppeaf me in any difhonestly.
Ford. Well faid Brazon-face, hold it out: Come forth firrah.
Page. This paffes.
Miftris Ford. Are you not afham'd, let the cloths alone.
Ford. I fhall finde you anon.
Enans. 'Tis unreasonable; will you take vp your wifes cloaths? Come, away.
Ford. Empty the basket I fay.
M. Ford. Why man, why?
Ford. Mafter Page, as I am a man, there was one conuay'd out of my houfe yesterday in this backet: why may not he be there againe, in my houfe I am fue he is: my Intelligence is true, my iealousie is reafonable, pluck me out all the linnen.
Miftris Ford. If you fand a man there, he fhall dye a Fleas death.
Page. Heer's no man.
Shall. By my fidelity this is not well Mr. Ford: This wrongs you.
Enans. Mf. Ford, you muft pray, and not follow the imaginations of your owne heart: this is iealousies.
Ford. Well, hee's not here I feeke for,
Page.No, nor no where elfe but in your braine.
Ford. Helpes to search my houfe this one time: if I find not what I feeke, fheu no colour for my extremity: Let me for euer be your Table-fport: Let them fay of me, as iealous as Ford, that fearch'd a hollow Wall-nut for his wifes Lemman. Satifie me once more, once more ferch with me.
M. Ford. What hoa (Miftris Page,) come you and the old woman downe: my husband will come into the Chamber.
Ford. Old woman? what old womens that?
M. Ford. Why it is my maids Aunt of Brainford.
Ford. A witch, a Queane, an olde couzening queane: Haue I not forbid her my houfe. She comes of errands do's he? We are fimple men, wee doe not know what's brought to paffe vnder the profefion of Fortune-telling. She workes by Charmes, by Spels, by th'Figure, & fuch dawry as this is, beyond our Element: wee know no thing. Come downe you Witch, you Haggue you, come downe I fay.
Miftris Ford. Nay, good sweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him fpreake the old woman.
Miftris Page. Come mother Prat, Come geue me your hand.
Miftris Page. Are you not afham'd?
I think you have kill'd the poore woman.
Miftris Ford. Nay he will do it, 'ts a goodly credite for you.
Ford. Hang her witch.

Eua. By yea, and no, I thinke the o'man is a witch indeede: I like not when a o'man has a great peard; I fpy a great peard vnder his muffler.
Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I befeech you fol low: fee but the iuffe of my iealousie: If I cry out thus vpon no tralle, neuer trutt me when I open again.
Page. Let's obey his humour a little further:
Come Gentlemen.
Miftris Page. Trufit me he beate him moft pitifully.
Miftris Ford. Nay by th'Maffe that he did not: he beate him moft vnpitifully, me thought.
Miftris Page. Ile haue the cudgell hallow'd, and hung ore the Altar, it hath done meritorious feruice.
Miftris Ford. What thinke you? May we with the warrant of woman-hood, and the witnesse of a good confidence, pursue him with any further reuenge?
M. Page. The spirit of wantonelle is pure fcar'd out of him, if the disuell haue him not in fee-simle, with fine and recovery, he will neuer (I thinke) in the way of waft, attempt vs againe.
Miftris Ford. Shall we tel our husbands how wee haue fer'd him?
Miftris Page. Yes, by all meanes: if it be but to fcape the figures out of your husbands braines: if they can find in their hearts, the poore vnvurtuous fat Knight shal be any further afflicted, wee two will ftil affection the minifters.
Miftris Ford. Ile warrant, they'll haue him publiquely sham'd, and me thinkes there would be no period to the left, should he not be publicky sham'd.
Miftris Page. Come, to the Forge with it, then shape it: I would not haue things coole.

Bar. I Sir? Ie call him to you.
Hoft. They shall haue my horses, but Ie make them pay: Ie fauce them, they haue had my houfes a week at command: I haue turn'd away my other guelts, they must come off, Ie fawce them, come.

Enter Page, Ford, Miftris Page, Miftris Ford, and Enans.

Eua. 'Tis one of the beft direcctions of a o'man as euer I did looke vpon.
Page. And did he fend you both these Letters at an infant?
Miftris Page. Within a quarter of an hour.
Ford. Pardon me (wife) henceforth do what y wilt: I rather will fuppeat the Sunne with gold, Then the with wantonelles: Now doth thy honor fland
The Merry Wives of Windor.

(In him that was of late an Heretike)
As frite as faith.
Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more:
Be not as extreme in submiffion, as in offence,
But let our plot go forward: Let our wives
Yet once again (to make vs publike sport)
Appoint a meeting with this old fat-fellow,
Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.
Ford. There is no better way then that they spoke of.
Page. How ² to fend him word they'le meet him in The Parke at midnight? Fe, fie, he'll never come.
Ex. You say he has bin throwne in the River's: and Has bin greeuoufly peaten, as an old o\'man: me-thinkes there should be terrours in him, that he should not come:
Me-thinkes his flesh is punif\'d, hee shall have no de-fires.
Page. So thinke I too.
M. Ford. Deifie but how you'le vfe him wh\' he comes,
And let vs two deifie to bring him thether.
Mift. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (sometime a keeper heere in Windfor Forrest)
Doth all the winter time, at still midnight
Walks about round an Oakke, with great rag'd-hornes,
And there he blaffs the tree, and takes the cattle,
And make milch-kine yeele blood, and thakes a chaine
In a moft hideous and dreadful manner.
You have heard of such a Spirit, and well you know
The uperflitious idle-headed-Eld
Recu\'d, and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter, for a truth.
Page. Why yet there want not many that do fear
In depe of night to walke by this Hernes Oakke:
But what of this? ²
Mift. Ford. Marry this is our deifie,
That Falstaff at that Oakke shall meete with vs.
Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape, when you have brought him thether,
What shall be done with him? What is your plot?
Mift. Pa. That likewise we have thought vpon: & thus:
Nan Page (my daughter) and my little fonne,
And three or foure more of their growth, wee\'l dreffe
Like Vrchins, Ouphes, and Fairies, greene and white,
With roundes of waxen Tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands; vpon a fodaine,
As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a faw-pit ruth at once
With some diffused long: Vpon their fight
We two, in great amazednifie will flye:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy-like to pinche the vniclane Knight;
And ask him why that hour of Fairy Reuell,
In their fo facred pathes, he dares to tread
In shape prophane.
Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the suppos'd Fairies pinch him, found,
And burne him with their Tapers.
Mift. Page. The truth being knowne,
We'll all prefent our felves ; dil-horne the spirit,
And mocke him home to Windfor.
Ford. The children must be
Be pra\'d\'d well to this, or they'll neer do't.
Eua. I will teach the children their behauours: and I will be like a Lacke-an-Apes also, to burne the Knight with my Taber.
Ford. That will be excellent,
Ile go buy them vizards.

Mift. Page. My Nan shall be the Queene of all the Fairies, finely attire'd in a robe of white.
Page. That fike will I go buy, and in that time
Shall M. Slender file the Nan away,
And marry her at Eaton: go, fend to Falstaffe straight.
Ford. Nay, Ile to him again in name of Bronne,
He'll tell me all his purpofe: sure he\'ll come.
Mift. Page. Fear not you that: Go get vs properties
And tricking for our Fayries.
Euan. Let vs about it,
It is admirable pleafures, and ferry honest knaueries.
Mift. Page. Go Mift. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir John, to know his minde:
Ile to the Doctor, he hath my good will,
And none but he to marry with Nan Page:
That Slender (though well landed) is an ideal:
And he, my husband beft of all affectes:
The Doctor is well monied, and his friends
Potent at Court: he, none but he shall have her,
Though twenty thouand worther come to craue her.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Ho\', Simple, Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Euan, Cau\', Quickly.

Ho\'. What wouldn't thou have? (Boore) what? (thick skin) Speake, breathe, difcufse: breath, short quicke, Snap.
Simp. Marry Sir, I come to speake with Sir John Fal-staffe from M. Slender.
Ho\'. There's his Chamber, his Houfe, his Cattle, his flanding-bed and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigall, freth and new: go, knock and call: he'll speake like an Anthropophaginian vato there: Knocke I fay.
Simp. There's an old woman, a fat woman gone vp into his chamber: Ile be fo bold as fay Sir till the comedowne: I come to speake with her indeed.
Ho\'. Ha? A fat woman? The Knight may be rob'd:
Ile call. Bully-Knight, Bully Sir John: speake from thy Lungs Military: Art thou there? It is thine Ho\', thine
Ephemeral caes.
Fal. How now, mine Ho\'?
Ho\'. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar taries the comming downe of thy fat-woman: Let her defend (Bully) let her defend: my Chambers are honourable: Fie, priu-cy? Fie.
Fal. There was (mine Ho\') an old-fat-woman even now with me, but she's gone.
Simp. Pray you Sir, was't not the Wife-woman of Brainford?
Fal. I marry was it (Muffel-feil) what would you with her?
Simp. My Mafter (Sir) my mafter Slender, fent to her feeling her go thorough the streets, to know (Sir) whether one Nim (Sir) that beguil'd him of a chaine, had the chaine, or no.
Fal. I speake with the old woman about it.
Simp. And what fayes she, I pray Sir?
Fal. Marry shee fayes, that the very fame man that beguil'd Mafter Slender of his Chaine, cozon'd him of it, Simp. I would I could have spoken with the Woman her her fel°e, I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let vs know.

Fal. I may not conceale them (Sir.)

Hoft. Conceale them, or thou di't?

Sim. Why sir, they were nothing but about Miftris

Anne Page, to know if it were my Masters fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis'tis his fortune.

Sim. What Sir?

Fal. To have her, or no : goe; say the woman told me fo.

Sim. May I be bold to say so Sir?

Fal. I Sir : like who more bold.

Sim. I thanke your worship : I shall make my Master glad with these tydings.

Hoft. Thou are clearkly : thou art clearkly (Sir Iohn) was there a wife woman with thee?

Fal. I. That I there was mine Hoft:one that hath taught me more witt, then ever I learn'd before in my life ;
and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Bar. Out alas (Sir) cozond: meere cozondage.

Hoft. Where be your horse: speake well of them varletto.

Bar. Run away with the cozoners: for so soone as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off; from behinde one of them, in a slough of myre ; and set fpures, and away ; like three Germaines-dielys ; three Doctor Faubflaenes.

Hoft. They are gone but to meete the Duke (villaine) doest not they be fled: Germaines are honest men.

Euan. Where is mine Hoft?

Hoft. What is the matter Sir?

Euan. Have a care of your entertainments : there is a friend of mine come to Towne, tels mee there is three Cozen-Iermans, that has cozened all the Hofts of Readins, of Mainde-heads; of Cal-e-brooks, of horses and money: I tell you for good will (looke you) you are wife, and full of gibes, and vloutings-flocks : and 'tis not convenient you shold be cozoned. Fare you well.

Cai. Ver's mine Hoft de Larteree?

Hoft. Here (Master Doctor) in perplextie, and doub tfull delerma.

Cai. I cannot tell vat is dat : but it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a Duke de Iamantie: by my troth : der is no Duke that the Court is knowe, to come : I tell you for good will i adieu.

Hoft. Huy and cry, (villaine) goe: affit me Knight, I am vdone: fly, run: huy, and cry (villaine) I am v-done.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozond, for I have beene cozond and beaten too : if it shold come to the care of the Court, how I have beene transformed ; and how my transformation hath beene washd, and cudgel'd, they would melt mee out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor Fithermens-boots with me : I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as cref-talie as a dride-peare: I neuer prosper'd, since I forsware my felce at Primer: well, if my windes were but long enough ; I would repent: Now? Whence come you?

Qui. From the two parties forfooth.

Fal. The Diuell take one partie, and his Dam the other: and so they shall be both betowed ; I have fur-fer'd more for their fakes ; more then the villainous inconstancy of mans disposition is able to beare.

Qui. And have not they suffer'd? Yes, I warrant;
pec
cially one of them; Miftris Ford (good heart) is beaten blacke and blew, that you cannot fee a white footer about her.

Fal. What tell'th thou mee of blacks, and blew? I was beaten my selle into all the colours of the Raine bow: and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Braineboord, but that my admirable dexteritie of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman delier'd me, the knaue Contable had fet me ith Stocks, ith common Stocks, for a Witch.

Qui. Sir: let me speake with you in your Chamber, you shall heare how things goe, and (I warrant) to your content: here is a Letter will say somewhat : (good-hearts) what a-do here is to bring you together? Sure, one of you do's not ferue heauen well, that you are so croft'd.

Fal. Come vp into my Chamber. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Fenton, Hoft.

Hoft. Master Fenton, talke not to mee, my minde is heayy: I will glue owre all.

Fen. Yet heare me speake: affit me in my purpose,
And (as I am a gentleman) iie glue thee
A hundred pound in gold, more then thy loffe.

Hoft. I will heare you (Master Fenton) and I will (at the leaff) keepes thy counsell.

Fen. From time to time, I haue acquainted you
With the deare loue I beare to faire Anne Page,
Who, mutually, hath anfwerd my affectio:
(Boe farre forth, as her felce might be her choosers)
Even to my wif: I haue a letter from her
Of such contents, as you will wonder at;
The mirch whereof, so larded with my matter,
That neither (singly) can be manifested
Without the shew of both : fat Faleshe.
Hath a great Scene ; the image of the left
Ie showe you here at large (harke good mine Hoft:)
To night at Hernes-Oke, iuft twixt twelve and one,
Muff my sweet Now prent the Faere-Queen:
The purpose-why, is here : in which diffigle
VWhile other Ieeds are something ranke on footes,
Her father hath commanded her to flip
Away with Slander, and with him, at Eaton
Immediatly to Marry : She hath conffented : Now Sir,
Her Mother, (even strong against that match
And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed
That he shall likewiseuffle her away,
While other Ieorts are tasking of their minds,
And at the Dead, where a Privy attends
Smalt marry her : to this her Mothers plot
She seemingly obedient) liekewife hath
Made promise to the Doctor: Now, thus it reft,
Her Father meanes she shall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slander lees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her goe,
She shall goe with him: her Mother hath intended
(The better to deuote her to the Doctor)
For they must all be mask'd, and vizarded)

That
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

That quaint in green, the shall be loose en-roab'd,
With Ribonds-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Docror spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath guien convent to go with him.

Hoff. Which meane to shee deceiv't: Father, or Mo-

The first (my good Hoff) to go along with me:
And here it refa, that you'll procure the Vicar
To play for me at Church, 'twixt twelve, and one,
And in the lawfull name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Hoff. Well, husband your deuice; Ile to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you shall not lacke a Priest.

Fen. So shall I euermore be bound to thee;
Befides, Ile make a preuent recompence.

Fal. Pre'thee no more pratling: go, Ile hold, this is the third time I hope good luckes lies in odd numbers:
Away, go, they say there is Diuinity in odd Numbers, either in naivety, chance, or death: away.

Qrg. Ile prouide you a chaine, and Ile what do I can to get you a pare of hornes.

Foll. Away I say, time weares, hold vp your head & mince. Now how M. Brome? Mazer Brome, the mater will be knowne to night, or neuer. Bee you in the Parke about midnight, at Hernes-Oake, and you shall fee wonders.

Ford. Wont you not to her yesterday (Sir) as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her (Mazer Brome) as you fea, like a poore-old-man, but I came from her (Mazer Brome) like a poore-old-woman; that fame knaue (Ford hir husband) hath the finest mad diuell of leaoufe in him (Master Brome) that ever govern'd Frenchie. I will tell you, he beate me greuously, in the shape of a woman: (for in the shape of Man (Mazer Brome) I feare not Goliah with a Weauers beame, because I know alfo, life is a Shuttle) I am in haft, go along with mee, Ile tell you all (Mazer Brome) since I pluckt Gelfie, plaide Trewant, and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow mee, Ile tell you strange things of this knaue Ford, on whom to night I will be reuenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow, strange things in hand (M. Brome) follow.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender.

Page. Come, come: we'll couch it's Cattle-ditch, till we see the light of our Fairies. Remember fon Slend-ner, my

Sleee. I forsooth, I haue spoke with her, & we haue a say-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; she cries Budget, and by that we know one another.

Skul. That's good too: But what needs either your Mum, or her Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath brooke ten a'clocke.

Page. The night is darke, Light and Spirits will become it we: Heauen proffer our sport. No man means euill but the devill, and we shall know him by his horns.
Let's away: follow me.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mift. Page, Mift. Ford, Caius.

Mift. Page. My Docror, my daughter is in green, when you fee your time, take her by the hand, away her to the Deaneery, and dispatch it quickly: go before into the Parke: we two must go together.

Cai. I know vat I haue to do, adieu.

Mift. Page. Fare you well (Sirs) my husband will not reioyce fo much at the abufe of Falstaffe, as he will chafe at the Docror marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, then a great deal of heart-breakes.

Mist. Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch-devill Herne?

Mift. Page. They are all couched in a pit hard by Hernes Oake, with obfcur'd Lights; which at the very infrant of Falstaff and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mift. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mist. Page. If he be not amaz'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaz'd, he will euer way be mock'd.

Mist. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Mift. Page. Against such Lewdsters, and their lechery,
Those that betray them, do na treachery.

Mist. Ford. The houre draws-on: to the Oake, to the Oake.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Evans and Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib Fairies: Coue, and remember your parts: be poild (I pray you) follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-'ords, do as I pod you: Come, come, trib, trib.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaff, Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, Evans,
Anne Page, Fairies, Page, Ford, Quickly,
Slender, Fenton, Caius, Piffell.

Fal. The Windfor-bell hath brooke twelve: the Minute draws-on: Now the hot-blooded-Gods affift me:

Remember Ioue, thou was't a Bull for thy Europa, Iyou fet on thy hornes. O powerful Loue, that in some repects makes a Beast a Man: in som other, a Man a beast.

You were also (Jupiter) a Swan, for the loue of Leda: O omnipotent

omnipotent Loue, how here the God drew to the complexion of a Goole: a fault done first in the forme of a beast, (O loue was beastly faults:) and then another fault, in the linbale of a Fowle, thinkes not (iue) a fowle-fault. When Gods have hot backes, what shall poore men do? For me, I am heere a Windsor Stagge, and the fattest (I thinkes) 1th Forrest. Send me a coole rut-time (loue) or who can blame me to plisse my Tallow? Who comes heere? my Doe?
-M.Ford. Sir Thbn? Art thou there (my Deere?)
My male-Deere?
Fal. My Doe, with the blacke Scot? Let the skie raines Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Greene-fluenes, halie-kiifing Comfits, and snow Eringoes: Let there come a tempest of pronunciation, I will shelter me heree.
-M. Ford. Mistris Page is come with me (tweet hart.)
Fal. Divide me like a brih-bucke, each a Haunch:
I will keepe my fides to my selle, my shoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my horses I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speake I like Horne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of confidence; he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome.
-M. Page. Alas, what noise?
Fal. What should this be?
Fal. I thinke the duel will not have me damned,
Leafe the style that's in me should set hell on fire;
He would never else croffe me thus.
Ent. Fairies.
Qyi. Fairies blacke, grey, gree, and white,
You Moone-shine revellers, and flades of night.
You Orphan heires of fixed definity,
Attend your office, and your quality.
Crier Hob-gobly, make the Fairy Oyes.
Pift. Elues, lift your names: Silence you airy tyes.
Cricket, to Windsor-chimnies shalt thou leap;
Where fires thou findst vnrank'd, and hearths vnwet,
There pinch the Malds as blew as Bill-berry,
Our radiant Queene, hates Sluts, and Sluttery.
Fal. They are Fairies, he that speaks to them shall die,
Ile winke, and cough: No man their workes must eie.
Eu. Wher's Bede? Go you, and where you find a maid
That cre the sleeke has thrishe her prayers said,
Raife vp the Organs of her fantasie,
Sleep she as found as carelesse infantle,
But thofe as sleeke, and thinke not on their fins,
Pinch them armes, legs, backes, shoulders, fides, & thins.
Qy. About, about:
Search Windsor Castle (Elues) within, and out.
Stew good luckes (Oaphs) on every sacred roomes,
That it may stand till the perpetuall doome,
In state as wholome, as in state 'tis fit,
Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it.
The feueral Chaires of Order, looke you fecore
With lyce of Balme ; and evey precious floweres,
Each faire Infallim, Coast, and fecrull Creft,
With loylall Blazon, euermore be blest.
And Nightly-maidens, Fairies, looke you fing
Like to the Garters-Compasse, in a ring,
Thexpreffure that it beares: Greene let it be,
Mote fertile-fresh then all the Field to fee:
And, Honey Sit Qui Mal-y-Pence, write
In Emerald-tusses, Floweres purple, blew, and white,
Like Saphire-pearle, and rich embroilerie,
Buckled below faire Knight-hoods bending knee;
Fairies vie Flowers for their caracterie.
Away, differfe: But till 'tis one a clocke,
Our Dance of Outforme, round about the Oke.
Of Horne the Hunter, let vs not forget.
(efet.)
Euun. Pray you lock hand in hand: your fulwes in order
And twenty glow-wormes shall our Lanthornes bee
To guide our Meafure round about the Tree.
But flay, I smell a man of middle earth.
Fal. Heaunen defend me from that Welsh Fairy,
Leafe he transforme me to a pece of Cheese.
Pift. Vilde worme, thou waft ore-look'd eu'n in thy birth.
Qyi. With Triall-fire touch me his finger end:
If he be chaffe, the flame will backe descend
And turne him to no paine: but if he flart,
It is the fleth of a corrupted hart.
Pift. 'A trial, come.
Euu. Come: will this wood take fire?
Fal. Oh, oh, oh.
Qyi. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire.
About him (Fairies) fign a formfull rime,
And as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

The Song.
Fix on Sunnefullphantace: Fix on Luft, and Luxurie:
Luft is but a bloody fire, kindled with unchaste defires,
Fed in heart woofe flames aspire.
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him (Fairies) mutually: Pinch him for his villanie.
Pinch him, and burne him, and turne him about,
Till Candles, Star-light, & Moone-shine be out.

Page. Nay do not flye, I thinke we have watcht you now: W'll none but Horne the Hunter fere your turne?
-M. Page. I pray you come, hold vp the left no higher.
Now (good Sir Ibe) how like you Windsor-wyres?
See you thefe husband? Do not these faire yokes
Become the Forrest better then the Towne?
Ford. Now Sir, whose a Cuckold now?
M' Brome, Falaffaf a Knave, a Cuckoldly knave,
Heere is his horns Master Brome:
And Master Brome, he hath enjoyed nothing of Fords, but his Buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to M' Brome, his horses are arrested for it, M' Brome.
M. Ford. Sir Iohn, we have had ill lucke: wee could never meets: I will never take you for my Loue again, but I will always count you my Deere.
Fal. I do begin to perceiue that I am made an Asse.
Ford. I, and an Ox too: both the proofs are extant.
Fal. And these are not Fairies:
I was three or foure times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the gullitines of my minde, the fodiaine surprise of my powers, drove the guffenesse of the foppery into a receius beleefe, in defpight of the teeth of all rime and reafon, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Lacke-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill employment.
Euun. Sir John Falaffaf, fere Got, and leave your defires, and Fairies will not pinfe you.
Ford. VVell faid Fairy Hugh.
Euuns. And leave you your iealousies too, I pray you.
Ford.
The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Ford. I will neuer mistrust my wife againe, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Haue I laid my braine in the Sun, and dri'de it, that it wantes matter to present fo groffe ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goate too? Shal I haue a Coxcombe of Frize? 'Tis time I were choak'd with a piece of tafted Cheere.

Eu. Seefe is not good to glue putter; your belly is al putter.

Fal. Seefe, and Putter? Haue I li'd to stand at the tounge of one that makes Fritters of English? This is e'nough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the Realme.

Mist. Page. Why Sir John, do you thinke though wee would have thrust vertue out of our heares by the head and shoulders, and haue gluen our felues without cruple to hell, that euer the deuell could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? A bag of flax?

Mist. Page. A puff man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entredibles?

Ford. And one that is as fnderous as Sathan?

Page. And as poore as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eaan. And gluen to Fornication, and to Tauernee, and Sacke, and Wine, and Metholutions, and to drinkings and fweareings, and strangings Pribles and prables?

Fal. Well, I am your Theme: you have the start of me, I am deflected: I am not able to anwer the Welch Flannell, Ignorance it selfe is a plummet ore me, vfe me as you will.

Ford. Marry Sir, wee'l bring you to Windsor to one Mrs Broune, that you have cozen'd of money, to whom you should haue bin a Pander: ouer and aboue that you haue suffer'd, I thinke, to repay that money will be a bitting affiction.

Page. Of to night at my house, wher I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee: Tell her Mr Slen-

Page. Page. Doctours doubt that;

If Anne Page be my daughter, she is (by this) Doctour Caius wife.

Slen. Whoa hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Slen. Dispatch'd? Ile make the best in Glofterhine know on't: would I were hang'd la, elfe.

Page. Of what fonne?

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Misfitris Anne

Page, and she's a great hubberry boy. If it had not bene ith Church, I would have swing'd him, or shee should have swing'd me. If I did not thinke it had bene Anne Page, would I might neuer stirre, and 'tis a Post-masters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you tooke the wrong.

Slen. What neede you tell me that? I think so, when I tooke a Boy for a Girle: If I had bene married to him, (for all he was in womans apparel) I would not haue

Page. Page. Why this is your owne folly, Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter, By her garments?

Slen. I went to her in greene, and cried Mum, and the cride budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Post-masters boy.

Mist. Page. Good George be not angry, I knew of your purpose; turn'd my daughter into white, and indeed she is now with the Doctor at the Deanrie, and there married.

Cei. Ver is Mistris Page: by gar I am cozened, I ha

Page. V'ly? did you take her in white?

Cei. I bee gar, and 'tis a boy: be gar, Ile raise all Windsor.

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart miijues me, here comes Mr Fenton.

How now Mr Fenton?

Anne. Pardon good father, good my mother pardon

Page. Now Mistris:

How chance you went not with Mr Slander?

Mist. Page. Why went you not with Mr Doctor, maid?

Pen. You do amaze her: heare the truth of it,

You would have married her most shamefully,

Where there was no proportion held in loue:

The truth is, she and I (long fince contracted)

Are now so fure that nothing can disloue vs:

Th'offence is holy, that she hath committed,

And this decret looses the name of craft,

Of disobedience, or vnduteous title,

Since therein she doth cuitate and thun

A thousand irreligious curhed hours

Which forced marriage would have brought vpon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedie:

In Loue, the heavens themselfes do guide the face,

Money buyes Lands, and wives are fold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a special fland to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glance'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heauen glue thee joy, what cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogges run, all forts of Deere are chad.'

Mist. Page. Well, I will mune no further: Mr Fenton,

Heauen glue you many, many merry dayes:

Good husband, let vs evry one go home,

And laugh this sport ore by a Countrie fire,

Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so (Sir John).

To Master Broome, you yet shall hold your word,

For he, to night, shall ly with Mistris Ford: Exeunt;
MEASURE,
For Measure.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Duke, Egeus, Lords.

Duke.
Egeus.

Egeus. My Lord.

Duk. Of Government, the properties to.vn-
Would seeme in me t'affect speech & discourse,
Since I am put to know, that your owne Science
Exceeds (in that) the lifts of all advice
My strength can glue you: Then no more remains
But that, to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them worke: The nature of our People,
Our Cities Institutions, and the Terms
For Common Industry, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and prattise, hath inrichted any
That we remember: There is our Commission,
From which, we would not have you warpe; call hither,
I say, bid come before vs Angelo:
What figure of vs thinke you, he will bear.
For you must know, we have with specchall foule
Eicled him our abilience to supply;
Lent him our terror, drest him with our love,
And giv'en his Deputation all the Organs
Of our owne powre: What thinke you of it?
Ege. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergoe such ample grace, and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duk. Looke where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo:

There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th'oaberue, doth thy history
Fully vnfold: Thy selfe, and thy belongings
Are not thine owne so proper, as to wafe
Thy selfe vpon thy vertues; they on thee:
Heauen doth vso vs, as we, with Torches doe,
Not light them for themselfes: For if our vertues
Did not goe forth of vs, twere all alike
As if we had them not: Spirits are not finely touch'd,
But to fine iflues: nor nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thriftie goddesse, the determines
Her selfe the glory of a creditor,
Both thanks, and vse; but I do bend my speeche

To one that can my part in him aduertise;
Hold therefore Angelo:
In our remove, be thou at full, our selfe:
Mortalitie and Mercie in Vienna
Lie in thy tongue, and heart: Old Egeus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more teft, made of my mettle,
Before fo noble, and fo great a figure
Be famp't vpon it.

Duk. No more equalion:
We haue with a leaue'n, and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honors:
Our haffe from hence is of fo quicke condition,
That it prefers it selfe, and leaves vnquestion'd
Matters of needfull value: We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with vs, and doe looke to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well:
To th' hopefull execution doe I leave you,
Of your Commisions.

Ang. Yet glue leaue (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duk. My haffe may not admit it,
Nor neede you (on mine honor) haue to doe
With any scruple: your scope is as mine owne,
So to informe, or qualifie the Lawes
As to your foule feemes good: Glue me your hand,
Ile priuily away: I loue the people,
But doe not like to flage me to their eyes:
Though it doe well, I doe not relish well
Their loud applaus, and Aues vehement:
Nor doe I thinke the man of safe dierection
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heavens glue safety to your purpose.

Ege. Lead forth, and bring you backe in happe-

Duk. I thanke you, fare you well.

Ege. I shall defire you, Sir, to glue me leaue
To haue free speech with you; and it concerns me
To looke into the bottome of my place:
A powre I haue, but of what strenght and nature,
I am not yet infructed.

Ang. "Tis so with me: Let vs with-draw together,
And we may foome our satifsaction haue
Touching that point.

Ege. Ile wait vpon your honor.

Exit.
Measur for Measur.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall upon the King.

1. Gent. Heauen grant us peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

Luc. Thou conclu’d like the Sandimomious Prat, that went to sea with the ten Commandements, but scrap’d one out of the Table.

2. Gent. Thou shalt not Steale?

Luc. I, that he raz’d.

1. Gent. Why? ’twas a commandement, to command the Captain and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steale: There’s not a Souldier of vs all, that in the thank-giving before meate, do rallish the petition well, that praises for peace.

2. Gent. I neuer heard any Souldier dislike it.

Luc. I beleue thee: for I thinke thou neuer was’t where Grace was said.

2. Gent. No? a dozens times at least.

1. Gent. What? In meeter?

Luc. In any proportion: or in any language.

Luc. I, why not? Grace is, Grace, despiete of all controuerse: as for example; Thou thy selfe art a wicked villain, despiete of all Grace.

1. Gent. Well: there went but a pair of sheeres betweene vs.

Luc. I grant: as there may betweene the Lifts, and the Veluet: Thou art the Lift.

1. Gent. And thou the Veluet; thou art good veluet; thou’rt a three pils-pece I warrant thee: I had as lief be a Lyft of an Enlish Kersey, as be pil’d, as thou art pil’d, for a French Veluet. Do I speake feelingly now?

Luc. I thinke thou doest: and indeed with most painfull feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine owne confection, learne to begin thy health; but, whilst I live forget to drinke after thee.

1. Gent. I thinke I have done my selfe wrong, have I not?

2. Gent. Yes, that thou halfe; whether thou art tainted, or free.

Enter Beawde.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I have purchas’d as many diseases under her Roofe, as come to

2. Gent. To what, I pray?

Luc. Iudge.

2. Gent. To three thousand Dollours a yeare.

1. Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crowne more.

1. Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me: but thou art full of error, I am found.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would say) healthy: but so found, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; limpiety has made a feast of thee.

1. Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Ciatica?

Beawd. Well, well: there’s one yonder arrrested, and carri’d to prifon, was worth six thousand of you all.

2. Gent. Who’s that I pray thee?

Beawd. Marry Sir, that’s Claudie, Signior Claudie.

Beawd. Nay, but I know ’tis so: I saw him arrrested: faw him carry away: and which is more, within these three dales his head to be chop’d off.

Luc. But, after all this foolish, I would not haue it so: Are you sure of this?

Beawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julieta with childe.

Luc. Beleeue me this may be he promis’d to meeke me two howres fince, and he was ever precie in promis keeping.

2. Gent. Besides you know, it draws somthing neere to the speech we had to fuch a purpose.

1. Gent. But most of all agreeing with the proclamatio.

Luc. Away: let’s goe learne the truth of it. Exit. Beawd. Thus, what with the war; what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am Custom-shrunke. How now? what’s the newes with you. Enter Clovene.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prifon.

Beawd. Well: what has he done?

Clo. A Woman.

Beawd. But what’s his offence?

Clo. Grooping for Trowts, in a peculiar River.

Beawd. What? is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No: but there’s a woman with maid by him: you have not heard of the proclamation, haue you?

Beawd. What proclamatio, man?

Clo. All howses in the Suburbs of Vienna must bee pluck’d downe.

Beawd. And what shall become of those in the City?

Clo. They shall stand for feed: they had gon down to, but that a wife Burger put in for them.

Beawd. But shall all our howses of refort in the Suburbs be pul’d downe?

Clo. To the ground, Miftria.

Beawd. Why heere’s a change indeed in the Common-wealth: what shall become of me?

Clo. Come: feare not you: good Counsellors lacke no Clients: though you change your place, you neede not change your Trade: Ile bee your Tapster fill; courage, there will bee pitty taken on you; you that haue wonne your eyes almoit out in the seruice, you will bee considered.

Beawd. What’s to doe heere, Thomas Tapster? let’s withdraw?

Clo. Here comes Signior Claudie, led by the Prouoxt to prifon: and there’s Madam Julieta. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Prouoxt, Claudie, Julieta, Officers, Lucius. & 2. Gent. Cla. Fellow, why do’t thou say me thus to th’world? Bearer me to prifon, where I am committed.

Pre. I do it in equil disposition, But from Lord Angio by speciall charge.

Cla. Thus can the demy-god (Authority) Make vs pay downe, for our offence, by weight. The words of heauen; on whom it will, it will, On whom it will not (foe) yet still ‘tis iuft. (dratn)

Luc. Why how now Claudie? whence comes this re.

Cla. From too much liberty, (my Lucie) Liberty As furiet is the father of much fall: So every Scope by the immoderate vie

Turnes to restraint; Our Natures doe pursue

Like
Measure for Measure.

Like Rats that rayn downe their proper Bane,
A thirsty eul, and when we drinkes, we die.

Luc. If I could speake fo wisely vnder an arrest, I would fend for certaine of my Creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief haue the popery of freedome, as the mortality of imprisonment: what's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What (but to speake of) would offend againe.

Luc. What, is't murder?

Cl. No.

Luc. Lecherie?

Cl. Call it fo.

Pro. Away, Sir, you must goe.

Cl. One word, good friend;

Lucio, a word with you,

Luc. A hundred:
If they'll doe you any good: Is Lecherie so look'd after?

Cl. Thus stands it with me: vpon a true contract
I got poiffion of Juliet as bed,
You know the Lady, she is fett my wife,
Saue that we doe the denunciation lacke
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Onely for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Loue
Till Time had made them for vs. But it chances
The stealth of our most mutuall entertainment
With Character too groffe, is writ on Iliet.

Luc. With child, perhaps?

Cl. Unhappely, even fo.
And the new Deputie, now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimps of newnes,
Or whether that the body publique, be
A horfe whereon the Governour doth ride,
Who newly in the Seate, that it may know
He can command; let it striate feele the fpur :
Whether the Tiranny be in his place,
Or in his Eminence that fills it vp.
I fagger in: But this new Governour
Awakes me all the inrolled penalties
Which haue (like vn-scowerd’ Armor) hung by th’wall.
So long, that ninetene Zodiacks haue gone round,
And none of them beene worne; and for a name
Now puts the drowfie and negligence Act
Frehily on me: ‘tis furely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: And thy head stands fo tickle on thy shoulders, that a milke-maid, if she be in loue, may figh it off: Send after the Duke, and appeale to him.

Cl. I have done fo, but hee’s not to be found.
I prethée (Lucio) doe me this kinde service:
This day, my sister shoulde the Cloyfter enter,
And there receive her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my flate,
Implore her, in my voice, that shee makes friends
To the stricte deputie: bid her selfe alay him,
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and speechlesse dialect,
Such as moue men: because, the hath prospereus Art
When shee will play with reafoon, and discourse,
And well shee can perswade.

Luc. I pray thee may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand vnder greuous impofition: as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be forry shoulde bee thus foolishly lost, at a game of ticke-tacket: Ile to her.

Cl. I thankke you good friend Lucio.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke and Friar Thomas.

Duk. No: holy Father, throw away that thought,
Believe not that the drilbing dart of Loue
Can pierce a compleat bosome: why, I defire thee
To giue me secret harbour, hath a purpoe
More grave, and wrinkled, then the aimes, and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace speake of it?

Duk. My holy Sir, none better knowes then you
How I have euer lou’d the life remoued
And held in idle price, to haunt assemblies
Where youth, and coff, wilderue brapees keeps.
I have deliiuerd to Lord Angelos
(A man of stricte and firm st Führung)
My abolute power, and place here in Vienna,
And he supposeth me trauaild to Poland,
(For fo I have firewed it in the common eare)
And fo it is receiudd: Now (pious Sir)
You will demand of me, why I do this.

Fri. Gladly, my Lord.

Duk. We have stricte Statutes, and most biting Laws,
(The needfull bits and curbes to headstrong weedes)
Which for this foureteene yeares, we have let flip,
Even like an ore-grown Lyon in a Cauce
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond Fathers,
Hauing bound vp the threatening twigs of birch,
Onely to flice it in their childrens fight,
For terror, not to vie: in time the rod
More mock’d, then fear’d: so our Decrees,
Dead to infliclion, to themelues are dead,
And libertie, plucks Loufe by the nose;
The Baby beats the Nurse, and quite atheist
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It refled in your Grace
To vnloofe this tyde-vp Loufe, when you pleaf’d:
And it in you more dreadfulfull would have seem’d
Then in Lord Angelos.

Duk. I doe feare: too dreadful:
Sith ’twas my fault, to glue the people sfope,
"I would be my tiranny to strike and gill them,
For what I bid them doe: For, we bid this be done
When euill deeds have their permifflue paife,
And not the punishment: therefore indeede (my father)
I haue on Angelos impos’d the office,
Who may in th’ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet, my nature neuer in the fight
To do in flander: And to behold his fway
I will, as ’twere a brother of your Order,
With both Prince, and People: Therefore I prethée
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in perfon beare
Like a true Friar: Moe reasons for this action
At our more leyture, shall I render you;
Onely, this one: Lord Angelos is precipic,
Stands at a guard with Enuite: scarce confed,"
That his blood flowes: or that his appetite
Is more to bread then stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpoe: what our Seemers be.

Enter Isabella and Francisca a Nun.

_Measure for Measure._

Isabella and Francisca a Nun.

(And with full line of his authority)
Gouernes Lord Angelo; A man, whose blood
Is very snow-broth: one, who neuer feelis
The wanton flings, and motions of the fence;
But doth rebate, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: Studie, and falt
He (to give feare to wife, and libertie,
Which haue, for long, run-by the hideous law,
As Myce, by Lyons) hath pickt out an act,
Vnder whose heavy fence, your brothers life
Fals into forfeit: he arreftis him on it,
And follows clofe the rigor of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Vnifeffe you haue the grace, by your faire praver
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith of businesse
"Twixt you, and your poore brother.

Isabella. Doth he so,
Seeketh his life?

Lucio. Has cenfur'd him already,
And as I heare, the Prouff hath a warrant
For's execution.

Isabella. Alas: what poffe
Ablittles in me, to doe him good.

Lucio. Aflay the powre you have.

Isabella. My power? alas, I doubt.

Lucio. Our doubts are traitors
And makes vs loose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Goe to Lord Angelo
And let him learen to know, when Maidens fue
Men giue like gods: but when they wepe and kneele,
All their petitions, are as freely theirs
As they themselfes would owe them.

Isabella. I le fe what I can doe.

Lucio. But speedily.

Isabella. I will about it strait;
No longer flaying, but to giue the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thanke you:
Commend me to my brother: flone at night
Ile fend him certaine word of my lucesse.

Lucio. I take my leave of you.

Isabella. Good sir, adieu.

ACTUS Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, and seruants, Judges.

_Angelo._ We must not make a far-row of the Law,
Setting it vp to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keepe one shape, till culsmce make it
Their pearch, and not their terror.

_Escalus._ I, but yet
Let vs be keene, and rather cut a little
Then fall, and bruife to death: alas, this gentleman
Whom I would faue, had a most noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I beleue to be most ftrait in vertue)
That in the working of your owne affections,
Had time coheard with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the refolute actung of our blood
Could have attaind the effect of your owne purpose,
Whether it was not fume time in your life
Er'd in this point, which now you cefure him,
And puld the Law vpun you.

_Angelo._ 'Tis one thing to be tempted (_Escalus_

Another
Another thing to fall: I not deny
The Jury palling on the Prisoners life
May in the two-and-twelve have a thief, or two Guilty then him they try; what's open made to Jusfice,
That Jusfice ceizes; What knowes the Lawes
That theesus do passe on theesus? 'Tis very pregnant,
The Jewell that we finde, we floope, and take't,
Because we see it; but what we doe not see,
We tread upon, and never thinke of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that cenfure him, do so offend,
Let mine owne Judgement pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partill. Sir, he must dye.

Enter Prauof.

Efc. Be it as your wifedom will.
Ang. Where is the Prauof?
Pro. Here if it like your honour.
Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confeffior, let him be prepar'd,
For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.
Efc. Well: heauen forgive him; and forgive vs all:
Some rife by fame, and some by vertue fall:
Some run from brakes of Ice, an d aniswere none,
And some condemnèd for a fault alone.

Enter Elicow, Froth, Clowye, Officers.

Elic. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a Common-weale, that doe nothing but vs their abuies in common houes, I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now Sir, what's your name? And what's the matter?

Elic. If it pleasse your honour, I am the poore Dukes
Confable, and my name is Elicow; I doe leane vpon Jusfice Sir, and doe bring in here before your good honor, two notorious Benefactors.

Efg. Are they not Malefactor?

Elic. If it pleasse your honour, I know not well what they are: But precke villains they are, that I am sure of,
and void of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to hauie.

Efc. This comes off well: here's a wifes Officer.

Ang. Goe to: What quality are they of? Elicow is your name?

Why do'th thou not speake Elicow?

Clo. He cannot Sir: he's out at Elicow.

Ang. What are you Sir?

Elic. He Sir: a Tapifer Sir: parell Baud: one that utters a bad woman: whose house Sir was (as they say) pluckt downe in the Suburbs: and now she professes a hot-houfe; which, I thinke is a very ill houfe too.

Efc. How know you that?

Elic. My wife Sir? whom I dethet before heauen, and your honour.

Efc. How? thy wife?

Elic. I Sir: whom I thanke heauen is an honest woman in hauing.

Do'th thou dethet her therefore?

Elic. I say Sir, I will dethet my felle alo, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a Bauds house, it is pitty of her life, for it is a naughty houfe.

How do'th thou know that, Confable?

Elic. Marry Sir, by my wife, who, if she had bin a woman Cardinally gien, might have bin accuss'd in fornication, adultery, and all vncleneffe there.

Efc. By the womans means?

Elic. I Sir, by Myftris Over-dons means: but as the spitt in his face, fo the defde him.

Clo. Sir, if it plesse your honor, this is not fo.

Elic. Proue it before thefe varlets here, thou honorable man, proue it.

Efc. Doe you heare how he misplaces?

Clo. Sir, the came in great with child: and longing (fauing your honors reuerence) for swed prewens: Sir, we had but two in the houfe, which at that very distant time froid, as it were in a fruit dith (a dith of some three pence; your honours have feene fuch dithes) they are not China-dithes, but very good dithes.

Efc. Go too: go too: no matter for the dith Sir.

Clo. No indeede Sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this Myftris Elicow, being (as I say) with child, and being great belliied, and longing (as I fay) for prewens: and hauing but two in the dith (as I fay) Mafter Froth here, this very man, hauing eaten the reit (as I fay) & (as I fay) paying for them very honestly: for, as you know Mafter Froth, I could not give you no woman again.

Fra. No indeede.

Efc. Very well: you being then (if you be remem-bred) cracking the ftones of the foresaid prewens.

Fra. I, fo I did indeede.

Clo. Why, very well: I telling you then (if you be remembered) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, vnleffe they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Fra. All this is true.

Clo. Why very well then.

Efc. Come: you are a tedious foole: to the purpose:
what was done to Elicow wife, that hee hath caufe to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honor cannot come to that yet.

Efc. No Sir, nor I meane it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honours lease: And I befeech you, looke into Mafter Froth here
Sir, a man of foure-score pound a yere; whose father died at Hallemus: Was't not at Hallemus Mafter Froth?

Fra. Allhallond-Eue.

Clo. Why very well: I hope here be true: he Sir, futting (as I say) in a lower chaire, Sir, 'twas in the banch of Grapes, where indee do you have a delight to fift, have you not?

Fra. I haue fo, because it is an open roome, and good for winter.

Clo. Why very well then: I hope here be true.

Ang. This will laft out a night in Rufsia
When nights are longeft there: Ie take my leane,
And leave you to the hearing of the caufe;
Hoping youle finde good caufe to whip them all.

Exit.

Ebc. I thinke no leffe: good morrow to your Lordship. Now Sir, come on: What was done to Elicows wife, once more?

Clo. Once Sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elic. I befeech you Sir, aske him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I befeech your honor, aske me.

Efc. Well Sir, what did this Gentleman to her?

Clo. I befeech you firl, looke in this Gentlemans face:
good Mafter Froth looke upon his honor; 'tis for a good purpofe: doth your honor marke his face?

Frc. 1
Measure for Measure.

Efc. I fir, very well.
Clo. Nay, I believe you marke it well.
Efc. Well, I doe so.
Clo. Doth your honor see any harme in his face?
Efc. Why no.
Clo. I bele suppos'd upon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him; good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Constables wife any harme? I would know that of your honour.
Efc. He's in the right (Constable) what say you to it? Elb. First, and it like you, the horse is a reputed houfe; next, this is a reputed fellow; and his Miftris is a reputed woman.
Clo. By this hand Sir, his wife is a more reputed person then any of vs all.
Elb. Varlet, thou lye'st; thou lye'kest wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that thee was ever reputed with man, woman, or child.
Clo. Sir, she was reputed with him, before he married with her.
Efc. Which is the wiser here; Justice or Iniquity? Is this true?
Elb. O thou caitiff: O thou varlet: O thou wicked Hanniball, I reputed with her, before I was married to her: if ever I was reputed with her, or the with me, let not your worship thinke mee the poore Duke Officer: proue this, thou wicked Hanniball, or I haue mine action of battre on thee.
Efc. If he tooke you a 'oth'低价，you might have your action of flander too.
Elb. Marry I thank you your good worship for it: what isn't your Worshippes pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caitiff?
Efc. Truly Officers, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover, if thou couldst, let him continue in his course, till thou knowst what they are.
Elb. Marry I thank you your worship for it: Thou fearest thou wicked varlet now, what's come vpon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.
Efc. Where were you borne, friend?
Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.
Efc. Are you of fourscore pounds a yeere?
Froth. Yes, and 't pleases you, Sir.
Efc. So: what trade are you of, Sir?
Clo. A Tapffer, a poore widowess Tapffer.
Efc. Your Miftris name?
Clo. Miftris Ouer-don.
Efc. Hath she had any more then one husband?
Clo. Nine, Sir: Ouer-don by the last.
Efc. Nine? come hether to me, Master Froth: Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with Tapfters: they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them: get you gone, and let me heare no more of you.
Fro. I thank you your worship: for mine owne part, I never came into any roome in a Tapp-house, but I am drawn in.
Efc. Well: no more of it Master Froth: farewell! Come you hether to me, Mr. Tapffer: what's your name Mr. Tapffer?
Clo. Pompey.
Efc. What else?
Clo. Bum, Sir.
Efc. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the bestchild fence, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey; howsoever you colour it in being a Tapffer, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.
Clo. Truly Sir, I am a poore fellow that would live.
Efc. How would you liue Pompey? by being a bawd? what doe you thinke of the trade Pompey? is it a lawfull trade?
Clo. If the Law would allow it, Sir.
Efc. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.
Clo. Do's your Worshippes money to geld and play all the youth of the City?
Efc. No, Pompey.
Efc. Truely Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.
Efc. There is pretty orders beginning I can tell you: It is but heading, and hanging.
Clo. If you head, and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeare together; you'll be glad to gue out a Commission for more heads: if this law hold in Vienna ten yeare, ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: if you like to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.
Efc. Thank me good Pompey; and in requital of your prophelie, harke you: I aduise you let me not finde you before me againe upon any complaint whatsoever; no, not for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shall beat you to your Tent, and proue a threwd Caesar to you in plaine dealing Pompey, I shall haue you whipt; for this time, Pompey, fare you well.
Clo. I thank you your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the fleth and fortune shall better determine. Whimp me? no, no, let Carman whisp his Iade, The valiant hart's not whipt out of his trade. Exit.
Efc. Come hether to me, Master Elbrow: come hither Master Constable: how long haue you bin in this place of Constable?
Efc. Seuen yeere, and a halfe fir.
Efc. I thought by the readinesse in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seauen yeares together.
Efc. And a halfe fir.
Efc. Alas, it hath beene great paines to you: they do you wrong to put you fo oft vpon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to ferue it?
Elb. 'Faith fir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chidden, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and goe through with all.
Efc. Looke you bring mee in the names of some fixe or seuen, the most sufficient of your parish.
Elb. To your Worships house fir?
Efc. To my house: fare you well: what's a clocke, thinke you?
Iaft. Eleuen, Sir.
Efc. I pray you home to dinner with me.
Iaft. I humbly thank you.
Efc. It grieues me for the death of Claudia but there's no remede:
Iaft. Lord Angelos is seuerre.
Efc. It is but needfull.
Mercy is not if felfe, that oft lookes fo,
Pardon is fill the nurse of second woe:
But yet, poore Claudia: there is no remede.
Come Sir.

Exeunt. Scena.
Scena Secunda.

Enter Prouasf, Servant.

Sir. He'se's hearing of a Caufe ; he will come straight, I'll tell him of you.

Pro. 'Pray you doe; Ile know His pleasure, may he be he will relent; alas He hath but as offended in a dreame, All Sefts, all Ages smack of this vice, and he To die for't?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Prouasf?

Pro. Is it your will Claudia shall die to morrow ?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea ? hadst thou not order? Why do't thou ask againe?

Pro. Left I might be too rash : Under your good correction, I have seene When after execution, Judgement hath Repented or his doome.

Ang. Goe to ; let that be mine, Doe you your office, or give vp your Place, And you shall well be faer'd.

Pro. I crave your Honours pardon : What shall be done Sir, with the groaning Juliet? Shee's very neere her howre.

Ang. Dilipofe of her To some more fitter place ; and that with speed.

Ser. Here is the fitter of the man condemn'd, Defires access to you.

Ang. Hath he a Sifer ?

Pro. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid, And to be shortte of a Sifer-hood, If not alreadie.

Ang. Well : let her be admitted, See you the Fornicatrefe be remou'd, Let her have needful, but not lauish meanes, There shall be order for't.

Enter Lucius and Isabella.

Pro. Save your Honour. (will?)

Ang. Stay a little while : y'are welcome : what's your Isab. I am a woufull Sutor to your Honour, 'Please but your Honor heare me.

Ang. Well. what's your fuite.

Isab. There is a vice that moft I doe abhorre, And moft desire should meet the blow of Iustice; For which I would not pleade, but that I muft, For which I muft not pleade, but that I am At warre, twixt will, and will not.

Ang. Well : the matter?

Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die, I doe befeech you let it be his fault, And not my brother.

Pro. Heauen glue thee moving graces.

Ang. Condemne the fault, and not the actor of it, Why every fault's condemn'd ere it be done: Mine were the verie Cipher of a Function To fine the faults, whole fine flands in record, And let goe by the Author:

Isab. Oh juif, but feure Law : I had a brother then ; heauen keepe your honour.

Luc. Glue't not ore so : to him againe, entreat him, Kneele downe before him, hang vpon his gowne, You are too cold : if you should need a pin,

You could not with more tame a tongue defire it: To him, I say.

Isab. Muit he needs die?

Ang. Maidens, no remedie.

Isab. Yee! I doe thinke that you might pardon him, And neither heaven, nor man grieue at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do't.

Isab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Looke what I will not, that I cannot doe.

Isab. But might you do't & do the world no wrong, If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse, As mine is to him?

Ang. Hee's sentenc'd, tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

Isab. Too late? why no : I that doe speake a word May call it againe: well, beleue this No ceremony that to great ones longs, Not the Kings Crowne; nor the deputed sword, The Marshalls Truncheon, nor the Judges Robe Become them with one halfe fo good a grace As mercie does: If he had bin as you, and you as he, You would haue flipt like him, but he like you Would not have beene fo sterne.

Ang. Pray you be gone.

Isab. I would to heauen I had your potencie, And you were Iacob: should it then be thus? No : I would tell what t'were to be a Judge, And what a prifoner.

Luc. I, touch him : there's the vaine.

Ang. Your Brother is a forfeit of the Law, And you but waule your words.

Isab. Alas, alas : Why all the foules that were, were forfeit once, And he that might the vantage left have took, Found out the remedie : how would you be, If he, which is the top of Judgement, shoul'd But judge you, as you are? Oh, thinke on that, And mercie then will breathe within your lips Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, (faire Maid)

It is the Law, not I, condemn your brother, Were he my kinman, brother, or my fonne, It shoul'd be thus with him : he must die to morrow.

Isab. To morrow ? oh, that's fodain, Spare him, spare him :

Hee's not prepar'd for death ; euen for our kitches We will the fowle of feaon; shall we ferue heauen With leffe reprefent then we doe minifter To our groffe-felues? good, good my Lord, bethink you; Who is it that hath d'it for this offence? There's many have committed it.

Luc. I, well said.

Ang. The Law hath not bin dead, though it hath left Tho'se many had not dar'd to doe that euill If the firft, that did th'Edift infringe Had anfwer'd for his deed : Now 'tis awake, Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet Lookes in a glaffe that thewa what future euilla Either now, or by remifenesse, new concei'd, And fo in propride to be harch'd, and borne,

Are now to have no succifue degrees, But here they live to end.

Isab. Yet shew some pitie.

Ang. I swew it moft of all, when I shew Iustice; For then I pitie tho'te I doe not know, Which a dillim'd offence, would after gaule

And
Measure for Measure.

And doe him right, that anfwerer one foule wrong
Lues not to ať another. Be fatified;
Your Brother dies to morrow; be content.

Ifab. So you must be y first that gies this fentence,
And hee, that fuffers: Oh, it is excellent
To haue a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To vfe it like a Giant.

Luc. That's well fai'd.

Ifab. Could great men thunder
As thou wilt? Ile never be quiet,
For every pelting petty Officer
Would vfe his heauen for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Mercifull heauen,
Thou rather with thy sharpfe and fulphurous bolt
Splits the vn-wedgable and gnarled Oke,
Then the loft Merrill: But man, proud man,
Dreif in a little breife authoritie,
Moft ignorant of what he's moft affur'd,
(His glafie Offence) like an angry Ape
Plaides fuch phantomque tricks before high heauen,
As makes the Angles weep: who with our spleenes,
Would all themfelves laugh mortally.

Luc. Oh, to him, to him wench: he will reteft,
Hee's comming: I perceive't.

Pro. Pray heauen he win him.

Ifab. We cannot weigh our brother with our felfe,
Great men may left with Saints: tis wit in them,
But in the leffe fowle prophanation.

Luc. Thou'rt i'th right (Girl) more o'that.

Ifab. That in the Captaine's but a chellerick word,
Which in the Soudier is flat blafphemie.

Luc. Art aus'd o'that? more on't.

Ang. Why doe you putte these fayings vpon me?
Ifab. Becaufe Authoritie, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kinde of medicine in it felfe
That skins the vice o'th top; goe to your bofome,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confefle
A naturall guiltineffe, fuch as is his,
Let it not found a thought vpon your tongue
Againft my brothers life.

Ang. Shee speaks, and 'tis fuch fence
That my Sence breeds with it; fare you well.

Ifab. Gentle my Lord, turne backe.

Ang. I will bethinke me: come againe to morrow.

Ifa. Hark, how Ile brie by you: good my Lord turn back.

Ang. How? brie me?

If. I, with fuch gifts that heauen fhall share with you.

Luc. You had mar'd all elfe.

Ifab. Not with fond Sickles of the tefted-gold,
Or Stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
At fancie values them: but with true prayers,
That fhall be vp at heauen, and enter there
Ere Sunne rife: prayers from preferued foules,
From falleting Maides, whose mindes are dedicate
To nothing temporall.

Ang. Well: come to me to morrow.

Luc. Goe to: 'tis well away.

Ifab. Heauen keepes your honour fafe.

Ang. Amen.

For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers crofe.

Ifab. At what hower to morrow,
Shall Iattend your Lordshifp?

Ang. At any time 'fore-noone.

Ifab. 'Sue your Honour.

Ang. From thee: even from thy vertue.
What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who fins moft? ha?
Not he: nor doth he tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Doe as the Carrion do's, not as the floweres,
Corrupt with vertuous feafon: Can it be,
That Modelly may more betray our Sence
Then womans lightneffe? haveing waffe ground enough,
Shall we defire to raze the Sanquary
And pitch our euils there? oh fie, fie, fie;
What doft thou? or what art thou Angelo?
Doft thou defire her fowly, for thofe things
That make her good? oh, let her brother live:
Theuees for their robberie have authority,
When Judges ftele themfelves: what, doe I love her,
That I defire to heare her fpeake againe?
And featt vpon her eyes? what 's I dreame on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints doft bait thy hooke: moft dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth good vs on
To finne, in lowing vertue: never could the Strumpet
With all her double vigor, Art, and Nature
Once fir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdus me quite: Euer till now
When men were fond, I fmalld, and wondered how.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke and Prufsof.

Duke. Haile to you, Prufsof, do I thinke you are.

Pro. I am the Prufsof: what's your will, good Frier?

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my blest order,
I come to vifite the affifted spirits
Here in the prifon: doe me the common right
To let me fee them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minifter
Them accordingly.

Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needfull

Enter Iuliit.

Looke here comes one: a Gentilwoman of mine,
Who falling in the flaws of her owne youth,
Hath blifferd her report: She is with child,
And he that got it, fentenc'd: a yong man,
More fit to doe another fuch offence,
Then dye for this.

Duk. When muft he dye?

Pro. As I do thinke to morrow.

I have prouidid for you, flay a while
And you fhall be conducted.

Duk. Repent you (faire one) of the fin you carry?

Iul. I doe; and bear the fame moft patiently.

Duk. Ile teach you how you fhall araign your confcioufe
And try your penitence, if it be found,
Or hollowly put on.

Iul. Ile gladly learne.

Duk. Loue you the man that wrong'd you?

Iul. Yes, as I loue the woman that wrong'd him.

Duk. So then it feemes you moft offence full aet
Was mutually committed.

Iul. Mutuaily.

Duk. Then was your fin of heauier kinde then his.

Iul. I doe confede it, and repent it (Father.)

Du. 'Tis
Measure for Measure.

Duk. 'Tis meet so (daughter) but least you do repent
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is alwayes toward our felues, not heauen,
Showing we would not spare heauen, as we love it,
But as we stand in feare.

Jul. I doe repent me, as it is an euill,
And take the blame with joy.

'Duke. There reft:
Your partner (as I heare) must die to morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him:
Grace goe with you, Benedicte.

Jul. Must die to morrow? oh injurious Loue
That repits me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horrore.

Pro. 'Tis pity of him.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

An. When I would pray, & think, I thinke, and pray
To euerall subieccts: heauen hath my empty words,
Whilft my Invention, hearing not my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabella: heauen in my mouth,
As if I did but onceley his name,
And in my heart the strong and dwelling euill
Of my conception: the state whereon I fludied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Grownse feard, and tedious: yea, my Grauitie
Wherein (let no man heare me) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an idle plume
Which the ayre beats for vaine: oh place, oh forme,
How often doft thou with thy cafe, thy habit
Wrench afe from fooles, and tye the wifer foules
To thy falle feeming? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Deuils horne
'Tis not the Deuils Creft: how now? who's there?
Enter Servant.

Sr. One Isabella, a Sifter, desires acces to you.

Ang. Teach her the way: oh, heauens
Why doe's my blood thus murther to my heart,
Making both it vnable for it selfe,
And difpoftting all my other parts
Of necessary fitnesse?
So play the foolish throngs with one that twounds,
Come all to help him, and so fop the ayre
By which hee should reuie: and even fo
The generall subiection to a wel-wifht King
Quit their owne part, and in obfequious fondnesse
Crowd to his presence, where their vn-taught loue
Muft needs appear offence: how now faire Maid.
Enter Isabella.

Isab. I am come to know your pleafure. (me,
An. That you might know it, wold much better pleafe
Then to demand what 'tis: your Brother cannot live.

Isab. Even fo: heauen keep hee Honor.

Ang. Yet may he live a while: and it may be
As long as you, or 1: yet he must die.

Isab. Vnder your Sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Isab. When, I befeech you: that in his Repriue
(Longer, or shorter) he may be so fitted
That his foule ficken not.

Ang. Ha? fie, thefe filthy viues: It were as good

To pardon him, that hath from nature floene
A man already made, as to remit
Their fawcie sweetines, that do coyne heauens Image
In flamps that are forbid: 'tis all as cafe,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in reftrained meanes
To make a false one.

Ang. 'Tis set downe fo in heauen, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you fo: then I shall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the moft iuft Law
Now tooke your brothers life, and to redeeme him
Gue vp your body to such sweet vncleanesse
As she that he hath flaind?

Isab. Sir, beleewe this.
I had rather glue my body, then my soule.

Ang. I take not of your foule: our compell'd fins
Stand more for number, then for accompl.

Isab. How fay you?

Ang. Nay I le not warrant that: for I can speake Against the thing I fay: Anfwere to this,
I (now the voynce of the recorded Law)
Prone a fentence on your Brothers life,
Might there not be a charitie in finne,
To faue this Brothers life?

Isab. Plead you to doo's,
Ie take it as a perill to my soule,
It is no finne at all, but charitie.

Ang. Plead'd you to doo's, at perill of your soule
Were equall poize of finne, and charitie.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be finne
Heauen let me beare it; you granting of my fult,
If that be fin, Ie make it my Morn'e-prayer,
To haue it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your anfwere.

Ang. Nay, but heare me,
Your fentence pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or feme fo crafty; and that's not good.

Isab. Let be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wildeome wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth taxe it felfe: As thefe blacec Masques
Proclame an en-ield beauty ten times louder
Then beauty cou'd displea: But marke me,
To be recevied plaime, Ie speake more groffe
Your Brother is to dye.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is fo, as it appears,
Accountant to the Law, vpon that paine.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to faue his life
(As I publifhe not that, nor any other,
But in the loffe of queftion) that you, his Sifter,
Finding your felle defir'd of fuch a perfon,
Whole credidt with the Judge, or owne great place,
Could fetch your Brother from the Manacles
Of the all-building-Law: and that there were
No earthly meane to faue him, but that either
You muft lay downe the treaures of your body,
To this suppos'd, or elfe to let him fuffer:
What would you doe?

Isab. As much for my poore Brother, as my felfe;
That is: we were i vnder the tearmes of death,
Th'impreffion of keene whips, I'd weare as Rubies,
And strip my felle to death, as to a bed,
That longing have bin fickle for, ere I'd yeeld
My body vp to thame.

Ang. That
Meafor for Meafor.

Ang. Then muft your brother die.
Ila. Amen, to twer the cheaper way.
Better it were a brother slide at once,
Then that a sister, by redeeming him
Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruefl as the Sentence,
That you have flander'd fo?

Ila. Ignomie in ranfome, and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawfull mercie,
Is nothing kin to foulre redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the Law a tirant,
And rather prou'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment, then a vice.

Ila. Oh pardon me my Lord, it oft fails out
To haue, what we would haue,
We speake not what we meane;
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all fraile.

Ila. Elfe let my brother die,
If not a fedarie but onely be
Owe, and succeed thy weakneffe.

Ang. Nay, women are fraile too.

Ila. I, as the glasse where they view themselves,
Which are as eafe broke as they make formes:
Women? Helpe heauen; men their creation marre
In profiting by them: Nay, calI vs ten times fraile,
For we are foft, as our complixions are,
And credulous to foft prints.

Ang. I thinke it well:
And from this testimonie of your owne sex
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may shake our frames) let me be bold;
I do arrear your words. Be that you are,
That is a woman; if you be more, you're none.
If you be one (as you are well express
By all external warrants) shew it now,
By putting on the deflin'd Lucretie.

Ila. I have no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreate you speake the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceiue I love you.

Ila. My brother did love Isallet,
And you tell me that he shall die for't.

Ang. He shall not Isabell if you give me loue.

Ila. I know your vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler then it is,
To plucke on others.

Ang. Beleeve me on mine Honor,
My words express my purpofe.

Ila. Ha? Little honor, to be much beleu'd,
And moft pernitious purpofe: Seeming, seeming.
I will proclame thee Angeli, looke for't.
Signe me a prefent pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-fretcht throte Ile tell the world aloud
What man thou art.

Ang. Who will beleue thee Isabell?
My vnfold name, th'auteureneffe of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place 1' th' State,
Will fo your accufation ouer-weigh,
That you shall flife in your owne repore,
And smell of calumnie. I haue begun,
And now I glue my fenfuall race, the reine,
Fit thy confent to my sharpe appetitie,
Lay by all niceties, and prolixious blusses.
That banifh what they fce for: Redeeme thy brother,
By yielding vp thy bodie to my will.

Or else he muft not onelie die the death,
But thy vnkindneffe fhall his death draw out
To lingring fufference: Anfwre me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me moft,
Ile prooue a Tirant to him. As for you,
Say what you can; my falle, ore-weighs your true. Exit

Ila. To whom should I complaine? Did I tell this,
Who would beleue me? O perilous mouthes
That bare in them, one ond the felfe fame tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approoue.
Bidding the Law make curfute to their will,
HooKing both right and wrong to th'apetite,
To follow as it draws. Ile to my brother,
Though he hath falne by promtute of the blood,
Yet hath he in him fuch a minde of Honor,
That had he twen tie heads to tender downe
On twentie bloodie blockes, he'd yeeld them vp,
Before his fitter should her bodie floope
To fuch abord pollution.
Then Isabell lue chaftes, and brother die;
"More then our Brother, is our Chaffite.
Ile tell him yet of Angelo's requent,
And fit his minde to death, for his foules ref.

Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Da. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?

Cla. The miserable have no other medicine
But onely hope: I haue hope to liue, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reafon thus with life:
If I do loofe thee, I do loofe a thing
That none but fools would keep: a breath thou art,
Seruile to all the skye-influences,
That doft this habitation where thou keepest
Hourly affid: Meereely, thou art deaths foole,
For him thou labouref by thy flight to fhun,
And yet runeft toward him fill. Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou beart,
Are nureft by bafenefte: Thou'rt by no meanes valiant,
For thou dost feare the foft and tender forke
Of a poore worne: thy belt of reft is fleape,
And that thou oft provokft, yet groffelesse fearft
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy felfe,
For thou exifts on manie a thousand grains
That ifue out of duft. Happie thou art not,
For what thou haft not, fill thou flirul't to get,
And what thou haft forgetit. Thou art not certaine,
For thy complixion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moon: If thou art rich, thou'rt poore,
For like an Affe, whole backe with Ingoe bowes:
Thou beart thy haueie riches but a journie,
And death vnloads thee; Friend haft thou none.
For thine owne bowels which do call thee, fire
The meere effufion of thy proper loines
Do curse the Gowt, Sapego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no sooner. Thou haft nor youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners fleape
Dreaming on both, for all thy bleffed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth begge the almes
Of palied-Elid: and when thou art old, and rich

Thou
Measur for Measure.

Thou hast neither heate, affection, limbe, nor beautie
To make thy riches pleasant: what's yet in this
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid mee thousand deaths; yet death we scare
That makes these oddes, all even.
Cla. I humbly thank you.
To sue to liue, I finde I feake to die,
And seeking death, finde life: Let it come on.
Enter Isabell.
Isab. What hoa? Peace here; Grace, and good company.
Pro. Who's there? Come in, the with defecrs a welcome.
Duke. Deere Sir, ere long Ile viſt you againe,
Cla. Moft holie Sir, I thank you.
Iſab. My busienes is a word or two with Claudio.
Pro. And verie welcom: looke Signor, here's your fitter.
Duke. Prouoſt,a word with you. Pro. As manie as you pleafe.
Duke. Bring them to hear me speake, where I may be conceaſld.'
Cla. Now fitter, what's the comfort?
Iſab. Why,
As all comforts are: moft good, moſt good indeeſe,
Lord Angelo hauing affaires to heauen
Intends you for his swift Ambassador,
Where you ſhall be an everlaſting Leiger;
Therefore your bell appointment make with speed,
To Morrow you fet on.
Cla. Is there no remedie?
Iſab. None,but fuch remedie, as to faue a head
To cleaue a heart in twaine:
Clau. But is there anie?
Iſab. Yet brother, you may liue;
There is a diuellifh mercie in the Ludge,
If you'ſll implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.
Cla. Perpetuall durance?
Iſab. I ſuff, perpetual durance, a restraint
Through all the worlds vaſtitude you had
To a determin'd scope.
Cla. But in what nature?
Iſab. In ſuch a one, as you confeventing too't,
Would barke your honor from that trunque you bear,
And leaue you naked.
Clau. Let me know the point.
Iſab. Oh, I do feare thee Claudio, and I quake,
Least thou a feauorous life ſhould entertaine,
And fix or feuen winters more repife?
Then a perpetuall Honor. Dar't thou die?
The fence of death is moſt in apprehenſion,
And the poore Betele that we treade vpon
In corporallſufferrance, finds a pang as great,
As when a Giant dies.
Cla. Why give you me this thame?
Thinke you I can a revolution fetch
From flowrie tenderneſse? If I muſt die,
I will encounter darkneſse as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.
Iſab. There ſpake my brother: there my fathers graue
Did ſtiller forth a voice. Yes, thou muſt die:
Thou art too noble, to conferue a life
In base appliances. This outward ſainted Deputie,
Whose fetted vifage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i' th' head, and follies doth emmew
As Falcon doth the Fowle, is yet a diuell:
His fhine within being caſt, he would appare
A pond, as deep as hell.
Cla. The prenzie, Angels?
Iſab. Oh 'tis the cunning Liuerie of hell,
The damneſſ bodie to inneſt, and couer
In prenzie garde; doſt thou thinke Claudio,
If I would yeeld him my virginitie
Thou might't be freed?
Cla. Oh heauen, it cannot be.
Iſab. Yes, he would giu't thee from this rank offence
So to offend him till. This night's the time
That I ſhould do what I abhorre to name,
Or else thou dieſt to morrow.
Clau. Thou shalt not do't.
Iſab. O, were it but my life,
I'de throw it downe for your deluercer
As frankly as a pin.
Clau. Thankes deere Isabell.
Iſab. Be readie Claudio, for your death to morrow.
Cla. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thou can make him bite the Law by th'noſe,
When he would force it? Sure it is no finne,
Or of the deadly feuen it is the leaſt.
Cla. Which is the leaſt?
Cla. If it were damnable, he being fo wife,
Why would he for the momentarie tricke
Be perdurable finde? Oh Isabell.
Iſab. What faies my brother?
Cla. Death is a fearfult thing.
Iſab. And damned life, a hatefull.
Cla. I, but to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obſtruction, and to rot,
This fenſible warme motion, to become
A kneaded clof; And the delighted spirit
To bath in ferie floods, or to recide
In thrilling Region of thicke-ribbed Ice,
To be imprifon'd in the viewleſſe windes
And blowne with reſtelleſſe violence round about
The pendant world: or to be worfe then worfe
Of thios, that lawleſſe and incertaine thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The waryefh, and moft loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, periury, and imprifonment
Can lay on nature, is a Paradise
To what we feare of death.
Iſab. Alas, alas.
Cla. Sweet Sister, let me liue.
What finne you do, to faue a brothers life,
Nature displeas with the deede fo farre,
That it becomes a vertue.
Iſab. Oh you beaſt,
Oh faithleffe Coward, oh dishonest wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice?
It's not a kind of Incen, to take life
From thine owne fitter's thame? What should I thinke, Heuen shield my Mother plaid my Father faire:
For such a warped flip of wilderneſse
Nere iff'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Die, perifh: Might but my bending dawne
Repeeue thee from thy fate, it ſhould proceede.
Ile pray a thoufand prayers for thy death,
No word to faue thee.
Cla. Nay hearre me Isabell.
Iſab. Oh fie, fie, fie;
Thy finn's not accidentall, but a Trade;
Mercie
Mercy to thee would prove it: felse a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou diest quickly.
Cia. Oh hear we statea.
Duk. Vouchsafe a word, yong fitter, but one word.
Jfa. What is your Will.
Duk. Might you dispence with your leyfure, I would by and by have some speech with you; the satisfacion I would require, is likewise your owne benefit.
Jfa. I have no superfluous leyfure, my tray must be stolen out of other affaires: but I will attend you a while.
Duk. Son, I have ouer-heard what hath past between you & your fitter. Angelo had neuer the purpole to corrupt her; onely he hath made an afay of her vertue, to praftice his judgement with the disposition of natures. She (hauing the truth of honour in her) hath made him that gracious deniell, which he is most glad to receive: I am Confellor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; there fore prepare your felse to death: do not fatisfye your re foulution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you must die, goe to your knees, and make ready.
Cia. If I ask my fitter pardon, I am for out of love with life, that I will fue to be rid of it.
Duke. Hold you there: farewell: Proutb, a word with you.
Pro. What's your will (father?)
Duk. That now that you are come, you will be gone: leave me a while with the Maid, my minde promisses with my habit, no loffe shall touch her by my company.
Pro. In good time.
Exit. Duk. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good: the goodnes that is cheape in beauty, makes beauty briefe in goodness; but grace being the foule of your complexion, shall kepe the body of it euer faire: the affault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conuius to my vnderstanding; and but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo: how will you doe to content this Substitute, and to faue your Brother?
Ifab. I am now going to refolute him: I had rather my brother die by the Law, then my fonne should be unlawfullie borne. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceiv'd in Angelo: if euery be returne, and I can fpeak to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or discover his gouernment.
Duke. That shal not be much amisse: yet, as the matter now flants, he will auoid your accuation: he made triall of you onelie. Therefore faften your eare on my advisings, to the loue I haue in doing good; a remedie prefents it felse. I doe make my felse beleue that you may moft vrighteously do a poor wronged Lady a meri ted benefit; redeem your brother from thengery Law; doe no flaue to your owne gracious perfon, and much pleafe the abfent Duke, if peraduenture he shall ouer returne to hauing of this businesse.
Ifab. Let me hear you fpeak fairether; I haue fpirit to do any thing that appeares not fowle in the truth of my fpirit.
Duke. Vertue is bold, and goodes neuer fearfull: Haue you not heard fpeeke of Mariana the fitter of Fredericke the great Souldier, who mifcarried at Sea?
Jfa. I haue heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name.
Duke. Shee should this Angelo haue married: was af fanced to her oath, and the nuptiall appointed; betweene which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnities, her brother Fredericke was wrackt at Sea, hauing in that perished vsefull, the dowry of his fitter: but marke how beatifull this befell to the poore Gentlewoman, there the loft a noble and renowned brother, in his loue toward her, euery moft kinde and natural: with him the portion and finew of her fortune, her marriage dowry: with both, her combynate-husband, this well-seeing Angelo.
Ifab. Can this be fo? did Angelo fo leave her?
Duke. Left her in her teares, & dried not one of them with his comfort: fwalowed, his vowes whole, pretending in her, difcoueries of dishonor: in fewe, because he did vntoward her on her owne lentionment, which she yet weares for his fake: and he, a marble to her teares, is washed with them, but relents not.
Ifab. What a meriet were it in death to take this poore maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man live? But how out of this can thee a uale?
Duke. It is a rupture that you may easely heal: and the cure of it not onely Satan's your brother, but keepes you from dishonor in doing it.
Ifab. Shew me how (good Father.)
Duk. This fore-named Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his vnuft vnkindenesse (that in all reaon shoule have quenched her loue) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more violent and vnruely: Goe you to Angelo, anfwere his requir ing with a plaifible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: onely referre your felse to this advantadge; for, that your tray with him may not be long: that the time may have all shadow, and silence in it: and the place anfwered to convenience: this being granted in couerse, and now folows all: wee shall aduise this wronged maid to feeld vp your appoitment, goe in your place: if the encounter acknowledge it felse hearer, it may compell him to her recompence; and heere, by this is your brother faued, your honor vntainted, the poore Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt Deputed sealed. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if yet he well to carry this as you may, the doublenes of the benefit defends the deceit from reproofs. What thinke you of it?
Ifab. The image of it gives me content already, and I truft it will grow to a moft prosperous perfecution.
Duk. It lies much in your holding vp: hafte you speedily to Angelo, if for this night he intend you to his bed, give him promife of satisfacion: I will prefently to S. Lukes, there at the moated-Grange recides this dete cted Mariana; at that place call vpou me, and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.
Ifab. I thank you for this comfort: fare youwell good father.
Exit.
Enter Elbow, Cloues, Officers.
Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and fell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drinke browne & white baffard.
Duk. Of heauens, what fluffe is here.
Clou. Twas neuer merry world since of two vitsuries the merriet was put downe, and the worcer allow'd by order of Law. So a far'd goowe to keene him warme; and fard with Foxe and Lamb-skins too, to signifie, that craft being richer then Innocency, flands for the facing.
Elb. Comie your way fir: 'bleffe you good Father Frier.
Duk. And you good Brother Father; what offence hath this man made you, Sir?
Elb. Marry
Elb. Marry Sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Thieves too Sir: for wee haue found upon him, a strange Pick-lock, which we haue sent to the Deputie.
Duke. Fie, sirrah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd, The evil that thou caufest to be done, That is thy meanes to live. Do thou but thinke
What tis to cram a maw, or cloath a backe
From such a filthie vice: say to thy felfe,
From their abominable and beaflly touches
I drink, I eate away my felfe, and liue:
Canft thou beleue thy liuing is a life,
So flankingly depending? Go mend, go mend.
Clo. Indeed, it do's flinke in fome fort, Sir:
But yet Sir I would proue.
Duke. Nay, if the dullue haue given thee proofs for fink Thou wilt proue his take. Take him to prison Officer.
Correftion, and Inftruction muft both worke
Ere this rude beaufe will profit.
Elb. He muft before the Deputy Sir, he ha's given him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-mater: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he was as good go a mile on his errand.
Duke. That we were all, as fome would feeme to bee
From our faults, as faults from feeming free.
Enter Lucio.
Elb. His necke will come to your waft, a Cord fir.
Clo. I fpy comfort, I cry baile: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.
Luc. How now noble Pompeo? What, at the wheels of Caesar? Art thou led in triumph? Is there none of Pigmations Images newly made woman to bee had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracfting clurch'd? What reply? Ha? What falt thou to this Tune, Matter, and Method? Is't not drown'd? i'th laft raine? Ha? What falt thou Trot? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the vway? Is it fad, and few words? Or how? The tricke of it?
Duke. Still thus, and thus: fill vworfe?
Luc. How doth my deere Moriff, thy Miftris? Procures the flill? Ha?
Clo. Troth fir, fhee hath eaten vp all her beeves, and she is her felfe in the tub.
Luc. Why tis good: It is the right of it: it muft be fo.
Event your teeth Whore, and your pouders Baud, an vnhun'd confequence, it muft be fo.
Art going to prison Pompeo?
Clo. Yes faith fir.
Luc. Why 'tis not amiffe Pompeo: farewell: goo fay
I fent thee thether: for debt Pompeo? Or how?
Elb. For being a baud, for being a baud.
Luc. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonmefl be the due of a baud, why 'tis his right. Baud is he do-blede, and of antiquity too: Baud borne. Farwell good Pompeo! Commend me to the prison Pompeo, you will turne good husband now Pompeo, you vvil keep the house.
Clo. I hope Sir, your good Worship wil be my baile?
Luc. No indeed vvil I not Pompeo, it is not the wear:
I will pray (Pompey) to encrease your bondage if you take it not patientely: Why, your mettle is the more:
Adieu truffie Pompeo.
Bliffe you Frar.
'Duke. And you.
Luc. Do's Bridget paint flill, Pompeo? Ha?
Elb. Come your waies fir, come.
Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?
Luc. Then Pompeo, nor now: what newes abroad Frier or What newes?
Elb. Come your waies fir, come.
Luc. Go to kennell (Pompey) goe:
What newes Frier of the Duke?
Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?
Luc. Some fay he is with the Emperor of Ruffia: other fome, he is in Rome: but where is he think you?
Duke. I know not where: but wherefoever, I with him well.
Luc. It was a mad fantastical tricke of him to fleale from the State, and vflupe the beggerie hee was never borne to: Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his abence: he puts transgression too.
Duke. He do's well isn't.
Luc. A little more lenitie to Lecherie would doe no harme in him: Something too crabb'd that way, Frier.
Duke. It is too general a vice, and feueritie muft cure it.
Luc. Yes in good footh, the vice is of a great kindred;
It is vveil allied, but it is impoffible to extirpe it quite,
Frier till eating and drinking be put downe. They fay this Angelo was not made by Man and Woman, after this downe-right vway of Creation: is it true, think ye?
Duke. How fhould he be made then?
Luc. Some report, a Sea-maidSpawn'd him. Some, that he was begot betweene two Stock-fishes. But it is certain, that when he makes water, his Vrine is congenal'd ice, that I know to bee true: and he is a motion generative, that's infallible.
Duke. You are pleafant fir, and speake apace.
Luc. Why, what a ruthleffe thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a Cod-peece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is abften have done this?
Ere he vwould have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred Baffards, he vwould haue paide for the Nurfing a thousand. He had some feeling of the fport, he knew the feruice, and that inftructed him to mercie.
Duke. I neuer heard the abfenl Duke much defected for Women, he was not enclin'd that vway.
Luc. Oh Sir, you are deci'd.
Duke. Tis not poiffible.
Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty:
and his vie was, to put a ducket in her Clack-dift; the Duke had Crochets in him. Hee would be drunke too, that let me informe you.
Luc. Sir, I was an inward of his: a fhee fellow vvas the Duke, and I beleue I know the caufe of his vwithdrawings.
Duke. What (I prethee) might be the caufe?
Luc. No, pardon: 'Tis a fecret must bee lockett within the teeth and the lippes: but this I can let you understand, the greater file of the fubiek held the Duke to be vife.
Duke. Wife? Why no quefion but he was.
Luc. A very superficial, ignorant, vnweighing fellow Duke. Either this is Enuite in you, Folly, or miftaking: The very fream of his life, and the bufineffe he hath helmed, muft vppon a warranted neede, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his owne bringings forth, and hee shall appear to the enious, a Scholler, a Statefman, and a Soldier: therefore you speake vnskilfully: or, if your knowledge bee more, it is much darkned in your malice.

G Luc.
Luc. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Loue talkes with better knowledge, & knowledge with dearer loue.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly beleue that, since you know not what you speake. But if euer the Duke returne (as our prayers are he may) let mee desire you to make your answer before him : if it bee honest you haue spake, you haue courage to maintaine it ; I am bound to call vppon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duke. He shall know you better Sir, if I may liue to report you.

Luc. I feare you not.

Duke. O, you hope the Duke will returne no more : or you imagine me vnurturfull an opposite : but indeed I can doe you little harme : You'll for-swear me this againe?

Luc. Ile be hang'd first: Thou art deciu'd in mee Friar. But no more of this: Canst thou tell if Claudio die to morrow, or no?

Duke. Why should he die Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Tanne-dish : I would the Duke we take of were return'd againe: this vnegenitur'd, Agent will vn-people the Province with Continencins. Sparrowes must not build in his houfe- ceues, because they are lecherous: The Duke yet would haue darke deeds darkele anwered, hee would never bring them to light : would hee were return'd. Marrie this Claudio is condemned for vntrussing.Farwell good Friar, I prethee pray for me : The Duke (I say to thee againe) would eate Mutton on Fridais. He's now paft it, yet (and I say to thee) hee would montn with a beg- gar, though the smelt browne-bread and Garlick : say that I faid so: Farewell. Exit.

Duke. No might, nor greatnesse in mortality Can censure faie : Back-wounding calumnie The whitest vertue strikes. What King fo strong, Can tie the gall vp in the flanderous tong ? But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Proues, and Benvol.

Efc. Go, away with her to prision.

Benvol. Good my Lord be good to mee, your Honor is accounted a mercifull man : good my Lord.

Efc. Double, and trebble admonition, and still for- feite in the fame kinde? This would make mercy fwear and play the Tirant.

Pro. A Bawd of eleueen yeares continuance, may it please your Honor.

Benvol. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information against mee, Mistris Kate Kepte-downe was with childe by him in the Dukes time, he promis'd her marriage : his Childe is yeere and a quarter olde come Philip and Ja- cob : I haue kept it my selfe; and fee how hee goes about to abuse me.

Efc. That fellow is a fellow of much License : Let him be call'd before vs. Away with her to prision: Goe too, no more words. Prouoy, my Brother Angelo will not be alter'd, Claudio must die to morrow: Let him be furnisht with Diuines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wroght by my pite, it should not be fo with him.

Pro. So please you, this Friar hath beene with him, and advis'd him for the entertenent of death.

Efc. Good'even, good Father.

Duke. Bliffe, and goodnesse on you.

Efc. Of wherence are you?

Duke. Not of this Countrie, though my chance is now To vfe it for my time: I am a brother

Of gracious Order, late come from the Sea,

In speciall businesse from his Holinesse.

Efc. What news abroad?th World?

Duke. None, but that there is so great a Feauor on goodnesse, that the diffolution of it must cure it. No-velle is onely in requesst, and as it is as dangerous to be aged in any kinde of course, as it is vertuous to be con-dant in any vndertaking. There is scarce truth enough alise to make Societies secure, but Securitie enough to make Fellowships accurrt: Much vpon this riddle runs the wisdomse of the world: This news is old enough, yet it is euery daies newes. I pray you Sir, of what dif-
position was the Duke?

Efc. One, that above all other strifes,

Contended especially to know himselfe.

Duke. What pleasure was he gluen to?

Efc. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, then merriie at anie thing which profeft to make him releice.

A Gentleman of all temperance. But leave wee him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperus, &

let me desire to know, how you finde Claudio prepar'd?

I am made to vnderstand, that you have lent him visit-
a.

Duke. He profefts to have received no finisher meature from his Iudge, but most willingly humbles himselfe to the determination of Iustice: yet had he framed to himselfe (by the instruction of his frailty) manie decaying promises of life, which I (by my good leasure) have discredited to him, and now is he resolu'd to die.

Efc. You have paid the heavens your Function, and the prisioner the verie debt of your Calling. I have la-bour'd for the poore Gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modelste, but my brother-Iustice haue I found fo fevere, that he hath for'd me to tell him, hee is indeed Iustice.

Duke. If his owne life,

Anwered the finisher of his proceeding,

It shall become him well : wherein if he chance to faile
he hath fentenc'd himselfe.

Efc. I am going to visit the prisioner, Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you.

He who the sword of Heauen will beare,

Should be as holy, as seueare:

Patterne in himselfe to know,

Grace to fland, and Vertue go:

More, nor leffe to others paying,

Then by felfe-offences weighing.

Shame to him, whoe cruel stricking,

Kils for faults of his owne liking:

Twice trebble flame on Angello,

To vveede my vice, and let his grow.

Oh, what may Man within him hide,

Though Angello on the outward fide?

How may likenesse made in crimes,

Making pradifie on the Times,

To draw with yde Spiders string,

Must ponderous and subftantiall things?

Craft againft vice, I must apply.

With Angello to night shall lye

His old betrathed (but defpised:)

So difguise shall by th' undisclosed

Pay with falsdom, falle exacting,

And performe an olde contracting.
Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Mariana, and Boy singing.

Song.

Take, oh, take those lips away,
that so sweetly were forewarn'd,
And take the brake of day,
lights that doe mislead the Morn;
But my kisst bring againe, bring againe,
Scales of love, but steal'd in vain, steal'd in vain.

Enter Duke.

Mar. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away,
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often fill'd my bewailing discontent.
I cry you mercy, Sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so much call.
Let me excuse me, and beleue me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duk. Tis good; though Mufick oft hath such a charm
To make bad, good; and good prouoke to harme.
I pray you tell me, hath any body enquire'd for mee here to day;
much upon this time have I promis'd here to meete.

Mar. You have not bin enquir'd after: I have fitt here all day.

Enter Isabella.

Duk. I doe constantly beleue you: the time is come even now. I shall craue your forbearance alltie, may be
I will call vpou you anon for some advantage to your selfe.

Mar. I am always bound to you. Exit.

Duk. Very well met, and well come:
What is the newes from this good Deputie?

Isab. He hath a Garden circummur'd with Brickes,
Whose westerne side is with a Vineyard back't;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key:
This other doth command a little doore,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leads,
There have I made my promis'ee, vpon the Heuy middle of the night, to call vpou him.

Duk. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?
Isab. I haue tane a due, and wary note vpou't,
With whispering, and most guiltie diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice ore.

Duk. Are there no other tokens
Betwene you 'greed, concerning her obseruation?

Isab. No: none but onely a repaire ith darke,
And that I haue poffest him, my motl stay
Can be but briefe: for I haue made him know,
I haue a Seruant comes with me along
That fakes vpon me; whose perswaision is,
I come about my Brother.

Duk. 'Tis well borne vp.
I haue not yet made knowne to Mariana
Enter Mariana.

A word of this: what haue, within; come forth,
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
She comes to doe you good.

Isab. I doe defer the like.

Duk. Do you perswaide your selfe that I respect you?

Mar. Good Frier, I know you do, and haue found it.
Duke. Take then this your companion by the hand
Who hath a florie readie for your care:
I shall attend your leisure, but make haue
The vaporous night approaches.
Mar. Wilt pleafe you walke aside.

Exit.

Duke. Oh Place, and greatness: millions of false eies
Are fucte vpon thee: volumes of report
Run with these faltc, and most contrarious Quest:
Vpon thy doinges: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dreame,
And racke thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed?
Enter Mariana and Isabella.

Isab. Shee'll take the enterprize vpou her father,
If you aduise it.

Duk. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.
Isab. Little have you to say
When you depart from him, but soft and low,
Remember now my brother.

Mar. Fear me not.

Duk. Nor gentle daughter, fear you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contrat:
To bring you thus together'tis no finne,
Sith that the Jultice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let vs goe,
Our Corne's to reape, for yet our Tithes to loww. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prouost and Cloven.

Pro. Come hither Sirra; can you cut off a mans head?
Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can:
But if he be a married man, he's his wifes head,
And I can never cut off a womens head.

Pro. Come sir, leauve me your fnauchtes, and yeeld mee a direct answere. To morrow morning are to die Claunia and Barnardine: heere is in our prifon a common execu-cutioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to affift him, it shall redeeme you from your Gyues: if not, you shall haue your full time of imprisonment, and your deliuerance with an vnpitied whipping:
for you have beene a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I have beene an vnlawfull bawd, time out of minde, but yet I will bee content to be a lawfull hangman: I would bee glad to receive some instrucion from my fellow partner.

Pro. What haas, Aberfon: where's Aberfon there?
Enter Aberfon.

Abb. Doe you call Sir?

Pro. Sirra, here's a fellow will help you to morrow in your execution; if you thinke it meet, compound with him by the yeree, and let him abide here with you, if not, ve him for the preuent, and difmisse him, hee cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath beene a Bawd.

Abb. A Bawd Sir? fie vpon him, he will difcredit our myfterie.

Pro. Go to Sir, you waigh equallie: a feather will turne the Scale.

Clo. Pray Sir, by your good fador: for surely Sir, a good fador you haue, but that you haue a hanging look:
Doe you call Sir, your occupation a Myfterie?

Abb. 1,

G 2
Measure for Measure.

Abb. I Sir, a Misterie.

Clo. Painting Sir, I have heard say, is a Misterie; and your Whores sir, being members of my occupation, v- sing painting, do prowe my Occupation, a Misterie: but what Misterie there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abb. Sir, it is a Misterie.

Clo. Prooft.

Abb. Euerie true mans apparrel fits your Theefe.

Clo. If it be too little for your theefe, your true man thinks it bigge enough. If it bee too bigge for your Theefe, your Theefe thinks it little enough: So euerie true mans apparrel fits your Theefe.

Enter Prouooff.

Pro. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will ferue him: For I do finde your Hang- man is a more penitent Trade then your Bawd: he doth ofter ask fouerineefee.

Pro. You sirrah, prouide your blocke and your Axe to morrow, soure a clocke.

Abb. Come on (Bawd) I will infruct thee in my Trade: follow.

Clo. I do desire to learne sir: and I hope, if you have occasion to vfe me for your owne turne, you shall finde me yere. For truly sir, for your kindneffe, I owe you a good turne.

Exit

Pro. Call hether Barnardine and Claudio:

Th'one has my piete: not a lot the other, Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Looke, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death, 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow Thou must be made immortall. Where's Barnardine?

Cla. As faf lock'd vp in sleepe, as guiltleffe labour, When it lies fafely in the Travellers bones, He will not wake.

Pro. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare your selfe. But harke, what noife? Heauen give your spirits comfort: by, and by, I hope it is some pardon, or reprove

For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome Father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The beft, and wholomft spirits of the night, Inuellop you, good Prouooff: who call'd heere of late? Pro. None since the Curpewh rung.

Duke. Not Iſabel?

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then e're be long.

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?

'Duke. There's fome in hope.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputie.

Duke. Not fo, not fo: his life is paralied

Even with the froke and line of his great Luftice: He doth with boile abifheme fuldue

That in himfelle, which he fperres on his powre To qualifie in others: were he meaf'd with that Which he correfets, then were he tirannous, But this being fo, he's iuft. Now are they come. This is a gentle Prouooff, fildome when

The feedled Caoler is the friend of men: How now? what noife? That spirit's poifeft with haft, That wounds th'vning Puterne with these frokes.

Pro. There he muft obey untill the Officer

Afife to let him in: he is call'd vp.

Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet?

But he muft die to morrow?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duke. As neere the dawning Prouooff, as it is,

You shall heare more ere Morninge.

Pro. Happily

You something know: yet I beleue there comes No countermand: no such example haue we,

Befides, vpon the verie fije of Iuftice,

Lord Angelo hath to the publicke eare

Profeft the contrarie.

Enter a Messenger.

Duke. This is his Lords man.

Pro. And heere comes Claudio's pardon.

Meff. My Lord hath fent you this note,

And by mee this further charge;

That you swerve not from the smallift Article of it,

Neither in time, matter, or other circumftance.

Good morrow: for as I take it, it is almoft day.

Pro. I fhall obey him.

Duke. This is his Pardon purchas'd by fuch fin

For which the Pardoner himfelfe is in:

Hence hath offence his quicke celerlde,

When it is borne in high Authority.

When Vice makes Mercie; Mercie's fo extended,

That for the faults loue, is th'offender friended.

Now Sir, what newes?

Pro. I told you:

Lord Angelo (be-like) thinking me remiffe

In mine Office, awakens mee

With this vnwonted putting on, methinks strangely:

For he hath not vs'd it before.

Duke. Pray you let's heare.

The Letter.

What fay you may heere to the contrary, let Claudio be ex- ecuted by fount of the clocke, and in the aftronoeo Barnar- dine: For my better satisfactiun, let mee baue Claudio head fent me by fue. Let this be delyuer'd with a thought that more depends on it, then we muft yet deliever. This fails not to doe your Office, as you will anfwere it at your perill.

What fay you to this Sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be execut'd in th'afternoone?

Pro. A Bohemian borne: But here nurft vp & bred, One that is a prisoner nine yeeres old.

Duke. How came it, that the abfent Duke had not either deliever'd him to his libertie, or executed him? I have heard it was euery man's duty to do fo.

Pro. His friends flill wrought Repeares for him: And indeed his fift till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtfull profe.

Duke. It is now apparent?

Pro. Mofl manifeft, and not denied by himfelfe.

Duke. Hath he borne himfelfe penitently in prison?

How femees he to be touch'd?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dread- fully, but as a drunken sleepe, careleffe, wreakeleffe, and fereeleffe of what's paft, prefent, or to come: infenfible of mortality, and dearefully mortall.

Duke. He wants aduice.

Pro. He will heare none: he hath euermore had the li- berty of the prifon: gue him leaue to ecape hence, he would not. Drunke many times a day, if not many days entirely drunke. We have verie oft awak'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and shew'd him a seeming war- rant for it, it hath not mouded him at all.

Duke.
Measure for Meaure.

"Duke. More of him anon: There is written in your brow Provoost, honesty and constancie; if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me: but in the boldnes of my cunning, I will lay my felle in hazard: Claudio, whom heere you haue warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, then Angelo who hath sentenced him. To make you understand this in a manifester effect, I crave but foure daies repfit: for the which, you are to do me both a preuent, and a dangerous courtefe.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what?
Duke. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alacke, how may I do it? Having the hour limited, and an expresse command, ynder penaltie, to deliuer his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my cafe as Claudio's, to croffe this in the smallesi.

Duke. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you, if my inftructions may be your guide, Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, And his head borne to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath seene them both, And will discouer the fauour.

Duke. Oh, death's a great dilguiser, and you may adde to it: Shame the head, and tie the beard, and say it was the defire of the penfent to be so bar'd before his death: you know the course is common. If any thing fall to you vpon this, more then thankes and good fortune, by the Saint whom I professe, I will plead againft it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good Father, it is against my oath.
Duke. Were you sworne to the Duke, or to the De-putie?
Pro. To him, and to his Substitutes.

Duke. You will thinkke you have made no offence, if the Duke auouch the luflice of your dealing?
Pro. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a refemb lance, but a certainty; yet since I fee you fearfull, that neither my coate, integritie, nor perfwaion, can with eafe attempt you, I will go further then I meant, to plucke all feares out of you. Lookke you Sir, heere is the hand and Seale of the Duke: you know the Charra[c]ter I doubt not, and the Signet is not strange to you?

Pro. I know them both.

Duke. The Contents with this, is the returne of the Duke; you shall anon ouer-reade it at your plesaure: where you shall finde within these two daies, he will be heere. This is a thing that Angeloknowes not, for hee this very day receiues letters of strange tenor, perchaunce of the Dukes death, perchaunce entering into some Mo[n]atterie, but by chance nothing of what is writ.Lookke, th'vndolding Starre calleth vp the Shepherd; but put your felle into amazement, how these things should be; all difficulties are but easie when they are knowne. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardines head: I will give him a present thirft, and aduise him for a better place. Yet you are amase'd, but this shal be absolutely reoluue you: Came away, it is almost cleere dawnne. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Closerie.

Clo. I am as well acquainted heere, as I was in our house of profission: one would think it were Mifbris

Out-rons owne house, for heere be manie of her old Cufomers. First, here's yong Mr. Raff, hee's in for a commodite of browne paper, and olde Ginger, nine score and feventeene pounds, of which hee made fиеe Markes readie money: marrie then, Ginger was not much in reques, for the olde Women were all dead. Then is there heere one Mr. Copr, at the suite of Mafter Three-Pile the Mercer, for some faire suites of Peacoch-colord Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then haue vve heere, yong Dimies, and yong Mr. Deepevowes, and Mr. Copperpue[re], and Mr. Statre-Lahcey the Raper and dagger man, and yong Drop-beere that kild little Pudding, and Mr. Fortsight the Tilter, and braue Mr. Scoorie the great Traveller, and Wilde Half-canne that flabb'd Pots, and I thinkke fortie more, all great doers in our Trade, and are now for the Lords fake.

Enter Abborson.
Abb. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hether.
Clo. Mr. Barnardine, you must rife and be hang'd,
Mr. Barnardine.
Abb. What hoa Barnardine.
Barnardine within.
Bar. A pox o'your throats: who makes that noyse there? What are you?
Clo. Your friends Sir, the Hangman:
You must be so good Sir to rife, and be put to death.
Bar. Away you Rogues, away, I am sleepe.
Abb. Tell him he must awake,
And that quickly too.
Clo. Pray Maister Barnardine, awake till you are ex-ecuted, and sleepe afterwards.
Abb. Go in to him, and fetch him out.
Clo. He is comming Sir, he is comming: I heare his Straw ruffle.

Enter Barnardine.
Abb. Is the Axe vpon the blocke, sirrah?
Clo. Verie readie Sir.
Bar. How now Abborson?
What's the newes with you?
Abb. Truly Sir, I would deire you to clap into your prayers: for looke you, the Warrants come.
Bar. You Rogue, I haue bin drinking all night,
I am not fitted for't.
Clo. Oh, the better Sir: for he that drinks all night, and is hanged becommes in the morning, may sleepe the founder all the next day.

Enter Duke.
Abb. Looke you Sir, heere comes your ghastly Father: do we left now thinke you?
Duke. Sir, Induced by my charitie, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to aduise you, Comfort you, and pray with you.
Bar. Friar, not I: I haue bin drinking hard all night, and I will haue more time to prepare mee, or they shall beat out my brains with billets: I will not confent to die this day, that's certaine.
Duke. Oh sir, you must: and therefore I befeech you Looke forward on the iournie you shall go.
Bar. I fware I will not die to day for anie mans per-Ifasion.
Abb. But heare you:
Bar. Nor a word: if you haue anie thing to say to me, come to my Ward: for thence will not I to day.

Enter Prousfl.
Duke. Vnfit to live, or die: oh grauell heart.

G 3

After
After him (Fellowes) bring him to the blocke.

_Pro. Now Sir, how do you finde the prisoner?

_Duke. A creature vnpre-pard, vnmeet for death, And to transport him in the minde he is, Were damnable.

_Pro. Heere in the prifon, Father,

There died this morning of a crull Feauor, One Ragazine, a moft notorious Pirate, A man of Claudio's yeares : his beard, and head Iuft of his colour. What if we do omit This Reprobate, til he were wel enclin'd, And satisfie the Deputie with the vifage Of Ragazine, more like to Claudio?

_Duke. Oh, 'tis an accident that heauen prouides : Dispatch it prefently, the houre draws on Prefift by Angelo : See this be done, And fent according to command, whiles I Perfwade this rude wretch willingly to die. _Pro. This fhall be done (good Father) prefently : But Barnardine must die this afternoone, And how fhall we continue Claudio, To fave me from the danger that might come, If he were knowne alie?

_Duke. Let this be done, Put them in fecret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio, Ere twice the Sun hath made his iournall greeting To yond generation, you fhall finde Your fafetie manifefte.

_Pro. I am your free dependant.

_Duke. Quicke, dispatch, and fend the head to Angelo,
Now wil I write Letters to ~Angelo,
(Thro' the Prouofh he fhall bear them) whose contents Shal witneffe to him I am neere at home : And that by great Iniuions I am bound To enter publicke : him Ile defire To meet me at the cofecrated Fount, A League below the Citie : and from thence, By cold gradation, and weale-ballanc'd forme. We fhall proceed with Angelo.

Enter Prouofh.

_Pro. Heere is the head, Ile carry it my felfe.

_Duke. Conneint is it : Make a fift returne, For I would commune with you of fuch things, That want no care but yours.

_Pro. Ile make all speede.

_Exit. Iftbell within.

_Ift. Peace hoa, be heere.

_Duke. The tongue of Iftbell. She's come to know, If yet her brothers pardon be come hither : But I will keepe her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of elfpaine, When it is leaft expected.

Enter Iftbella.

_Ift. Hoa, by your leave.

_Duke. Good morning to you, faire, and gracious daughter.

_Ift. The better guien me by fo holy a man, Hath yet the Deputie fent my brothers pardon?

_Duke. He hath releafed him, Iftbell, from the world, His head is off, and fent to Angelo.

_Ift. Nay, but it is not fo.

_Duke. It is no other,
Shew your wifedom daughter in your clofe patience.

_Ift. Oh, I wil to him, and plucke out his eies.

_Duke. You fhall not be admitted to his fight.

_Ift. Unhappy Claudio, wretcheft Iftbell,

Injuious world, moft dammed Iftabella.

_Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a lot, Forbeare it therefore, give your caufe to heauen, Marke what I say, which you fhall finde By every fillable a faithful veritie.

The Duke comes home to morrow : nay drie your eyes, One of our Couen, and his Confessor Giveth me this incantation : already he hath caried Notice to Efcalus and Iftabella,

Who do prepare to meete him at the gates, (done,
There to give vp their powre : if you can pace your wif- In that good path that I would with it go, And you fhall have your bosome on this wretch, Grace of the Duke, revenges to your heart, And general Honor.

_Ift. I am direcfted by you.

_Duke. This Letter then to Friar Peter give,
'Tis that he lent me of the Dukes returne : Say, by this token, I defire his companie At Marianna's howe to night. Her caufe, and yours Ile perfec'h him withall, and he fhall bring you Before the Duke ; and to the head of Angelo Accufe him home and home. For my poore felfe, I am combined by a facred Vow, And fhall be abfent. Wend you with this Letter : Command thofe fretting waters from your eies With a light heart ; truth not my holine Order If I peruey your courfe : whole heere?

Enter Lucius.

_Luc. Good 'euen;

_Frier, where's the Prouofh?

_Duke. Not within Sir.

_Luc. Oh prettie Iftabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes fo red : thou must be patient ; I am faine to dine and fup with water and bran : I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitful Meale would fet mee too't : but they fay the Duke will be heere to Morrow. By my troth Iftabella I lou'd thy brother, if the olde fantatical Duke of darke corners had bene at home, he had liued.

_Duke. Sir, the Duke is maruisous little beholding to your reports, but the beh is, he lies not in them.

_Luc. Friar, thou knoweft not the Duke fo wel as I do : he's a better woodman then thou tak'st him for.

_Well. You'll anfwer this one day. Fare ye well.

_Luc. Nay tarrie, Ile go along with thee,
I can tel thee pretty tales of the Duke.

_Duke. You have told me too many of him already fir if they be true : if not true, none were enough.

_Lucio. I was once before him for getting a Wench with childe.

_Duke. Did you fish a thing?

_Luc. Yes marrie did I; but I was faine to forswear it, They would elfe have married me to the rotten Medler.

_Duke. Sir your company is fairener then honeft, reft you well.

_Lucio. By my troth Ile go with thee to the lanes end: if baudy talke offend you, we'el haue very little of it : may Friar, I am a kind of Burre, I fiall tlicker.

Exit. Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo & Efcalus.

_Efc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath difcouch'd other.
Measure for Measure.

An. In most vneuen and disaffected manner, his actions how much like to madness, pray heaven his wisdome bee not tainted: and why meet him at the gates and relieuer on rau thorities there?

Efc. I giefe not.

Ang. And why shoulde wee proclaime it in an houre before his entring, that if any craue redresse of injustice, they shoulde exhibit their petitions in the street?

Efc. He shewes his reason for that: to have a dispatch of Complaints, and to deliver vs from deuices heere after, which shall then haue no power to fland against vs.

Ang. Well: I beseech you let it bee proclaem'd be times I'h th'morne, Ie call you at your howe: gue notice to such men of fort, and suite as are to meete him.

Efc. I shall sir: fareyouwell.

Ang. Good night.

This decea vnshapes me quite, makes me vnpregnant

And dull to all proceedings. A deflowered maid,

And by an eminient body, that enforc'd
The Law against it? But that her tender shame
Will not proclaime against her maiden losse,
How might the tongue me? yet reason dares her no,
For my Authority beares of a credent bulke,
That no particular scandall once can touch
But it confounds the breather. He shoulde have li'd,
Saue that his riotous youth with dangerous fenc
Might in the times to come haue ta'ne renuege
By fo receiving a diuador'h life
With ranfome of fuch shame: would yet he had liued.
Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right, we would and we would not.

Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Duke and Frier Peter.

Duke. These Letters at fit time deliver me,
The Proudrot knowes our purpose and our plot,
The matter being a foot, keep your instruction
And hold you ever to our speciall drif,
Though sometimes you doe blench from this to that
As caufe doth minifter: Goe call at Flania's howe,
And tell him where I stay: gue the like notice
To Valentine, Rowland, and to Graffus,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flania first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee Varrius, thou hast made good haft,
Come, we will walke: There's other of our friends
Will greet vs here anon: my gentle Varrius.

Exit.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Ifab. To speake so indirectly I am loath,
I would say the truth, but to accuse him fo
That is your part, yet I am adul'd to doe it,
He fies, to vaile full purpofe.

Mar. Be rul'd by him.

Ifab. Besides he tells me, that if peraduenture
He speake against me on the aduere side,
I should not think it strange, for 'tis a phyficke
That's bitter, to sweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Frier Peter

Ifab. Oh peace, the Frier is come.

Peter. Come I have found you out a flood maft fit,
Where you may haue such vantage on the Duke
He shall not paffe you:

Twice hauie the Trumpets founded.

The generous, and graueft Citizens
Haue hent the gates, and very neere vpon
The Duke is entring:

Therefore hence away.

Exit.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Efcalus, Lucio,
Citizens at几urall dores.

Duk. My very worthy Cofen, fairly met,
Our old, and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. Efc. Happy returne be to your royall grace.

Duk. Many and harty thankings to you both:
We have made enquiry of you, and we heare
Such goodness of your Iustice, that our foule
Cannot but yeeld you forth to publique thanks
Forerunning more requittal.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duk. Oh your defert speakes loud, & I should wrong it
To locke it in the wards of courst before
When it deferves with characters of bratte
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razour of obliuion: Glue we your hand
And let the Subiecte fee, to make them know
That outward curtefies would faime proclaime
Faoures that keepe within: Come Efcalus,
You muft walke by vs, on our other hand:
And good supporter are you.

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Peter. Now is your time
Speake loud, and kneele before him.

Ifab. Iustice, O royall Duke, vaile your regard Vpon a wrong'd (I would faie haue faid a Maid)
Oh worthy Prince, diuador not your eye
By throwing it on any other obiect,
Till you haue heard me, in my true complaint,
And guuen me Iustice, Iustice, Iustice, Iustice.

Duk. Relate your wrongs;
In what, by whom? be briefe;
Here is Lord Angelo shall guie you Iustice,
Reveal your felle to him.

Ifab. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me fpeeke redemption of the diuell,
Heare me your felle: for that which I muft speake
Must either punifh me, not being beleev'd,
Or wring redrefle from you:
Heare me: oh heare me, heare.

Ang. My Lord, her wits I fear me are not firme:
She hath bin a fuitor to me, for her Brother
Cut off by course of Iustice.

Ifab. By course of Iustice.

Ang. And she will speake most bitterly, and strange.

Ifab. Muft
Measure for Measure.

Iab. Most strange: but yet most truly will I speake,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murderer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thiefe,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?
Duke. Nay it is ten times strange?
Iab. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Then this is all as true, as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckning.
Duke. Away with her: poor foule
She speaks this, in th' infirmity of fience.
Iab. Oh Prince, I confufe thee, as thou beleu'lt
There is another comfort, then this world,
That thou negleft me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madneffe: make not impossible
That which but femees unlike, 'tis not impossible
But one, the wickedft cadiffe on the ground
May feme as fie, as graue, as luftr, as abfolufe:
As Angelo, even fo may Angelo
In all his drefsings, caftles, titles, formes,
Be an arch-villaine: Believe it, royall Prince
If he be felfe, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for badneffe.
Duke. By mine honeftly
If he be mad, as I beleue no other,
Her madneffe hath the oddft frame of fenfe,
Such a dependancy of thing, on thing,
As ere I heard in madneffe.
Iab. Oh gracious Duke
Harpe not on that; nor do not banifh reafon
For inequality, but let your reafon ferve
To make the truth appear, where it femees hid,
And hide the falfe femees true.
Duk. Many that are not mad
Haue fure more lacke of reafon:
What would you fay?
Iab. I am the Sifter of one Claudio,
Condemned vpon the Act of Fornication
To loofe his head, condemn'd by Angelo,
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was lent to by my Brother; one Lucio
As then the Meatfer.
Luc. That's I, and'd like your Grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and defir'd her,
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poore Brothers pardon.
Iab. That's he indeed.
Duk. You were not bid to fpeek.
Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor with'd to hold my peace.
Duk. I with you now then,
Pray you take note of it: and when you haue
A buifineffe for your felle: pray heauen you then
Be perfect.
Luc. I warrant your honor.
Duk. The warrant's for your felle: take heed to't.
Iab. This Gentleman told fomewhat of my Tale.
Luc. Right.
Duk. It may be right, but you are i' the wrong
To fpeek before your time: proceed,
Iab. I went
To this pernicious Cadiffe Deputie.
Duk. That's fomewhat madly fpoken.
Iab. Pardon it,

The phrase is to the matter.
Iab. In briefe, to fett the iniquities proceffe by:
If he perfwaded, how I praid, and kneeld,
How he refcold me, and how I replide
(For this was of much length) the vild conclufion
I now begin with griefe, and shame to vter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaffe body
To his concupifible intemperate luft
Releafe my brother; and after much debatement,
My fifter remorfe, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him: But the next morn betimes,
His purpoſe furreftting, he fends a warrant
For my poore brothers head.
Duke. This is moft likely.
Iab. Oh that it were as like as it is true. (fpeek't)
'Duk. By heauen (fond wretch) you know not what thou
Or else thou art born'd against his honor
In hatefull praficie: firft his Integritie
Stands without blemifh: next it imports no reafon,
That with fuch vehemency he should pursue
Fauls proper to himfelfe: if he had fo offended
He would have weigh'd thy brotfher by himfelfe,
And not have cut him off: fome one hath fet you on Confede the truth, and say by whole advice
Thou can't heere to complaine.
Iab. And is this all?
Then oh you bleffed Minifters abufe
Keape me in patience, and with ripened time
Vnfold the euill, which is heere wrapt vp
In countenance: heauen shield your Grace from woe,
As I thus wrong'd, hence vnbeleuued goe.
'Duke. I know you'll faine be gone: An Officer:
To prifon with her: Shall we thus permit
A blafting and a fandalous breath to fall,
On him so neere vs? This needs muft be a praficie;
Who knew of your intent and comming hither?
Iab. One that I would were heere, Fryer Lodowic.
Duk. A goodly Father, belike:
Who knowes what Lodowicke?
Luc. My Lord, I know him, 'tis a medling Fryer,
I doe not like the man: had he beene Lay my Lord,
For certaine words he fpake againft your Grace
In your retirement, I had ow'd him fondly.
Duke. Words againft me? this 'a good Fryer belike
And to fet on this wretched woman here
Againft our Sublitute: Let this Fryer be found.
Luc. But yefternight my Lord, she and that Fryer
I faw them at the prifon: a fawcy Fryer,
A very fcuruy fellow.
Fryer. Bleffed be your Royall Grace:
I haue blynd my Lord, and I haue heard
Your royall earl abu'd: firft hath this woman
Moft wrongfully accus'd your Sublitute,
Who is as free from touch, or fame with her
As the from one vngot.
Duke. We did beleue no leffe.
Know you that Fryer Lodowic that the fpakes of?
Fryer. I know him for a man diuine and holy,
Not fcuruy, nor a temporary medier:
As he's reported by this Gentleman:
And on my trut, a man that neuer yet
Did (as he vouches) mil-report your Grace.
Luc. My Lord, moft villainoufly, beleue it.
Fryer. Well: he in time may come to cleere himselfe;
But at this instant he is sicke, my Lord:

Of
Measur for Measur.

Of a strange Feauer: upon his meere requete
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo, came i thither
To speake as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true, and false: And what he with his oath
And all probation will make vp full cleare
Whensoever he's contented: First for this woman,
To iustifie this worthy Noble man
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you heare disprofed to her eyes,
Till she her selfe confesse it.

Duk. Good Friere, let's heare it:

Doe you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
Oh heauen, the vanity of wretched foolcs.
Glive vs some feeses, Come cofen Angelo,
In this I'll be impartial: be you Judge
Of your owne Cause: Is this the Witness Frier?

Enter Mariana.

Firt, let her shew your face, and after, speake.

Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not shew my face
Vntill my husband bid me.

Duk. What, are you married?
Mar. No my Lord.
Duk. Are you a Maid?
Mar. No my Lord.
Duk. A Widow then?
Mar. Neither, my Lord.
Duk. Why you are nothing then: neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife?

Luc. My Lord, she may be a Puncke: for many of them, are neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife.

Duk. Silence that fellow: I would he had some caue to prattle for himselfe.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Mar. My Lord, I doe confesse I were was married,
And I confesse besides, I am no Maid,
I haue known my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not, that euer he knew me.

Luc. He was drunk then, my Lord, it can be no better.

Duk. For the benefit of silence, woult thou wert so to.

Luc. Well, my Lord.

Duk. This is no witnesse for Lord Angelo.

Mar. Now I come to't, my Lord.

Shee that accuses him of Fornication,
In felte-fame manner, doth accuse my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with such a time,
When I'l depose I had him in mine Arms
With all th'effect of Loue.

Ang. Charges the moe then me?
Mar. Not that I know.

Duk. No? you say your husband.

Mar. Why lust, my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinkes he knowes, that he nere knew my body,
But knowes, he thinkes, that he knowes Isabell.

Ang. This is a strange abused: Let's see thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me, now I will vmaske.
This is that face, thou cruel Angelo
Which once thou savor'd, was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vowd contract
Was falt beolcket in thine: This is the body
That tooke away the match from Isabell,
And did supply thee at thy garden-houfe
In her Imagin'd perfon.

Duk. Know you this woman?

Luc. Carnallie the faies.

Duk. Sirha, no more.

Luc. Enouj my Lord.

Ang. My Lord, I muft confesse, I know this woman,
And flue yeres since there was some speech of marriage
Betwixt my felfe, and her; which was broke off,
Partly for that her promis'd proportions
Came short of Composition: But in chief:
For that her reputation was dif-valued
In leuite: Since which time of flue yeres
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her
Vpon my faith, and honor.

Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heauen, and words fro breath,
As there is fence in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affiance this mans wife, as strongly
As words could make vp vowes: And my good Lord,
But Tuesday night left gun, in's garden houfe,
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raife me from my knees,
Or else for ever be confexed here
A Marble Monument.

Ang. I did but smile till now,
Now, good my Lord, give me the scope of Iustice,
My patience here is touch'd: I doe perceiue
Thre poore informal women, are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member
That sets them on. Let me haue way, my Lord
To finde this praucifie out.

Duk. I, with my heart,
And punifh them to your height of pleasure.
Thou foolish Frier, and thou pernicious woman
Compact with her that's gone: think't thou, thy oathes,
Though they would sworwe downe each particular Saint,
Were testimonies against his worth, and credit
That's feald in approbation? you, Lord Efcaus
Sit with my Cozen, lend him your kinde paines
To finde out this abufe, whence 'tis deriu'd.
There is another Frier that fet them on,
Let him be sent for.

Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath fet the women on to this Complaint;
Your Prouoost knowes the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duk. Does he do it instantly:

And you, my noble and well-warranted Cofen
Whom it concerns to heare this matter forth,
Doe with your injuries as femees you bift
In any chaftellment; I for a while
Will leaue you; but ifr not you till you have Well determin'd vpon these Slanderes.

Exit.

Ejf. My Lord, we'll do it throughly: Signior Lu-cio, did not you say you knew that Frier Lediowick to be a diameth perfon?

Luc. Caecilus non facit Monasticum, honest in nothing but in his Clothes, and one that hath spoke most villinous speeches of the Duke.

Ejf. We shall intreat you to abide heere till he come,
And force them against him: we shall finde this Frier a notable fellow.

Luc. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Ejf. Call that name Isabell here once again, I would speake with her: pray you, my Lord, gie mee leave to question, you shall see how I leaue her.

Luc. Not better then he, by her owne report.

Ejf. Say you?

Luc. Marry sir, I thinkke, if you handled her privately
She would sooner confesse, perchance publibly she'll be shamed.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Efc. I will goe darkely to worke with her.

Luc. That's the way: for women are light at midnight.

Efc. Come on Minfirs, here's a Gentlewoman, Denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the rafcall I spoke of,
Here, with the Provost.

Efc. In very good time: speake not to you, till we call vpon you.

Luc. Mum.

Efc. Come Sir, did you set these women on to flander Lord Angelo? they have confed'd you did.

Duk. 'Tis false.

Efc. How? Know you where you are?

Duk. Refpeck to your great place; and let the divell Be fometime honour'd, for his burning throne.

Where is the Duke? 'tis he should heare me speake.

Efc. The Duke's in vs: and we will heare you speake, Looked you speake instandy.

Duk. Boldly, at leaft. But oh poor foules,
Come you to heeke the Lamb here of the Fox;
Good night to your redrelfe: Is the Duke gone?
Then is your caufe gone too: The Duke's vniuft,
Thus to retort your manifett Appeal, And put your triall in the villaines mouth,
Which here you come to acuife.

Luc. This is the rafcall: this is he I spoke of.

Efc. Why thou vveerrestring, and unhallowed Fryer:
Isn't not enough thou haft forbond'd these women, To accuse this worthy man? but in foule mouth, And in the witnesse of his proper ear, To call this villain: and then to glance from him,
To th'Duke himselfe, to take him with iniustice, Take him hence; to th' racke with him: we'll towze you
Joynt by joynt, but we will know his purpoe:
What? vniuft?

Duk. Be not fo hot: the Duke dare
No more stretch this finger of mine, then he Dare racke his owne: his Subjext am I not,
Nor here Prouinceall: My busineffe in this State
Made me a looker on here in Piuenn, Where I have feene corruption boyle and bubble,
Till it ore-run the Stewre: Lawes, for all faults, But faults fo countenanc'd, that the strong Statutes Stand like the forfeltes in a Barbers shop,
As much in mocke, as marke.

Efc. Slander to th' State:
Away with him to prifon.

Ang. What can you vouch against him Signior Lucius?
Is this the man that you did tell vs of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord: come hithe runon bald-pate, doe you know me?

Duk. I remember you Sir, by the found of your voice, I met you at the Prifon, in the absence of the Duke.

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke?

Duk. Most notably Sir.

Luc. Do you so Sir: And was the Duke a fielh-monger, a foole, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duk. You mist(Sir) change perfons with me, ere you make that my report; you indeeed spoke fo of him, and much more, much worke.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow: did not I plucke thee by the nofe, for thy fiechters?

Duk. I protest, I loue the Duke, as I loue my selfe.

Ang. Harke how the villaine would close now, after his travefable abuses.

Efc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withall: Away with him to prifon: Where is the Provost? away with him to prifon: lay bolt enough vpon him: let him speak no more: away with thofe Giglets too, and with the other confedrate companion.

Duk. Stay Sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, refuits he? helpe him Lucius.

Luc. Come sir, come sir, come sir: foñ fir, why you bald-pated lying rafcall you must be hooded mufit you? show your knaues vifage with a poxe to you: show your sheepe-biting face, and be hang'd an houre: will't not off?

Duk. Thou art the firft knaue, that ere mad't a Duke.

Firft. Provost, let me bayle thyfe gentle three:
Sneake not away Sir, for the Fryer, and you,
Must have a word anon: lay hold on him.

Luc. This may prove worfe then hanging.

Duk. What you have spoke, I pardon: fit you downe,
We'll borrow place of him; Sir, by your leaue;
Ha'ft thou or word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can doe thee office? If thou ha'ft
Rely on it, till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh, my dread Lord, I should be guiltier then my guiltineffe,
To think I can be vndiscernable,
When I perceive your grace, like powre diuine,
Hath look'd vpon my paffes. Then good Prince,
No longer Seffion hold vpon my shame,
But let my Triall, be mine owne Confeffion:
Immediate sentence then, and fequent death,
Is all the grace I beg.

Duk. Come hithe Mariana,
Say: was thou ere contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was no Lord.

Duk. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly.

Duk. I shew not, then my guiltineffe,
To think I can be vndiscernable,
When I perceive your grace, like powre diuine,
Hath look'd vpon my paffes. Then good Prince,
No longer Seffion hold vpon my shame,
But let my Triall, be mine owne Confeffion:
Immediate sentence then, and fequent death,
Is all the grace I beg.

Duk. Come hithe Isabella,
Your Fryer is now your Prince: As I was then
Aduertifying, and holy to your busineffe,
(Not changing heart with habit) I am still,
Attourned at your seruice.

Isabe. Oh give me pardon
That I, your vaffaile, haue imploide, and pain'd
Your veknowne Soueraignty.

Duk. You are pardon'd Isabeall:
And now, deere Maide, be you as free to vs.
Your Brothers death I know fits at your heart:
And you may maruaile, why I obfcur'd my felfe,
Labouring to faue his life: and would not rather
Make raht remonftrance of my hidden powre,
Then let him be lofi: oh moft kinde Maide,
It was the fwiit celerity of his death,
Which I did thinke, with flower foot came on,
That brain'd my purpoe: but peace be with him,
That life is better life past fearing death,
Then that which lies to feare: make it your comfort,
Measur e for Measure.

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angelo, Marz, Peter, Prouost.

I think I doe my Lord.

Duke. For this new married man, approaching here,
Wholes falt imagination yet hath wrong'd,
Your well defended honor: you must pardon,
For Marz's sake: But as he sing'd your Brother,
Being criminal, in double violation,
Of sacred Chastity, and of promisfe breach,
Thereon dependant for your Brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cries out.
Molt audible, even from his proper tongue.

An Angelo for Claudio, death for death;
Hafte still pales hafte, and leafe, anfwers leafe;
Like doth quit like, and Measure fill for Measure:
Then Angelo, thy fault's thus manifef ted,
Which though thou would'st deny, denies thee vantage.
We doe condemn thee to the very Blocke,
Where Claudio floop'd to death, and with like hafte.
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my moft gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mocke me with a husband?

Duke. It is your husband mock't you with a husband,
Confentling to the safe-guard of your honor,
I thought your marriage fit: elfe Imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,
And choke your good to come: For his Pollifions,
Although by confutation they are ours;
We doe en-flate, and widow you with all,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my deere Lord,
I craue no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Neuer craue him, we are definete.

Mar. Gentie my Liege.

Duke. You doe but loofe your labour.

Away with him to death: Now Sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, sweet Iftabel, take my part,
Lend me your kisses, and all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to doe you service.

Duke. Against all fence you doe importune her,
Should the kneele downe, in mercie of this falt,
Her Brothers ghost, his pauid bed would breake,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Iftabel:
Sweet Iftabel, doe yet but kneele by me,
Hold vp your hands, say nothing: I'll speake all.
They fay beft men are moulded out of faults,
And for the moft, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Iftabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Iftab. Most bounteous Sir.
Looke if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my Brother liu'd: I partly think,
A due incarciere govern'd his deedes,
Till he did looke on me: Since it is fo,
Let him not die: my Brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he diete.
For Angelo, his Act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perifh'd by the way: thoughts are no subiects
Intents, but meerely thoughts.

Mar. Meereely my Lord.

Duke. Your fante's not expreflable: Stand vp I fay:
I have bethought me of another fault.
Prouost, how Came it Claudio was beheaded?

At an vnufuall howre?

Præ. It was commanded fo.

Duke. Had you a spesiall warrant for the deed?

Præ. No my good Lord: it was by private message.

Duke. For which I doe discharge you of your office,
Give vp your keyes.

Præ. Pardon me, noble Lord,
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me after more advice,
For testimony whereof, one in the prifon
That should by private order elfe have dide,
I Have refer'd alio.

Duke. What's he?

Præ. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done fo by Claudio:
Goe fetch him hither, let me looke vp on him.

Eff. I am forry, one fo learned, and fo wife
As you, Lord Angelo, haue fill appear'd,
Should flip it groffifie, both in the heat of bloud
And lacke of temper'd judgement afterward.

Ang. I am forry, that such forrow I procure,
And fo deepe ficks it in my penitent heart,
That I craue death more willingly then mercy,
'Tis my deferuing, and I doe entreat it.

Enter Barnardine and Prouost, Claudio, Iulietta.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Præ. This my Lord.

Duke. There was a Friar told me of this man.
Sirha, thou art faide to have a flubborne foule
That apprehends no further then this world,
And Squaft thy life according: Thou'ret condemn'd,
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee take this mercie to prouide
For better times to come: Frier aduife him,
I leave him to your hand: What muffeld fellow's that?

Præ. This is another prisoner that I sau'd,
Who shou'd have di'd when Claudio loft his head,
As like almoft to Claudio, as himselfe.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his fake
Is he pardon'd, and for your louelie fake
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that:
By this Lord Angelo perceives he's fale,
Methinks I fee a quickning in his eye:
Well Angelo, your eulil quitts you well.
Looke that you love your wife: her worth, worth yours
I finde an apt remifion in my selfe:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon,
You firha, that knew me for a fool, a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an affe, a mad man:
Wherein haue I fo defer'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. Faith my Lord, I fpoke it but according to the trick:
If you will hang me for it you may: but I had rahter
It would please you, I might be whipt.

Duke. Whipt fir, fir, and hang'd after.
Proclaim it Prouost round about the Citie,
If any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow
(As I have heard him fwear himfelfe there's one Whom he begot with childe) let her appeare,
And he fhall marry her: the nuptiall fin'd,
Let him be whipt and hang'd.

Luc. I refech your Highneffe doe not marry me to a Whore: your Highneffe faid even now I made you a Duke, good my Lord do not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duk. Vpon
Measure for Measure.

Duke. Vpon mine honor thou shalt marrie her.
Thy flanders I forgive, and therewithall
Remit thy other forfeits : take him to prifon,
And fee our pleafure herein executed.

Luc. Marrying a punke my Lord, is preffing to death,
Whipping and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a Prince deferves it.
She Claudia that you wrong’d, looke you restore.
Joy to you Mariana, loue her Angelo:
I haue confes’d her, and I know her vertue.
Thanks good friend, Efcalus, for thy much goodneffe,

There’s more behinde that is more grateufal.
Thanks Prouofi for thy care, and fecrecie,
We fhall imploy thee in a worthier place.
Forgiue him Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Raguzine for Claudia’s,
The offence pardons it fitte. Deere Ifabella,
I haue a motion much imports your good,
Wherefo you’ll a willing eare incline;
What’s mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.
So bring vs to our Pallace, where wee’ll shew
What’s yet behinde, that meece you all fhould know.

FINIS.
The Comedie of Errors.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant of Siracusa, Iaylor, and other attendants.

Merchant.

Roeed Solinus to procure my fall,
And by the doome of death end woes and all.
Duke. Merchant of Siracusa, plead no more.
I am not partial to infringe our Lawes;
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants our well-dealing Countrimen,
Who wanting gliders to redeem their lives,
Have feild his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pity from our threatening lookes:
For since the mortall and intifine irares
Twixt thy feditious Countrimen and vs,
It hath in solemne Synodes beene decreed,
Both by the Siracujians and our felues,
To admit no trafficke to our aduerse townes:
Nay more, if any borne at Ephesus
Be scene at any Siracujian Mart and Fayres:
Againe, if any Siracujian borne
Come to the Bay of Ephesus, he dies:
His goods confiscate to the Dukes dippofe,
Vnleffe a thousand markes be levied
To quit the penalty, and to ranfome him:
Thy subfance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred Markes,
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.
Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening Sonne.
Duk. Well Siracujian; say in briefe the caufe
Why thou departest from thy native home?
And for what caufe thou canst not to Ephesus.
Mer. A heauier taske could not have beene impo'd,
Then I to speake my griefes vnspakeable:
Yet that the world may witnessse that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
Ile vetter what my forrow gives me leaue.
In Siracusa was I borne, and wedde
Vnto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me; had not our hap beene had:
With her I liued in joy, our wealth increas'd
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamium, till my factors death,
And he great care of goods at randome left,
Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not fixe moneths olde,
Before her felde (almost at fainting vnder
The plesing punishment that women beare)
Had made prouision for her following me,
And soone, and safe, arrived where I was:
There had she not beene long, but she became
A joyfull mother of two goodly fonnes:
And, which was strange, the one fo like the other,
As could not be diftinguished but by names.
That very howre, and in the felte-fame Inne,
A meane woman was deliuered
Of such a burthen Male, twins both alike:
Thiefs, for their parents were exceeding poore,
I bought, and brought vp to attend my fonnes.
My wife, not meanely proud of two such boyes,
Made daily motions for our home returne:
Vnwilling I agreed, alas, too soone wee came aboard.
A league from Epidamium we had said
Before the alwaies winde-obeying deep.
Gave any Tragicke Instance of our harme;
But longer did we not retaine much hope;
For what obfcurd light the heavens did grant,
Did but conuay vnto our fearefull minde:
A doubtfull warrant of immediate death,
Which though my felfe would gladly haue imbrac'd,
Yet the inceffant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what the saw must come,
And pitteous playnings of the prettie babes
That mourne'd for falion, ignorant what to feare;
Forfeit me to fceake delays for them and me,
And this it was (for other meanes was none)
The Sailors fought for safety by our boates,
And left the ship then finking ripe to vs.
My wife, more carefull for the latter borne,
Had faftned him vnto a small spare Maft,
Such as sea-faring men prouide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilft I had beene like heedfull of the other.
The children thus ifo'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Faftned our felues at eyther end the maft,
And floating straight, obedient to the streame,
Was carried towards Corinthus, as we thought.
At length the sonne gazing upon the earth,
Difperft those vapours that offended vs,
And by the benefit of his wifhed light
The feas waxt calme, and we discouered
Two shippes from farre, making amaine to vs:
Of Corinthus that, of Epidaurus this.
But ere they came, oh let me fay no more,
Gather the fequell by that went before.
Duk. Nay forward old man, doe not breake off fo,

For
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

March. Oh had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthy team’d them mercifully to vs:
For ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty rocke,
Which being violently borne vp,
Our helpefull ship was splitt in the midt;
So that in this vnuit divorce of vs,
Fortune had left to both of vs alike,
What to delight in, what to sorrow for,
Her part, poore foule, seeming as hardened
With leffer wight, but not with leffer woe,
Was carried with more speed before the winde,
And in our fight they three were taken vp
By Fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another ship had feiz’d on vs,
And knoweing whom it was their hap to faue,
Gave healthfull welcome to their ship-wrakst guests,
And would haue ref’t the Fishers of their prey,
Had not their backe beene very flow of faile;
And therefore homeward did they bend their courfe.
Thus haue you heard me feuer’d from my bliffe,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong’d,
To tell ful stories of my owne mishaps.

Duke. And for the fafe of them thou forrowest for,
Doe me the favour to dilate at full,
What haue befalne of them and they till now.

March. My yongest boy, and yet my eldste care,
At eighteene yeares became inquiuitue
After his brother; and importun’d me
That his attendant, fo his cafe was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain’d his name,
Might beare him company in the queft of him:
Whom whilome I laboured of a loue to fee,
I hazarded the losse of whom I lou’d.
Fiee Sommer haue I spent in fartheft Greece,
Roming cleane through the bounds of Asia,
And coafting homeward, came to Ephesus:
Hopeleffe to finde, yet loft to leave vnought
Or that, or any place that harbours men:
But heere muft end the story of my life,
And happy were I in my timelie death,
Could all my trauails warrant me they live.

Duke. Hopeleffe Egean whom the fates have haue markt
To bear the extremite of dire mishap:
Now truft me, were it not againft our Lawes,
Against my Crowne, my oath, my dignitie,
Which Princes would they may not difanuall,
My foule shoulde fce as advocate for thee:
But though thou art adiu’d to the death,
And paifed fentence may not be recal’d
But to our honours great difparagement:
Yet will I faue thee in what I can;
Therefore Marchant, Ile limit thee this day
To fecke thy helpe by beneficall helpe,
Try all the friends thou haft in Ephesus,
Beg thou, or borrow, to make vp the summe,
And liue: if no, then thou art doom’d to die:
Taylor, take him to thy cucstodie.

Taylor. I will my Lord.

March. Hopeleffe and helpeleffe doth Egean wend,
But to procrafinate his liveleffe end.

Enter Antipholis Erstes, a Marchant, and Dromio.

Mer. Therefore glue out you are of Epidamum,
Left that your goods too foone be confiscate:

This very day a Syracusan Marchant
Is apprehended for a riualle here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the towne,
Dies ere the weare fume ftock in the Weft:
There is your monie that I had to keepe.

Ant. Goe beare it to the Centaure, where we hoft,
And flay there Dromio, till I come to thee;
Within this houre it will be dinner time,
Till that Ile view the manners of the towne,
Perufe the traders, gaze vpon the buildings,
And then returne and sleepe within mine Inne,
For with long trauaille I am fitle and wearie.
Get thee away.

Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And goe indeepe, hauing fo good a menace.

Exit Dromio.

Ant. A truftie villaine ftr, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry lefts;
What will you walke with me about the towne,
And then goe to my Inne and dine with me?

E.Mar. I am inuited ftr to certaine Marchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefite:
I crave your pardon, foone at five a clocke,
Please you, Ie meete with you vpon the Mart,
And afterward confort you till bed time:
My prefent bufinesse calls me from you now.

Ant. Farewell till then: I will goe loofe my felle,
And wander vp and downe to view the Citie.

E.Mar. Sir, I commend you to your owne content.

Exit.

Ant. He that commends me to mine owne content, Commends me to the thing I cannot get:
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean feekes another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Vnfeene, inquiuitue) confounds himfelfe.
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
In queft of them (vnhappie) loofe my felle.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanacke of my true date:
What now! How chance thou art return’d fo fooner.

E.Dro. Return’d fo fooner, rather approacht too late:
The Capon burnes, the Pigeon falt from the fplitt;
The clocke hath runne twelue vpon the bell:
My Miftris made it one vpon my cheeke:
She is fo hot because the meate is colde:
The meate is colde, because you come not home:
You come not home, because you have no ftockace:
You have no ftockace, having broke your fift:
But we that know what ’tis to fift and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.

Ant. Stop in your winde ftr, tell me this I pray?
Where haue you left the monie that I gaue you.

E.Dro. Oh fift pence that I had a wenfday left,
To pay the Sadler for my Miftris crupper:
The Sadler had it Sir, I kept it not.

Ant. I am not in a sportive humor now:
Tell me, and daily not, where is the monie?
We being strangers here, how dar’st thou trauail
So great a charge from thine owne cucstodie.

E.Dro. I pray you leafe far as you fit at dinner:
I from my Miftris come to you in post:
If I returne I shall be post indeede.

---

For
The Comedie of Errors.

For she will scour your fault upon your pate:
Me thinkes your maw, like mine, should be your cooke,
And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. Come, Dromio, come, these leaves are out of season,
Referre them till a merrier houre then this then:
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?
E.Dro. To me sir? why you gave no gold to me?
Ant. Come on sir knave, haue done your foulhames,
And tell me how you haft difpos'd thy charge.
E.Dro. My charge was but to fetch you the Mart
Home to your house, the Phoenix fir, to dinner;
My Miftris and her sister stays for you.

Ant. Now as I am a Christian answer me,
In what safe place you haue betow'd my monie;
Or I shall breake that merrie fconce of yours
That bands on tricks, when I am vndifpos'd:
Where is the thousand Markes thou hadst of me?
E. Dro. I have some markes of yours upon my pate:
Some of my Misiris markes vpon my shoulders:
But not a thousand markes betweene you both.
If I should pay your worship those againe,
Perchance you will not beare them patiently.

Ant. Thy Misiris markes? what Misiris haue thou?
E. Dro. Your worships wife, my Misiris at the Phoenix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner:
And praiseth that you will be your home to dinner.

Ant. What wilt thou flout me thus vnto my face
Being forbid? There take you that fir knave.
E. Dro. What meane you sir, for God fake hold your Nay, and you will not fir, Ile take my heele.

(Exeunt Dromio Es.)

Ant. Vpon my life by some deuife or other,
The villaine is ore-wrought of all my monie.
They say this towne is full of cofenage:
As nimble fuglers that deceu the eie:
Darke working Sorcerers that change the minde:
Soule-killing Witches, that deform the bodie:
Difguifed Cheaters, pratting Mountebankes:
And manie such like libertyes of finne:
If it proue so, I will be gone the sooner:
Ile to the Centaur to geake this flawe,
I greatly feare my monie is not safe.

Ae Designatur.

Enter Adrianna, wife to Antipholus Serenus, with Luciana her Sister.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd,
That in such haffe I sent to feake his Master?
Sure Luciana it is two a clocke.
Luc. Perhaps some Merchant hath invinit him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner:
Good Sister let vs dine, and neuer fret;
A man is Master of his libertie:
Time is their Master, and when they fee time,
They'll goe or come; if fo, be patient Sifer.

Adr. Why should their libertie then ours be more?
Luc. Because their bufinesse still lies out adore.

Adr. Let me know, and I will haue it thus.
Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.
Adr. There's none but affes will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is laftht with woe:
There's nothing situate vnder heauens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in sea, in skie.
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged foules
Are their males subiects, and at their controules:
Man more duine, the Master of all theue,
Lord of the wide world, and wilde watery seas,
Indus with intellectual fence and foules,
Of more preheminence then fith and foules,
Are masters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let us will attend on their accords.

Adr. This feruitude makes you to keepe vnoed.
Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.

Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear some sway
Luc. Ere I lerne loue, Ile praftifie to oby.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where?
Luc. Till he come home againe, I would forbeare.

Adr. Patience vrn'mou'd, no marre! though he paue,
They can be mecke, that haue no other caufe:
A wretched foule bruis'd with aduerfity,
We bid be quiet when we heare it crie.
But were we burnden with like weight of paine,
As much, or more, we should our selves complaine:
So thou that haft no vnkinde mate to greece thee,
With vrging helpelesse patience would releue me;
But if thou lue to fee like right herein,
This foolc-beg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day but to trie:
Here comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Es.

Adr. Say, is your tardie master now at hand?
E. Dro. Nay, hee's at too hands with mee, and that my two eares can witnesse.

Adr. Say, didst thou speake with him? knowst thou his minde?
E. Dro. I, I, he told his minde vpon mine ear,
Beareth his hand, I scarce could vnderstand it.

Luc. Speake hee so doubtfully, thou couldst not fee his meaning.

E. Dro. Nay, hee strooke to plainly, I could too well fee the blowes; and withall so doubtfully, that I could scarce vnderstand them.

Adr. But say, I prethee, is he comming home?
It freemes he hath great care to pleafe his wife.

E. Dro. Why Mistrefse, fare my Master is horne mad.

Adr. Horne mad, thou villain?

E. Dro. I meane not Cuckold mad,
But sure he is dranke mad:
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a hundred markes in gold:
'Tis dinner time quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burne, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Where is the thousand markes I gave thee villain?
The Pigge quoth I, is burn'd: my gold, quoth he:
My mistrefse, sir, quoth I: hang vp thy Mistrefse:
I know not thy mistrefse, out on thy mistrefse.

Luc. Quoth who?

E. Dr. Quoth my Master, I know quoth he, no hous, no wife, no mistrefse: fo that my arrant due vnto my or in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back againe, thou slave, & fetch him home.

Dro. Goe backe againe, and be new beaten home?

For Gods sake fend some other messenger.

H 2

Adr. Backe
Adri. Backe flute, or I will breake thy pate a-croffe.

Dro. And he will bleepe a croffe with other beating:
Between you, I thinke heasse a holy dinner.

Adri. Hence prating peant, fetch thy Master home.

Dro. Am I to round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you doe spurne me thus:
You spurne me hence, and he will spurne me hither,
If I left in this feruice, you must cafe me in leather.

Luci. Fie how impiantence lawreth in your face.

Adri. His company must do his minions grace,
Whillit at home thare for a merrie lookie:
Hath homelie age th' alluring beauty tooke,
From my poore cheeks? then he hath wafted it.
Are my discountes dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and sharpe discourses be mar'd,
Vnkindnelfe blunts it more then marble hard.
Doe their gaye visments his affections sake?
That's not my fault, hee's matter of my fate.
What runes are in me that can be found,
By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A funnie looke of his, would foone repaire.
But, too vnruely Deere, he breaks the pale,
And feedes from home; poore I am but his fate.

Luci. Selfe-harming lealoufie; fie beat it hence.

Ad. Vnfeelng fools can with fuch wrongs dispence:
I know his eye doth homage other-where,
Or elfe, what lets it but he would be here?
Siler, you know he promis'd me a chaine,
Would that alone, a loue he would detaine,
So he would keepe faire quarter with his bed:
I fee the Jewell belt enamede
Will loue his beautie; yet the gold bides still
That others touch, and often touching will,
Where gold and no man that hath a name,
By fallhood and corruption doth it shame:
Since that my beautie cannot pleaxe his ear,
Ile weep (what's left away) and weeping die.

Luci. How manie fond fooleis ferue mad Ieloufie?

Enter Antipholus Erraticus.

Ant. The gold I gave to Drusius is laid vp Safe at the Centaur, and the headfull flawe
Is wanded forth in care to fecke me out
By computation and mine hops report.
I could not speake with Drusius, since at firft
I fent him from the Mart? see here he comes.

Enter Drusius Siraciusa.

How now fir, is your merrie humor alter'd?
As you love froakes, so left with me againe:
You know no Centaur? you receiu'd no gold?
Your Miftreffe fent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,
That thus fo madly thou didst anfwer me?

S.Dro. What anfwer fir? when speake I such a word?

E.Ant. Even now, even here, not halfe an howre fince.
S.Dro. I did not fee you fince you fent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gaue me.
Ant. Villaine, thou didft denie the golds receit,
And told me of a Miftreffe, and a dinner,
For which I hope thou felteft I was difpleat'd.

S.Dro. I am glad to fee you in this merrie vaine,
What meanes thislef, I pray you Mafter tell me?

Ant. Yeas, doft thou ieere & flowt me in the teeth?
Thinkt I left? hold, take thou that, & that.

Beats Dro.

Vpon what bargain do you give it me?

Antip. Because that I familierlile sometimes
Doe we vs for my foole, and chat with you,
Your favvinesse will left upon my love,
And make a Common of my serios howres,
When the funne ffineth, let foolifh gnats make sport,
But creepe in crannie, when he hides his beamses:
If you will left with me, know my afspect,
And fashion your demeanour to my lookes,
Or I will beat this method in your fconce.

S.Dro. Sconce call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather hau it a head, and you wile thoughts long,
I must get a fconce for my head, and Infconce it to, or elles I shall feck my wit in my shoulders, but I pray fir, what am I beaten?

Ant. Doft thou not know?

S.Dro. Nothing fir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. Shall I tell you why?

S.Dro. I fir, and wherefore; for they fay, everly why hath a wherefore.

Ant. Why firft for flowing me, and then wherefore, for vrging it the second time to me.

S.Dro. Was there euere an man thus beaten out of feafon, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither rime nor reafon. Well fir, I thanke you.

Ant. Thanke me fir, for what?

S.Dro. Marry fir, for this fomething that you gauve me for nothing.

Ant. Ile make you amends next, to gue you nothing for fomething. But fay fir, is it dinner time?

S.Dro. No fir, I thinke the meat wants that I have.

Ant. In good time fir: what's that?

S.Dro. Baffing.

Ant. Well fir, then 'twill be drie.

S.Dro. If it be fir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. Your reafon?

S.Dro. Left it make you chollerick, and purchafe me another drie baffing.

Ant. Well fir, learme to lefte in good time, there's a time for all things.

S.Dro. I durft haue denied that before you vvere fo chollerick.

Ant. By what rule fir?

S.Dro. Marry fir, by a rule as plaine as the plaine bald pate of Father time himelfe.

Ant. Let's hear it.

S.Dro. There's no time for a man to recouer his haire that growes bald by nature.

Ant. May he not doe it by fine and recouerie?

S.Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recouer the loft haire of another man.

Ant. Why, is Time such a niggard of haire?, being (as it is) fo plentifull an ecrement?

S.Dro. Because it is a blessing that hee befewes on beasfs, and what he hath flantied them in haire, hee hath given them in wit.

Ant. Why, but thers manie a man hath more haire then wit.

S.Dro. Not a man of thee but he hath the wit to lose his haire.

Ant. Why thou didft conclude hairie men plain dea-er without wit.

S.Dro. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost; yet he looseth it in a kinde of lollitie.

Ant. For what reafon.

S.Dro. For two, and found ones to.

An.Nay.
Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. I, I, Antipholus, looke strange and frowne, Some other Midtreffe hath thy sweet afeets: I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once, when thou vn-vrg'd wouldst vow,
That neuer words were muificke to thine ear,
That neuer object pleasing in thine eye,
That neuer touch well welcome to thy hand,
That neuer sweet-faour'd in thy taffe,
Vnleffe I fappe, or look'd, or touch'd, or caru'd to thee.
How comes it now, my Husband, oh how comes it,
That thou art then efranged from thy felfe?
Thy felfe I call it, being strange to me:
That vnindissuval Incorporate
Am better then thy deere felfs better part.
Ah doe not teare away thy felfe from me:
For know my loue : as easie maift thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulfe,
And take vnmingled thence that drop againe
Without addition or diminishng,
As take from me thy felfe, and not me too.
How deereely would it touch thee to the quicke,
Shouldft thou but hear I were licencious?
And that this body confecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Lust shoulde be contaminat.
Wouldft thou not spit at me, and fpurne at me,
And hurle the name of husband in my face,
And ear the flain'd skin of my Harlot brow,
And from my falle hand cut the wedding ring,
And brake it with a deepc-divorcing vow?
I know thou canst, and therefore fee thou doe it.
I am poiftt with an adulterate bolt,
My bloud is mingled with the crime of luft:
For if we two be one, and thou play falfe,
I doe digett the poifon of thy flesh,
Being frumpteted by thy contagion:
Keepe then faire leuge and truce with my true bed,
I liue daint'd, thou vnindif honoured.

Ant. Plead you to me faire dame? I know you not:
In Ephesius I am but two houres old,
As strange vnto your towne, as to your talke,
Who euer word by all my wit being scan'd,
Wants wit in all, one word to vnderstand.

Luc. Fie brother, how the world is chang'd with you:
When were you wont to vfe my fitter thus?
She fent for you by Dromio home to dinner.
Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Baltasar the Merchant.

E. Anti. Good signior Angelo you must excuse vs all, My wife is shrifwhen when I kepe not howres; Say that I lingered with you at your shop To see the making of her Carkanet, And that to morrow you will bring it home. But here's a villain that would face me downe He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him, And charg'd him with a thousand markes in gold, And that I did denie my wife and house; Thou drunkard thou, what didst thou meane by this? E. Dro. Say what you will sir, but I know what I know, That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to shew; If your skin were parchement, & your blows you gave were ink, Your owne hand-writing would tell you what I thinkke. E. Anti. I thinkke thou art an affe. E. Dro. Marry fo doth appeare By the wrongs I suffer, and the blowes I beare, I shoule kickes being kicke, and being at that affe, You would kepe from my heelees, and beware of an affe. E. An. Y'are lad signior Baltasars, pray God our cheer May answer my good will, and your good welcom here. Bal. I hold your dainties cheap sir, & your welcom dear. E. An. Oh signior Baltasars, either at flesh or fish, A table full of welcome, makes scarce one daring difie. Bal. Good meat sir is comon that every churle affords. Anti. And welcome more common, for thats nothing but words. Bal. Small cheere and great welcome, makes a merrie feast. Anti. I, to a niggardly Host, and more sparing guest: But though my cates be meane, take them in good part, Better cheere may you haue, but not with better hart. But soft, my doore is lockt; goe bid them let vs in. E. Dro. Maud, Briget, Marian, Cisley, Gillian, Ginn. S. Dro. Mome, Malthorpe, Capon, Coxcombe, Indi- ot, Patch, Either get thee from the doore, or fit downe at the hatch : Doft thou coniure for wenches, that calit for such flore, When one is one too many, goe get thee from the doore. E. Dro. What patch is made our Porter? my Master flays in the street. S. Dro. Let him walke from whence he came, let hee catch cold on's feet. E. Anti. Who talks within there? hoa, open the doore. S. Dro. Right sir, Ile tell you when, and you'll tell me wherefore. Anti. Wherefore? for my dinner I haue not din'd to day. S. Dro. Nor to day here you must not come againe when you may. Anti. What art thou that keep'rt mee out from the howfe I owe? S. Dro. The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio. E. Dro. O villain, thou haft rolne both mine office and my name, The one nere got me credit, the other mickle blame: If thou haft beene Dromio to day in my place, Thou wouldst haue chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an affe.

Enter Lucre.

Adr. Who is that at the doore y keeps all this noife? S.Dro. By my troth your towne is troubled with vn- ruly boies. Anti. Are you there Wife? you might haue come before. Adr. Your wife sir knaue? go get you from the doore. E. Dro. If you went in paine Master, this knaue wold goe fore. Angelo. Heere is neither cheere sir, nor welcome, we would faine haue either. Balro. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither. E. Dro. They stand at the doore, Master, bid them welcome hither. Anti. There is something in the winde,that we cannot get in. S. Dro. You would say so Master, if your garments were thin. Your cake here is warme within : you stand here in the cold. It would make a man mad as a Bucke to be so bought and sold. Anti. Go fetch me something, Ile break ope the gate. E. Dro. Breake any breaking here, and Ile breake your knaes pate. E. Dro. A man may breake a word with your sir, and words are but winde : I and breake it in your face, so he break it not behind. S. Dro. It feedes thou want'ft breaking, out vspon thee hinde. E. Dro. Here's too much out vspon thee, I pray thee let me in. S. Dro. I, when fowles have no feathers, and fish have no fin. Anti. Well, Ile breake in:go borrow me a crow. E. Dro. A crow without feather, Master meanes you so;

For
The Comedie of Errors.

For a fish without a finne, ther's a fowle without aletter, If a crow help vs in fira, wee'll plucke a crow togerther.

Ant. Go, get thee gone, fetch me an iron Crow.

Bah! Have patience sir, oh let it not be so, Herein you warre against your reputation, And draw within the compass of suspense Th'venilated honor of your wife.

Once this your long experience of your wifedom, Her fober vertue, yeares, and modestie, Plead on your part some cause to you vnknowne; And doubt not sir, but she will well excuse Why at this time the dores are made against you. Be rul'd by me, depart in patience, And let vs to the Tyger all to dinner, And about euening come your felle alone, To know the reafon of this strange restraint: If by strong hand you offer to break in Now in the diring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made of it; And that suppos'd by the common rowt Against your yet vnngaled effimation, That may with foule intrusion enter in, And dwell upon your grave when you are dead; For fander liues upon succeffion; For euer how'd, where it gets poftition.

Ant. You have preualld, I will depart in quiet, And in defpight of mirth meane to be morrie: I know a wench of excellent disfoure, Pretjie and wirrie; wilde, and yet too gentile; There will we dine: this woman that I meane My wife (but I proteft without defert) Hath ofteffimes vpbraided me withall: To her will we to dinner, get you home And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made, Bring it I pray you to the Porfentine, For there's the houser: That chaine will I betow (Be it for nothing but to fright my wife) Vpon mine hostesse there, good sir make hafe: Since mine owne dores refuse to entreate me, Ile knocke else-where, to fee if they'll dislaine me.

Ang. Ile meet you at that place some houre hence. Ant. Do fo, this fell shall cost me some expence. Exeunt.

Enter Juliana, with Antipholus of Siracusa. Islia. And may it be that you have quite forgot A husbands office? shall Antipholus Euen in the spring of Loue, thy Lone-springs rot? Shall loue in buildings grow so ruinate? If you did wed my fitter for her wealth, Then for her wealths-take vfe her with more kindniffe: Or if you like else-where do it by stealth, Muffle your falle loue with some shew of blindnffe: Let not my fitter read it in your eye: Be not thy tongue thy owne fhames Orator: Looke sweet, speake faire, become dilloyaltie: Apparellice like vertues harberger: Bear a faire preference, though your heart be tainted, Teach finne the carrige of a holy Saint, Be secrct falle: what need the be acquainted? What limple thiefre brags of his owne attaine? Tis double wrong to truant with your bed, And let her read it in thy lookes at boord: Shame hath a baffard fame, well managed, Ill deeds is dovded with an eull word: Alas poore women, make vs not beleuee (Being compact of credit) that you loue vs, Though others have the arme, thow vs the fleuee: We in your motion turne, and you may moue vs. Then gentle brother get you in againe; Comfort my fitter, cheere her, call her wife: 'Tis holy sport to be a little vaine, When the sweet breath of flatterie conquers strife.

3. Ant. Sweete Miliris, what your name is else I know not; Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine: Leffe in your knowledge, and your grace you show not, Then our earths wonder, more then earth diuine. Teach me deere creature how to think and speake: Lay open to my earthe groffe conceit: Smoothed in errors, feeble, shallow, weake, The fouled meaning of your words deceit: Against my foules pure truth, why labour you, To make it wander in an vnknowne field? Are you a god? would you create me new? Transforme me then, and to your powre Ile yeeld. But if that I am, then well I know, Your weeping fitter is no wife of mine, Nor to her bed no homage doe I owe: Farre more, farre more, to you doe I decline: Oh traine me not sweet Mermaidie with thy note, To drowne me in thy fitter fluid of teares: Sing Siren for thy felle, and I wil dote: Spread ore the furer wanes thy golden hailers; And as a bud Ile take thee, and there lie; And in that glorious supposition thinke, He gains by death, that hath such meanes to die: Let Loue, being light, be drownd if the flinke.

Luc. What are you mad, that you doe reason so? Ant. Not mad, but mated, how I doe not know. Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your elle. Ant. For gazing on your beames faire fun being by. Luc. Gaze when you shoulde, and that will cheere your fight. Ant. As good to winke sweet loue, as looke on night. Luc. Why call you me loue? Call my fitter fo. Ant. Thy fitters fitter. Luc. That's my fitter.

Ant. No i't is thy felle, mine owne felves better part: Mine eies cleere eie, my deere hearts deare heart; My foode, my fortune, and my sweet hopes ayme; My fole earths heauen, and my heavens clame. Luc. All this my fitter is, or else shou'd be. Ant. Call thy felle fitter sweet, for I am thee: Thee will I loue, and with thee lead my life; Thou haft no husband yet, nor I no wife: Give me thy hand.

Luc. Oh soft sir, hold you still: Ile fetch my fitter to get her good will.

Enter Dromio, Siracusa.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where run'n thou fo fast?

S. Dro. Doe you know me sir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I thy felle?

Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy felle.

Dro. I am an afle, I am a women man, and besides my felle.

Ant. What women man? and how besides thy felle?

Dro. Marrie sir, besides my felle, I am due to a woman: One that claimes me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. What
The Comedie of Errors.

Ant. What cliame laies thee to thee?

Dro. Marry sir, such cliame as you would lay to your horfe, and the would have me as a beast, not that I beeing a beast the would have me, but that the being a ve-rie beaftly creature layes cliame to me.

Ant. What is thee?

Dro. A very reuerent body : I such a one, as a man may not speake of, without he say sir reuerence, I hauve but leane lucke in the match, and yet is the a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. How dought thou meane a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry sir, she's the Kitchin wench, & al greafe, and I know not what vide to put her too, but to make a Lampe of her, and run from her by her owne light. I warrant, her rages and the Tallow in them, will burne a Poland Winter : If the liues till doome-day, she'll burne a weeke longer then the whole World.

Ant. What complexion is thee of?

Dro. Swart like my shoo, but her face nothing like so cleane kept : for why? she sweats a man may see ouer-chooses in the grime of it.

Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No sir, 'tis in graine, Noah's flood could not do it.

Ant. What's her name?

Dro. Nell Sir : but her name is three quarters, that's an Ell and three quarters, will not meare her from hip to hip.

Ant. Then the beares some breth?

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hippe to hippe : she is spherically like a globe : I could find out Countries in her.

Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry sir in her buttuckes, I found it out by the bogges.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrenesse, hard in the palme of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forthead, arm'd and reverted, making warre against her heire.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalklie Cliffs, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I guesse, it flood in her chin by the salt rheume that ranne betwixt France, and it.

Ant. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I knew it not; but I felt it hot in her breth.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh sir, upon her nofe, all ore embellished with Rubies, Carbuncales, Saphires, declining their rich Al-pect to the hot breath of Spaine, who fent whole Ar-madoes of Carrefts to be ballaat at her nofe.

Ant. Where flood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh sir, I did not looke so low. To conclude, this drudge or Duiner layd cliame to mee, call'd mee Dromio, I swore I was affured to her, told me what pruie marks I had about me, as the marke of my shoulder, the Mole in my necke, the great Wart on my left arm, that I amaz'd ranne from her as a witch. And I thinke, if my brest had not beene made of faith, and my heart of fleete, she had transform'd me to a Curtull dog, & made me turne i' th' wheel.

Ant. Go hie thee presently, poit to the rode,

And if the winde blow any way from shore,

I will not harbour in this Towne to night.

If any Barke put forth, come to the Mart,

Where I will walke till thou returne to me:

If euerie one knowes vs, and we know none,

'Tis time I thinke to trudge, packe, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Beare a man would run for life,

So file I from her that would be my wife.

Exit.

Ant. There's none but Witches doe inhabite heree,

And therefore 'tis his time that I were hence:

She that doth call me husband, even my foule

Doth for a wife abhorre.

But her faire fitter

Poss't with fuch a gentle fouereign grace,

Of such enchanting prefence and difcourfe,

Hath almost made me Traitor to my felfe:

But leat my felfe be guilty to felfe wrong,

Ile stop mine cares against the Mermaids fong.

Enter Angelo with the Chaine.

Ang. Mr Antipholus.

Ant. I that's my name.

Ang. I know it well sir, loe here's the chaine,

I thought to have tane you at the Porpentine,

The chaine vnfin'd made me flay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I fhall do with this?

Ang. What pleafe your felfe sir : I have made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me fir, I bepoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have:

Go home with it, and pleafe your Wife withal,

And foone at supper time Ile vifit you,

And then receive my money for the chaine.

Ant. I pray you sir receive the money now,

For feare you re'ree fuch chaine, nor many more.

Ang. You are a merry man sir, fare you well.

Exit.

Ant. What I should thinke of this, I cannot tell:

But this I thinke, there's no man is fo vaine,

That would refuse to faire an offer'd Chaine.

I fee a man herehe needs not liue by shifts,

When in the streets he meets fuch Golden gifts:

Ile to the Mart, and there for Dromio flay,

If any flhip put out, then ftraight away.

Exit.

Aenetus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Merchant,Goldsmitth, and an Officer.

Mar. You know since Pentecoft the sum is due,

And since I have not much importun'd you,

Nor now I had not, but that I am bound

To Perfa, and want Gilders for my voyage:

Therefore make present satisfaction,

Or Ile attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Even iuft the sum that I do owe to you,

Is gowing to me by Antipholus,

And in the infant that I met with you,

He had of me a Chaine, at five a clocke

I fhall receive the money for the fame:

Pleafe thy walke with me downe to his Houfe,

I will discharge my bond, and thanke you too.

Enter Antipholus Ephefi-Dromio from the Courtinans.

Offi. That labour may you faue: See where he comes.

Ant. While I go to the Goldsmiths houfe, go thou

And
The Comedie of Errors.

93

And buy a ropes end, that will I bestow
Among my wife, and ther their confedrates,
For locking me out of my doores by day:
But soft I fee the Goldsmith get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

[Dra. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.

Exit Dramio

Epb. Ant. A man is well holp vp that truth to you,
I promisde your presence, and the Chaine,
But neither Chaine nor Goldsmith came to me:
Belike you thought our loue would laft too long
If it were chain'd together: and therefore came not.

Gold. Saving your merrie humor: here's the note
How much your Chaine weigheth to the vmpofh charge,
The finenesse of the Gold, and chargefull fattoon,
Which doth amount to three odd, Ducks more
Then I stand debted to this Gentleman,
I pray you fee him prefently difcharge,
For he is bound to Sea, and flayes for but it.

Ant. I am not furnisht with the prefent monie:
Befides I have some bufinesse in the towne,
Good Signior take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the Chaine, and bid my wife
Disburfe the funnee, on the receit thereof,
Perchance I will be there as foone as you.

Gold. Then you will bring the Chaine to her your felue.

Ant. No beare it with you, leaft I come not time enoough.

Gold. Well sir, I will: Have you the Chaine about you?

Ant. And if I have not sir, I hope you have:
Or else you may returne without your money.

Gold. Nay come I pray you sir, give me the Chaine:
Both winde and tide flayes for this Gentleman,
And I too blame haue held him heere too long.

Ant. Good Lord, you vse this dalliance to excufe
Your breach of promife to the Portepine,
I shoulde have chid you for not bringing it,
But like a fhrew you firit begin to brawle.

Mar. The houre flatea on, I pray you sir dispatch.

Gold. You hear he how he importunes me, the Chaine.

Ant. Why gie it to my wife, and fetch your monie.

Gold. Come, come, you know I giae it you even now.
Either fend the Chaine, or fend me by fome token.

Ant. Fie, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chaine, I pray you let me fee it.

Mar. My bufineffe cannot brooke this dalliance,
Good sir fay, whe're you'lanfer me, or no:
If not, ile leave him to the Officer.

Ant. I anfer you? What flould I anfer you.

Gold. The monie that you owe me for the Chaine.

Ant. I owe you none, till I receive the Chaine.

Gold. You know I gaue it you halfe an houre fince.

Ant. You gaue me none, you wrong mee much to fay fo.

Gold. You wrong me more fir in denying it.

Consider how it flands upon my credit.

Mar. Well Officer, arret him at my fuite.

Offi. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to obey me.

Gold. This touches me in reputation.

Either confent to pay this fune for me,
Or I attach you by this Officer.

Ant. Confent to pay thee that I never had:
Arreft me foolifh fellow if thou darft.

Gold. Heere is thy fe, arreft him Officer.

I would not fpare my brother in this cafe,
If he should fcorne me fo apparantly.

Offi. I do arreft you sir, you heare the fuite.

Ant. I do obey thee, till I glue thee baile.

But firrah, you shall buy this sport as deere,
As all the mettall in your fhop will anfwer.

Gold. Sir, fir, I shall haue Law in Epsophu,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dramio Sira, from the Bay.

Dra. Mafter, there's a Barke of Epidamium,
That flayes but till her Owner comes abroad,
And then fir he bears away. Our fraughtage fir,
I hauecomed'aboard, and I haue bought
The Oyle, the Ballamam, and Aqua-vitae.
The ship is in her trim, the merrie winde
Blows faire from land: they flay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Mafter, and your felue.

Ant. How now? a Madman? Why thou peeuifh sheep
What fhip of Epidamium flayes for me.

S'Dra. A ship you fent me too, to hier waftage.

Ant. Thou drunken flawe, I fent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpofe, and what end.

S'Dra. You fent me for a ropes end as foone,
You fent me to the Bay fir, for a Barke.

Ant. I will debate this matter at more leifure
And teach your cares to lift me with more heede:
To Adriana Villaine hee thia straight:
Give her this key, and tell her in the Dafeke
That's couer'd o're with Turkifh Tapiftrie,
There is a purfe of Duckets, let her fend it:
Tell her, I am arrested in the streete,
And that that baile me: hee thia flawe, be gone,
On Officer to prifon, till it come.

Exit. S. Dramio. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowfabell did claime me for her husband,
She is too bigge I hope for me to compaffe,
Thither I muff, although againft my will:
For feruants mufit their Masters mindes fullifh.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Might'ft thou perceiue aufferely in his eie,
That he did plead in earneft, yea or no:
Look'd he or red or pale, or fad or merrily?
What obfervation mad'ft thou in this cafe?
Oh, his hearts Meteors timeling in his face.

Luc. Firft he den'de you had in him no right.

Adr. He meant he di did me none: the more my spight
Luc. Then fhowre he that he was a ftranger heere.

Adr. And true he swore, though yet ffordorned hee were.

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what faid he?

Luc. That loue I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.

Adr. With what perfwadion did he tempt thy loue?

Luc. With words, that in an honeft fuit might moue.

Firft, he did praife my beautie, then my speech.

Adr. Did it fpeak him faire?

Luc. I have patience I beleech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongue, though not my heart, shall haue his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old, and fere, ill-fac'd, worfe bodied, shapeffe every where:
Vicious, vangent, foolifh, blunt, vnkinde.

Stigma-
The Comedie of Errors.

Stigmatically in making worfe in minde.

Luc. Who would be jealous then of such a one?
No eunill lost is wall’d, when it is gone.

Adr. Ah but I thinke him better then I say:
And yet would herein others eies were worse:
Farre from her neft the Lapwing cries away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue doe curse.

Enter S. Dromio.

S. Dro. Here goe: the deske, the purfe, sweet now make haft.

Luc. How haft thou lost thy breath?
S. Dro. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy Master Dromio? Is he well?
S. Dro. No, he’s in Tartar limbo, worfe then hell:
A diuell in an everlasting garment hath him;
On whose hard heart is button’d vp with Steele:
A Feind, a Fairie, pitiflesse and ruffe:
A Wolf,e, a Wourfe, a fellow all in buffe:
A Back friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermads
The paffages of allies, creekes, and narrow lands:
A hound that runs Counter, and yet draws droifto well,
One that before the Judgme'tt carrieth poore foules to hel.

Adr. Why man, what is the matter?
S. Dro. I doe not know the matter, hee is refted on the cafe.

Adr. What is he arrested? tell me at whose suite?
S. Dro. I know not at whose suite he is arrested well;
but is in a suite of buffe which refted him,that can I tell,
will you send him Miftris redemption, the monie in his deske.

Adr. Go fetch it Sifer: this I wonder at.

Exit Luciana.

Thus he vnknowne to me should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?
S. Dro. Not on a band, but on a stronger things:
A chaine, a chaine, doe you not here it ring.

Adria. What, the chaine?
S. Dro. No, no, the bell, ’tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clocke strikes one.

Adr. The hours come backe, that did I neuer here.
S. Dro. Oh yes, if any hour meete a Servient, a turns backe for vere feare.

Adri. As if time were in debt: how fondly do’t thou reafon?
S. Dro. Time is a verie bankerout, and owes more then he’s worth to feaon.
Nay,he’s a thief too: haue you not heard men say,
That time comes fleeting on by night and day?
If I be in debt and theft, and a Servient in the way,
Hath he not reafon to turne backe an hour in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go Dromio, there’s the monie, beare it straight,
And bring thy Master home immediately.
Comeifter, I am preft downe with conceit:
Concern’d my comfort and my injurie.

Exit.

Enter Antipholus Sirecyllia.

There’s not a man I meet but doth salute me
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And euerie one doth call me by my name:
Some tender monie to me, some invite me;
Some other glue me thankes for kindnesse;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor cal’d me in his shop,

And shou’d me Silkes that he had bought for me,
And therewithall tooke measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginare wifes,
And Iapland Sorcerers inhabithe here.

Enter Dromio Sir.

S. Dro. Master, here’s the gold you sent me for: what have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel’d?

Ant. What gold is this? What Adam do’t thou meane?

S. Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradifie: but that Adam that keeps the prifon; hee that goes in the caules-skin, that was kill’d for the Prodiggall: hee that came behinde you fir, like an euill angel, and bid you forake your libertie.

Ant. I understand thee not.

S. Dro. No? why ’tis a plane cafe: he that went like a Bafe-Viole in a cafe of leather; the man fir, that when gentlemen are tired gives them a bob, and reftrs them: he fir, that takes pittie on decayed men, and gives them suites of durance: he that fets vp his ref’t to doe more exploits with his Mace, then a Moris Pike.

Ant. What thou mean’st an officer?

S. Dro. I fir, the Servient of the Band: he that brings any man to answr it that breaks his Band: one that thinks a man alwayes going to bed, and faies, God give you good ref’t.

Ant. Well fir, there ref’t in your foulierie:
Is there any ships puts forth to night? may we be gone?

S. Dro. Why fir, I brought you word an hour since, that the Barke Expeditition put forth to night, and then were you hindered by the Servient to tarry for the Hey Delay: Here are the angels that you fent for to deliver you.

Ant. The fellow is diutract, and fo am I,
And here we wander in illusions:
Some bleffed power deliuer vs from hence.

Enter a Curuesan.

Cur. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus:
I fee fir you have found the Gold-smith now:
Is that the chaine you promis’d me to day.

Ant. Satan avoidance, I charge thee tempt me not.

S. Dro. Master, is this Miftris Satan?

Ant. It is the diuell.

S. Dro. Nay, the is wors’e, she is the diuels dam:
And here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes, that the wenches say God dam me, That’s as much to say, God make me a light wench: It is written, they appear to men like angels of light, light is an effect of fire, and fire will burnes: ergs, light wenches will burne, come not neere her.

Cur. Your man and you are maraulous merrie fir.
Will you goe with me, we’ll mend our dinner here?

S. Dro. Master, if do expect spoon-meate, or beppeakes a long spoone.

Ant. Why Dromio?

S. Dro. Marrie he must have a long spoone that must cate with the diuell.

Ant. Avoid then fiend, what tel’st thou me of sup.
Thou art as you are all a forceffe; (ping)
I enure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cur. Glue me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the Chaine you promis’d,
And Ile be gone fir, and not trouble you.

S. Dro. Some diuels ask but the parings of ones nailes,
The Comedie of Errors.

a ruff, a hairy, a drop of blood, a pin, a nut, a cherrie-stone: but the more courteous, wold have a chaine: Mater be wife, and if you give it her, the diuell will shake her Chaine, and fright vs with it.

Car. I pray you sir my Ring, or else the Chaine,
I hope you do not meane to cheate me fo?
Ant. Auant thou witch: Come Dromio let vs go.
S. Dro. File pride sales the Pea-cocke, Mitrias that you know.

Car. Now out of doubt Antipholus is mad, Elfe would he never so demeane himselfe, A Ring he hath of mine worth fortie Ducks-ket, And for the fame he promis'd me a Chaine,
Both one and other he denies me now:
The reaon that I gather he is mad,
Befides this preuent inconstance of his rage,
Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner,
Of his owne doores being shut against his entrance.
Belike his wife acquainted with his fits,
On purpose shut the doores against his way:
My way is now to his home to his house,
And tell his wife, that being Lunaticke,
He rush'd into my house, and tooke perforce
My Ring away. This course I fittet choose,
For fortie Duckscket is too much to loose.

Enter Antipholus Ephef. with a Tailor.

An. Feare me not man, I will not breake away,
Ile glue thee ere I leave thee fo much money.
To warrant thee as I am refted for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to day,
And will not lightely truft the Messenger,
That I should be attach'd in Ephefus,
I tell you 'twill found harsly in her eares.

Enter 'Dromio Epb. with a ropes end.
Heere comes my Man, I thinke he brings the monie.
How now sir? Have you that I fent you for?
E. Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.
Ant. Flue hundred Duckscket valliant for a rope?
E. Dro. Ile ferue you sir flue hundred at the rate.
Ant. To what end did I bid thee thee home?
E. Dro. To a ropes end fir, and to that end am I re-turn'd.
Ant. And to that end fir, I will welcome you.
Off. Good fir be patient.
E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in aduer-site.
Off. Good now hold thy tongue.
E. Dro. Nay, rather perfiuade him to hold his hands.
Ant. But where's the Money? E. Dro. I would I were fennefelle fir, that I might not feele your blowes.

Ant. Thou art fenneble in nothing but blowes, and so is an Affe.
E. Dro. I am an Affe indeede, you may proue it by my long eares. I have ferved him from the house of my Natuitive to this infant, and have nothing at his hands for my servuce but blowes. When I am cold, he heates me with beating: when I am warme, he cooles me with beating: I am wak'd with it when I sleepe, rais'd with it when I fit, drunen out of doores with it when I goe from home, welcom'd home with it when I returne, nay
I beare it on my shoulde, as a begger woont her brat:
and I thinke when he hath lam'd me, I shall begge with it from doore to doore.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtian. and a Schoolemater, call'd Pinch.

Ant. Come goe along, my wife is comming yonder.
E. Dro. Mitrias interfices firmes, refpect your end, or rather the prophesy like the Parrat, beware the ropes end.
Car. How eyre you now? Is not your husband mad?
Ant. His incendiour confirmes no leffe.
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjuror,
Establish him in his true fence agayne,
And I will pleafe you what you will demand.
Luc. Alas how fiery, and how fharpe he looks.
Car. Marke, how he trembles in his extaffe.
Pinch. Glue me your hand, and let mee feele your pulse.
Ant. There is my hand, and let it feele your eare.
Pinch. I charge thee Sathan, how'd within this man,
To yeeld poftiffion to my hole praier.
And to thy flate of darknesc he thee straight,
I conuire thee by all the Saints in heauen.
Ant. Peace doting wizard, peace; I am not mad.
Adr. Oh that thou wert not, poor diftressed foule.
Ant. You Minion you, are thefe your Customers?
Did this Companion with the faffron face
Recuell and feeal it at my house to day,
While I vpon me the guiltie doores were flut,
And I denied to enter in my house.
Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home
Where would you had remain'd vntill this time,
Free from thee flanders, and this open flame.

Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villaine, what fayefth
thou?
Dro. Sir footh to fay, you did not dine at home.
Ant. Were not my doores lockt vp, and I flut out?
Dro. Perdie, your doores were lockt, and you flut out.

Ant. And did not the her felfe reuile me there?
Dro. Sants Fable, the her felfe reuill'd you there.
Ant. Did not her Kitchen maide rauie, taunt, and fororne me?
Dro. Certis the did, the kitchin vettall fcom'd you.
Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?
Dro. In veritie you did, my bones beares witneffe,
That fince have felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. It's good to footh him in thefe contraries?
Pinch. It is no fame, the fellow finds his vaine,
And yeelding to him, humors well his frendie.
Ant. Thou haft fouborn'd the Goldsmith to arreft mee.

Adr. Alas, I fent you Monie to redeeme you,
By 'Dromio heere, who came in haft for it.
Dro. Monie by me? Heart and good will you might,
But feruely Master not a ragge of Monie.
Ant. Went not thou to her for a purfe of Duckscket.
Adr. He came to me, and I deliuier'd it.
Luc. And I am witneffe with her that she did:
Dro. God and the Rope-maker beare me witneffe,
That I was fent for nothing but a rope.
Pinch. Mitrias, both Man and Master is poifett,
I know it by their pale and deadly lookers,
The Comedie of Errors.

They must be bound and laide in some darke roome.

\textit{Ant.} Say wherefore didst thou locke me forth to day, And why dost thou denie the bagge of gold?
\textit{Adr.} I did not gentle husband locke thee forth. But I confesse sir, that we were lock'd out.
\textit{Dro.} And gentle M' I receiued no gold:

Enter three or foure, and offer to binde him:

\textit{Hee siris.}

\textit{Adr.} Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neere me.

\textit{Pinch.} More company, the fiend is strong within him.
\textit{Luc.} Aye me poor man, how pale and wan he looks.
\textit{Ant.} What will you murther me, thou Tailor thou?

I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?

\textit{Off.} Masters let him go: he is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

\textit{Pinch.} Go binde this man, for he is frantick too.
\textit{Adr.} What wilt thou do, thou peevish Officer? Hast thou delight to see a wretched man Do outrage and displeasure to himselfe?

\textit{Off.} He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
\textit{Adr.} I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Bear me forthwith vnto his Creditor, And knowing how the debt growes I will pay it.

Good-Master Doctor see him safe convej'd Home to my house, oh moost vnhappy day.
\textit{Ant.} Oh moit vnhappy trumpet.
\textit{Dro.} Master, I am heere entred in bond for you.
\textit{Ant.} Out on thee Villaine, wherefore doft thou mad mee?

\textit{Dro.} Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good Master, cry the duell.

\textit{Luc.} God helpe poore foules, how ideely doe they talke.

\textit{Adr.} Go bare him hence, fetter go you with me:
Say now, whose suitte is he arrested at?

\textit{Off.} One \textit{Angelo} a Goldsmith, do you know him?
\textit{Adr.} I know the man: what is the summe he owes?
\textit{Off.} Two hundred Duckets.
\textit{Adr.} Say, how growes it due.
\textit{Off.} Due for a Chaine your husband had of him.
\textit{Adr.} He did bespeake a Chaine for me, but had it not.
\textit{Car.} When as your husband all in rage to day Came to my houfe, and tooke away my Ring,
The Ring I faw upon his finger now;
Straight after did I meete him with a Chaine.

\textit{Adr.} It may be fo, but I did neuer see it.
Come Iailor, bring me where the Goldsmith is, I long to know the truth heerof at large.

\textit{Enter Antipholus Siras'ia with his Rapier drawn, and Dromio Siras.}

\textit{Luc.} God for thy mercy, they are loose againe.

\textit{Adr.} And come with naked swords, Let's call more helpe to hau'e them bound againe.

\textit{Runne all out.}

\textbf{Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.}

\textit{Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.}

\textit{Gold.} I am sorry Sir that I have hinded you, But I protest he had the Chaine of me,
Though moft dishonestly he doth deny it.

\textit{Mar.} How is the man esteem'd here in the City?

\textit{Gold.} Of very reverent reputationSir, Of credit infinite, highly belov'd, Second to none that liues here in the Citie:
His word might beare my wealth at any time.

\textit{Mar.} Speake softly, yonder as I thynke he walkes.

\textit{Enter Antipholus and Dromio againe.}

\textit{Gold.} 'Tis so: and that selfe chaine about his necke, Which he forswore most monstrously to have.
Good sir draw neere to me, Ile bespeake to him:
Signior \textit{Antipholus}, I wonder much That you would put me to this shame and trouble, And not without some feacdall to your selfe,
With circumstance and oaths, so to denie This Chaine, which now you weare so openly.

\textit{Befide the charge, the shame, imprisonment, You have done wrong to this my honest friend, Who but for staying on our \textit{Controverfie}, Had hoifted falle, and put to fce to day:
This Chaine you had of me, can you deny it?

\textit{Ant.} I thinke I had, I neuer did deny it.
\textit{Mar.} Yes that you did fir, and forswore it too.

\textit{Ant.} Who heard me to denie it or forswiere it are?
\textit{Mar.} Thefe cares of mine thou knowft did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pity that thou liu'ft!

\textit{To walke where any honeft men refor't.}

\textit{Ant.} Thou art a Villaine to impeach me thus, Ile proue mine honor, and mine honefte
Against thee prefently, if thou dar'ft fland:

\textit{Mar.} I dare and do defeie thee for a villaine.

\textit{They draw.} \textit{Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtoisian, & others.}
\textit{Adr.} Hold, hurt him not for God sake, he is mad, Some get within him, take his fword away:
Binde Dromio too, and beare them to my houfe.

\textit{Dro.} Runne master run, for Gods sake take a houfe,
This is some Priorie, in or we are foyp'd.

\textit{Exeunt to the Priorie. Enter}
Enter Lady Abbese.

Ab. Be quiet people, wherefore throng ye hither?
Adr. To fetch my poor distraffed husband hence,
Let vs come in, that we may binde him saf,
And beare him home for his recoyrie,
Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
Mar. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.
Ab. How long hath this poffeffion held the man.
Adr. This weeke he hath beene heauie, fower fad,
And much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoone his passion
Ne're brake into extremity of rage.
Ab. Hath he not loft much wealth by wrack of sea,
Buried fome deere friend, hath not elfe his eye
Stray'd his affencion in vainfull loue,
A finne prevailing much in youngfull men,
Who glue their eies the liberty of gazing.
Which of these forrowes is he fubiect too?
Adr. To none of thefe, except it be the laft,
Namely, fome loue that draw him oft from home.
Ab. You fhou'd for that have reprehended him.
Adr. Why fo I did.
Ab. I but not rough enough.
Adr. As roughly as my modeftie would let me.
Ab. Haply in private.
Adr. And in assemblies too.
Ab. I, but not enough.
Adr. It was the copie of our Conference.
In bed he loft not for my vrging it,
At board he fed not for my vrging it:
alone, it was the fubiect of my Theme:
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him, it was vife and bad.
Ab. And thereof came it, that the man was mad.
The venome clamors of a feafional woman,
Polions more deadly then a mad dogges tooth.
It feemes his fleepes were hindered by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou fayft his meane was fawed with thy wpbraidings,
Vnquiet meales make ill digestion.
Thereof the raging fire of feauer bred,
And what's a Feauer, but a fit of madness?
Thou fayft his fipes were hindered by thy bralles.
Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth enufe
But modie and dull melancholly.
Kinfman to grim and comfortlefe depair,
And at her heales a huge infecious troope
Of pale diftemperatures, and foes to life?
In food, in fport, and life-prefering reft
To be distur'd, would mad or man, or beaf:
The confequence is then, thy jealous fits
Hath scar'd thy husband from the vie of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he demeane'd himfelfe, rough, rude, and wildly,
Why bear ye these rebukes, and anfwer not?

Adr. She did betray me to my owne reprofe,
Good people enter, and lay hold on him.

Ab. No, not a creature enters in my house.
Adr. Then let your fervants bring my husband forth
Ab. Neither: he tooke this place for fanctuary,
And it thall pruiledge him from your hands,
Till I haue brought him to his wins againe,
Or loose my labours in affaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurfe,
Diet his fickneffe, for it is my Office,
And will have no attourney but my felfe,
And therefore let me haue him home with me.
Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him flire,
Till I haue ye'ld the approv'd means I haue,
Wich wholome frrups, drugges, and holy prayers
To make of him a formall man againe:
It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,
A charitable dutie of my order,
Therefore and depart, and leave him heere with me.

Adr. I will not hence, and leave my husband heere:
And ill it doth befeeme your holineffe
To separate the husband and the wife.

Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not have him.
Luc. Complaine vnto the Duke of this indignity.
Adr. Come go, I will fell proflrate at his feetes,
And never rife untill my teares and prayers
Haue won his grace to come in perfon hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbesse.

Mar. By this I thinke the Dilall points at fute:
Anon I'me fure the Duke himfelfe in perfon
Comes this way to the melancholly vale;
The place of depth, and forrie execution,
Behinde the ditches of the Abbey heere.

Gold. Vpon what caufe?
Mar. To fee a reuerent Siracufan Merchant,
Who put vnluckily into this Bay
Against the Lawes and Statutes of this Towne,
Beheaded publickely for his offence.

Gold. See where they come, we behold his death
Luc. Kneele to the Duke before he paffe the Abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephebus, and the Merchant of Siracuse, bare head, with the Headman, & other Officers.

Duke. Yet once againe proclame it publiquely,
If any friend will pay the fumme for him,
He flall not die, fo much we tender him.

Adr. In due moft fared Duke againft the Abbffe.
Duke. She is a vertuous and a reuerend Lady,
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it pleafe your Grace, Antipholus my husba'd,
Who I made Lord of me, and all I had,
At your important Letters this ill day,
A moft outrageus fit of madneffe tooke him:
That deplorably he hurried through the streete,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,
Doing difpleaflure to the Citizens,
By ruffing in their houses: bearing thence Rings, Jewells, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and fent him home,
Whil't to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his furie had committed,
Anon I wrought not, by what ftrong ecape
He broke from thofe that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himfelf,
Each one with irrefull paflion, with drawnne swords
Met vs againe, and madly bent on vs
Chac'd vs away: till raifing of more aide
We came againe to binde them: then they fled
Into this Abbey, whether we purf'd them,
And heere the Abbffe shuts the gates on vs,
And will not fuffer vs to fetch him out,
Nor fend him forth, that we may beare him hence.

Therefore
Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since thy husband seru'd me in my wars
And I to thee ingrâ'd a Princes word,
When thou diest make him Master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go some of you, knocke at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbesse come to me:
I will determine this before I flirre.

Enter a Messenger.

Oh Miftris, Miftris, shift and fave your selfes,
My Master and his man are both broke looke,
Before the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor,
Whole beare they haue fndg'd off with brands of fire,
And euer as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pales of puddled myre to quench the haire;
My M' preschess patience to him, and the while
His man with Citizens nickes him like a foole:
And fure (vntlefe you fende fome prefent helpe)
Betweene them they will kill the Coniurer.

Adr. Peace foole, thy Master and his man are here,
And that is falf thou doft report to vs.

Meff. Miftris, vpon my life I tel you true,
I haue not breath'd almoft fince I did fee it.
He cries for you, and vowes if he can take you,
To fcourch your face, and to diffiguere you:

Cry within.

Harke, harke, I heare him Miftris: flie, be gone.

Duke. Come fland by me, feare nothing: guard with Halberds.

Adr. Ay me, it is my husband: witneffe you,
That he is borne about infubile,
Euen now we hou'd him in the Abbey heere.
And now he's there, paft thought of humane reaſon.

Enter Antipholus, and E. Dromio of Ephesius.

(Eflce, E.Ant. Ifuife most gracious Duke, oh grant me iu-
Euen for the feruice that long fince I did feue,
When I beftrid thee in the warres, and tooke
Deepe fcares to faue thy life: euen for the blood
That then I loft for thee, now grant me ifuifce.

Marr.Fatt. Vntlefe the feare of death doth make me dote, I fee my fonne Antipholus and Dromio.

E.Ant. Ifuife (sweet Prince) againft
Woman there: She whom thou gai't'nto me to be my wife;
That hath abu'd and dihonor'd me,
Euen in the strength and height of injurie:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That thefe day hath shameleffe throwne on me.

Duke. Diſcouer how, and thou shalt finde me iuifte.

E.Ant. This day (great Duke) the flut the doores vpon me,
While the with Harlots reafhed in my howse.

Duke. A greuous fault: fay woman, dif't thou fo?

Adr. No my good Lord. My felfe, he, and my fifter,
To day did dine togethe: fo befal my foule,
As this is falf he burthen me withall.

Luc. Nere may I looke on day, nor fleepe on night,
But the tels to your Highneffe fimpie truth.

Gold. O periu'd woman! They are both foriworne,
In this the Madman iuftly chargeth them.

E.Ant. My Liege, I am auifued what I fay,
Neither difturbed with the effect of Wine,
Nor headie-rath pronoua'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wifer mad.

This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner;
That Goldfmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witneffe it: for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chaine,
Promifing to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balbafyar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not comming thither,
I went to feeke him. In the freet I met him,
And in his companie that Gentleman.
There did this periu'd Goldfmitheware me done,
That I this day of him receu'd the Chaine,
Which God he knowes, I faw not. For the which,
He did arreft me with an Officer.
I did obey, and fent my Pefant home
For certaine Duket's: he with none return'd.
Then fairely I belpoke the Officer
To go in perfon with me to my howfe.

Byth.wy, we met my wife, her fifter, and a rabble more
Ofvide Confederates: Along with them
They brought one Pind, a hungry leane-fae'd Villaine;
A meere Anatomie, a Mountebanke,
A thred-bare liguer, and a Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-flarpe-locking-wretch;
A liuing dead man. This pernicious fnae,
Forfooth tooke on him as a Coniurer:
And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no-face (as 'twere) out-facing me,
Cries out, I was poifon'd. Then altogether
They fell vpon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a darke and darklfe vault at home.
There left me and my man, both bound together,
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in funder,
I gain'd my freeome; and immediately
Ran hether to your Grace, whom I beechech
To give me ample fatisfacion
For thefe deepd fhaomes, and great indignities.

Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witneffe with him:
That he did not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he fuch a Chaine of thee, or no?

Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in heere,
These peple faw the Chaine about his necke.

Mar. Befoole, I will be sworne thefe cares of mine,
Heard you confefle you had the Chaine of him,
After you firt forwore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my fword on you:
And then you fied into this Abbey heere,
From whence I thinkke you are come by Miracle.

E.Ant. I never came within thefe Abbey wals,
Nor euer dif't thou draw thy fword on me:
I never faw the Chaine, fo helpe me heavem:
And this is falf ye burthen me withall.

Duke. Why what an intricate impace is this?
I thinkke you all haue drunke of Ciriets cup:
If heere you hous'd him, heere he would haue bin.
If he were mad, he would not pleade fo coldly:
You fay he din'd at home, the Goldfmith heere
Denies that faying. Sirra, what fay you?

E.Dre. Sir he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.

Car. He did, and from my finger fnacht that Ring.

E.Ant. Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'ft thou him enter at the Abbey heere?

Car. As fure (my Liege) as I do fee your Grace.

Duke. Why this is straunge: Go call the Abbiffe hither.
I thinkke you are all mated, or fkarke mad.
The Comedie of Errors.

Exit one to the Abbeffe.

Fa. Moit mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speake a word:
Haply I fee a friend will faue my life,
And pay the fum that may deliver me.
Farb. Is not your name Sir call'd Antipbolus?
And is not that your bondman Dro'dio?
E. Dro. Within this houre I was his bondman Sir,
But so I thanke him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dro'dio, and his man, unbound.
Farb. I am sure you both of you remember me.
Dro. Ous felves we do remember Sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches patient, are you Sir?
Father. Why looke you strange on me? you know me well.
E. Ant. I never faw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh, griefe hath chang'd me since you faw me left,
And carefull hours with times deformed hand,
Have written strange defeaters in my face:
But tell me yet, doft thou not know my voice?
Ant. Neither.
Fat. Dro's, nor thou Sir?
Dro. No truft me Sir, nor I.
Fa. I am sure thou doft?
E. Dro'mio. I Sir, but I am sure I do not, and whatsoeuer a man denies, you are now bound to beleue him.
Farb. Not know my voice, oh times t'oremony
Hait thou fo crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In feuen short yeares, that heere my onely fonne
Knowes not my feeble key of vnrun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In fan-comfuming Winten drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze vp:
Yet hath my night of life fome memorie:
My wafting lampes fome fading glimmer left;
My dull deafe eares a little fife to heare:
All thefe old witneffe, I cannot erre,
Tell me, thou art my fonne Antipbolus.
Ant. I never faw my Father in my life.
Fa. But feuen yeares fince, in Siracufa boy
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my fonne,
Thou fhal'ft to acknowledge me in militer.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witneffe with me that it is not so.
I ne're faw Siracufa in my life.
Duke. I tell thee Siracufan, twente yeares
Haue I bin Patron to Antipbolus,
During which time, he ne're faw Siracufa:
I fee thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbeffe with Antipbolus Siracufa, and Dro'mio Sir.

Abbeffe. Moit mightie Duke, behold a man much wrong'd.
All gather to see them.

Adr. I fee two husbands, or mine eyes deceiue me.
Duke. One of these men is gentil to the other:
And fo of thefe, which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphs them?
S. Dro'mio. I Sir am Dro'mio, command him away.
E. Dro. I Sir am Dro'mio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or effe his ghost.

S. Dro'mio. Oh my olde Mafter, who hath bound him here?
Abb. Who euer bound him, I will lofe his bonds,
And gaine a husband by his libertie:
Speake olde Egeon, if thou be'ft the man
That hadst a wife once call'd e'Emilia,
That bore thee at a barthen two faire fonnes?
Oh if thou be'ft the fame Egeon, speake:
And speake vnto the fame e'Emilia.
Duke. Why heere begins his Morning forie right:
These two Antipbolus, these two fo like,
And these two Dro'mio's, one in semblance:
Besides her virging of her wracke at sea,
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Fa. If I dreame not, thou art e'Emilia,
If thou art thee, tell me, where is that fonne
That floated with thee on the faftall raffe.
Abb. By men of Epidamium, he, and I,
And the two Dro'mio's, all were taken vp;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinnt
By force tooke Dro'mio, and my fonne from them,
And me they left with thefe of Epidamium.
What then became of them, I cannot tell:
I, to this fortune that you fee mee in.
Duke. Antipbolus thou cam'ft from Corinnt firft.
S. Ant. No Sir, not I, I came from Siracufa.
Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which.
E. Ant. I came from Corinnt my moft gracious Lord
E. Dro. And with I him.
E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that moft famous Warriour,
Duke Menepbon, your moft renowned Vnkle.
Adr. Which if of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Miftirs.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No, I fay na to that.
S. Ant. And fo do I, yet did fhe call me fo:
And this faire Gentlewoman her fifter heere
Did call me brother. What I told you then,
I hope I haue leulfure to make good,
If this be not a dreame I fee and heare.
Goldsmit. That is the Chaine fir, which you had of mee.
S. Ant. I thinke it be fir, I denie it not.
E. Ant. And you fir for this Chaine arrested me.
Gold. I thinke I did fir, I deny it not.
Adr. I fent you monie fir to be your baile
By Dro'mio, but I thinke he brought it not.
E. Dro. No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purfe of Duckets I receiued from you,
And Dro'mio my man did bring them me:
I fee we still did meece each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
E. Ant. Thefe Duckets pawnne I for my father heere.
Duke. It shall not neede, thy father hath his life,
Car. Sir I must haue that Diamond from you,
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheere.
Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the paines
To go with vs into the Abbey heere,
And heare at large dicourfed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this sympathized one daies error
Hau'e suffer'd wrong. Go, keepe vs companie.
And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirtie three yeares haue I gone in trouaile
Of you my fonnes, and till this preuent houre
My heauie burthen are deliuered:
The Duke my husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Natiuity,
Go to a Goffips feaft, and go with mee,
After fo long greefe such Natiuitie.
Duke. With all my heart, Ile Goffip at this feaft.

Exeunt omnes. Manet the two Dromio’s and two Brothers.
S.Dro. Maft. shall I fetch your stuffe from shipbord?
E.Dro. Dromio, what stuffe of mine haft thou imbarkt
S.Dro. Your goods that lay at hoff fir in the Centaur.
S.Ant. He speakes to me, I am your master Dromio.

Come go with vs, wee’ll looke to that anon,
Embrace thy brother there, rejoyce with him.
S.Dro. There is a fat friend at your masters houfe,
That kitchin’d me for you to day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife,
E.Dro. I see by you, I am a sweet-face’d youth,
I see by you, I am a sweet-face’d youth,
Will you walke in to see their goslimping?
S. Dro. Not I sir, you are my elder.
E. Dro. That’s a question, how shall we trie it.
S. Dro. Wee’ll draw Cuts for the Signior, till then, lead thou firft.
E. Dro. Nay then thus:
Wee came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let’s go hand in hand, not one before another.

Finis.
Enter Leonato Gournour of Messina, Innogen bis wife, Hero bis daughter, and Beatrice bis niece, with a messenger.

Leonato. Learn in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon, comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very neere by this: he was not three Leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any fort, and none of name.

Leon. A victorie is twice as felie, when the attcherer brings home full numbers: I finde heere, that Don Peter hath bestowed much honor on a yong Florentine, call'd Claudius.

Mess. Much deferu'd on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath borne himselfe beyond the promis of his age, doing in the figure of a Lambe, the feats of a Lion, he hath indeede better betted expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an vnkle heere in Messina, will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have alreadie delilvered him letters, and there appeares much joy in him, even so much, that Joy could not shew it felie modest enough, without a bag of bitteneffe.

Leo. Did he break out into teares?

Mess. In great meafeure.

Leo. A kinde overflour of kindneffe, there are no faces truer, then thofe that are so wahr'd, how much better is it to weep at joy, then to joy at weeping.

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Montanto return'd from the warres, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none fuch in the armie of any fort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for Neece?

Her. My cousin meanes Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O he's return'd, and as pleasant as euer he was.

Beat. He set vp his billes here in Messina, & challeng'd Cupid at the Fliht: and my vnckles foole reading the Challenge, subfcribd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Burbolt. I pray you, how many hath hee kil'd and eaten in these warres? But how many hath he kil'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eate all of his killing.

Leon. Faith Neece, you take Signior Benedicke too much, but hee'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service Lady in these wars.

Beat. You had muty victual, and he hath holpe to ease it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, hee hath an excellent flamacke.

Mess. And a good foouldier too Lady.

Beat. And a good foouldier to a Lady. But what is he to a Lord?

Mess. A Lord to a Lord, a man to a man, fluft with all honourable vertues.

Beat. It is fo indeed, he is no leffe then a fluft man: but for the fluffling, well, we are all mortall.

Leon. You must not (Sir) mistake my Neece, there is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick, & her: they never meet, but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last confliet, foure of his flue wits went halting off, and now is the whole man gouern'd with one: so that if hee have wit enoue to keepe himselfe warme, let him bear it for a difference betweene himselfe and his horfe: For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be knowne a reaonsable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath euery month a new sworne brother.

Mess. I'th possible?

Beat. Very easilly possible: he weares his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it euers changes with y next block.

Mess. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your bookes.

Beat. No, and he were, I would burne my study. But I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the duell?

Mess. He is moft in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord, he will hang vpvn him like a disafe: he is sooner caught then the perfuifion, and the taker runs prently mad. God helpe the noble Claudio, if hee have caught the Benedic, it will coft him a thousand pound ere he be cur'd.

Mess. I will hold friends with you Lady.

Beat. Do good friend.

Leo. You'll ne're run mad Neece.

Beat. No, not till a hot Januar.

Mess. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Enter don Pedro, Claudin, Benedick, Balibafar, and John the haftard.

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid coft, and you encounter it.

Leon. Neuer came trouble to my house in the likenes of your Grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remaine: but when you depart from me, I dare abide, and happenneffe takes his leave.
Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly: I think this is your daughter.

Leonato. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bened. Were you in doubt that you ask her?

Leonato. Signior Benedick, no, for then were you a child.

Pedro. You have it full Benedick, we may gape by this, what you are, being a man, truly the Lady fathers her self: be happy Lady, for you are like an honorable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Meffina, as like him as she is.

Bened. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick, no body markes you.

Ben. What my deere Ladie Difdaine ! are you yet living?

Bened. Is it poiffible Difdaine should die, while she hath such mette foode to feede it, as Signior Benedick? Curtefie it selfe must conform to Difdaine, if you come in her preface.

Ben. Then is curtefie a turne-coate, but it is certaine I am loved of all Ladies, onely you excepted: and I would I could finde in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for truely I love none.

Bened. A deere happyfneffe to women, they would else haue beene troubled with a pernicious Suter, I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather heare my Dog barke at a Crow, than a man sweare he loves me.

Bened. God keepe your Ladifhip still in that minde, so some Gentleman or other shall feaue a predestination straftch face.

Bened. Scratching could not make it worfe, and twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare Parrat teacher.

Bened. A bird of my tongue, is better than a beast of your.

Bened. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so I was in continuance, but keepe your way a Gods name, I haue done.

Bened. You alwaies end with a Ladies tricke, I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the fumme of all: Leonato, Signior Claudius, and Signior Benedick; my deere friend Leonato, hath inuited you all, I tell him we shall stay here, at the least a moneth, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain vs longer: I dare sweare hee is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you sweare, my Lord, you shall not be forsworne, let mee bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your brother: I owe you all dutie.

John. I thanke you, I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace leade on ?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will goe together.

Exeunt. Manet Benedickes and Claudius.

Claud. Benedickes, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not, but I lookt on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest yong Ladie?

Bene. Doe you question me as an honest man should doe, for my simple true judgement? or would you have me speake after my custome, as being a professed tyrant to their sexe ?

Pedro. You, John the bafard.

Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato?

Bened. I would your Grace would confraint me to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy alleegance.

Ben. You heare, Count Claudia, I can be secret as a dumbe man, I would have you think fo (but on my alleegance, marke you this, on my alleegance) hee is in loue, With who? now that is your Graces part: marke how short his answere is, with Hero, Leonatoes short daughter.

Claud. If this were fo, fo were it vttred.

Bened. Like the old tale, my Lord, it is not fo, nor twas not fo: but indeede, God forbid it should be fo.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you loue her, for the Ladie is very well worthie.

Claud. You speake this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedro. By my troth I speake my thought.

Claud. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Bened. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speake mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feele.

Pedro. That she is worthie, I know.

Bened. That I neither feele how shee should be loued, nor know how shee should be worthie, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the flake.

Pedro. Thou waft euere an obfinate heretique in the defpit of Beautie.

Claud. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.
Much ado about Nothing.

Ben. That a woman conceived me, I thank her: that she brought me vp, I likewise give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a rechate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldricke, all women shall pardon me: because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will doe my felfe the right to trust none: and the fine is, (for the which I may the goe finer) I will lue a Battчерlor.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover prefently, and tire the hearer with a booke of words: If thou doft loue faire Hero, cherish it, and I will breake with her: waft not to this end, That thou beginnt to twift it for a fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly doe you minifter to loue, that know loues griefe by his complexion! But left my liking might too sodaine feme, I would haue fal'd it with a longer treatise.

Ped. What need you bridge much broder then the flood? The faireft grant is the necelitie: Louke what will ferue, is fit: 'tis once, thow loueft, and I will fhit thee with the remedie, I know we fhall haue reueling to night, I will assume thy part in fome difguife, and tell faire Hero I am Claudio, and in her bofome Ie vnclafe my heart, and take her hearing prisoner with the force and strong incorquet of my amorous tale: Then after, to her father will I break, and the conclusion is, fhee shall be thine, in prefyle let vs put it prefently.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my cugen your fon: hath he proued this muffcke? Old. He is very bufe about it, but brother, I can tell you newes that you yet dreamt not of.

Leo. Are they good? Old. As the euents fflamps them, but they have a good couer: they fhes well outward, the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick pheached alley in my orchard, were thus ouer-heard by a man of mine: the Prince difcouered to Claudio that hee loued my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and if hee found her accordant, hee meant to take the prefent time by the top, and infantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this? Old. A good fharpe fellow, I will fend for him, and question him your felfe.

Leo. No, no; wee will hold it as a dreams, till it appear it felle: but I will acquaint my daughter withall, that she may be the better prepared for an anfwer, if peraduenture this bee true: goe you and tell her of it: coofins, you know what you have to doe, O I crie you merce friend, goe you with mee and I will vfe your skill, good cofin haue a care this bufe time.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir John the Baffard, and Conrade bis companion.

Con. What the good yeere my Lord, why are you thus out of measure fad?

Job. There is no meafeure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the fadneffe is without limit.

Con. You should heare reafon.

Job. And when I haue heard it, what bleffing bringeth it?

Con. If not a prefent remedy, yet a patient fufferance.

Job. I wonder that thou (being as thou failes thou art, borne vnder Saturne) goeft about to apply a morall medicine, to a mortifying milchife: I cannot hide what I am: I muft bee faid when I haue caufe, and smile at no mans ifs, eat when I haue fomacke, and wait for no mans leifure: sleepe when I am drowlie, and tend on no mans busynefe, laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humor.

Con. Yes, but you muft not make the ful fhow of this, till you may doe it without controultment, you haue of late late flood out against your brother, and hee hath tone you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take root, but by the faire weather that you make your selfe, it is needfull that you frame the season for your owne harueft.

<3VLuch. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a rofe in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all, then to fashion a carriage to rob loose from any in this (though I cannot be faid to be a flattering honeft man) it must not be denied but I am a plaine dealing villain, I am trusted with a muscel, and enfranchised with a clog, therefore I haue decreed, not to fing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mane time, let me be that I am, and feeke not to alter me.

Can. Can you make no vfe of your discontent?

<3VLuch. I will make all vfe of it, for I vfe it onely. Who comes here? what newes Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Bor. I came yonder from a great supper, the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

<3VLuch. Will it serve for any Modell to build misthief on? What is hee for a foule that betrothes himselfe to vnuquietneffe?

Bor. Mary it is your brothers right hand.

<3VLuch. Who, the most exquifite Claudius?

Bor. Even he.

<3VLuch. A proper finier, and who, and who, which way looks he?

Bor. Mary on Hero, the daughter and Heire of Leonato.

<3VLuch. A very forward March-chicke, how came you to this?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was smoaking a mutty roome, comes me the Prince and Claudius, hand in hand in flor conference: I whipt behind the Arras, and there heard it agreed upon, that the Prince should wooe Hero for himfelfe, and having obtayned her, give her to Count Claudius.

<3VLuch. Come, come, let us thither, this may proue food to my difpleasure, that young that vp hath all the glorie of my ouerthrow: if I can croffe him any way, I bleepe my selfe every way, you are both fure, and will affift mee?

Corin. To the death my Lord.

<3VLuch. Let vs to the great supper, their cheere is the greater that I am fubdued, would the Cooke were of my minde: shall we goe proue whats to be done?

Bor. Wee'll wait vpon your Lordship.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Leonato, his brother, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his niece, and a kinman.

Leonato. Was not Count John here at supper?

Brother. I saw him not.

Beatrice. How tartly that Gentleman lookes, I nouer can fee him, but I am heart-burn'd an howre after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beatrice. Hee were an excellent man that were made juyt in the mid-way between him and Benedicks, the one is too like an image and faies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldest fonne, euermore tatling.

Leon. Then halfe signior Benedicks tongue in Count Johns mouth, and halfe Count Johns melancholy in Signior Benedicks face.

Beat. With a good legge, and a good foot vnckle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would winne any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neceee, thou wilt nouer get thee a husband, if thou be fo threwd of thy tongue.

Brother. Infaith thee's too curte.

Beat. Too curte is more than curte, I shall leffen Gods fending that way: for it is faid, God fends a curte Cow short hornes, but to a Cow too curte he fends none.

Leon. So, by being too curte, God will fend you no hornes.

Bor. Juyt, if he fend me no husband, for the which bleffing, I am at him vpon my knees every morning and evening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leonato. You may light vpon a husband that hath no beard.

Beatrice. What should I doe with him? dreffe him in my apparell, and make him my waiting gentiewoman? he that hath a beard, is more then a youth: and he that hath no beard, is leffe then a man: and he that is more then a youth, is not for mee: and he that is leffe then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take fixepence in earneft of the Berrord, and leade his Apees into hell.

Leon. Well then, goe you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Deuil meete mee like an old Cuckold with horns on his head, and fay, get you to heauen Beattrice, get you to heauen, here's no place for you maidis, fo deliuer me vp my Apees, and away to S. Peter: for the heauens, hee shewes mee where the Batchellers fit, and there liue wee as merry as the day is long.

Brother. Well neceee, I trust you will be rul'd by your father.

Beatrice. Yes faith, it is my cosens dutie to make curte, and fay, as it pleafe you: but yet for all that cosin, let him be a handfome fellow, or elle make an other curte, and fay, father, as it pleafe me.

Leonato. Well neceee, I hope to fee you one day fitted with a husband.

Beatrice. Not till God make men of some other mettall then earth, would it not griue a woman to be overmattred with a peece of valiant duft? to make account of her life to a clod of waierward marble? no vnckle, ile none: Adams tonnes are my brethren, and truly I hold it a finne to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince doe follicit you in that kinde, you know your anfwere.

Beatrice. The fault will be in the musicke cofin, if you be not wond in good time: if the Prince bee too impor-tant, tell him there is meafore in euery thing, & fo dance out the anfwere, for heare me Hero, wooing, wedding, & repenting, is as a Scotch ijgge, a meafore, and a cinque-pace: the firft fuite is hot and hafty like a Scotch ijgge (and full as fantafical) the wedding manerly modest, (as a meafore) full of state & auncheztry, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he finkes into his grave.

Leonato.
Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudius, and Benedick, and Balthasar, or dumbe Iohn, Maskers with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walke about with your friend? Hero. So you walke softly, and looke sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walke, and especially when I walke away.

Pedro. With me in your company, Hero. I may say so when I please. Pedro. And when please you to say so? Hero. When I like your favoure, for God defend the Lute should be like the cafe.

Pedro. My visor is Philemon's rofe, within the house is Loue.

Hero. Why then your visor should be thatthet.

Pedro. Speake low if you speake Loue. Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Mar. So would not I for your owne sake, for I have mane ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one? Mar. I say my prayers slow. Bene. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen. Mar. God match me with a good dauncer.

Balt. Amen.

Mar. And God keep he out of my fight when the daunce is done: anfwer Clarke.

Balt. No more words, the Clarke is anfwered.

Vrfula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Antonio.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Vrfula. I know you by the wagling of your head.

Anth. To tell you true, I counterfet him.

Vrfula. You could neuer doe him fo ill well, vnlesse you were the very man: here's his dry hand vp & down, you are he, you are he.

Anth. At a word I am not.

Vrfula. Come, come, doe you thinke I doe not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it felte? goe to, mumme, you are he, grace will appeare, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you fo?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bened. Not now.

Beat. That I was disafinfall, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, this was Signior Benedickes that faid fo.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not J, belleece me.

Beat. Did he neuer make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Beat. Why he is the Princes leafer, a very dull foole, onely his gift is, in deuising imposible flanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his witte, but in his villainie, for hee both pleafeth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him: I am sure he is in the Fleet, I would he had boorded me.

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, Ile tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do, hee'll but breake a comparison or two on me, which peradventure (not markt, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholy, and then there's a Par-tride wing fauced, for the foolie will eate no fupper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Ben. In euery good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they leade to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

Exeunt. Much teke for the dance.

Iohn. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawne her father to breake with him about it: the Ladies follow her, and but one visor remaynes.

Barabio. And that is Claudius, I know him by his bearing.

Iohn. Are not you signior Benedick?

Clau. You know me well, I am hee.

Iohn. Signior, you are verie neere my Brother in his love, he is enamor'd on Hero, I pray you difwade him from her, she is no euqal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Clau. How know you he loves her?

Iohn. I heard him swear his affection,

Ber. So did I too, and he swore he would marrie her to night.

Iohn. Come, let vs to the banquet.

Exeunt Clau.

Clau. Thus anfwere I in name of Benedike, But heare these ill newes with the eares of Claudio: 'Tis certaine fo, the Princes woes for himselfe:

Friendship is conftant in all other things, Save in the Office and affaires of loue:

Therefore all hearts in loue vfe their owne tongues. Let euerie eye negotiate for it felfe, And truft no Agent: for beautie is a witch,

Against whole charmes, faith melteth into blood : This is an accident of hourly proofs,

Which I miferufed not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedickes.

Ben. Count Claudio.

Clau. Yea, the fame.

Iohn. Come, will you go with me?

Clau. Whither?

Iohn. Even to the next Willow, about your owne bu-fineffe, Count. What fashion will you weare the Garland off? About your necke, like an Vfurers chaine? Or vnder your arme, like a Lieutenants scarf? You must weare it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau: I wish him joy of her.

Ben. Why that's spoken like an honest Drouer, so they fel Bullockes: but did you thinke the Prince wold haue fered you thus?

Clau. I pray you leave me.

Iohn. Ho now you strike like the blindman, twas the boy that flol your owne sonne, and you'll beat the poft.

Clau. If it will not be, Ile leave you.

Exit. Iohn. Alas poore hurt fowle, now will he creepe into fedges: But that my Ladie Beatrices shold know me, & not know me: the Princes foole! Hah? It may be I goe vnder that title, because I am merrie: yea but I am apt to do my felfe wrong: I am not fo reputed, it is the fafe (though bitter) disposition of Beatrices, that putt's the world into her perfon, and fo gives me out: well, he be reuenge as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, do you see him?

Ben.
Much adoe about Nothing.

Bene. Troth my Lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame, I found him here as melancholy as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I think, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady, and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forswaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a Schoole-boy, who being ouer-loved with finding a birds neft, shews it his companion, and he fleas it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a truft, a transgression? the transgression is in the flealer.

Bene. Yet it had not bene amife the rod had bene made, and the garland too, for the garland he might have wonne himselfe, and the rod hee mighthave beftowd on you, who as I take it haue foine his birds neft.

Pedro. I will but teach them to fing, and reftore them to the owner.

Bene. If their finging answer your faying, by my faith you fay honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you, the Gentleman that daunt with her, told her fhee is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O the misfide me paft the indulance of a block: an oske but with one greene leafe on it, would haue anfwered her: my very vifor began to afume life, and fcoild with her: fhee told mee, not thinking I had bene my felfe, that I was the Princes Jeffer, and that I was duller then a great thaw, huiling left vpon left, with fuch impoffible conuenience vpon me, that I flood like a man at a marke, with a whole army fhooteing at me: fhee fpeaks poynyards, and every word fappes: if her breath were as terrible as terminations, there were no liuing neere her, she would infedt to the north starre: I would not marry her, though she were indowd with all that Adam had left him before he transgred, she would haue made Hercules haue turnd fipt, yea, and haue cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talke not of her, you fhall find her the i infernal! Ate in good apparell. I would to God fome fcholler would conuere her, for certainly while the is heere, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a fanchury, and people finne vpon purpofe, because they would goe thither, fo indeed all diuifuit, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudio and Beatrices, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Lookhe heere she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command mee any feruice to the worlds end? I will goe on the lighteft arrant now to the Antyopes that you can defife to fend me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Afia: bring you the length of Pisgah Johns foot:fetch you a hayre off the great Obams beard: doe you any embullage to the Pigmies, rather then hould three words conference, with this Happy: you have no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to defire your good company.

Bene. O God sir, heeres a dish I lose not, I cannot in- dulge this Lady tongue.

Exit. Pedro. Come Lady, come, you have loft the heart of Signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed my Lord, hee lent it me a while, and I gaue him vfe for it, a double heart for a fingle one, marry once before he wonne it of mee,with falle dice, therefore your Grace may well fay I have loft it.

Pedro. You have put him downe Lady,you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, if I should prove the mother of foole: I have brought Count Claudio, whom you fent me to f eeke.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherfore are you fad?

Claudio. Not fad my Lord.

Pedro. How then? ficks?

Claudio. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither fad, nor ficks, nor merry, nor well but ciuill Count, ciuill as an Orange, and some- thing of a jealous completion.

Pedro. Ifaith Lady, I think hee blazon to be true, though Ile be sworne, if hee be fo, his conceit is falle: heere Claudio, I haue woed in thy name, and fare Hero is won, I haue broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God glue thee ioy.

Leon. Count, take of me daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, & all grace say, Amen to it.

Beat. Speake Count, tis your Qu.

Claudio. Silence is the perfect Herault of ioy, I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I giue away my felfe for you, and doat vpon the exchange.

Beat. Speake cofin, or (if you cannot) flop his mouth with a kiffe, and let not him speake neither.

Pedro. Infaith Lady you have a merry heart.

Beat. Ye a my Lord I thanke it, poore foole it keepes on the windy fide of Care, my cofin tells him in his eare that he is in my heart.

Claw. And fo doth cofin.

Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am fun-burn'd, I may fit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrices, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you have me? Lady.

Beat. No, my Lord, vnleffe I might have another for working-dales, your Grace is too softly to weare euery day: but if beleefce your Grace pardon mee, I was borne to speake all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be mer- ry, beft becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry howre.

Beat. No fure my Lord, my Mother cried, but then there was a faffe daunt, and vnder that was I borne: co- fins God giue you ioy.

Leonato. Neece, will you looke to thofe rhings I told you of?

Prince. By my troth a pleafant spirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her my Lord, she is never fad, but when the fleepes, and not ever fad thenfor I haue heard my daughter fay, the hath often dreamt of vnhappyneffe, and wak't her felle with laughing.

Pedro. Shee cannot indure to hear tell of a husband.

Leonato. O, by no meanes, the mocks all her woorees out of fuite.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leonato. O Lord, my Lord, if they were but a wecke married,
Much ado about Nothing.

married, they would talk of themselves made.

Prince. Counte Claudio, when meanest you to goe to Church?

Clau. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on truchtes, till Loue have all his rites.

Leonata. Not till mondy, my deare Sonne, which is a heu fuen night, and a time too brieft too, to have all things answer minde.

Prince. Come, you shake the head at fo long a breading, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not goe duly by vs, I will in the interim, undertake one of Hercules labors, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountaine of affection, th'o' with th'o' other, I would faine haue it a match, and I doubt not but to fation it, if you three will but minifter fuch affiance as I shall give you direcition.

Leonata. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights watchings.

Claud. And I my Lord.

Prin. And you to gentle Hero?

Hero. I will doe any modest office, my Lord, to helpe my cofin to a good husband.

Bene. And Benedicke is not the vnhapfulleft husband that I know: thus farre can I praffe him, hee is of a noble fraine, of approued valour, and confirme honesty, I will teach you how to humour your cofin, that fhe shall fall in love with Benedicke, and I, with your two helpe, will fo prafticke on Benedicke, that in delight of his quicke wit, and his quefte fromacke, fhee shall fall in love with Beatrice: if wee can doe this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for wee are the onely loue, gods, goe in with me, and I will tell you my drift.

Exit. Enter John and Borachio.

Ido. It is fo, the Count Claudio shall marie the daugther of Leonato.

Bora. Ye a my Lord, but I can crosse it.

John. Any barre, any crosse, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am fickle in difpleasure to him, and whatsoever comes aithwart his affection, ranges euently with mine, how canft thou crosse this marriage?

Bor. Not honestly my Lord, but fo counterly, that no daffonfly shall appeare in me.

John. Shew me briefly how.

Bor. I thinke I told you your Lordship a yeere fince, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

John. I remember.

Bor. I can at any vnfeanoble inffant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bor. The poynon of that lies in you to temper, goe to the Prince your brother, fpare not to tell him, that hee hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose efimation do you mightily hold vp, to a contaminated state, fuch a one as Hero.

John. What proufes shall I make of that?

Bor. Prout enough, to mifie the Prince, to vexe Claudio, to vndece Hero, and kill Leonato, looke you for an other illuf?

John. O noue to defpight them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bor. Goe then, finde me a meeke howre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loues me, intend a kind of zeale both to the Prince and Claudio (as in a loue of your brothers honor who hath made this match) and his friends reputa-

Prince. Come, shall we hear this mufike?

Claud. Ye a my good Lord: how fhill the evening is, As bouht on purpole to grace harmanie.

Prin. See you where Benedicke hath hid himfelfe?

Claud. O very well my Lord the mufike ended, We'll fit the kid-foxes with a penny worth.

Prince. Come Balthafar, we'll hear that fong again.

Balt. O good my Lord, taxe not to bad a voyce, To fander mufike any more then once.

Prin. It is the witneffe still of excellency,
Much adoe about Nothing.

To flander Musicke any more then once.

Prince. It is the witnesse fill of excellencie, To put a strange face on his owne perfection, I praye thee sing, and let me wee noe more.

Baltb. Because you talke of wooing, I will sing, Since many a wooer doth commence his suit, To her he thinkes not worthy, yet he wooes, Yet will he fwear he loves.

Prince. Nay praye thee come, Or if thou wilt hold longer argument, Doe it in notes.

Baltb. Note this before my notes, Theres not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why these are very crotchetts that he speaks, Note notes forsooth, and nothing.

Bene. Now diuine aire, now is his foule rauifh, is it not strange that sheepe's guts should hole foules out of mens bodies? well, a horne for my money when all's done.

The Song.

Sigh no more Ladies, sigh no more, Men were deceivers ever, One foot in Sea, and one on shore, To one thing constant never, Then sigh not jo, but let them goe, And be you blithe and bonnie, Converting all your sounds of wooe, Into bey many nony.

Sing no more ditties, sing no more, Of dumps so dull and beauty, The fraud of men were ever so, Since summer first was heavy, Then sigh not jo, &c.

Prince. By my troth a good song.

Baltb. And an ill finger, my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no faith, thou fintget well enough for a shift.

Ben. And he had been a dog that should haue howld thus, they would have hang'd him, and I pray God his bad voyce bode no milchiefe, I had as lief haue heard the night-ruen, come what plague might haue come after it.

Prince. Yea marry, doft thou heare Baltsafar? I praye thee get vs some excellent musick: for to morrow night we haue it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Baltb. The best I can, my Lord.

Bene. Exit Baltsafar.

Prince. Do so, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Cla. O I, slake on, slake on, the foule fits. I did never think that Lady would haue louse any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither, but moft wonderful, that she should so dote on Signior Benedick, whom shee hath in all outward behauiours seemd euer to abhorre.

Ben. It's possible? fits the winde in that corner?

Leo. By my troth my Lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that she louses him with an iraged affecion, it is past the infinitue of thought.

Prince. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of passion, came fo neere the life of passion as she discourse it.

Prince. Why what effects of passion shewes he?

Claud. Baithe the hooke well, this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects my Lord? shee will fit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I praye you? you amaze me, I would have thought her spirit had beene invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leo. I would haue sworne it had, my Lord, especially against Benedick.

Bene. I should thinke this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speakes it: knauery cannot sure hide himselfe in such reuerence.

Leon. He hath tane th'infected, hold it vp.

Prince. Hath shee made her affecion known to Benedick?

Leonato. No, and sheeary the never will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, to your daughter faies: shall I, faies she, that haue so oft encountered him with scorne, write to him that I loue him?

Leo. This faies shee now when shee is beginning to write to him, for she'll be vp twenty times a night, and ther wil she fit in her smocke, till she haue wriat a sheet of paper: my daughter tells vs all.

Claud. Now you talke of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty left your daughter told us of.

Leon. O when she had wriat it, & was reading it ouer, the found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheete.

Claud. That.

Leon. O the tore the letter into a thousand halspence, raill at her selfe, that she should be so immodest to write, to one that shee knew would flout her: I measure him, faies she, by my owne spirit, for I should flout him if shee wriat to me, yea though I love him, I should.

Claud. Then downe vpone her knees the falls, weepes, fobs, beates her heart, teares her hayre, prays, curles, O sweet Benedick, God give me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter faies so, and the extasie hath so much ouerborne her, that my daughter is fortime afraid she wil doe a desperate out-rage to her selfe, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discouer it.

Claud. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poore Lady worke.

Prin. And he should, it were an almes to hang him, the's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all fution,) she is virtuous.

Claudio. And she is exceeding wife.

Prince. In euerie thing, but in louing Benedick.

Leon. O my Lord, wifedome and bloud combating in fo tender a body, we haue ten prooves to one, that bloud hath the victory, I am forry for her, as I haue iuft caufe, being her Uncle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would shee had betofed this dotage on mee, I would have daft all other respects, and made her halfe my felye: I praye you tell Benedick of it, and heare what he will say.

Leon. Were it good think you?

Claud. Hero thinkes furely the wil die, for she faies the will die, if shee loue her not, and thee will die ere shee make her loue knowne, and shee will die if shee woe her, rather than shee wile bate one breath of her accustomed croffenelle.

Prin. She doth well, if she should make tender of her loose, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it, for the man as you know was a very proper man.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Clau. 'Fore God, and in my minde very wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Heftor, I affure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise, for either hee auoydes them with great discretion, or vnderstandeth them with a Christian-like faire.

Leon. If hee doe feare God, a must necessitie keepe peace, if hee brake the peace, hee ought to enter into to a quarrell with feare and trembling.

Prin. And so will he doe, for the man doth fear God, howsoever hee seems not in him, by some large leaves hee will make well, well, you know for your socrine, shall we go see Benedictke, and tell him of her love.

Clau. Nearer tell him, my Lord, let her weare it out with good counsell.

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may weare her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will hearie further of it by your daughter, let it coole the while, I love Benedictke well, and I could with hee would modestly examine himselfe, to see how much he is vnworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walkie dinner is ready.

Clau. If he do not doat on her vpon this, I wil never truie my expeccion.

Prin. Let there be the fame Net spread for her, and that must your daughter and your gentlewoman carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would fee, which will be meerely a dumbe shew: let vs send her to call him into dinner.

Exeunt.

Bene. This can be no tricke, the conference was badly borne, they haue the truth of this from Hero, they seeme to pittie the Lady: it seemes her affections haue the full bent: loue me? why it must be requited: I heare how I am cenfur'd, they say I will bear my fely prouide, if I perceiue the loue come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than give any figne of affections: I did never thinke to marry, I must not feeme proud, happy are they that heare their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is faire, 'tis a truth, I can bear them witneffe: and vertuous, tis so, I cannot reprooue it, and wife, but for louing me, by my troth it is no addition to her witte, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her, I may chance have some odde quirkes and remnant of witte broken on mee, because I haue rai'd so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loues the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and fentences, and these paper bullets of the braine awe a man from the careare of his honour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a batcheler, I did not think I shalde lye till I were married, here comes Beatrice: by this day, thee's a faire Lady, I doe spie some markes of loue in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Faire Beatrice, I thanke you for your paines.
Much adoe about Nothing.

To with to let him wrattle with affection,
And neuer to let Beatrice know of it.

Vrfula. Why did you fo,doth not the Gentleman
Doverse as full as notune a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall cough vp on?

Hero. O God of loue! I know he doth deferue,
As much as may be yeelded to a man:
But Nature neuer fram’d a womans heart,
By providence fluxue then that of Beatrice.
Didaine and Scorne ride sparkling in her eyes,
Mif-prizing what they looke on, and her wit
Values it felse so highly, that to her
All matter else feesmes weake:thecannot loue,
Nor take no shape nor proiect of affection,
Shee is so felse indeareed.

Vrfula. Sure I think fo,
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, left the make sport at it.

Hero. Why you speake truth, I neuer yet faw man,
How wife, how noble,yong,how rarely featur’d.
But the would spell him backward: if faire fac’d,
She would surere the gentleman should be her fitter:
If blace, why Nature drawing of an anticke,
Made a foule blot:if tall, a launce ill headed:
If low, an aget very vildlie cut:
If speaking, why a vane blowne with all winde:
If silent, why a blocke moued with none.
So turns the every man the wrong fide out,
And neuer glues to Truth and Vertue, that
Which pimplesse and merit purchaseth.

Vrfu. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero. No, not to be so odde, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable,
But who dare tell her fo? if I should speake,
She would mocke me into syre, O she would laugh me
Out of my felse, preffe me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedicke like covered fire,
Confame away in figbes, waste inwardly:
It were a better death, to die with mockes,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Vrfula. Yet tell her of it, heare what shee will say.

Hero. No, rather I will goe to Benedicke,
And counaille him to fight against his passion,
And truly Ie deifie some honest flanders,
To flaine my cofin with, one doth not know,
How much an ill word may imployen liking.

Vrfula. O doe not doe your cofin such a wrong,
She cannot be so much without true judgement,
Haung fo swift and excellent a wit
As she is pride to haue, as to refuse
So rare a Gentleman as signior Benedicke.

Hero. He is the onely man of Italy,
Alwaies excpected, my deare Claudio.

Vrfula. I pray you be not angry with me,Madam,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedicke,
For shape, for bearing argument and valour,
Goes fromost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.

Vrfula. His excellence did earne it ere he had it:
When are you married Madame?

Hero. Why euerie day to morrow, come goe in,
Ie shew thee some attires, and haue thy counsell,
Which is the belt to furnish me to morrow.

Vrfu. Shee’s tane I warrant you,
We have caught her Madame.

Hero. If it prove fo, then loving goes by haps,
Some Cupid kills with arrowes, some with traps.

Beat. What fire is in mine eares? can this be true?
Stand I condemn’d for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt,firewell, and maiden pride, a dew,
No glory liues behind the backe of fuch.
And Benedicke, loue on, I will requisite thee,
Taming my wilde heart to thy loving hand:
If thou doft loue, my kindenelle shall incite thee
To bide our love up in a holy band.
For others say thou doft deferue, and I Believe it better then reportingly.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedicke, and Leonato.

Prince. I doe but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claw. Ile bring you thatther my Lord, if you’ll vouchsafe me.

Prin. Nay, that would be as great a voley in the new gloffe of your marriage, as to shew a child he his new cost and forbid him to wear it, I will onely bee bold with Benedicke for his companie, for from the crowne of his head, to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-tring, and the little hang-man dare not shoot at him, he hath a heart as found as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinkes, his tongue speakes.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have bin.

Len. So fay I, methinks you are fadder.

Claw. I hope he be in loue.

Prin. Hang him truant, there’s no true drop of bloud in him to be truly toucht with loue, if he be sad, he wants money.

Bene. I haue the tooth-ach.

Prin. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it.

Claw. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

Len. Where is but a humour or a worme.

Bene. Well, every one cannot matter a griefe, but hee that has it.

Claw. Yet fay I, he is in loue.

Prin. There is no appearance of fancie in him, vnlesse be a fancy that he hath to strange fugitives, as to bee a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow: vnlesse hee have a fancie to this foolery, as it appeares hee hath, hee is no foole for fancie, as you would haue it to appeare he is.

Claw. If he be not in loue with some wooman, there is no belceuing old figues, a bruteless his hat a mornings,
What shoulde that bode?

Prin. Hath any man seene him at the Barbers?

Claw. No, but the Barbers man hath beene seene with him, and the olde ornament of his chekke hath alreadie flute tennis balls.

Len. Indeed he lookez younger then hee did, by the loffe of a beard.

Prin. Nay, a rubs himselfe with Cuite, can you smell him out by that?

Claw. That’s as much as to say, the sweet youth’s in loue.

Prin. The greates note of it is his melancholy.

Claw. And vvhen was he vvento vvashe his face?
Prin. Yea, or to paint himselfe? for the which I heare what they fay of him.

Claw. Nay, but his Iefting spirit, vvhich is now crept into a lute-tring, and now gowned by steps.

Prince.
Much ado about Nothing. 111

Prin. Indeed that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.

Claus. Nay, but I know who loves him.

Prin. That would I know too, I warrant one that knows him not.

Cla. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despite of all, dies for him.

Prin. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache, old signior, walk a side with me, I have studied eight or nine wise words to speake to you, which thes hobby-horses must not heare.

Prin. For my life to breake with him about Beatrices. Claus. 'Tis even so, Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Beares will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John the Baffard.

Bafi. My Lord and brother, God faue you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Bafi. If your leisure seru'd, I would speake with you.

Prin. In privacie?

Bafi. If it please you, yet Count Claudio may heare, for what I would speake of, concerns him.

Prin. What's the matter?

Bafi. Means your Lordship to be married to morrow?

Prin. You know he does.

Bafi. I know not that when he knows what I know.

Claus. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

Bafi. You may thinke I loue you not, let that appeare hereafter, and ayme better at me by that I now will manifest, for my brother (I thinke, he holds you well, and in dearenesse of heart) hath holpe to effect your ensuing marriage: surely fute ill spente, and labour ill bestowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

'Baffard. I came hither to tell you, and circumstances shortned, (for the hath beene too long a talking of) the Lady is diffoloyal.

Claus. Who Herne?

Bafi. Even thee, Leonatos Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.

Claus. Difoyall?

Bafi. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness, I could say the were worse, thinke you of a worfe title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant: goe but with mee to night, you shall see her chamber window entred, even the night before her wedding day, if you love her, then to morrow wed her: But it would better fit your honour to change your minde.

Claus. May this be so?

Prin. I will not thinke it.

Bafi. But you dare not trust that you fee, confesse not that you know: if you will follow mee, I will shew you enough, and when you have seene more, & heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claus. If I see any thing to night, why I should not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I hold weade, there will I shame her.

Prin. And as I wou'd for thee to obtaine her, I will ioyne with thee to disgrace her.

Bafi. I will dispare her no farther, till you are my witneffes, bear it coldly but till night, and let the iifie shew it selfe.

Prin. O day vntowardly turn'd!

Claus. O milchifte strangelie thwarting!

Baffard. O plague right well prevented! so will you fay, when you have seene the queule.

Exit.

Enter Dogbery and his companion with the watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Ver. Yea, or else it were pitty but they should suffer saluation body and foule.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should haue any allegiance in them, being cho'en for the Princes watch.

Verge. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogbery.

Dog. First, who thinke you the most desartiflfe man to be Constable?

Watch. Hugh Ote-cake fir, or George Sea-coale, for they can write and reade.

Dogb. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath bleft you with a good name: to be a well-fauoured man, is the gift of Fortune, but to write and reade, comes by Nature.

Watch 2. Both which Master Constable

Dog. You have: I knew it would be your answere: well, for your favour fir, why give God thankes, & make no boaff of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appeare when there is no need of fuch vanity, you are thought heere to be the most fenfleffe and fit man for the Constable of the watch: therefore beare you the lanthorne: this is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand in the Princes name.

Watch 2. How if a will not stand?

Dog. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and presently call the rest of the Watch together, and thank God you are ridde of a naue.

Ver. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes subiects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes subiects: you shall also make no noife in the streetes: for, for the Watch to babbile and talkes, is most tolerable, and not to be induerd.

Watch. We will rather sleepe than talke, wee know what belongs to a Watch.

Dog. Why you speake like an ancient and moft quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleepeing should offend: only haue a care that your bills be not stolne: well, you are to call at all the Alehoufes, and bid them that are drunke get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why then let them alone till they are sober, if they make you not then the better answere, you may fay, they are not the men you tooke them for.

Watch. Well fir.

Dogb. If you meet a theefe, you may supefix him, by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for fuch kinde of men, the leffe you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.

Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him.

Dog. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd: the moft peaceable way for you, if doe take a theefe, is, to let him shew himfelfe what he is, and feale out of your company.

Ver. You haue bin alwaies cal'd a merciful fir partner.

Dog. Truely I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath anle honestie in him.

K 2

Verge.
Much ado about Nothing.

Verges. If you heare a child crie in the night you must call to the Nurse, and bid her fill it.

Watch. How if the Nurse be asleep and will not hear you?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the childe wake her with crying, for the eue that will not hear her Lambe when it baes, will never anfwer a calefe when he bleates.

Verges. "Ist verie true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you confiable are to prefent the Princes owne perfon, if you meete the Prince in the night, you may f tale him.

Verges. Nay birldalie I thinkne a cannot.

Dog. Five Ishillings to one out with anie man that knowes the Statues, he may fate him, marrie not without the prince be willing, for indeed the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to fay a man against his will.

Verges. Birladie I thinkne it be fo.

Dog. Ha, ah ha, well mat ters good night, and there be anie matter of weighte chances, call vp me, keep your fellowes counfulies, and your owne, and good night, come neighbour.

Watch. Well mat ters, we heare our charge, let us go fit here vpon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honest neighbors. I pray you watch about Signior Leonatoes doore, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coyte to night, adieu, be bientant I fbeeche you. Exeunt. Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bor. What, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, fir not.

Bor. Conrade I fay.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Bor. Mas and my elbow itchts, I thought there would have a fcalble follow.

Con. I will owne thee an anfwer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Bor. Stand thee clofe then vnder this penthoufe, for it drieffs raine, and I will, like a true drunkard, ytter all to thee.

Watch. Some treafon mat ters, yet fland clofe.

Bor. Therefore know, I have earne of Don John a thousand Ducates.

Con. Is it posiffe that anie villianie should be fo deare?

Bor. Thou fhouldft rather ask, if it were possible anie villianie fhould be fo rich, for when rich villains have neede of poore ones, poore ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bor. That sheues thou art vnconfirmd, thou knowest that the fahion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloake, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bor. I mean the fahion.

Con. Yes the fahion is the fahion.

Bor. Thou may as well fay the foole’s the foole, but feethe thou not what a deformd theepe this fahion is?

Watch. I know that deformd, a has bin a vile theepe, this villyeares, a goes vp and downe like a gentle man: I remember his name.

Bor. Did’st thou not heare some bodie?

Con. No, twas the vaine on the house.

Bor. Serve thou not (1 fay) what a deformd thefe this fahion is, bow giddily a turns about all the Hot-
Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Beatrice. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now? do you speake in theick tune?

Beatrice. I am out of all other tune, me thinkes.

Mar. Claps into Light a loue, (that goes without a burden,) do you fing it and Ile dance it.

Beat. Ye Light alowe with your heles, then if your husband heare fables enough, you'll looke he shall lacke no barnes.

Mar. O illegitimate contruction! I forne that with my heele.

Beat. 'Tis almost flue a clocke coffin, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a hauke, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turke, there's no more faying by the farrre.

Beat. What meanes the foolo trow?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one theri harts defire.

Hero. There Thloe the Count fent mee, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am Ruff coffin, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and Ruff! there's goodly catching of colde.

Beat. O God helpe me, God help me, how long haue you profet apprehension?

Mar. Euer since you left it,doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seene enough, you should ware it in your cap, by my troth I am sicke.

Mar. Get you some of this diffill'd cardus benedictus and lay it to your heart, it is the onely thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou pric'st her with a thiffell.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus? you have some morall in this benedictus.

Mar. Morall? no by my troth, I have no morall meaning, I meant plaine holy thiffell, you may thinke per-chance that I thinke you are in loue, nay birlady I am not such a foolo to thinke what I lift, nor I lift not to thinke what I can, nor indeed I cannot thinke, if I would thinke my hart out of thinke, that you are in loue, or that you will be in loue, or that you can be in loue: yet Benedictus was such another, and now is he become a man, he fowre hee would neuer marry, and yet now in desight of his heart he eates his meat without grudging, and how you may be converted I know not, but me thinkesyou looke with your eies as other women doe.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keepes.
heere's that shall drive some of them to a non-come, only get the learned writer to set downe our communica tion, and meete me at the Ialfe.

_Vivit._

__Actus Quartus._

_Enter Prince, Bailiff, Leonato, Frier, Claudio, Benedicke, Hero, and Beatrice._

__Leonato._ Come Frier Francis, be briefe, onely to the plaine forme of marriage, and you shall recount their par ticular duties afterwards.

_Prince._ You come hither, my Lord, to marry this Lady.

__Leon._ Now.

__Frier._ To be married to her: Frier, you come to mar ry her.

__Leon._ Frier, Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

__Hero._ I doe.

__Frier._ If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conioyned, I charge you on your foules to vter it.

__Claudio._ Know you anie, Hero?

__Hero._ None my Lord.

__Frier._ Know you any, Count?

__Leon._ I dare make his anwer, None.

__Claudio._ O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

__Ben._ How now I intercions? why then, some be of laughing, as ha, ha, ha.

__Claudio._ Stand thee by Frier, father, by your leaue, Will you with free and unconftrained foule Give me this maid your daughter?

__Leon._ As freely fonne as God did give her me.

__Claudio._ And what have I to glue you back, whose worth May counterpoife this rich and precious gift?

__Prin._ Nothing, valeffe you render her againe.

__Claudio._ Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulness: There _Leonato_, take her backe againe, Glie not this rotten Orenge to your friend, She's but the figne and semblance of her honour: Behold how like a maid she blueth here! O what authoritie andthew of truth Can cunning finne couer it felle withall! Comes not that bloud, as modest evidence, To witneffe simple Vertue? would you not sweare All you that see her, that she were a maide, By thee extremere fheues? but she is none: She knowes the heat of a luxurious bed: Her bluh is gullinfeffe, not moddife.

__Leonato._ What doe you meane, my Lord?

__Claudio._ Not to be married,

_Not to knit my foule to an approued wanton.

__Leon._ Deere my Lord, if you in your owne proofe, Haue vanquifht the refinance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginitie.

__Hero._ I know what you would fay: if I have knowne You will fay, the did imbrazze me as a husband, And fo extenuate the forcond finne: No _Leonato_, I neuer tempted her with word too large, But as a brother to his fitter, fheued Bathful finceritie and comely loue.

__Hero._ And feem'd I euer otherwise to you?

__Claudio._ Out on thee seeming, I will write against it, You feeme to me as _Diane_ in her Orbe,

As chaffe as is the budde ere it be blowne:

But you are more intemperate in your blood,

Than Venus, or thole pampered animals,

That rage in fawge fenfualitie.

__Leon._ Is my Lord well, that he doth speakpe fo wide?

__Claudio._ Sweete Prince, why speake not you?

__Prin._ What should I speake?

I fland dishonour'd that have gone about,

To linke my deare friend to a common flafe.

__Leon._ Are thefe things spoken, or doe I but dreame?

__Baffo._ Sir, they are spoken, and thefe things are true.

__Ben._ This lookes not like a nuptiall.

__Hero._ True, O God!

__Claudio._ _Leonato_, stand I here?

Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?

Is this face _Heroes_? are our eies our owne?

__Leon._ All this is fo, but what of this my Lord?

__Claudio._ Let me but moue one queffion to your daugh-
And by that fatherly and kindly power,

That you haue in her, bid her anwer truly.

__Leon._ I charge thee doe, as thou art my childe.

__Hero._ O God defend me how am I befet,

What kinde of catechizing call you this?

__Claudio._ To make you anwer truly to your name.

__Hero._ Is it not _Hero_? who can blot that name

With any luft reproach?

__Claudio._ Marry that can _Hero_,

_Hero_ it felle can blot out _Heroes_ vertue.

What man was he, talkt with you yesternight,

Out at your window betwixt twelue and one?

Now if you are a maid, anwer to this.

__Hero._ I talkt with no man at that howre my Lord.

__Prin._ Why then you are no maiden.

__Leonato._ I am forry you muft heare: vpon mine honor,

My felle, my brother, and this grieved Count

Did fee her, heare her, at that howre laft night,

Talke with a ruffian at her chamber window,

Who hath indeed moft like a liberrall villain,

Confet the vile encounters they haue had

A thonfand times in secreat.

__John._ Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,

Not to be spoken of,

There is not chaffitie enough in language,

Without offence to vter them: thus pretty Lady

I am forry for thy much mi gouernment.

__Claudio._ O _Hero_! what a _Hero_ hadf thou bee

If halfe thy outward graces had beene placed

About thy thoughts and counfalles of thy heart?

But fare thee well, mors foul, mors faire, farewell

Thou pure impety, and impious puritie,

For thee Ile locke vp all the gates of Loue,

And on my eie-lids shall Coniecure hang,

To turne all beauty into thoughts of harme,

And neuer shall it more be gracious.

__Leon._ Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?

__Beat._ Why how now cofin, wherfore fink you down?

_Claudio._ Comne, let vs go: thefe things come thus to light,

Smother her spirits vp.

__Ben._ How doth the Lady?

__Beat._ Dead I think, helpe vnle, _Hero_, why _Hero_, _Vnle,Cesnor Benedicke_, Frier.

__Leonato._ O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand,

Death is the fairest courer for her fame

That may be wight for.
Much ado about Nothing.

Beast. How now coyn Hero?
Fri. Haue comfort Ladie.
Leon. Doft thou looke vp?
Friar. Yeas, wherefore should the not?
Leon. Wherfore? Why doeth not every earthly thing Cry shame vpon her? Could the heere deny
The florie that is printed in her blood?
Do not liue Hero, do not one thine eyes:
For did I thinke thou wouldest not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger then thy thames,
My felfe would on the reward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Grieud 1, I had but one?
Child I, for that at fruagl Natures frame?
O one too much by these: why had I one?
Why euer was thou louellie in my cies?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Tooke vp a beggars iflue at my gates,
Who fmeered thus, and mir'ld with infamie,
I might haue faid, not part of it is mine:
This thame deriues it felle fro vnknowne loines,
But mine, and mine I lou'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was prou'd on mine fo much,
That I my felle, was to my felle not mine:
Valeuing of her, why the, O she is faine
Into a pit of Ink, that the wide fea
Hath drops too few to was her cleane againe,
And fait too little, which may feafon glue
To her foule tainted fleas.

Ben. Sir, sir, be patient: for my part, I am fo attired in wonder, I know not what to say.
Bea. O on my foule my coyn is belled.
Ben. Ladie, were you her bedfellow laft night?
Bea. No truly: not although vntill laft night,
I haue this twelvemonth bin her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirmd, confirmd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd vp with ribs of iron.
Would the Princes lie, and Claudia lie,
Who lou'd her fo, that speaking of her fouleffe,
Wash'd it with teares? Hence from her, let her die.
Fri. Heare me a little, for I haue onely bene silent fo long, and gluyn waye vnto this coure of fortune, by noting of the Ladie, I haue markt.
A thousand blushing apparition
To dart into her face, a thousand innocent flames,
In Angel whiteneffe beare away those bluses,
And in her eie there hath appear'd a fire
To burne the errors that thefe Princes hold
Againft her maiden truth. Call me a foole,
Trut not my reading, nor my obervations,
Which with experimental feale doth warrant
The tenure of my booke: trut not my age,
My reuerence, calling, or dinuiteit,
If this sweet Ladie lye not guiltiefe heere,
Vnder some biting error.

Leo. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou feell that all the Grace that the hath left,
Is, that the wil not adde to her damnation,
A finne of periluy, the not denies it:
Why feek't thou then to couer with excuse,
That which appeares in proper nakedneffe?
Fri. Ladie, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know that do accus'e me, I know none:
If I haue more of any man allie,
Then that which maiden modifie doth warrant,
Let all my finnes lacke mercy. O my Father,
Proue you that any man with me conuerft,

At hours vnmeete, or that I yeerntnight
Maintaine the change of words with any creature,
Refue me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Princes.
Ben. Two of them haue the verie bent of honor,
And if their wifedomes be milled in this:
The prafticie of it liues in Leon the baftard,
Whole spirits toile in frame of wiliantes.
Leo. I know not: if they speake but truth of her,
These hands shall teare her: if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall wel heare of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this bloud of mine,
Nor age fo eate vp my inuention,
Nor Fortune made fuch haunooke of my meanes,
Nor my bad life reft me fo much of friends,
But they shall finde, awak'd in fuch a kinde,
Both strength of limb, and policie of minde,
Ability in meanes, and choife of friends,
To quitt me of them throughly.

Fri. Paufe awhile:
And let my counfell fwaye you in this cafe,
Your daughter heere the Princesse (left for dead)
Let her awhile be fecretly kept in,
And publith it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintaine a mourning oftentation,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournfull Epitaphes, and do all rites,
That appertaine vnto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this? What wil this do?
Fri. Marry this wel carried, shall on her behalfe,
Change flander to remorfe, that is some good,
But not for that dreame I on this flrange coure,
But on this trauaille looke for greater birth:
She dying, as it muft be fo maintaine'd,
Vpon the infant that she was accu'd,
Shall be lamented, pittled, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it fo fals out,
That what we haue, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and loft,
Why then we racke the value, then we finde
The vertue that poiffeon would not shew vs
Whiles it was ours, fo will it fare with Claudia:
When it haue the dyed vpon his words,
Th'idea of her life shall sweetly creepe
Into his stydy of imagination.
And every lovely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habite:
More mowing delicate, and ful of life,
Into the eye and prosperit of his foule
Then when the llu'd indeed: then shal he mourne,
If euer Loue had interet in his Luer,
And with he had not fo and pollicie in her
No, though he thought his accution true:
Let this be fo, and doubt not but successe
Wyl fasion the euent in better shape,
Then I can lay it downe in likelihood.
But if all ayme but this be leuell falle,
The fuppositition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamie.
And if it fort not well,you may conceale her,
As beft befor her wounded reputacion,
In some reucluife and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongnes, minds and injuries.
Bnee. Signior Leonato, let the Frier adiue you,
And though you know my inwardneffe and loue
It is very much vnto the Prince and Claudia.

Yet
Yet, by mine honor, I will deal in this,
As secretly and juftilie, as your foule
Should with your bodie.

Leon. Being that I flow in greefe,
The leaftlefe twine may lead me.

Frier. 'Tis well contented, prefently away,
For to strange fres, strangely they flraigne the cure,
Come Lady, die to live, this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd, have patience & endure. Exit. Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you kept all this while? Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer. Bene. I will not define that. Beat. You have no reafon, I doe it freely. Bene. Surelil I do beleue your fair cofin is wronged. Beat. Ah, how much might the man defcreue of mee that would right her! Bene. Is there any way to fhow fuch friendship? Beat. A verry even way, but no fuch friend. Bene. May a man doe it? Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours. Bene. I do loue nothing in the world fo well as you, is not that strange? Beat. As strange as the thing I know not, it were as poiffible for me to fay, I loued nothing fo well as you, but beleue me not, and yet I lie not, I confefle nothing, nor I deny nothing, I am forry for my cofin. Bene. By my word Beatrice thou luf't me. Beat. Doe not fwear by it and eat it. Bene. I will fwear by it that you loue mee, and I will make him eat it that fayes I loue not you. Beat. Will you not eat your word? Bene. With no fawce that can be defuited to it, I pro- teft I loue thee.

Beat. Why then God forgive me.
Bene. What offence sweet Beatrice? Beat. You have fhayed me in a happy howre, I was a-bout to proteft I loued you. Bene. And doe it with all thy heart. Beat. I loue you with fo much of my heart, that none is left to proteft.

Bene. Ha, not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to deny, farewell. Bene. Tarry sweet Beatrice; Beat. I am gone, though I am heere, there is no loue in you, nay I pray you let me goe.
Bene. Beatrice.
Beat. Infaith I will goe.
Bene. We'll be friends firft.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with mee, than fight with mine enemy.
Bene. Is Claudio thine enemie? Beat. Is it not approv'd in the height a villains, that hath floured, xcrooned, difhonour'd my kinfwoman? O that I were a man! what, beare her in hand vntill they come to take hands, and then with publique affocation vncover'd flander, unvmittigated rancour? O God that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me Beatrice.
Beat. Talkke with a man out at a window, a proper faying.
Bene. Nay but Beatrice.
Beat. Sweet Hero, she is wrong'd, shee is flandered, she is vndone.
Bene. Beat?
Kemp. Flat Burglarie as euer was committed.
Confl. Yea by th' maffe that it is.
Seaston. What eile fellow?
Watch r. And that Count Claudio did meane upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.
Kemp. O villain thou wilt be condemnd into everlastinge redemption for this.
Seaston. What eile?
Watch. This is all.
Seaston. And this is more matters then you can deny, Prince John is this morning secretly ftoile away: Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and vpon the griefe of this fadainely died: Master Conflable, let thefe men be bound, and brought to Leonato, I will goo before, and shew him their examination.
Confl. Come, let them be opinion'd.
Sex. Let them be in the hands of Coxecombe.
Kem. Gods my lafe, where's the Sexton? let him write downe the Princes Officer Coxecombe: come, binde them thou naughty varlet.
Clausley. Away, you are an affe, you are an affe.
Kemp. Doft thou not fuppref thy place? doft thou not fuppref thy yeeres? O that hee were here to write mee downe an affe! but matters, remember that I am an affe: though it be not written down, yet forget not y. I am an affe: No thou villain, y art full of piety as shall be proud vpon thee by good witneffe, I am a wife fellow, and which is more, an officer, and which is more, a houfholder, and which is more, as pretty a piece of flefh as any in Messina, and one that knowes the Law, goe to, & a rich fellow enough, goe to, and a fellow that hath had loffes, and one that hath two gownes, and euery thing handfome about him: bring him away: O that I had been writ downe an affe!

Exit.

Auctus Quintus.

Enter Leonato and bis brother.

Brother. If you goe on thus, you will kill your selfe, and 'tis not wisedome thus to second griefe, Against your selfe.
Leon. I pray thee ceafe thy counfale, Which falls into mine ears as profiteffe, As water in a crie: glue not me counfale, Nor let no comfort delight mine eare, But such a one whole wrongs dothe fute with mine. Bring me a father that fo lou'd his childe, Whose joy of her is ouer-whelmed like mine, And bid him speake of patience, Meafure his woe the length and breth of mine, And let it anfwer euery frailte for frailte, As thus for thus, and such a griefe for fuch, In euery lineament, branch, shape, and forme: If fuch a one will smile and froke his beard, And forrow, wagge, crie hem, when he fhould grone, Patch griefe with provebres, make misfortune drunke, With candy-wafers: bring him yet to me, And of him will gather patience.
Kemp. But there is no fuch man, for brother, men Can counfale, and fpeake comfort to that griefe, Which they themfelves not feele, but taking it, Their counfale turns to paffion, which before, Would giue preceptiall medicine to rage, Fetter strong madneffe in a filken thred, Charme ache with ayre, and agony with words, No, no, 'tis all mens office, to fpeak patience To thofe that wring vnder the load of forrow: But no mans vertue nor fufficiencie To be fo morall, when he fhall endure The like himfelfe: therefore giue me no counfale, My grieves cry lowder then aduertifement.
Brubr. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
Leonato. I pray thee peace, I will be fleath and bloud, For there was neuer yet Philofopher, That could endure the tooth-ake patiently, How euer they haue writ the rite of gods, And made a pufh at chance and fufferance.
Brother. Yet bend not all the harme vpon thy felfe, Make thofe that doe offend you, fuffer too.
Leon. There thou speakeft reafon, ray I will doe fo, My foule doth tell me, Hero is belied,
And that fhall Claudio know, fo fhall the Prince, And all of them that thus diuoure her.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Brot. Here comes the Prince and Claudio halfily.
Prin. Good day, good den.
Cla. Good day to both of you,
Leon. Heare you my Lords?
Prin. We haue some haft Leonato.
Leo. Some hafte my Lord: wel, fareyouwel my Lord, Are you so hafty now? well, all is one.
Prin. Nay, do not quarrel with vs, good old man.
Brot. If he could rife himfelfe with quarrelling, Some of vs would lie low.
Claud. Who wrongs him?
Leon. Marry 'd wrong me, thou fciemblere, thou
Nay, neuer lay thy hand vpon thy fword, I feare thee not.
Claud. Marry befrew my hand,
If it shoule giue your age fuch caufe of feare,
Infaith my hand meant nothing to my fword.
Leonato. Thuf, thuf, man: neuer fleere and leat at me, I fpeake not like a dotard, nor a foole, As vnder priviledge of age to bragge, What I haue done being yong, or what would doe,
Were I not old, know Claudio to thy head,
Thou haft fo wrong'd my innocent childe and me,
That I am forc'd to lay my reuerence by,
And with grey haires and bruife of many dais,
Doe challenge thee to triall of a man,
I fay thou haft belied mine innocent childe.
Thy flander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancefors:
O in a tombe where neuer fcandlif lep,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villanie.
Claud. My villany?
Leonato. Thine Claudio, thine I fay.
Prin. You fay not right old man.
Leon. My Lord, my Lord,
I charge it on his body if he dare,
Defpight his nice fencet, and his acliffe practife,
His Maie of youth, and bloome of luftifhood.
Claud. Away, I will not have to doe with you.
Leo. Canft thou fo daffe me thou haft kill my child,
If thou kilft me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Bro. He shall kill two of vs, and men indeed,
But that's no matter, let him kill one firft:

Win.
Much adoe about Nothing.

Win me and weare me, let him answere me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me
Sir boy, ile whip you from your fouyning fence,
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your self, God knows I lou’d my neece,
And she is dead, flander’d to death by villains,
That dare as well answere a man indeede,
As I d’are take a ferment by the tongue.

Boyesseapes, braggrants, lackes, milke-fops.

Leon. Brother Anthony.

Bro. Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they weigh, even to the vtmost scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boys,
That yee, and cog, and flout, depraue, and slander,
Goe antiquely, and show outward hidiousnesse,
And speake of halfe a dozen dang’rous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durft.

And this is all.

Leon. But brother Antickes.

An. Come, ’tis no matter.

Do not you meddle, let me deale in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience
My heart is forry for your daughters death:
But on my honour she was charg’d with nothing
But what was true, and very full of proove.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord.

Pri. I will not hear you.

Enter Benedick.

Leo. No come brother, away, I will be heard.

Execut ambo.

Bro. And shall, or some of vs will smart for it.

Pri. See, see, here comes the man we went to seeke.

Clau. Now signor, what newes?

Ben. Good day my Lord.

Pri. Welcome signor, you are almoft come to part almoft a fray.

Clau. Wee had like to have haed our two noxes snapt off with two old men without teeth.

Pri. Leonato and his brother, what think’st thou’ad wee fought, I doubt we should haue been too yong for them.

Ben. In a falkar quarrell there is no true valour, I came to seeke you both.

Clau. We haue beene vp and downe to seeke thec, for we are high proffes melancholy, and would faine haue it beaten away, wilt thou’ fhee wilt it?

Ben. It is in my scabberd, shall I draw it?

Pri. Dooest thou were thy wit by thy fide?

Clau. Never any did fo, though verie many have been beside their wit, I will bid thee drawe, as we do the minifters, draw to pleasur vs.

Pri. As I am an honest man he lookes pale, art thou fique, or angrie?

Clau. What, courage man: what though care kill’d a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I shall meete your wit in the carere, and you charge it against me, I pray you chuse another sub-left.

Clau. Nay then give him another staffe, this laft was broken croffe.

Pri. By this light, he changes more and more, I think he be angrie indeede.

Clau. If he be, he knowes how to turne his girdle.

Ben. Shall I speake a word in your eare?

Clau. God bleffe me from a challenge.

Ben. You are a villaine, I left not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare:
do me right, or I will protest your cowardice: you have kill’d a sweete Ladie, and her death shall fall heauie on you, let me heare from you.

Clau. Well, I will meete you, so I may have good cheare.

Pri. What, a feaft, a feaft?

Clau. I faith I thanke him, he hath bid me to a calues head and a Capon, the which if I do not carue mofi curiously, say my knife’s naught, shall I not finde a woodcocke too?

Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, it goes easily.

Pri. Ile tell thee how Beatrice praid’ thy wit the o-other day: I said thou hadft a fine witstrue fies fhe, a fine little one: no faid I, a great wit: right fies fhee, a great groffe one: nay faid I, a good wit: loft faid fhe, it hurts no boday: nay faid I, the gentleman is wife: certain faid fhe, a wife gentleman: nay faid I, he hath the tongues:
that I beleue fad fhee, for fhe sware a thing to me on munday night, which he forswore on tuesday morning:
there’s a double tongue, there’s two tongues: thus did fhee an howre together tranf-cape thy particuler verues, yet at last she concluded with a figh, thou waft the proprefl man in Italie.

Clau. For the which she wept heartily, and said fhee car’d not.

Pri. Yea that she did, but yet for all that, and if fhee did not hate him deadlie, fhee would love him delyrly, the old mans daughter told vs all.

Clau. All, all, and moreover, God faw him whne he was hid in the garden.

Pri. But when shall we fet the fauze Bulls hornes on the feoble Benedickes head?

Clau. Yea and text vnder-neath, heere draws Benedicte the married man.

Ben. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leave you now to your golpe-like humor, you breake iets as braggrants do their blades, which God be than-kurd hurt not: my Lord, for your manie courteyes I thank you, I must discontinue your companye, your brother the Baflard is fled from & Myftra: you have among you, kill’d a sweett and innocent Ladie: for my Lord Lacke-beard there, he and I shall meett, and till then peace be with him.

Pri. He is in earneft.

Clau. In mofi profound earneft, and Ile warrant you, for the loue of Beatrice.

Pri. And hath challeng’d thee.

Clau. Mofl fincerely.

Pri. What a prettie thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hofe, and leaves of his wit.

Enter Confable, Conrades, and Boracchio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to such a man.

Pri. But soft you, let me be, placke vp my heart, and be sad, did he not say my brother was fled?

Conf. Come you Sir, if justice cannot tame you, fhee shall nere weigh more reasons in her balancie, nay, and you be a curing hypocrite once, you must be looke to.

Pri. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Bo-aracio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord.

Pri. Officers, what offence haue these men done?

Con. Marrie
Much ado about Nothing.

Conf. Marrie sir, they have committed false report, moreover they have spoken vntrasons, secondarily they are flanders, first and last, they have belyed a Ladie, thirdly, they have verified vntrue things, and to conclude they are lying knaues.

Prin. First I ask thee what they have done, thridle I ask thee vvhat's their offence, first and last why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Clau. Rightlie reasoned, and in his owne diuision, and by my troth there's one meaning vvell futed.

Prin. Who have you offended matters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned Confable is too cunning to be vnderfoold, vvhat's your offense.

Bor. Sweete Prince, let me go no farther to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this Count kille mee: I haue deceiued euen your vere eies: vvhat your wifedomes could not diucover, these shallow fooles haue brought to light, who in the night overheard me confessing to this man, how Den John your brother incendied me to flander the Ladie Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and saw me corte Margaret in Heroes garments, how you diugrai'd her when you should marrie her: my villainy they haue sorne record, vvhich I had rather selle vvith my death, then repeat over to my shame: the Ladie is dead sorne mine and my matters false accuation: and briefelie, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

Prin. Runs not this speech like yron through your blood?

Clau. I have drunke poisons whiles he vtted it.

Prin. But did my Brother fet thee on to this?

Bor. Yea, and paid me richly for the praftice of it.

Prin. He is compos'd and fram'd of treacherie, And fled he is vvpon this villain.

Clau. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear In the rare semblance that I lou'd it first.

Conf. Come, bring away the plaintiffs, by this time our Sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter: and matters, do not forget to specify when time & place shall ferve, that I am an Affe.

Con. a. Here, here comes matter Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the villain? let me see his eies, When that I note another man like him, I may avoide him: vvhich of these is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronger, looke on me. Leon. Art thou thou the faue that with thy breath haft kild mine innocent child?

Bor. Yea, eu'en I alone.

Leon. No, no, not so villain, thou believe thy selfe,
Here stand a pare of honourable men,
A third is fled that had a hand in it:
I thank you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthie deedses,
'Twas brauely done, if you bethinke you of it.

Clau. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I must speake, choose your revenge your selfe,
Impose me to what penance your intention
Can lye upon my finne, yet finn'd I not,
But in misfaking.

Prin. By my foule nor I,
And yet to satisifie this good old man,
I would bend vnder anie hauele vight,
That heele enjoyne me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter liue,
That were impossible, but I praye you both,
Poseffe the people in Miffira here,
How innocent she died, and if your loue
Can labour aught in fad inuention,
Hang her an epitaph vpon her toomb,
And fing it to her bones, fing it to night:
To morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my sonne in law,
Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almost the copie of my child that's dead,
And she alone is heire to both of vs.

Clau. Give her the right you should giu'her cofin,
And so dies my reuenge.

Leon. O noble sir!
Your ouerkindnesse doth wring teares from me,
I do embrace your offer, and dispoee
For henceforth of poore Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I will expect your comming,
To night I take my leaue, this naughtie man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I beleue was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my soule she was not,
Nor knew not what she did when she s poke to me,
But alwaies had bin luft and vertuous,
In anie thing that I do know by her.

Conf. Moreover sir, which indeed is not vnder white and black, this plaintiff here, the offender did call mee affe, I beseech you let it be remembred in his punishement, and also the vvatch heard them tale of one Deroeme, they say he weares a kayin his eare and a lock hanging by it, and borrowes monie in Gods name, the which he hath vs'd so long, and neuer paied, that now men grow hard-hatrd and will lende nothing for Gods sake: praine you examine him vpon that point.

Leon. I thanke thee for thy care and honest paines.

Conf. Your vvoorship speaks like a molt thankefull and reuerent youth, and I praine God for you.

Leon. There's for thy paines.

Conf. God save the foundation.

Leon. Go, I discharge thee of thy prifoner, and I thanke thee.

Conf. I leave an arrant knaue vwith thy vvoorship, which I beseech thy worship to correct his selle, for the example of others: God keepe your vvoorship, I with thy worship vwell, God refoore you to health, I humble glie you leaue to depart, and if a merrie meeting may be wifth, God prohibite it: come neighbour.

Leon. Vntill to morrow morning, Lords, farewell.

Exeunt.

Brot. Farewell my Lords, vve looke for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not faile.

Clau. To night I live with Hero:

Leon. Bring you these fellows on, weel talkse with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew vwith this lewd fellow.

Exeunt.

Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Ben. Praye thee sweete Mifira Margaret, defende vwell at my hands, by helping mee to the speech of Beatrice.

Mar. Will
\[120\]

Much ado about Nothing.

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my woman?

Bene. In so high a style Margaret, that no man living shall come over it, for in most comely truth thou deseruest it.

Mar. To have no man come over me, why, shall I always keepe below staires?

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foiles, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hart a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I gie thee the bucklers.

Mar. Glue vs the swords, wee have bucklers of our owne.

Bene. If you vfe them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maides.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I thinke hath legges.

Bene. And therefore will come, The God of loue that fits above, and knowes me, and knowes me, how pitiful I deferue. I meane in singeing, but in louing, Leander the good swimmer, Troilous the first imploier of pandars, and a whole booke full of these quondam carpent-mongers, whose name yet runne smoothely in the euen rode of a blanke verfe, why they were never so true ly turned over and over as my poore felwe in loue: marrie I cannot throw it rime, I haue tried, I can finde out no time to Ladie but babie, an innocent rime: for Scone, borne, a hard time: for schoole foole, a babling time: veree omniuous endings, no, I was not borne vnder a rime Plannet, for I cannot woe in festfull tearmes:

Enter Beatrice.

Sweete Beatrice would't thou come when I call'd thee?

Beat. Ye Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Bene. Of slay but till then.

Beat. Then, is spoken: fare you well now, and yet ere I goe, let me goe with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath paft betweene you and Claudio.

Bene. Onely foule words, and thereupon I will kisse thee.

Beat. Foule words is but foule wind, and foule wind is but foule breath, and foule breath is noisme, therefore I will depart vnkit.

Bene. Thou haft frighted the word out of his right fence, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainely, Claudio vndergoes my challenge, and either I must short ly heare from him, or I will subcribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts diu'd thou first fall in loue with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politike a flate of cuill, that they will not admite any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts didst thou first labour loue for me?

Bene. Suffer louse! a good epithete, I do suffer loue indeed, for I loue thee against my will.

Beat. In fpright of your heart I think, alas poore heart, if you fpright it for my false, I will fpright it for yours, for I will never loue that which my friend hates.

Bened. Thou and I are too wise to woe peaceable.

Beat. It appereas not in this confession, there's not one wife man among twentie that will praie himselfe.

Bene. An old, an old infance Beatrice, that liu'd in the time of good neighbours, if a man doe not ereth in this age his owne tombe ere he dies, hee shall lie no longer in monuments, then the Bels ring, & the Widdow weepes.

Beat. And how long is that thinke you?

Bene. Questition, why an hower in clamour and a quarter in rheume, therefore is it most expedient for the wife, if Don worme (his confidence) finde no impediment to the contrary, to be the trumpett of his owne vertues, as I am to my felwe so much for praizing my felwe, who I my felwe will beare witnesse is praie worthie, and now tell me, how doth your cousin?

Beat. Verie ill.

Bene. And how doe you?

Beat. Verie ill too.

Enter Ursula.

Bene.Serue God, loue me, and mend, there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haffe.

Vrj. Madam, you must come to your Vncle, yonders old coile at home, it is proued my Ladie He ro hath bin falfelle accuste, the Prince and Claudio mightille abufe, and Don Iohn is the author of all, who is fied and gone: will you come prefentlie?

Beat. Will you go heare this newes Signior?

Bene. I will lufe in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes: and moreover, I will goe with thee to thy Vncles.

Exeunt.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or four with Tapers.

Clau. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord.

Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death in guardian of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
She, that in the life that dyed with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tombe,
Praising her waken I am dumb.

Clau. Now muick found & sing thy solemn hymne

Song.

Pardon goddesse of the night,
Tohe that slew thy virgin knight,
For the unskill with songs of woe,
Round about her tombe they goe:
Midnight affhert our mone, helpe us to sigh & groane.
Heavily, beauty,
Graves yearene and yeilds thy dead,
Till death be utter'd,
Heavenly, beatufully.

Lo. Now vsta thy bones good night,yeerely will I do

Prin. Good morrow maisters, put your Torches out,
The wolues have priied, and looke, the gentle day
Before the wheeles of Phoebus,round about
Dapples the drouse Elaf with spotts of grey:
Thanks to you all, and lease vs, fare you well.

Clau. Good morrow maisters, each his feuell way.

Prin. Come let vs hence, and put on other weedes,
And then to Leonatos we will goe.

Clau. And Hymen now with luckier issue speeds,
Much ado about Nothing.

Then this for whom we rendred vp this woe. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato, Bene, Marg, Vrfula, old man, Friar, Hero, Friar. Did not you tell me she was innocent?

Leo. So are the Prince and Claudia who accuss'd her, Vpon the eurors that you heard debated : But Margaret was in some fault for this, Although against her will as it appears, In the true course of all the question.

Old. Well, I am glad that all things fort so well. Bene. And so am I, being eyle by faith enforc'd To call young Claudia to a reckoning for it. Leo. Well daughter, and you gentlewomen all, Withdraw into a chamber by your felves, And when I fend for you, come hither mask'd : The Prince and Claudia promis'd by this howre To visit me, you know your fbrother Brother, You must be father to your brothers daughter, And give her to young Claudia. Exeunt Ladies. Old. Which I will doe with confirmd countenance. Bene. Friar, I must intreat your paines, I think me. Friar. To doe what Signior?

Bene. To binde me, or vndoe me, one of them: Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior, Your neece regards me with an eye of favour. Leo. That eye my daughter lent her, 'ts moft true. Bene. And I doe with an eye of love requisite her. Leo. The fight whereof I think you had from me, From Claudia, and the Prince, but what's your will?

Bened. Your answer fir is Enigmatical, But for my will, my will is, your good wil May stand with ours, this day to be conlynd, In the flate of honourable marriage, In which (good Friar) I shall defire your helpe. Leon. My heart is with your liking.

Friar. And my helpe. Enter Prince and Claudia, with attendants. Prin. Good morrow to this faire assembly. Leo. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudia: We heere attend you, are you yet determin'd, To day to marry with my brothers daughter?

Claud. Ilfe hold my minde were the an Ethiope. Leo. Call her forth brother, hereis the Friar ready. Prin. Good morrow Benedick, why what's the matter? That you haue such a Februarie face, So full of froth, of forme, and cloudineffe. Claudia. I thinke he thinkeis upon the faule buff: Thuf, fere not man, we'll tip thy horses with gold, And all Europa shall rejoyce at thee, As once Europa did at lusty Iove, When he would play the noble beast in love.

Bun. Bull Iove fir, had an amiable low, And some fuch strange bull leapt your fathers Cow, A got a Calfe in that fame noble feat, Much like to you, for you haue luft his blest. Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margarita, Vrfula. Cla. For this I owe you: here comes other recknings. Which is the Lady I must feize upon?

Leo. This fame is she, and I doe guiue you her. Cla. Why then she's mine, sweet let me fee your face. Leon. No that you shal not, till you take her hand, Before this Friar, and fware to marry her.

Claud. Give me your hand before this holy Friar, I am your husband if you like of me. Hero. And when I lovd I was your other wife, And when you lou'd, you were my other husband. Claud. Another Hero? Hero. Nothing certainer.

One Hero died, but I doe live, And surely as I live, I am a maid. Prin. The former Hero, Hero that is dead. Leon. Shee died my Lord, but whiles her flander liu'd. Friar. All this amazement can I qualify, When after that the holy rites are ended, Ie tell you largely of faire Heros death: Meane time let wonder frame familiar, And to the chappell let vs presently. Bene. Soft and faire Friar, which is Beatrice? Beat. I anfwer to that name, what is your will?

Bene. Doe not you loue me?

Beat. Why no, no more then reafon. Bene. Why then your Vncle, and the Prince, & Clau- dis, have beene deceived, they fwore you did.

Beat. Doe not you loue me?

Bene. Troth no, no more then reafon. Beat. Why then my Cofin Margaret and Vrfula Are much deceiu'd, for they did fware you did. Bene. They fwore you were almoft ficke for me. Beat. They fwore you were wel-nye dead for me. Bene. 'Tis no matter,then you doe not loue me Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence. Leon. Come Cofin, I am sure you loue the gentlema. Claud. And Ie be fwoerne won't, that he loues her, For heres a paper written in his hand, A halting fonnet of his owne pure braine, Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And heeres another, Writ in my cofins hand, folne from her pocket, Containing her affection unto Benedick. Bene. A miracle, here's our owne hands againft our hearts: come I wil haue thee, but by this light I take thee for pitie. Beat. I would not denye you, but by this good day, I yeeld upon great perfwafion, & partly to fave your life, for I was told, you were in a conufpation. Leon. Peace I will fpop your mouth.

Prin. How doft thou Benedick the married man?

Bene. Ile tell thee what Prince: A Collegde of witt- crackers cannot float mee out of my humour, doft thou think I care for a Satyre or an Epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with braines, a fmall weare nothing honefome about him: in briefe, since I do purpose to marry, I will thinke nothing to any purpose that the world can fay a- gainft it, and therefore never fhould out at me, for I haue faid againft it: for man is a giddy thing, and this is my con- clusion: for thy part Claudia, I did thinke to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinman, live vn- bru'd, and loue my coufin. Cla. I had well hop'd I would haue denied Beatrice, if I might have cudgel'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of queftion thou wilt be, if my Coufins do not looke exceeding narrowingly to thee. Bene. Come, come, we are friends, let's haue a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our owne hearts, and our wises heels.

Leon. Wee'll have dancing afterward.

Bene. Firft, of my word, therefore play muffick. Prince, thou art fad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife, there is no flaff more reuerend then one tipp with horn. Enter Mef. Miffen. My Lord, your brother John is tane in flight, And brought with armed men backe to Miffen. Bene. Thinke not on him till to morrow, iel deuife thee brave punishments for him: strike vp Pipers. Danc. L FINIS.
Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Berowne, Longauill, and Dumane.

Ferdinand.

Et Fame, that all hunt after in their lies,
Liué registred upon our brazen Tombs,
And then grace vs in the disgrace of death:
When sight of coromant deavoring Time,
Th'enlevour of this present breath may buy:
That honour which shall bate his lythes keenke edge,
And make vs hayres of all eternitie.
Therefore brave Conquerors, for so you are,
That warre against your owne affections,
And the huge Armie of the worlds defers.
Our late edit shall strongly stand in force,
Navar shall be the wonder of the world.
Our Court shall be a little Achademe,
Still and contemplative in lying Art.
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longauill,
Haue sworne for three yeere terme, to live with me:
My fellow Schollers, and to kepe those flatutes
That are recorded in this seckale herein.
Your oaths are past, and now subscrib your names:
That his owne hand may strike his honour downe,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm't dooe, as sworne to do,
Subscribe to your deepe oaths, and kepe it to.

Longauill. I am relolu'd, 'tis but a three yeere falt:
The minde shall banquet, though the body pine,
Fat paunes haue leanke pates: and dainty bits,
Make rich the ribs, but bankenoute the wits.

Dumane. My loving Lord, Dumane is mortified,
The groffer manner of these worlds delights,
He throwes upon the groffe worlds bafer flaves:
To loye, to wealth, to pompes, I pine and die,
With all these liuing in Philosophie.
Berowne. I can but say their protestation over,
So much, deare Liege, I haue already sworne,
That is, to live and study heere three yeeres.
But there are other strick obseruances:
As not to see a woman in that terme,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a weekke to touch no foode:
And but one meal on every day before:
The which I hope is not enrolled there.
And then to sleepe but three hours in the night,
And not be seene to winke of all the day.
When I was wont to thinke no harme all night,
And make a darke night too of halfe the day:

Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
O, th'ese are barren taskes, too hard to keepe,
Not to see Ladies, study, fast, nor sleepe.

Ferd. Your oath is past, to passe away from these,
Berow. Let me say no my Liedge, and if you please,
I onely swore to study with your grace,
And stay heere in your Court for three yeeres space.
Longa. You swore to that Berowne, and to the rest.
Berow. By yea and nay sir, than I swore in left.
What is the end of study, let me know?
Ferd. Why that to know which eile wee should not know,
Ber. Things hid & bard yon meanes the mon fente.
Ferd. I, that is studie god-like recompence.
Ber. Come on then, I will sweare to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus, to study where I well may dine,
When I to fast expressly am forbid.
Or study where to meetsome Mislurde fent,
When Mislurdes from common fente are hid.
Or having sworne too hard a keeping oath,
Studie to brake it, and not brake my truth.
If studie gaine be thus, and this be fo,
Studie knowes that which yet it doth not know,
Sware me to this, and I will never say no.
Ferd. Thence be the fops that hinder studie quite,
And traine our intellieicts to vaine delight.

Ber. Why? all delights are vaine, and that moft vaine
Which with paine purchas'd, doth inherit paine,
As painefully to poare upon a Booke,
To seeke the light of truth, while truth the while Doth falsely blinde the eye-light of his looke:
Light feeking light, doth light of light begulle:
So ere you finde where light in darkeneffe lies,
Your light growes darke by losing of your eyes.
Studie me how to please the eye indee,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
Who darling fo, that eye shal be his head,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Studie is like the heauens glorious Sunne,
That will not be deepie seark'd with fawcey lookes:
Small hauue continuall plodders ever wonne,
Save safe authority from others Bookes.
These earthly Godfathers of heauens lights,
That give a name to every fixed Starre,
Hauie no more profit of their shining nights,
Then those that walke and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is to know nought but fame:
And evey Godfather can give a name.
Ferd. How well hee's read, to reason against reading.
Dum.
Loues Labour's loft.

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding.
Lon. Hee weeded the corne, and fill letts grow the weeding.
Ber. The spring is neare when greenne geese are a breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Ber. Something then in rime.
Ferd. Berewone is like an ensious ineping Frosth,
That bites the first borne infants of the Spring.
Ber. Wel, say I am, why shoulde proud Summer boast,
Before the Birds have ancafe to fing?
Why should I Joey in any abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more define a Rose,
Then with a Snow in Mayes new fangled shows:
But like of each thing that in seafon grows.
So you to finde now it is too late,
That were to clymbe oer the houle to unlace the goat.
Fre. Well, fit you out : go home Berewone : adue.
Ber. No my good Lord, I have sworn to stay with you,
And though I haue for barbarisme spoke more,
Then for that Angell knowledge you can fay,
Yet confident I kepe what I haue sworne,
And bide the pence of each three yeeres day.
Glue me the paper, let me reade the same,
And to the strieffe decrees Ile write my name.
Fre. How well this yeelding refues thee from fame.
Ber. Item. That no woman shall come within a mile
Of my Court.
Hath this bin proclaimed?
Lon. Fourde dayes agoe.
Ber. Let's fee the penalitie.
On paine of loothing her tongue.
Who deu'd this penalitie?
Lon. Marry that did I.
Ber. Sweete Lord, and why?
Lon. To fright them hence with that dread penalitie,
A dangerous law against gentilitie.
Item. If any man be feene to talke with a woman within the terme of three yeeres, hee shall induch fuch publique flame as the rest of the Court shall boldly deuife.
Ber. This Article my Lidge your felse must breake,
For well you know here comes Embaflie
The French Kings daughter, with your felse to speake:
A Maide of grace and compleat malefite,
About furrender vp of Aquitaine:
To her decrret, fickle, and bed-rid Father.
Therefore this Article is made in vaie,
Or vainely comes th'admir'd Princesse bither.
Fre. What fay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot.
Ber. So Studie euermore is overhot,
While it doth fudy to haue what it would,
It doth forget to doe the thing it fpouled:
And when it hath the thing it hunthet moft,
'Tis won as townes with fire, fo won,fo loft.
Fre. We must of force difpenche with this Decree,
She must lye here on meere necelitie.
Ber. Necelity will make vs all forworne
Three thousand times within this three yeeres fpace:
For euery man with his affeets is borne,
Not by might maatred, but by special grace.
If I breake faith, this word fhall breake for me,
I am forworne on meere necelitie.

So to the Lawes at large I write my name,
And he that breaks them in the leaft degree,
Stands in attainer of eternall flame.
Sugelotions are to others as to me:
But I beleue although I feeme fo loth,
I am the left that will laft keepe his oath.
But is there no quicke recreation granted?
Fre. I that there is, our Court you know is hanted
With a refined transalter of Spaine,
A man in all the worlds new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrafel in his braine:
One, who the muffcke of his owne vaine tongue,
Doth rauffh like inchanting harmonie:
A man of complements whom right and wrong
Have choie as empryle of their mutinie.
This childe of fancie that Armado hight,
For interim to our studies shall relate,
In high-born words the worth of many a Knight:
From tawnie Spaine loft in the worlds debate.
How you delight my Lords, I know not I,
But I protest I loue to heare him lie,
And I will vfe him for my Minstreliie.
Ber. Armado is a molt illiutfirous wight,
A man of flire, new words, fashions owne Knight.
Lon. Coflard the swaine and he, shall be our sport,
And fo to flude, three yeeres is bot short.

Con. I my felfe reprehend his owne perfon, for I am his graces Tharborough: But I would fee his owne perfon in fteff and blood.
Ber. This is he.
Con. Signeour Arm6,Arm6 commendes you:
Ther's villainie abroad, this letter will tell you more.
Clo. Sir the Contempts thereof are as touching mee.
Fre. A letter from the magnificant Armado.
Ber. How low fouer the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Lon. A high hope for a low heaven,God grant vs patience.
Ber. To heare, or forbear hearing.
Lon. To heare meekly fir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.
Ber. Well fir, be it as the fife shall glue vs caufe to clime in the merrinelle.
Clo. The matter is to me fir, as concerning Laquenetta.
The manner of it, I was taken with the manner.
Ber. In what manner?
Clo. In manner and forme following fir all thoofe three:
I was feene with her in the Mannor houfe, fittting with her upon the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke:
which put to gether, is in manner and forme following.
Now fir for the manner; it is the manner of a man to speake to a woman, for the forme in forme forme.
Ber. For the following fir.
Clo. As it Shall follow in my correftion, and God de-ford the right.
Fre. Will you heare this Letter with attention?
Ber. As we would heare an Oracle.
Clo. Such is the simplicitie of man to harken after the fheef.

Great Deputies, the Welkins Vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navar, my sealis earths God, and bodies fo-thing patrones:

Colt. Not a word of Castard yet.

Ferd. So it is.

Colt. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is in telling true: but so.

Ferd. Peace, Cast.

Cast. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight.

Ferd. No words, Cast.

Cast. Of other mens secrets I beseech you.

or for thy more sweete understanding a woman: him, I (as my euer efeemed dutie prieke me on) bate fent to thee, to receive the need of punishment by thy sweet Grace Officer Anthony Dall, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, & elimination.
Ambh. Me, an't hell please you! I am Anthony Dall.

Ferd. For Laquentetta (fo is the sneaker waffell called) whicke I apprehended with the aforesaid Swaine, I keper her as a waffell of thy Louesy furie, and fhaile at the leaff of thy sweete notice, bring bar to triall. Thine in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of dutie.

Don Adriana de Armado.

Ber. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I saw.

Ber. I the best, for the worst. But firra, What say you to this?

Clo. Sir I confesse the Wenche.

Ber. Did you hear the Proclamation?

Clo. I doe confesse much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Ber. It was proclaimed a yeeres imprifonment to bee taken with a Wenche.

Clo. I was taken with none fir, I was taken with a Damofell.

Ber. Well, it was proclaimed Damofell.

Clo. This no Damofell neyther fir, thee a Virgin.

Ber. It is so varried too, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Clo. If it were, I deny her Virginitie: I was taken with a Maide.

Ber. This Maid will not ferue your turne fir.

Clo. This Maide will ferue my turne fir.

Kim. Sir I will pronounce your sentence: You shall fatt a Weeke with Branne and water.

Clo. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge.

Kim. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.

My Lord Biron, wee Lorne to put in practice that,
Which each to other hath so strongly sworne.

Ber. Ile lay my head to any good mans hat,
These othes and lawes will prove an idle fororne.

Sirr., come on.

Ber. I suffer for the truth fir: for true it is, I was taken with Laquentetta, and Laquentetta is a true girl, and therefore welcome the sawre cup of prosperitez, affilic-tion may one day freme againe, and vntill then fitt downe

Actus
Enter the Princeffe of France, with three attending Ladies, and three Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon vp your dearest spirits, Consider who the King your father sends: To whom he sends, and what’s his Embaiffe. Your felé, held precious in the worlds estate, To parle with the fole inheritor Of all perfeotions that a man may owe, Matchleffe Nauarre, the plea of no leffe weight Then Aquitaine, a Dowlie for a Queene. Be now as prodigall of all deare grace, As Nature was in making Graces deare, When she did farue the generall world beside, And prodigally gave them all to you. Queen. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean, Needs not the painted flourith of your praine; Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye, Not vttred by base sale of chapmans tongues: I am leffe proud to heere you tell my worth, Then you much wilging to be counted wife, In spending your wit in the praine of mine, But now to task the tasker, good Boyet, Prin. You are not ignorant all-telling fame Both noyle abroad Nauar hath made a vow, I’ll painfull study shall out-wear three yeares, No woman may approach his silent Court: Therefore to’s leemeth it a needfull courfe, Before we enter his forbidden gates, To know his pleasure, and in that behalfe Bold of your worthineffe, we fingle you, As our belt mouing faire solliciter: Tell him, the daughter of the King of France, On serious bufineffe crounig quicke dispatch, Importunts perfonall conference with his grace. Bitte, signifie fo much while we attend, Like humble vifag’d futers his high will. Boy. Proud of imploymt, willingly I goe. Exit. Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is fo : Who are the Votaries my louing Lords, that are vow- fellows with this vertuous Duke? Lor. Longauill is one. Princ. Know you the man? 1 Lady. I know him Madame at a marriage feast, Betweene L. Perigore and the beautious heire Of Iogues Faucenbridge fenromanized. In Normandie law I this Longauill, A man of fouraigne parts he is esteem’d: Well fitted in Arts, glorious in Armes: Nothing becomes him ill that he would well. The onely foyle of his faire vertues gloffe, If vertues gloffe will staine with any folie, Is a sharp wit match’d with too blunt a Will: Whoes edge hath power to cut whose will wills, It shoulde none spare that come within his power. Prin. Some merry mocking Lord belike, i’fto? Lad. 1. They say in moft, that moft his humors know. Prin. Such short lu’d wits do wither as they grow. Who are the reft? 2. Lad. The yong Damaine, a well accomplisht youth, Of all that Vertue loue, for Vertue loued. Molt power to doe moft harme, leafing knowing ill: For he hath wit to make an ill shape good, And shape to win grace though he had no wit. I faw him at the Duke Alenfous once, And much too little of that good I faw, Is my report to his great worthineffe. Raft. Another of thefe Students at that time, Was there with him, as I haue heard a truth. Berowne they call him, but a merrier man, Within the limit of becoming mirth, I never spent an hours talke withall. His eye begets occasion for his wit, For every obiect that the one doth catch, The other turns to a mirth-mouing left. Which his faire tongue (conceits expositior) Deluera in fuch apt and gracius words, That aged cares play treuant at his tales, And yonger hangings are quite rauifhed. So sweete and voluble is his discoure. Prin. God bleffe my Ladies, are they all in loue? That every one her owne hath garnished, With fuch bedecking ornaments of praine. Ma. Heere comes Boyet. Enter Boyet. Prin. Now, what admittance Lord? Boyet. Nauar had notice of your faire approach; And he and his competitors in oath, Were all adbre for to meete you gentle Lady Before I came : Marrie thus much I have learnt, He rather meanes to lodge you in the field, Like one that comes heere to besiege his Court, Then fecke a difpensation for his oath: To let you enter his vnpeopled house. Enter Nauar, Longauill, Damaine, and Berowne. Heere comes Nauar. Nauar. Faire Princeffe, welcome to the Court of Nauar. Prin. Faire I gue you backe againe, and welcome I haue not yet: the rooffe of this Court is too high to bee yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too safe to be mine. Nauar. You shall be welcome Madam to my Court. Prin. I wil be welcome then, Conduct me thither. Nauar. Hear me deare Lady, I haue fwoorne an oath. Prin. Our Lady helpes my Lord, he’l be forworne. Nauar. Not for the world fawe Madam, by my will. Prin. Why, will shal breake it will, and nothing els. Nauar. Your Ladiship is ignorant what it is. Prin. Were my Lord fo, his ignorance were wife, Where now his knowledge muft prove ignorance. I heare your grace hath fwoorne out Housekeeping: ’Tis deadly finne to keepe that oath my Lord, And finne to breake it: But pardon me, I am too fodaine bold, To teach a Teacher ill befeemeth me. Vouchsafe to read the purpoze of my comming, And sodainly refolve me in my suitte. Nauar. Madam, I will, if sodainly I may. Prin. You will the sooner that I were away, For you’ll prooue periu’d if you make me stay. Berow. Did not I dance with you in Brabant one? Refa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant one? Ber. I
Ber. I know you did.
Rofa. How needelesse was it then to ask the question?
Ber. You must not be so quicke.
Rofa. 'Tis long of you to purs me with such questions.
Ber. Your wit is too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
Rofa. Not till it lease the Rider in the mire.
Ber. What time a day?
Rofa. The houre that foolest should ask.
Ber. Now fare befall your maske.
Rofa. Faire fall the face it covers.
Ber. And send you many louers.
Rofa. Amen, so you be none.
Ber. Nay then will I be gone.
Kin. Madame, your father here doth intimate,
The paiement of a hundred thousand Crownes,
Being but th'one halfe, of an intire summe,
Disburfed by my father in his warres.
But say that he, or we, as neither have Received that summe; yet there remaines vnpaid
A hundred thousand more: in surety of the which,
One part of Aquitaine is bound to vs,
Although not valued to the moneys worth.
If then the King your father will restore
But that one halfe which is vnpaid,
We will give vp our right in Aquitaine,
And hold faire friendship with his Maiestie:
But that it feemes he little purpofeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaire.
An hundred thousand Crownes, and not demands
One paiement of a hundred thousand Crownes,
To have his title lye in Aquitaine,
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And have the money by our father lent,
Then Aquitaine, as guelded as it is.
Deare Princesse, were not his requets so farre
From reafons yeilding, your faire felfe should make.
A yeilding gainft some reason in my bref,
And goe well satisfied to France againe.
Prin. You doe the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In fo vneeming to conffide receypt
Of that which hath so faithfully beene paid.
Kin. I doe protest I never heard of it,
And if you prove it, Ile repay it backe,
Or yeeld vp Aquitaine.
Prin. We arret your word:
Boyet, you can produce acquaintances
For such a summe, from speciall Officers,
Of Charles his Father.
Kin. Satisfie me so.
Boyet. So pleafe your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound,
To morrow you hall have a fight of them.
Kin. It shall suffice me; at which interview,
All liberall reason would I yeeld vnto:
Meane time, receiue such welcome at my hand,
As Honour, without breach of Honour may
Make tender of, to thy true worthineffe.
You may not come faire Princesse in my gates,
But heree without you shall be so receiu'd,
As you shall live your felfe lodg'd in my heart,
Though fo coud't farther habborne in my house:
Your owne good thoughts excufe me, and farewell,
To morrow we shall visit you againe.
Prin. Sweet health & faire defires confort your grace.
Kin. Thyn own with with I thee, in euery place. Exit.

Me thought all his fences were lockt in his eye,
As Jewels in Chriftall for some Prince to buy. (glafs)
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were
Did point out to buy them along as you pait.

Bro. How meanest thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat matter, but to ligge off a tune it with turning vp your eie: figh a note and finge a note, sometimes through the throate: if you swallowed loue with finging, loue sometime through: note as you if false? (plaine,)

Ar. No Page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make
Some olufbire precedent that hath tofore bin false.
Now will I begin your morral, and do you follow with my lenowy.

The Foxe, the Ape, and the Humble-Bee,
Were fill at oddes, being but three.

Arm. Vntill the Goofe came out of doore,
Staying the oddes by adding four.

Pag. A good Lenowy, ending in the Goofe: would you defire more?

Ch. The Boy hath fald him a bargain, a Goofe, that's Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as faut and loose:
Let me see a fat Lenuwy, I that's a fat Goose.

Are. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?
Boy. By saying that a Coffard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for the Lenuwy.
Clow. True, and I for a Plantain:
Thus came your argument in:
Then the Boyes fat Lenuwy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market.
Are. But tell me: How was there a Coffard broken in a shin?
Pag. I will tell you fencibly.
Clow. Thou haist no feeling of it Matb,
I will speake that Lenuwy,
Coffard running out, that was safely within,
Fell ouer the threshold, and broke my shin.
Arm. We will talke no more of this matter.
Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.
Arm. Sirra Coffard, I will infranchifie thee.
Clow. O, marrie me to one France, I smell some Lenuwy,
Some Goose in this.
Arm. By my sweete soule, I meane, letting thee at libertie.
Enfreedoming thy perfon: thou wert emured, restrained, captivated, bound.
Clow. True, true, and now you will my purgation, and let me loose.
Arm. I giue thee thy libertie, let thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impone on thee nothing but this:
Beare this significant to the countrey Maide Iaquinetta:
there is remuneration, for the belt ward of mine honours is saving my dependants. Matb, follow.
Pag. Like the fequelle I.
Signeur Coffard adieu.
Exit.
Clow. My sweete ounce of mans flesh, my in-cone Jew:
Now will I looke to his remuneration.
Remuneration, O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings:
Three-farthings remuneration, What's the price of this yncle? i.d. no, I lie giue you a remuneration: Why?
It carries it remuneration: Why? It is a fairer name then a French-Crowne. I will neuer buy and fell out of this word.

Enter Berowe.

Ber. O my good knaue Coffard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. Pray you sir, How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Ber. What is a remuneration?
Coff. Marrie sir, halfe penny farthing.
Ber. O, Why then threefarthings wort of Silke.
Coff. I thanke your worship, God be wy you.
Ber. O thy flau, I must employ thee:
A thou wilt win my favour, good my knaue,
Doe one thing for me that I shal intreate.
Clow. When would you haue it done sir?
Ber. O this after-noone.
Clow. Well, I will do it sir: Fare you well.
Ber. O thou knowest not what it is.
Clow. I shall know sir, when I haue done it.
Ber. Why villaine thou must know firft.
Clow. I wil come to your worship to morrow morning.
Ber. It must be done this after-noone,
Harke flau, it is but this:
The Princesse comes to hunt here in the Parke,
And in her traine there is a gentle Ladie:
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Royalline they call her, ake for her:
And to her white hand fee thou do commend
This faul'd vp counseile. Ther's thy gourd: goe.
Clow. Gardon, O sweete gardon, better then remuneration, a leuenence-farthing better: most sweete gardon.
I will doe it sir in print: gardon, remuneration.

Exit.

Ber. O, and I forsooth in lowe,
I that haue beene lowes whip?
A verie Beadle to a humerous figh: A Critick,
Nay, a night-watch Contable.
A domineering pedant ore the Boy,
Then whom no mortall fo magnificent.
This wimpled, whyning, purblinde waiward Boy,
This signior James gent drawer, don Cupid,
Regent of Lone-rimes, Lord of folded armes,
Th'annotated fouersign of fighes and groanes:
Liedge of all loyterers and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Placats, King of Codpeeces.
Sole Emperator and great general
Of trotting Parrators (O my little heart.)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And weare his colours like a Tumblers hoope.
What? I loue, I fwe, I feake a wife,
A woman that is like a Germane Cloake,
Still a repairing: euer out of frame,
And neuer going a right, being a Watch:
But being watcht, that it may still goe right.
Nay, to be periurde, which is worst of all:
And among three, to loue the worfe of all,
A whilty wanton, with a velvet brow.
With two pitch bals flucke in her face for eyes.
I, and by heauen, one that will doe the deed,
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her garde.
And I to figh for her, to watch for her,
To pray for her, go to ; it is a plague
That Cupid will impofe for my neglecs,
Of his almighty dreadfull little might.
Well, I will loue, write, figh, pray, fwe, grone,
Some men must loue my Laéy, and some lone.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princesse, a Forrester, ber Ladies, and ber Lords.
Qu. Was that the King that spurde his horse fo hard,
Against the sleepe vuprising of the hill?
Boy. I know not, but I thinke it was he.
Qu. Who ere a was, a shew'd a mounting minde:
Well Lords, to day we shal have our dispatch,
On Saterday we will returne to France.
Then Forrester my friend, Where is the Bush
That we must fland and play the murtherer in?
For. Hereby vpon the edge of yonder Conpipe,
A Stand where you may make the fairest thoot.
Qu. I thanke my beautie, I am faire that thoot,
And thereupon thou speakest the fairest thoot.
For. Pardon me Madam, for I meant not so.
Qu. What, what! Firft praffe me, & then again fay no.
For. Yes.
For. Yes Madam faire.

Qu. Nay, prithee me now,
Where faire is not, praiue cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glasse) take this for telling true:
Faire painement for foule words, is more then due.
For. Nothing but faire is that which you inherit.

Qu. See, see, my beautie will be fau’d by merit.
O herefe in faire, fit for these dayes,
A guing hand, though foule, shall haue faire praiue.
But come, the Bow : Now Merrie goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accounted ill:
Thus will I faue my credit in the shooe,
Not wounding, pittie would not let me doe:
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praiue, then purpoe meant to kill.
And out of queftion, fit it is sometimes:
Glory grows guillie of detested crimes,
When for Fames false, for praiue an outward part,
We bend to that, the working of the hart.

As I for praiue alone now fecke to spille
The poore Deere blood, that my heart means no ill,

Boy. Do not curf wise holds that selfe-fouraigntie Onely for praiue fake, when they ftrive to be Lords ore their Lords?

Qu. Onely for praiue, and praiue we may afford,
To any Lady that subdewes a Lord.

Enter Cloane.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.

Clo. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head Lady?

Qu. Thou shalt know her fellow, by the ref that haue no heads.

Clo. Which is the greattest Lady, the highest?

Qu. The thickest, and the tallest.

Clo. The thickest, & the tallest : it is fo, truth is truth.
And your waife Milfris, were as fender as my wit,
One a thef Maldes girdles for your waife should be fit.
Are not you the chief of wom? You are the thickest here?

Qu. What’s your will sir? What’s your will?

Clo. I have a Letter from Monfer Bervone,
To one Lady Rosaline.

Qu. O thy letter, thy letter: He’s a good friend of mine.

Stand a fide good bearer.

Boyet, you can carue,
Breake vp this Capon.

Boyet. I am bound to fereue.

This Letter is milbooke : it importeth none here:
It is writ to Iaguenetta.

Qu. We will reade it, I sweare.

Breake the necke of the Waxe, and every one glue eare.

Boyet reads.

By heauen, that thou art faire, is moft infallible: true that thou art beauteous, truth it felle that thou art lovely: more faire then faire, beauteful then beauteous, truer then truth it felle: haue comiferation on thy heroical call Vaffall. The magnanimous and moft illustreate King Cepheus let eie vpon the pernicious and indubitate Begger Zenopheus: and he it was that might rightly fay, Vernis, udie, uici: Which to anonimation in the vulgar, O safe and obfcrue vulgar; videiuer, He came, and overcame: hee came one; fee, two; couercame three: Who came? the King. Why did he come? to fee. Why did he fee? to overcome. To whom came he? to the Begger. What faw he? the Begger. Who overcame he? the Begger. The conclusion is vifiorie: On whose fide? the King: the capture is inricht: On whose fide? the Beggers. The catastrophe is a Nuptial: on whose fide?
the Kings; one, or both in one, or one in both. I am the King (for fo stands the comparison) thou the Begger, Shall I entreate thy loue? I will. What, shalt thou exchange for rages, roaxes: for titles titles, for thy felfe mee. Thus expeting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foute, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy euerie part.

Thine in the dearest defigne of induftrie,

Don Adriana de Armathero.

Thus doth thou heare the Nemean Lion roare,
Gainst thee thou Lambe, that fandleth as his pray:
Submiffue fall his princely feet before,
And he from forrage will incline to play.

But if thou fhriue (poore foule) what art thou then?
Foodo for his rage, repature for his den.

Qu. What plume of feathers is hee that inditted this ever hear better?

Boy. I am much deceived, but I remember the flile.

Qu. Else your memory is bad, going ore it erewhile.

Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court
A Phantafime, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the Prince and his Booke-mates.

Qu. Thou fellow, a word.

Who gave thee this Letter?

Clov. I told you, my Lord.

Qu. To whom should’it thou give it?

Clo. From my Lord to my Lady.

Qu. From which Lord, to which Lady?

Clo. From my Lord Bervone, a good master of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call’d Rosaline.

Qu. Thou haft mistaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here fweete, put vp this, twill be thine other day.

Exeunt.

Boy. Who is the shooter? Who is the shooter?

Refa. Why the that beares the Bow. Finely put off.

Boy. But the her felle is hit lower:

Haue I hit her now.

Refa. Shall I come vpon thee with an old faying, that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it.

Boyet. So I may anfwere thee with one as old that was a woman when Queene Guinouer of Britaine was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Refa. Thou
Loves Labour's lost.

Roys. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it thy good man.
Boy. I cannot, cannot, cannot:
And I cannot, another can.
Exit.
Clo. By my troth most pleasant, how both did fit it.
Mar. A marke marvellous well shot, for they both did hit.
Boy. A mark, O marke but that marke a marke faies my Lady.
Let the mark have a pricke in't, to meat at, if it may be.
Mar. Wide a'th bow hand, y'sith your hand is out.
Clo. Indeede a'muff shoote nearer, or heele ne're hit the clout.
Boy. And if my hand be out, then beilike your hand is in.
Clo. Then will shee get the vpshoo by cleaving the sin.
Ma. Come, come, you talke grafsely, your lips grow foule.
Clo. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir challenge her to boule.
Boy. I feare too much rubbing : good night my good Oule.
Clo. By my foule a Swaine, a moft simple Clowne.
Lord, Lord, how the Ladies and I have put him downe.
O my troth most sweete lefts, most incoms vulgar wit,
When it comes to smoothely off, to obfcently, as it were, to fit.
Armatour ath to the side, O a moft dainty man.
To see him walke before a Lady, and to beare her Fan.
To see him kiffe his hand, and how most sweete a will swære:
And his Page another side, that handfull of wit,
Ah heaven, it is moft patheticall nit.
Sowla, sowla.
Shoothe within.

Enter Dull, Holofernes, the Pedant and Nathaniel.

Nat. Very reuerent sport truely, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.
Ped. The Deare was (as you know) fanguis in blood, ripe as a Pomwater, who now handgeth like a Jewell in the eare of Celo the Icke ; the welken the heaven, and anon fulleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the foyle, the land, the earth.
Corat.Natb. Truely M. Holofernes, the ephithes are sweeetly varied like a Scholler at the leaff: but sir I affure ye, it was a Bucke of the first head.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, baud credo.
'Dul. 'Twas not a baud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Moft barbarous intimation : yet a kind of intimination, as it were in vita, in way of explication factere : as it were replication, or rather oftentare, to show as it were his inclination after his vnrefted, vnapolished, vneducated, vprunved, vntrained, or rather vnlettered, or rather reft-unconformed fashion, to infect again my baud credo for a Deare.
'Dul. I faid the Deare was not a baud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Twice fod simplicitie, bi cœtus, O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dooef thou looke.
Natb. Sir hee hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a booke.
He hath not eate paper as it were :
He hath not drunke inke.

His intellect is not replenished, hee is onely an animal, onely fenfible in the droller parts and such barren plants are fet before vs, that we thankfull shoue be : which we take and feeling, are for those parts that doe fructifie in vs more then he.
For as it would ill become me to be vaine,indiscreet, or a foil ;
So there was a patch fet on Learning, to see him in a School.
But some bene fay I, being of an old Fathers minde,
Many can brooke the weather, that loue not the winde.
Dul. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wit,
What was a month old at Cains birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?
Hol. Dictiona goodman Dul, dictiona goodman Dull.
Dul. What is dictiona?
Natb. A title to Phebe, to Luna, to the Moone.
Hol. The Moone was a month old when Adam was no more.
And wrought not to five-weekes when he came to huee-
Th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. 'Tis true indeede, the Collusion holds in the Exchange.
Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I say th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. And I say the polution holds in the Exchange:
for the Moone is neuer but a month old : and I say beside that, 'twas a Pricket that the Princezze kill'd.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you heare an extemprolar Epitaph on the death of the Deare, and to humour the ignorant call'd the Deare, the Princezze kill'd a Pricket.
Natb. Perge, good M. Holofernes, perge, so it shal please you to abrogate feurilitie.
Hol I will something affect the letter, for it argues facilitie.

The preyfull Princezze perzze and prickt
a prettie pleasing Pricket,
Some fay a Sore, but not a fere,
till nowe made fere with booting,
The Dogges did yeal, put ell to Sore,
then Sorel jumps from thicker:
Or Pricket-fere, or elle Sorel,
the people fall a booting.
If Sore be fere, then ell to Sore, makes fritte feres O forel :
Of one fere I an hundred make by adding but one more L.

Natb. A rare talent.
Dul. If your talent be a claw, looke how he claues him with a talent.
Natb. This is a gift that I have simpler: simple, a foo-lifh extravagant spirit, full of formes, figures, shapes, objects, Ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memorie, nourish in the wombe of primater, and deliver'd upon the mellowing of occasion : but the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.
Hol. Sir, I profe the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners, for their Sonnes are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly vnder you : you are a good member of the common-wealth.
Natb. Me bercels, If their Sonnes be ingenuous, they shall shall want no instructions: if their Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But Vir sapô qui pauca loquitur, a foule Feminine faluteth vs.

Enter Iaquenetta and the Clovonie.

Iaqu. God guie you good morrow M. Perfon.
Natb. Master Perfon, quâs Perfon? And if one should be perfit, Which is the one?
Cl. M. Marry M. Schoolemaister, hee that is likest to a hoghead.

Natb. Of persting a Hoghead, a good lufter of conceit in a turth of Earth, Fire enough for a Flint, Pearle enough for a Swine: *tis prettie, it is well.

Iaqu. Good Master Perfon be so good as reade mee this Letter, it was given mee by Cifard, and sent mee from Don Armactso: I beseech you reade it.

Natb. Faccile precor gellida, quando pecas omnia sub umbra rumina, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speake of thee as the traveller doth of Penfis, venchie, venchie, quae non te unde, quae non te perretche. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan.

What vsnderstandeth thee not, et re sol mi fa, Vnder pardon fir, What are the contents? or rather as Horrace sayes in his, What my foule verfes.

Hol. I fir, and ver learned.

Natb. Let me heare a faffe, a flanze, a verfe, Lege domine.

If Loue make me forsworne, how shall I sweare to loue? Ah neuer faith could, if not to beautie vowed.

Though to my felle forsworn, to thee He faithfull proue.

Thofe thoughts to mee were Oces, to thee like Ofers bowed.

Studie his byas leaues, and makes his booke thine eyes.

Where all thofe pleafures live, that Art would compre hend. If knowledge be the marke, to know thee shall suffice. Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee comedon: All ignorant that foule, that fees thee without wonder.

Which is to me fome praiie, that I thy parts admire; Thy eye loves lightening bearers, thy voyce his dreadfull thunders.

Which not to anger bent, is muifique, and sweet fire.

Celeffiall as thou art, Oh pardon loue this wrong, That fings heavens praiie, with fuch an earthly tongue.

Ped. You finde not the apostrophas, and so misthe the accent. Let me suuerife the cangeten.

Natb. Here are onely numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, & golden cadence of poefie caret, Ouidius Nape was the man. And why in deed Nape, but for smelting out the odoriforous flowers of fancy? The ierkies of inuention imitarie is nothing: So doth the Hound his master, the Ape his keeper, the tyred Horfe his rider: But Damosella virgini, Was this directed to you?

Iaq. I fir from one moufier Beronie, one of the strange Queenes Lords.

Natb. I will ouerglance the supercritic.

To the fame white band of the miff beantious LadyRosaline. I will looke againe on the intellect of the Letter, for the nomination of the partie written to the perfon written vnto.

Vour Ladißhips in all defred employment, Beronine.

Per. Sir Hof师范, this Beronie is one of the Votaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a fequent of the franger Queenes: which accidentally, or by the way of progreffion, hath milcallied. Trip and go my sweete, deliver this Paper into the hand of the King; it may concerne much: say not thy complemente, I forgive thy sweete, adue.

Maid. Good Cifard go with me:
Sir God faue your life.

Cif. Haue with thee my girle.

Hol. Sir you have done this in the feare of God very religiously: and as a certaine Father faith.*

Ped. Sir tell not me of the Father, I do feare colourable colours. But to return to the Verfes, Did they pleafe you fir Natbaniel?

Natb. Maruellous well for the pen.

Ped. I do dine to day at the fathers of a certaine Pulpill of mine, where if (*being reapeft) it shall pleafe you to gratifie the table with a Grace, I will on my priuiledge I haue with the parents of the forefaid Childe or Pulpill, vndertake your bien vouuons, where I will proue thofe Verfes to be very vnlearned, neither favouring of Poetrie, Wit, nor Inuenition. I beseech your So ciety.

Nat. And thanke you to: for societe (faith the text) is the happinesse of life.

Ped. And certes the text most infallibily concludes it. Sir I do insite you too, you shall not fay me nay: pauca verba.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

Exeunt.

Enter Beronion with a Paper in his band,alone.

Bero. The King he is hunting the Deare, I am courfing my felfe.

They have pitcht a Toyle, I am toyling in a pycht, pitch that defiles: defile, a foule word: Well, fee the downe forrow; for fo they fay the foule faide, and fo fay I, and I the foule: Well proued wit. By the Lord this Loue is as mad as Aias, it kills shepe, it kills mee, I a theepe: Well proued againe my fide. I will not loue: If I do hang me: yeithf wil I not. O but her eye: by this light, but for her eye, I would not loue her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but ly, and lye in my throate. By heauen I doe loue, and it hath taught mee to Rime, and to be mallicholie: and here is part of my Rime, and heere my mallicholie. Well, the hath one a'my Sonnet already, the Cloone bore it, the Foole fent it, and the Lady hath it: sweet Cloone, sweeter Foole, sweete left Cloone. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God glue him grace to grone.

He flands aixde.

The King entreath.

Kin. Ay me!

Ber. Shot by heauen: procede sweet Capit, thou haft thumped him with thy Birdbolte vnder the left pap: in faith secretas.

King. So sweete a kiffe the golden Sunne glues not, To thofo fresh morning drops upon the Rote,
As thy eye beames, when their fresh raye haue simote.

The night of dew that on my cheekes downe flows.
Nor thines the fluer Moone one halfe so bright,
Through the transparente bottom of the deep.

As doth thy face through teares of mine glue light:
Thou shin'll in evere teare that I doe weepes,
No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee:
So rideft thou triumphing in my was,
Do but behold the teares that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my griefe will show:

But
Loves Labour's lost.

But do not love thy selfe, then thou wilt keepe
My teares for glasse, and still make me wepe.
O Queene of Queenes, how farre doft thou excell,
No thought can thinke, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall I know my griefes? Ie drop the paper,
Sweet leaues shade folly. Who is he comes heere?

Enter Longauile. The King steps aside.
What Longauile, and reading : leten eare.
Ber. Now in thy likenesse, one more foole appeare.
Long. Ay me, I am forsworne.
Ber. Why he comes in like a periuire, wearing papers.
Long. In loue I hope, sweet fellowship in flame.
Ber. One drunkard loues another of the name.
Len. Am I the first I have periuird so? (know, I could put thee in comfort, not by two that I
Thou makest the triumphery, the corner cap of societie,
The shap of Loues Tisburne, that hangs vp simplicitie.
Len. I feare thefe stubborn lines lack power to move.
O sweet Maria, Emprefse of my Loue,
Ber. These numbers will I teare, and write in profe:
Ber. O Rimes are gards on wanton Ovidis hofe,
Disguire not his Shop.
Len. This fame shall goe. He reads the Sonnet.
Didst not the heavenly Historics of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot bold argument,
Perfound my heart to this falls periuire?
Vowes for thee broke defere not punishment.
A Woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddeffe, I forswore not thee.
My Vow was earthly, thou abeaneously Loue.
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vowes are but breath, and breath a vapour it.
Then thou faire Sun, which on my earth doft shine,
Exhale this vapour, in thee it is :
If broken then, it is no fault of mine :
If by me broke, What foole is not so wise,
To lose an oath, to win a Paradise?
Ber. This is the liuer veine, which makes fheft a deity.
A greene Goofe, a Cadiffe, pure pure Idolatry.
God amends us, God amends, we are much out o'th'way.

Enter Dumasine.
Len. By whom shall I fend this (company?) Stay.
Ber. All hid, all hid, an old infant play,
Like a demie God, here fit I in the skies,
And wretched foole's secrets heedfully ore-eye.
More Sacks to the myll. O heauens I have my whis,
Dumasine transform'd, foure Woodcocks in a dith.
Dum. O most diuine Kate.
Bero. O most prophan coxcombe.
Dum. By heaven the wonder of a mortall eye.
Bero. By earth she is not, corporall, there you lye.
Dum. Her Amber haires for foule hath amber coted.
Ber. An Amber coloured Rauen was well noted.
Dum. As upright as the Cedar.
Ber. Stoop I say, her shoulde is with-child.
Dum. As faire as day.
Ber. I as some daies, but then no fune mufh shine.
Dum. O that I had my wish?
Len. And I had mine.
Kin. And mine too good Lord.
Ber. Amen, so I had mine : Is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her, but a Feuer she Raignes in my blood,and will remembered be.
Ber. A Feuer in your blood, why then incision

Would let her out in Sawcers, sweet misprision.
Dum. Once more Ile read the Ode that I have writ.
Ber. Once more Ile marke how Loue can vary Wit.

'Dumaine reads his Sonnet.

On a day, alack the day:
Loue, whose Month is every May,
Splied a blissefull paffing faire,
Playing in the watton ayre :
Through the Velvet, leaues the winde,
All vaine, can passage finde.
That the Louer fiche to death,
Wifh bimjelte the beams breath.
Ayre (quoto be) thy cheakes may blowe,
Ayre, would I might triumph fo.
But alacke my hand is bled,
Nore to plucke thee from thy throne :
Vow alacke for youth vneneste,
Your fto apt to plucke a fweet.
Doe not call it fame in me,
That I am forsworne for thee.
Thou for whom loue would fwear,
Luno but an Abijer wore,
And deme himjelfe for loue.
Turning mortal for thy Loue.

This will I fend, and something else more plaine.
That shall expresse my true-loues fating paine.
O would the King, Bereone and Longauile,
Were Louers too, ill to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a periuird note:
For none offend, where all alike doe dote.
Len. Dumaine, thy Loue is farre from charitie,
That in Loues griefe does't societie.
You may looke pale, but I should blufh I know,
To be ore-heard, and taken napping fo.

Kin. Come sir, you blufh : as his, your cafe is fuch,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You doe not loue Maria? Longauile,
Did neuer Sonnet for her fake compile;
Nor neuer lay his wretche arms athwart
His louing bosome, to keepe downe his heart.
I have bene clofely throtewed in this bufh,
And markt you both, and for you both did blufh.
I heard your guilty Rimes, ofurer'd your fashion
Saw fighes reekke from you, noted well your paffion.
Aye me, fayas one ! O Iove, the other cries!
On her haires were Gold, Chriftall the others eyes.
You would for Paradise breake Faith and troth,
And Iove for your Loue would infringe an oath.
What will Bereone say when he shall heare
Faith infringed, which fuch zeale did swarde.
How will he scourne? how will he fend his wit?
How will he triumph, leape, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that euer I did fee,
I would not have him know fo much by me.

Ber. Now flip I forth to whip hypocrite.
Ah good my Ledge, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace haft thou thus to reproue
These worrass for louing, that art moft in loue?
Your eyes doe make no noches in your teares.
There is no certaine Princeffe that appears.
You'll not be periuird, 'tis a hateful thing:
Tuff, none but Minfrel's like of Sonnetting.
But are you not afham'd? nay, are you not
Loves Labour's lost.

All three of you, to be thus much ore'hot? But you found his Moth, the King your Moth did see: But I a Beame doe finde in each of three. O what a Scene of fool'try have I feene. Of figues, of groines, of bowre, and of teene: O me, with what strik'patience have I far, To fee a King transformed to a Gnat? To fee great Hercules whipping a Gigge, And profound Salomon tuning a lygge? And Nefer play at puf'h-pin with the boyes, And Criticke Tyson laugh at idle boyes. Where lies thy grievie? O tell me good Dumaine? And gentle Longuill, where lies thy paine? And where my Liedges? all about the breft: A Candle haue.

Kin. Too bitter is thy left.

Are we betrayed thus to thy ouer-view? Ber. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you. I am that honett, I that hold it fnne To breake the vow I am ingaged in. I am betrayed by keeping company With men, like men of inconfiancice. When shall you fee me write a thing in rime? Or groine for Lune? or spend a minutes time, In prunning me, when shall you heare that I will praffe a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a state, a brow, a breft, a wafte, a legge, a limme.

Kin. Soft, Whither a-way so falt? A true man, or a theepe, that gallops fo.

Ber. I poft from Loue,good Louer let me go.

Enter Lupenetta and Clewne.

Lau. I beseach your Grace let this Letter be read, Our perfon miff-doubts it: it was treason he faid. Kin. Beroune, read it ouer. He reads the Letter. Kin. Where hadft thou it?

Lau. Of Cofhard.

King. Where hadft thou it?

Cof. Of Dun Atramadex, Dun Atramadie.

Kin. How now, what is in you? why doft thou tear it?

Ber. A toy my Liedge, a toy: your grace needes not feare it.

Long. It did move him to paffion, and therefore let's heare it.

Dum. It is Beroune writing, and here is his name.

Ber. Ah you whorcon loggerhead, you were borne to doe me shame.

Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confesse, I confesse.

Kin. What? Ber. That you three foole, lackt mee foole, to make vp the meffe. He, he, and you: and you my Liedge, and I, Are picked-pares in Loue, and we deferue to die. O dimiff this audience, and I shall tell you more. Dum. Now the number is euen.

Beroue. True we, are fowre: will these Turtles be gone?

Kin. Hence firly, away.

Clo. Walk alilde the true folke, & let the traytors flay. Ber. Sweet Lords, sweet Louers, O let vs imbrace, As true we are as fleth and broid can be,

The Sea will fudder and bow, hearts and blood will fiew his face: Young broid doth not obey an old decree. We cannot croffe the caufe why we are borne: Therefore of all hands weft we be forworne.

King. What, did thefe rent lines fiew fome loue of thine?

(ROFAINE, Ber. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heauenly That (like a rude and faugue man of INDA.) At the first opening of the gorgeous East, Bowes not his vaffal head, and frownden blinde, Kiffes the base ground with obedient breaft? What peremptory Eagle-fighted eye

Dares looke vpon the heauen of her brow, That is not blinded by her maiftie? Kin. What zeal, what furie, hath inspir'd thee now? My Loue(her Milftres) is a gracious Moone, Shee (an attending Starre)Scarce feene a light. Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Beroune.

Or but for my Loue, day would turne to night, Of all complections the cul'd fonrafticy, Doe meet as at a faire in her faire cheeke, Where feueraul Worthies make one dignity, Where nothing wants, that want it felie doth feeke. Lend me the flourifh of all gentle tongues,tie painted Rethoricke,O she needs it not, To things of fale, a tellers praiie belongs: She paffes praye, then praye too short doth blot. A withered Hermite, fluelcore winters wore, Might flike off flike, looking in her eye: Beauty doth varnish Age, as if new born, And gives the Crutch the Cradles infancte. O 'tis the Sunne that maketh all things shine.

King. By heauen, thy Lune is blacke as Ebionie.

Beroue. Is Ebionie like her? O word diuine? A wife of such wood were felicitie.

O who can give an oth? Where is a booke? That I may fwear Beauty doth beauty lacke, If that the learne not of her eye to looke: No face is fairer that is not full fo blacke.

Kin. O paradoxe, Blacke is the badge of hell, The hue of dungeons, and the Schoole of night: And beauties creft becomes the heauens well.

Ber. Dieuls soonel tent remembilling spirits of light. O if in blacce my Ladies browes be deckt, It mournes, that painting vpurgin hair

Should raiforn doters with a false affect: And therefore is the borne to make blacke, faire. Her fauour turns the fashion of the dayes, For nature blond is counted painting now: And therefore red that would auoyd difpraife, Paints it felie blacke, to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her are Chimny-flweapers blacke. Lon. And since her time, are Colliers counten'd bright. King. And Echips of their sweet complection crake. Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for dark is light.

Ber. Your mistrefles dare never come in raime, For feare their colours should be wafft away.

Kin. Twere good yours did: for fir to tell you plaine, Ie finde a faire face is not wafft to day.

Ber. Ile proue her faire, or talke til dooms-day here. Kin. No Dulle will fright thee then so much as thee. Dum. I neuer knew man hold vile stuffe to deere. Lon. Lookye, her's thy loue, my foot and her face fee.

Ber. Of if the streets were paued with thine eyes,
Loues Labour's loft.

135

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
Dum. O vile, then as she goes what upward legs?
The street should see as the walk'd over head.
Kin. But what of this, are we not all in love?
Ber. O nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworne.
Kin. Then leave this chat, & good Berowm now prove
Our rousing lawful, and our faith not torne.
Dum. I marie there, some flattery for this cuill.
Long. O some authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, some quellots, how to cheat the duller.
Dum. Some false for perjurer.
Ber. O 'tis more then neede.

Haue at you then affections men at arms,
Confider what you first did flware unto:
To fall, to fludy, and to see no woman:
Flat treason against the Kingly flate of youth.
Say, Can you fall? your romacks are too young:
And abstinence ingenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to fludie (Lords)
In that each of you have forsworne his Book.
Can you still dreame and pore, and thereon looke.
For when would you my Lord, or you, or you,
Haue found the ground of studys excellence,
Without the beauty of a womans face;
From womans eyes this doctrine I derive,
They are the Ground, the Bookes, the Achademes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, vunerfull plooding poynons vp
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long during action tyres
The sinnowy vigour of the trauller.
Now for not looking on a womans face,
You haue in that forsworne the vfe of eyes:
And flude too, the cauler of your vow.
For where is any Author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a womans eye:
Learning is but an adjunct to our selfe,
And where we are, our Learning like wife is.
Then when our felues we fee in Ladies eyes,
With our selues.
Do we not likewise fee our learning there?
O we haue made a Vow to fludie, Lords,
And in that vow we have forsworne our Bookes:
For when would you (my Lege) or you, or you?
In leade contemplation haue found out
Such fery Numbers as the prompting eyes,
Of beauties tutors haue inrich'd you with:
Other flow Arts intirely kepe the braine:
And therefore finding barraine practive,
Scarce shew a harueft of their heaue toyle.
But Loue first learned in a Ladies eyes,
Lues not alone emured in the braine:
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And glues to every power a double power,
Aboue their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
A Louer eyes shall gaze an Eagle blinde.
A Louers care shall hear the louest found.
When the fupicious head of theft is ropt.
Loues looking is more soft and fenible,
Then are the tender horns of Cockled Snylles.
Loues tongue is a Cocked Shepe,
Bacchus grofte in taile,
For Valour, is not Loue a Hercules?
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides.
Subtill as Sphynx, as sweet and musical,
As bright Apollo's Lute, strung with his hair.
And when Loue speakes, the voice of all the Gods,
Make heauen drowe with the harmonie.
Neuer durft Poet touch a pen to write,
Vanill his Inke were tempered with Loues fighes:
O then his lines would raifh fhausen ears,
And plant in Tyrants milde humilitie.
From womens eyes this doctrine I derive,
They fparce still the right promethean fire,
They are the Bookes, the Arts, the Achademes,
That shew, containe, and nourifh all the world.
Elle none at all in ought proves excellent.
Then foole you were thefe women to forsworne:
Or keeping what is f worne, you will prove foole,
For Wiledomes fakes, a word that all men loue:
Or for Loues fake, a word that loues all men.
Or for Mens fake, the author of thefe Women:
Or Womens fake, by whom we men are Men.
Let's once loofe our oathes to finde our felues,
Or else we loofe our felues, to keepe our oathes:
It is religion to be thus forsworne.
For Charity it felle fulfills the Law:
And who can feuer loue from Charity.
Kin. Saint Capi'd then, and Soulhers to the field.
Ber. Advance your handards, & vpon them Lords.
Pell, mell, downe with them: but be firft advi'd,
In conflict that you get the Sunne of them.
Long. Now to plaine dealing, Lay thefe glowses by,
Shall we refolute to woe thefe girles of France?
Kin. And winne them too, therefore let vs deuife,
Some entertainment for them in their Tenta.
Ber. Firft from the Park let vs conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his faire Milfreffe, in the afternoone
We will with some strange paftime folace them:
Such as the shortneffe of the time can shape,
For Reuels, Dances, Maskes, and mercy houres,
Fore-runne faire Loure, ftrieuing her way with flowres.
Kin. Away, away, no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by vs be fett.
Ber. Alone, alone fowed Cockell, reap'd no Corne,
And Iuice alwaies whirlies in equall meaure:
Light Wenchys may prove plauges to men forsworne,
If fo, our Copper buies no better treaure.
Exeunt.

Aetius Quartus.

Curat.
Loues Labour's lost.

Curat. A moit singular and chollie Epithet,
Draw out his Table-books.
Peda. He draweth out the thred of his verbositi, finer then the stape of his argument. I abhor such phantasticall phantasmes, such insociable and poynt deuife companions, such rackers of ortigraphie, as to speake dout fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he shold pronounce deb; e b t, not det: he clepeth a Calfe, Caufe: halfe, haufe: neighbour vocatur nebour; nei gh abreualted ne: this is abominable, which he would call abominable: in finate me of infamie: ne intelligi domine, to make frantickc, lunatike?

Cura. Laus dein, bene intelligo.
Peda. Some boome for boome prevent, a little scrapethe, twil serue.

Enter Bragart, Boy.

Curat. Videt ne quin veniet?
Peda. Vides, & gaudiis.
Brag. Chirra.
Peda. Quarti Chirra, not Sirra?
Brag. Men of peace well incontrued.
Peda. Moft militarie for faltation.

Boy. They haue beene at a great feaft of Languages, and fioine the fcraps.

Cleow. O they haue ftu'dong on the almes-basket of words. I maruell thy M. hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not fo long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: Thou art eaiser swallowed then a fladragon.

Page. Peace, the peale begins.
Brag. Mountfet, are you not letterd?
Page. Yes, yes, he teaches boyes the Horne-booke: What is Ab fpeld backward with the horn on his head?
Peda. Ba,Scraria, with a horne added.
Page. Ba moft feely Sheepe, with a horne: you heare his learning.

Peda. Qui quii, thou Confonant?
Page. The laft of the fume Vowels if You repeat them, or the first I.
Peda. I will repeate them: a e I.

Page. The Sheepe, the other two concludes it ou.

Brag. Now by the falt waue of the mediterranian, a sweet tutch, a quickene wee of wit, fifp snap, quick & home, it reioyech my intellecte, true wit.

Page. Offered by a childe to an olde man: which is wit-old.

Peda. What is the figure? What is the figure?
Page. Hornes.
Peda. Thou disputes like an Infant: goe whip thy Gigge.

Page. Lend me your Horne to make one, and I will whip about your Infamie unum cita a gigge of a Cuckolds horne.

Cleow. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldt haue it to buy Ginger breads: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy Maifer, thou halfpenny purfe of wit, thou Pidgeon-egg of discretion. O & the heamens were fo pleas'd, that thou wert but my Baffard; What a joyfull father wouldt thou make mee? Goe to, thou haft it ad dungen, at the fingers ends, as they fay.
Peda. Oh I smell falle Latine, dungen for anguem.

Brag. Aris-man preambulate, we will bee fngled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the Charghoufe on the top of the Mountain?
Peda. Or Mons the hill.

Brag. At your sweet pleasure, for the Mountain.
Peda. I doe to all occasion.
Bra. Sir, it is the Kings moft sweet pleasure and afpection, to congratulate the Princeffe at her Paulion, in the poetries of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noone.
Peda. The poetries of the day, moft generouf, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the after-noone: the word is well culd, chose, sweet, and apt I doe afure you sir, I doe afure.
Brag. Sir, the Kings is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar, I doe afure ye very good friend: for what is inwared betweene vs, let it paffe. I doe befteech thee remembre thy courteffe. I befteech thee apparel thy head: and among other important & moft serious defignes, and of great import indeed too: but let that paffe, for I must tell thee it will pleafe his Grace (by the world) sometime to leafe upon my poore shoulder, and with his royall finger thus dalliie with my excrement, with my muffachio: but sweet heart let that paffe. By the world I recount no fable, some certaine speciall honours it pleareth his greatnesse to impart to Armado a Souldier, a man of tranuell, that hath fene the world: but let that paffe: the very all of all is: but sweet heart, I do implore ferrecie, that the King would have mee present the Princeffe (sweet chucke) with some delightfull offentation, or show, or pageant, or anticke, or fire-workes: Now, vnderstanding that the Curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and fadowne breaking out of myrth (as it were) I have acquainted you withall, to the end to crave your affilience.

Peda. Sir, you shall presente before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Holofemnes, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the poetries of this day, to bee rendred by our affilinants the Kings command; and this moft gallant, illustrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princeffe: I fay none fo fit as to presente the Nine Worthies.

Curat. Where will you finde men worthy enough to present them?
Peda. Infas, your selfefme selfe, and this gallant gentleman Iudas Machabeus; this Swaine (because of his great limme or lyont) shall paffe Pompey the great, the Page Hercules.

Brag. Pardon sir, error: He is not quittance enough for that Wortheis thumb, hee is not fo big as the end of his Club.
Peda. Shall I haue audience? he shall present Hercules in minoritie: his enter and eschall bee frangling a Snake; and I will have an Apologie for that purpose.
Pag. An excellent deuice: if any of the audience hisse, you may cry, Well done Hercules, now thou crucifhet the Snake; that is the way to make an offence grauentious, though feue haue the grace to doe it.

Brag. For the ref of the Wortheis?
Peda. I will play thrwe my selfe.
Pag. Thrice worthy Gentleman.
Brag. Shall I teell you a thing?
Peda. We attend.
Brag. We will have, if this fadge not, an Antiquie. I befteech you follow.

Peda. Via good-man Dull, thou haft spoken no word all this while.
Dull. Nor vnderflood none neither sir.
Peda. Alone, we will employ thee.
Dull. Ile make one in a dance, or so: or I will play on Loues Labour's lost.

on the taber to the Worthies, & let them dance the hey.
Ped. Molt Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away. Exit.

Enter Ladies.

Qn. Sweet heartes we shall be riche we depart, If fairings come thes plentiful in.
A Lady wa'll about with Diamonds : Look you,what I have from the loving King.

Rofa. Madam,came nothing else along with that?
Qn. Nothing but this : yes as much loue in Rime, As would be cram'd vp in a sheet of paper
Write on both the leafes,margin and all, That he was faire to feale on Cupids name.
Rofa. That was the way to make his god-head wax :
For he hath beene five thousand yeeres a Boy.

Kath. I, and a threadd unhappy gallowes too.
Rofa. You'll neere be friends with him, a kild your sister.
Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy, and fo the died : had the beene Light like you,of such a merrie nimble flirring spirit, the might a bin a Grandam ere the died. And so may you : For a light heart lies long.

Rofa. What's your darke meaning moue, of this light word?

Kat. A light condition in a beauty darke.

Rofa. We need more light to finde your meaning out.
Kat. You'll marre the light by taking it in knuffe ; Therefore Ie darkely end the argument.

Rofa. Look what you doe, you doe it fill i'th darke.
Kat. So do you not, for you are a light Wench.
Rofa. Indeed I waigh not you, and therefoire light.
Kat. You waigh me not, O that's you care not for me.
Rofa. Great reason : for paft care, is fill past cure.

Qn. Well bandied both, a fet of Wit well played.
But Rofaline, you have a Faavour too?

What ient it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew.
And if my face were but as faire as yours, My Faavour were as great, be witness this.
Nay, I haue Verfes too, I thanke Beroune,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too, I were the fairest goddefse on the ground.
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairys.
O he hath drawne my picture in his letter.

Qn. Any thing like ?
Rofa. Much in the letters,nothing in the praph.
Qn. Beauteous as Incke : a good conclusion.
Kat. faire as a text B. in a Coppie booke.

Rofa. Ware penfals, How? Let me not die your debtor, My red Domini call, my golden letter.
O that your face were full of Oes.

Qn. A Fox of that ief, and I behrew all Shrowes:
But Katherine, what was fent to you
From fare Domiane?

Kat. Madame, this Cloue.

Qn. Did he not fend you twaine ?
Kat. Yes Madame : and moreover,
Some thousand Verfes of a faithfull Louer.

A huge translatation of hyprolicr,
Wildly compiled, profound simplicite.

Mar. This, and thefe Pearls, to me fent Longusile.
The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.
Qn. I thinke no leffe : Doft thou with in heart
The Chaine were longer, and the Letter short.

Mar. I, or I would thefe hands might neuer part.
Qn. We are wife girles to mocke our Louers fo.
Rofa. They are worfe foole to purchafe mocking fo.

That same Beroune hee torture ere I goe,
O that I knew he were but in by th'weeke,
How I would make him fawe, and begge, and feeke,
And wait the feallon, and obferve the times,
And fpend his prodigall wits in booteles rimes.
And shape his feruice wholly to my deuice,
And make him proud to make me proud that lefts.
So perauant like would I o'reflowe his state,
That he shold be my foole, and I his fate.

Qn. None are fo fairely called, when they are catcht,
As Wit turn'd foole, follie in Wifdomse hatch'd :
Hath wifesdoms warrant, and the helpe of Schoole,
And Wits owne grace to grace a learned Foole?

Rofa. The bloud of youth burns not with fuch excufle,
As grauitities resolt to wantons be.

Mar. Fellie in Foole bears not fo strong a note,
As fool'rly in the Wifse, when Wit doth dote :
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To proue by Wit, worth in simplicie.

Enter Boyet.

Qn. Heere comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.

Boy. O I am stab'd with laughter, Wher's her Grace?

Qn. Thy newes Boyet ?

Boy. Prepare Madame, prepare.

Arme Wenches arme, incounteres mounted are,
Against your Peace, Loue doth approach,disguis'd :

Armed in arguments, you'll be surpriz'd.
Mutter your Wits,fland in your owne defence,
Orhide your heads like Cowards, and fije hence.

Qn. Saint Dennis to S.Cupid: What are they,
That charge their breath against vs ? Say fcout lay.

Boy. Vnder the coole shade of a Siccamore,
I thought to clofe mine eyes some halfe an houre :
When lo to interrupt my purpofe reft,
Toward that shade I might behold addreft,
The King and his companions: warely
I role into a neighbour thicket by,
And ouer-heard, what you shall ouer-heare :
That by and by disguis'd they will be heere.

Their Herald is a pretty knaufh Page:
That well by heart con'd his embassage,
Adition and accent did they teach him there.
Thus muft thou fpeak, and thus thy body beare.
And euuer and anone they made a doubt,
Prefence maiestifall would put him out:
For quoth the King, an Angell shalt thou fee :
Yet feare not thou, but speake audaciously.
The Boy reply'd, An Angell is not euill:
I should have fear'd her, had the beene a deuill.
With that all lang'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wagg by their prafens holder.
One rub'd his elboe thus, and fleer'd, and swore,
A better speach was never spoke before.
Another with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd wis, we will do't, come what will come.
The third he caper'd and cried, All goes well.
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and downe he fell :
That with they all did tumble on the ground,
With fuch a zelous laughter so profound,
That in this spleene ridiculous appears,
To checkke their folly paffions sollemne teares.

Qn. But what, but what,come they to visit vs?

Boy. They do, they do ; and are apparell'd thus,
Like Musconites, or Kuffamis, as I geffe.
Their purpose is to parle, to court, and dance,

And
And euery one his Loues feat will advance,
Vnto his faytell Mirthcffe: while they'll know
By fauours fearefull, which they did beflow.

Queuen. And will they so? the Gallants shall be taskt:
For Ladies; we will euery one be maskt,
And not a man of them shall haue the grace
Delsipt of fute, to fee a Ladies face.

Hold Rofaline, this Favour thou shalt weare,
And then the King will court thee for his Deare:
Hold, take thou this my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Berowne take me for Rofaline.

And change your Faueurs too, so shal thy Loues
Woo contrary, decelin'd by these remoes.

Rofa. Come on then: weare the fauours moft in fight.
Katb. But in this changing, What is your intent?

Queuen. The effect of my intent is to crosse their:
They doe it but in mocking merriment,
And mocke for mocke is onely my intent.
Their fearefull counsels they vnbosome shall,
To Loues mybooke, and so be mockt withall.

Vpon the next occasion that we meete,
With Vfages dispoyled to talke and greate.

Rofa. But shall we dance, if they deare of us too?
Queuen. No, to the death we will not moue a foot,
Nor to their pen'd speech render we no grace:
But while 'tis spoke, each turne away his face.

Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite disoure his memory from his part.

Queuen. Therefore I doe it, and I make no doubt,
The reft will eare come in, if he be out.

Theres no such sport, as sport by sport that devoure:
To make theirs, and ours none but our owne.

So shall we fea mocking entended game,
And they well mock, depart away with blame.

Sund. Boy. The Trompet found, be maskt, the maskers come.

Enter Black moore with musick, the Boy with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disaffect.

Page. All hail, the richeft Beauties on the earth.
Ber. Beauties no richer then rich Taffata.
Pag. A holy parchell of the fairest dames that euer turn'd their backes to mortall viewers.

The Ladies turne their backes to him.

Ber. Their eyes villain, their eyes.
Pag. That euer turn'd their eyes to mortall viewers.

Out.

Boy. True, out indeed.
Pag. Out of your fauours heavenly spirits vouchsafe
Not to beoldes.

Ber. Once to behold, rogue.

Pag. Once to behold with your Sunne beam'd eyes,
With your Sunne beam'd eyes.

Boy. They will not anfwer to that Ephytthe,
You were beatt call it Daughter beamt eyes.

Pag. They doe not marke me, and that brings me out.

Ber. Is this your perfechneffe? be gon you rogue.

Rofa. What would thefe strangrs?
Know their mindes Boyet.
If they doe fpeak our language, 'tis our will
That fome plaine man recount their purpoze.

Know what they would?

Boy. What would you with the Princes?
Ber. Nothing but peace, and gentle vifitation.
Rofa. Why that they haue, and bid them fo be gon.
Boy. She faires you haue it, and you may be gon.

Kin. Say to her we haue meafur'd many miles,
To tread a Meafure with you on the graffe.

Boy. They fay that they have meafur'd many a mile,
To tread a Meafure with you on this graffe.

Rofa. It is not fo. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they haue meafur'd manie,
The meafure then of one is eafie told.

Boy. If to come hither, you have meafur'd miles,
And many miles: the Princeffe bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill vp one mile?

Ber. Tell her we meaufure them by weary feeps.

Boy. She heares her felfe.

Rofa. How manie wareie steys,
Of many wareie miles you haue ore-gone,
Are numbred in the travell of one mile?

Ber. We number nothing that we fpend for you,
Our dutie is fo rich, fo infinite,
That we may doe it fill without accompt.

Vouchsafe to fiew the funshine of your face,
That we (like fauages) may worship it.

Rofa. My face is but a Moone, and clouded too.

Kin. Bleffed are clouds, to doe as fuch clouds do.

Vouchfabe bright Moone, and thefe thy fars to shine,
(Thofe clouds remoued) vpon our waterie eyne.

Rofa. O vaine pericioner, beg a greater matter,
Then you now requelt but Moonefhine in the water.

Kin. Then in our meafure, vouchsafe but one change.
Then bid me begge, this begging is not ftrange.

Rofa. Play musick thefe lay you must doe it ferne.
Not yet no dance: thus change I like the Moone.

Kin. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?

Rofa. You tooke the Moone at full, but now thee's changed?

Kin. Yet still the is the Moone, and I the Man.

Rofa. The musick plays, vouchsafe fome motion to it:
Our eares vouchsafe it.

Kin. But your legges should doe it.

Rofa. Since you are strangars, & come here by chance,
We'll not be nice, take hands, we will not dance.

Kin. Why take you hands then?

Rofa. Onelef to part friends.

Curftfe sweet hearts, and fo the Meafure ends.

Kin. More meafure of this meafure, be not nice.

Rofa. We can afford no more at fuch a price.

Kin. Prife your felues: What buyes your companie?

Rofa. Your abfence onelle.

Kin. That can never be.

Rofa. Then cannot we be bought and fo adue,
Twice to your Vifore, and halfe once to you.

Kin. If you denie to dance, let's hold more chat.

Rofa. In priuate then.

Kin. I am best pleas'd with that.

Be. White handed Miltris, one feet word with thee.

Rofa. Hony, and Milke, and Sugar: there is three.

Ber. Nay then two troyes, as if you grow fo nice
Methengile, Wort, and Malmeyl; well runne dice:
There's halfe a dozen feets.

Qua. Seventh sweet adue, since you can cog,
Ile play no more with you.

Ber. One word in secret.

Qua. Let it not be fweet.

Ber. Thou greeuet my gall.

Queuen.
Loues Labour's lost.

Qu. Gall, bitter.
Ber. Therefore meete.
Duo. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Fair Ladie.
Mar. Say you fo? Fair Lord:
Take you that for your faire Lady.
Du. Please it you,
As much in private, and Ile bid adieu.
Mar. What, was your vizard made without a tong?
Leng. I know the reason Ladie why you ask.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Leng. You have a double tongue within your mask.
And would afford my speechlesse vizard hale.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not Veale a Calfe?
Leng. A Calfe faire Ladie?
Mar. No, a faire Lord Calfe.
Leng. Let's part the word.
Mar. No, Ile not be your halfe:
Take all and weane it, it may prove an Ox.
Leng. Lookke how you but your felfe in these sharpe mockes.
Will you give horses chaff Ladie? Do not fo.
Mar. Then die a Calfe before your horns do grow.
Lon. One word in private with you ere I die.
Mar. Beat fofly then, the Butcher heeres you cry.
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the Razors edge, insubile:
Cutting a finner's hair then may be feene,
Aboue the fene of fonce fo fensible:
Seemeth their conference, their conceits haue wings,
Fleeter then arrows, bullets wind, thought, wifter things.
Rofa. Not one word more my maides, break off, break off.
Ber. By heauen, all drie beaten with pure fcoffe.
King. Farewell madde Wenches, you haue simple wits.
Exeunt.
Qu. Twentie adieus my frozen Mufcoyts.
Are thefe the breed of wits fo wondred at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweete breathes puff out.
Rofa. Wel-liking wits they haue, groffe, groffe, fat, fat.
Qu. O poueritie in wits, Kingly poor fout.
Will they not (thinke you) hang themselues to night?
Or euer but in vizards fhw their faces:
This pert Beroume was out of count'nance quite.
Rofa. They were all in lamentable cafes.
The King was vweeping ripe for a good word.
Qu. Beroume did sweare himselfe out of all fuite.
Mar. Dameaine was at my feruice, and his sword:
No point (quoth I:) my feruant straight was mute.
Kar. Lord Longaulle said I came ore his hart:
And trow you whvhat he call'd me?
Qu. Quaime perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith.
Rof. Go fickneffe as thou art.
Rof. Well, better wits haue worne plain flatute caps,
But will you heare; the King is my loue sworne.
Qu. And quicke Beroume hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longaulle was for my feruice borne.
Mar. Dameaine is mine as fure as barke on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and prettie mistrefles giue care,
Immediately they will againe be heere.
In their owne shapes: for it can neuer be,
They will digget this harsh indiginite.

Qu. Will they returne?
Boyet. They will they will, God knowes,
And leape for ioy, though they are lame with blouses:
Therefore change Faours, and when they repaires,
Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire.
Qu. How blowe? how blowe? Speake to bee un-derstood.
Boyet. Fair Ladies maskt, are Roses in their bud:
Dismaskt, their damaske sweet commixature showne,
Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blowe.
Qu. Auant perplexity: What shall vve do,
If they returne in their owne shapes to wo?
Rofa. Good Madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mocke them still as well knowne as deliques:
Let vs complain to them what fooles were heare,
Deliques'd like Mufcouites in shapellese gear.
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shawle showes, and Prologue wildly pen'd:
And their rough carriage fo ridiculous,
Should be prefent at our Tent to vs.
Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.
Qua. Whipe to our Tents, as Roses runnes ore Land.
Exeunt.

Enter the King and the ref.

King. Faire Sir, God saue you. Wher's the Princeffe?
Boyet. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Maiestie command me any feruice to her?
King. That the vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boyet. I will, and fo will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow picke vp wit as Pigeons peafe,
And wits it againe, when low doth pleafe.
He is Wits Pedler, and retailes his Wares,
At Wakes, and Waflets, Meetings, Markets, Faires.
And we thatfell by groffe, the Lord doth know,
Haue not the grace to grace it with fuch show.
This Gallant pins the Wenchens on his fleuee.
Had he bin Adam, he had tempted Eve.
He can carue too, and lifpe: Why this is he,
That kifft away his hand in courtesie.
This is the Ape of Forme, Monfeuir the nice,
That when he plays at Tables, chides the Dice
In honorable tearmes: Nay he can fing
A meane moft meanly, and in Vhiering
Mend him who can: the Ladies call him swete.
The faires as he treads on them kifft his feete.
This is the flower that smiles on euerie one,
To fliew his teeth as white as Whales bone.
And confiences that will not die in debt,
Pay him the dute of hone-tongued Boyet.
King. A blifer on his fweete tongue with my hart,
That put Armathoes Page out of his part.

Enter the Ladies.

Ber. See where it comes. Behauiour what we'th thou,
Till this madman shew'd thee? And what art thou now?
King. All halie sweet Madame, and faire time of day.
Qu. Faire in all Halle is foule, as I conceuie.
King. Confine my fpeeches better, if you may.
Qu. Then with me better, I will giue you leaue.
King. We came to visif you, and purpofe now
To leade you to our Court, vouchsafe it then.
Qu. This field shall hold me, and fo hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in peril'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you prouoke:

The
The vertue of your eie must breake my oth.

2. You nickname vertue: vice you should haue spoke:

For vertues office never breaches men trouth.

Now by my maiden honor, yet as pure
As the vnfallied Lilly, I protest,

A world of torments though I shou'd endure,

I would not yeild to be your housees goe:

So much I hate a breaking caufe to be

Of heauenly oats, vow'd with integritie.

Kin. O you haue ill'd in defolation heere,

Vnfeene, vnfaited, much to our shame.

2q. Not so my Lord, it is not so I sware,

We haue had pasimes heere, and pleafant game,

A meffe of Ruffians left vs but of late.

Kin. How Madam? Ruffians?

2q. I in truth, my Lord.

Trim gallants, full of Courtthrift and of state.

Rofa. Madam speake true. It is not to my Lord:

My Ladie (to the manner of the dates)

In curtefyes vnderlining praffe.

We foure indeed confronted were with foure

In Ruffia habit: Heere they flayed an hour,

And talk'd space: and in that hour (my Lord)

They did not bleffe vs with one happy word.

I dare not call them fooles; but this I thinke,

When they are thirifie, fools would faine haue drink.

Ber. This left is drie to me. Gentle sferete,

Your wits makes wife things foolish when we grease

With eies left feeling, heuens fierie eie:

By light we leef light; your capacitie

Is of that nature, that to your huge floore,

Wife things feeme foolish, and rich things but poore.

Rof. This proues you wife and rich: for in my eie

Ber. I am a foole, and full of povertie.

Rof. But that you take what doth to you belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Ber. O, I am yours, and all that I poffeffe.

Rof. All the foole mine.

Ber. I cannot give you lefe.

Rof. Which of the Vizards what it that you wore?

Ber. Where? when? What Vizard?

What demand you this?

Rof. There, then, that vizard, that superfluous cafe,

That hid the worfe, and shew'd the better face.

Kin. We are diſcrid,

They'll mocke vs now downeright.

Du. Let vs confede, and turne it to a left.

2q. Amaz'd my Lord? Why looks your Highnes fadde?

Rofa. Helpe hold his browes, he'll found: why looke you paie?

Sea-sicke I thinke comming from Mufcouie.

Ber. Thus poure the flars down plaques for periyur.

Can any face of braife hold longer out?

Heere ifand 1, Ladie dart thy skill at me,

Brifie me with icorne, confound me with a Ifout.

Thruft thy harpe wit quite through my ignorance.

Cut me to peeces with thy keene conceit:

And I will with thee moreuer to dance,

Nor neuer more in Ruffian habit waite.

O! neuer will I truth to speeches pen'd,

Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boles tongue.

Nor neuer come in vizard to my friend,

Nor wo in rime like a blind-harpers tongue,

Taffata phrases, filkens tearnets proucie,

Three-pit'd Hyperboles, spruce affection;

Figures pedantical, thefe summer flies,

Haue blowne me full of margot oftentation.

I do forfteare them, and I heere protest,

By this white Gloue (how white the hand God knows)

Henceforth my woing minde shall be expreft

In ruffet yeas, and honest kerfie noes.

And to begin Wench, fo God helpe me law,

My loue to thee is found, fans cracke or flaw.

Rofa. Sans, fans, I pray you.

Rofa. Yet I have a tricke

Of the old rage: beare with me, I am ficke.

He leave it by degrees: soft, let vs fee,

Write Lord haue mercie on vs, on thofe three,

They are infected, in their hearts it lies:

They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:

Thefe Lords are viſted, you are not free:

For the Lords tokens on you do I fee.

Rofa. No, they are free that gaufe thefe tokens to vs.

Ber. Our flates are forfeit, fekee not to vnfo vs.

Rof. It is not fo; for how can this be true,

That you fand forfeit, being thofe that fue.

Ber. Peace, for I will not haue to do with you.

Rof. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Ber. Speake for your felues, my wit is at an end.

King. Teach vs to vfee Madame, for our rude tranfgression, some faire excefe.

2q. The faireft is confedion.

Were you not heere but euen now, disguis'd?

Kin. Madam, I was.

2q. And were you well adua'd?

Kin. I was faire Madam.

2q. When you then were heere,

What did you whifer in your Ladies eare?

King. That more then all the world I did repect her

2q. When thee shall challenge this, you will releft her.

King. Upon mine Honor no.

Rofa. Peace, peace, forecaire:

your oath once broke, you force not to forfteare.

King. Defpie me when I breake this oath of mine.

2q. I will, and therefore keep it. Rofaime, What did the Ruffian whifer in your eare?

Rofa. Madam, he fwoare that he did hold me deare

As precious eye-fight, and did value me

Aboue this World: adding thereto moreouer,

That he wrould Wed me, or elfe die my Louer.

2q. God give thee joye of him: the Noble Lord

Moft honorably doth vphold his word.

King. What meane you Madame?

By my life, my troth,

I never fwoare this Ladie fuch an oth.

Rofa. By heauen you did; and to confirme it plaine, you gaue me this: But take it fir againe.

King. My faith and this, the Princeffe I did gue,

I knew her by this Iuell on her fleue.

2q. Pardon me fir, this Iuell did the ware,

And Lord Beroume (I thanke him) is my deare.

What? Will you have me, or your Pearle againe?

Ber. Neither of either, I remit both twaine.

I fee the tricke on't: Heere was a content,

Knowing aforchild of our merriment,

To daft it like a Christmas Comedie.

Some carry-tale, fome pleafe-man, fome flight Zanie,

Some mumble-newes, fome trencr-kincht, fom Dick

That smiles his cheeke in yeares, and knowes the trick

To make my Lady laugh, when she's difpo'd;

Told
Told our intents before: which once disclos'd,
The Ladies did change Favours; and then we Following the figures, wou'd but the signe of thee.
Now to our perjurie, to add more terror,
We are againe forsworne in will and error.
Much vpon this tis: and might not you
Foretell our sport, to make vs thus vntrue?
Do not you know my Ladies foot by' th fiquer?
And laugh vpon the apple of her eie?
And stand betweene her backe fir,and the fire,
Holding a trencher, letting merrilie?
You put our Page out: go, you are alowd.
Die when you will, a smocke shall be your shrowd.
You leere vpon me, do you? There's an eie Wounds like a Leaden sword.

Boy. Full merrily hath this braye manager, this caree bene run.

Peer. Loe, he is tilting straight. Peace, I have don.

Enter Cloues.

Welcome pure wit, thou part't a faire fray.
Clou. O Lord sir, they would kno,
Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no.
Peer. What, are there but three?
Clou. No sir, but it is vara fine,
For euerie one pursents three.
Peer. And three times thrice is nine.
Clou. Not so fir, vnder correccion fir, I hope it is not so.
You cannot beg vs fir, I can affire you fir, we know what we know: I hope fir three times thrice fir.
Peer. Is not nine.
Clou. Vnder correccion fir, we know where-vntill it doth amount.
Peer. By loue, I alwaies tooke three threes for nine.
Clou. O Lord sir, it were pittie you should get your living by reckning fir.
Peer. How much is it?
Clou. O Lord sir, the parties themselves, the actors sir will shew where-vntill it doth amount: for mine owne part, I am (as they say, but to perfect one man in one poore man) Pompion the great sir.
Peer. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Clou. It pleased them to thinke me worthie of Pompey the great: for mine owne part, I know not the degree of the Worthie, but I am to stand for him.
Peer. Go, bid them prepare.

Clou. We will turne it finelly off fir, we wil take some care.
King. Berowes, they will shame vs:
Let them not approach.
Peer. We are shame-proof my Lord: and 'tis some policie, to have one shew worse then the Kings and his companie.
King. I say they shall not come.
Py. Nay my good Lord, let me ore-rule you now;
That sport beft pleases, that doth leaft know how.
Where Zeale friues to content, and the contents
Dies in the Zeale of that which it pretends:
Their forme confounded, makes most forme in mirth,
When great things labouring peril in their birth.
Peer. A right description of our sport my Lord.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Annotated, I implore so much expence of thy royall sweet breath, as will vter a brace of words.
Py. Doth this man ferue God?
Peer. Why ask ye?
Py. He fpake's not like a man of God's making.
Brag. That's all one my faire sweet honie Monarch:
For I preste, the Schoolmater is exceeding fantastical!
Too too vaine, too too vaine. But we wil put it (as they say) to Fortune deliguer, I with you the peace of minde most royall supplement.

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies;
He preffeft Hector of Troy, the Swaine Pompey & great,
The Parish Curate Alexander, Armadoes Page Hercules,
The Pedant Iudas Macabaeus: And if these foure Worthies
in their first shew thrue, these foure will change habites, and prentet the other fiue.
Peer. There is fiue in the first shew.
Kin. You are deceived, its not fo.
Peer. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Priefl, the Foole, and the Boy,
Abate throw at Novum, and the whole world againe,
Cannot pricke out fiue fiuch, take each one in's vaine.
Kin. The fiip is vnder fiale, and here she coms amain.

Enter Pompey.

Clou. I Pompey am.
Py. You lie, you are not he.
Clou. I Pompey am.
Boy. With Libbards head on knee.
Peer. Well faid old mockr,
I muft needs be friends with thee.
Clou. I Pompey am, Pompey furnam'd the big.
Du. The great.
Clou. It is great fir: Pompey furnam'd the great:
That ofte in field, with Targe and Shield,
did make my foe to fweat:
And trauailing along this cooff, I beere am come by chance,
And lay my Armes before the legs of this fweet Laffie of France.
Clou. If your Ladihip would faie thankes Pompey, I had done.
La. Great thankes great Pompey.
Clou. Tis not fo much worth: but I hope I was perfec:
I made a little fault in great.
Peer. My hat to a halfe-penie, Pompey proues the best Worthie.

Enter Curate for Alexander.

Curat. When in the world I lvi'd, I was the worlides Commander:
By East, West, North, & South, I fird my conquring might
My Scotchmen plaine declares that I am Allsander.
Briet. Your nofe fiales no, you are not:
For it fands too right.
Peer. Your nofe smels no, in this moft tender fmeling Knight.
Py. The Conqueror is diifmaid:
Proceede good Alexander.
Cur. When in the world I liued, I was the worlides Commander.
Briet. Most true, 'tis right: you were fo Allsander.
Peer. Pompey the great.
Clou. Your feruant and Coflard.
Peer. Take away the Conqueror, take away Allsander Clou. O fir, you have ouerthrown Allsander the conqueror: you will be scrap'd out of the painted cloth for this.
this: your Lion that holds his Pollax sitting on a clofe foole, will be given to Alax. He will be the ninth worthie. A Conqueror, and afford to speake? Runne away for shame Alifander. There an't shall please you: a foolih milde man, an honeft man, looke you, &foon daft.
He is a marvellous good neighbour inboth, and a verie good Bowler: but for Alifander, alas you see, how'tis a little ore-parted. But there are Worthy's a comming, will speake their minde in some other fort. Exit Cu.
Qu. Stand aside good Pompey.

Enter Pedant for Iudas, and the Boy for Hercules.

Ped. Great Hercules is prefented by this Impe,
Whofe Club kill'd Cerceris that three-headed Canus,
And when he was a babe, a childe, a thrimpe,
Thus did he strangle Serpents in his Manus:
Quoniam, he feemeth in minoritie,
Ergo, I come with this Apologue.
Keppe some flate in thy eft, and vani.sh.

Exit Boy Ped. Iudas I am.

Iudas I am, eclipsed Machabevus.
Dum. Iudas Machabevus clipt, is plaine Iudas.
Ber. A kifing traitor. How art thou prou'd Iudas?
Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. The more fame for you Iudas.
Ped. What meanes you fr?
Boi. To make Iudas hang himselfe.
Ped. Begin fr, you are my elder.
Ber. Well follow'd, Iudas was hang'd on an Elder.
Ped. I will not be put out of countenance.
Ber. Because thou haft no face.
Ped. What is this?
Boi. A Citronne head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.
Ber. A deaths face in a ring.
Lou. The face of an old Roman coinie, scarce feene.
Boi. The yummell of Comfars Faulchion.
Dum. The caru'd-bone face on a Flask.
Ber. S. George's halfe cheeke in a brooch.
Dum. I, and in a brooch of Lead.
Ber. I, and worne in the cap of a Tooth-drawer.
And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance
Ped. You haue put me out of countenance.
Ber. Falfe, we have gline them faces.
Ped. But you haue out-fa'ed them all.
Ber. And thou wer'n a Lion, we would do fo.
Boy. Therefore as he is, an Afe, let him go:
And fo adieu sweet Jude. Nay, why doft thou stay?
Dum. For the latter end of his name.
Ber. For the Afe to the Jude: give it him. Jude as away.
Ped. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.
Boy. A light for monieur Iudas, it grows darke, he may humble.

Que. Alas poore Machabevus, how hath hee beene baited.

Enter Braggart.

Ber. Hide thy head Achilles, heere comes Hector in Armes.
Dum., Though my mockes come home by me, I will now be merrie.

King. Hector was but a Troyan in reftect of this.

Boi. But is this Hector?
Kin. I thinke Hector was not fo cleane timber'd.
Lou. His legge is too big for Hector.
Dum. More Calfe certaine.
Boi. No, he is best induced in the small.
Ber. This cannot be Hector.
Dum. He's a God or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, gave Hector a gift.

Dum. A gift Nutmegge.
Ber. A Lemmon.
Lou. Stucke with Cloues.
Dum. No clouen.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars of Launces the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the boire of Illon;
A man jo breathed, that certaine he would fight: yea
From morn till night, out of his Paulion.
I am that Flower.

Dum. That Mint.
Long. That Callambine.

Brag. Sweet Lord Longesill reine thy tongue.
Lou. I must rather give it the reine: for it runnes a against Hector.

Dum. I, and Hector's a Grey-hound.
Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten,
Sweet chuckes, beat not the bones of the buried:
But I will forward with my deuice;
Sweet Royalcie bellow on me the frence of hearing.

Beronews flippes forth.
Qu. Speake braue haecor, we are much delighted.

Brag. I do adore thy sweet Graces flipper.
Boy. Loues her by the foot.
Dum. He may not by the yard.

Brag. The Hector farre surfounted Hanniball.
The partie's gone.

Clo. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two moneths on her way.

Brag. What meanest thou?
Clo. Faith vneffe you play the honest Troyan, the poore Wench is cast away: she's quick, the child brags in her belly alreadie: tis yours.

Brag. Doft thou infamone me among Potentates?
Thou shalt die.

Clo. Then shall Hector be whipt for Iaguenetta that is quicke by him, and hang'd for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Dum. Moft rare Pompey.
Bri. Renowned Pompey.
Ber. Greater then great, great, great, great Pompey:
Pompey the huge.
Dum. Hector trembles.
Ber. Pompey is mouded, more Atees more Aees firte them, or stirre them on.
Dum. Hector will challenge him.
Ber. I, if a'haue no more mans blood in's belly, then will fip a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I do challenge thee.
Clo. I will not fight with a pole like a Northern man;
Ile flaie, Ile do it by the sword: I pray you let mee borrow my Armes againe.

Dum. Room for the incend furthies.

Clo. Ile do it in my shirt.
Dum. Moft relouent Pompey.

Page. Master, let me take you a button hole lower:
Do you not fee Pompey is vncasing for the combat: what meane

meane you? you will loose your reputation.
'Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combat in my shirt.
'Du. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.
'Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.
'Ber. What reason haue you for't?
'Brag. The naked truth of it is, I haue no shirt, I go woolward for penance.
'Boy. True, and it was inloyned him in Rome for want of Linens: since when, lie be tworne he wore none, but a difhcout of Lagenetts, and that hee weares next his heart for a fauour.

Enter a Magisenger, Monsieur Marcade.

Mar. God faue you Madame.
'By. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interruptest our errment.
'Mar. I am forrie Madam, for the newes I bring is heauie in my tongue. The King your father
'By. Dead for my life.
'Mar. Even fo: My tale is told.
'Ber. Worthes away, the Scene begins to cloud.
'Brag. For mine owne part, I breath free breath: I haue seen the day of wrong, through the little hole of difcretion, and I will right my felse like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthies

Kin. How fare your Maifteffie?
'By. Boyer prepare, I will away to night.
'Kin. Madame not fo, I do beleech you stay.
'By. Prepare I fay. I thank you gracious Lords For all your faire endeavours and entreat, Out of a new fad-foule, that you vouchsafe, In your rich wisdome to excuse, or hide, The liberrall opposition of our spirits, If ouer-boldly we haue borne our felues, In the conuerfe of breath (your gentleniffe Was guiltee of it.) Farewell worthie Lord: A heauie heart beares not a humble tongue. Excufe me fo, comming fo short of thankes, For my great faiue, fo easily obtain'd.
'Kin. The extreme parts of time, extremelie formes All caufes to the purpofe of his fpeed: And often at his verie loofe decides That, which long proceffe could not arbitrate. And though the mourning brow of progenie Forbid the fmiting curfe of Loue: The holy fuite which faine it would convince, Yet fince loues argument was frit on foote, Let not the cloud of forrow fumble it From what it purpof'd fince to waife friends loft, Is not by much fo wholesome profitable, As to rejoyce at friends but newly found.
'By. I vnderfand you not, my greeves are double.
'Ber. Honest plain words, beft pierce the ears of grieve And by these badges vnderfand the King, For your faire fakes haue we neglected time, Plain foule play with our oaths: your beautie Ladies Hath much deformed vs, fadoning our humors Even to the oppofed end of our intents. And what in vs hath seem'd ridiculous: As Loue is full of vnbefitting straines, All wanton as a childe, skipping and vaine. Form'd by the eie, and therefore like the eie. Full of fraying shapes, of habits, and of formes Varying in subiects as the eie doth roule, To euerie varied obiect in his glance: Which partie-coated preference of loffe loue Put on by vs, if in your heavenly eyes, Haue misbecome our oathes and grauities. Thofe heauenlie eyes that looke into thefe faults, Suggested vs to make: therefore Ladies.

Our loue beeing yours, the error that Loue makes Is likewife yours. We to our felues prove falle, By being once falle, for euer to be true To thofe that make vs both, faire Ladies you. And even that failhood in it felle a finne, Thus purifies it felle, and turns to grace.

'Qu. We have receiued your Letters, full of Loue: Your Favour, the Ambaffadors of Loue. And in our maiden counfaile rated them, At courtship, pleafant left, and curtefe, As bumbaft and as lining to the time: But more devout thene these are our repects Haue we not bene, and therefore met your loues In their owne fafhion, like a errment.
'Du. Our letters Madam, fhew'd much more then left. Lan. So did our lookes.
'Refa. We did not coat them fo.
'Kin. Now at the latest minute of the houre, Grant vs your loues.

'Qu. A time me thinkes too thort, To make a world-without-end bargainne in ; No, no my Lord, your Grace is periu'd much, Full of deare guiltinesse, and therefore this: If for my Loue (as there is no fuch caufe) You will do ought, this shall you do for me. Your oath I will not truft: but go with speed To fame forlorne and naked Hermitage, Remote from all the pleafures of the world: There fay, vntil the twelve Celefliall Signes Haue brought about their annuall reckoning. If this affure infociable life, Change not your offer made in heate of blood : If froths, and fafts, hard lodging, and thin weeds Nip not the gaudie bloffomes of your Loue, But that it bear this triall, and loafe loue: Then at the expiration of the yeare, Come challenge me, challenge me by thofe deferts, And by this Virgin palme, now killing thine, I will be thine : and till, that infant fhit My wofull felfe vp in a mourning houfe, Raining the tears of lamentation, For the remembrance of my Fathers death. If this thought fhall defier, let our hands part, Neither intituled in the others hart.
'Kin. If this, or more then this, I would deny, To flatter vp thefe powers of mine with reft, The fodaine hand of death clofe vp mine eie. Hence euer then, my heart is in thy brefl.
'Ber. And what to me if Loue? and what to me? Ref. You must be purged too, your fins are rack'd. You are attaint with faults and pernecie: Therefore if you my favor meane to get, A tweluenoonth shall you spend, and neuer reft, But feake the wareie beds of people ficide.
'Du. But what to me my loue? but what to me? Kat. A wife? a beard, faire health, and honefte, With three-fold loue, I wish you all thefe three.
'Du. O fhall I fay, I thanke you gentle wife? Kat. Not fo my Lord, a tweluenoonth and a day,
Ille marke no words that smooths’d wooers say.
Come when the King doth to my Ladie come:
Then if I have much louse, Ie give you some.

Dum. Ille ferue thee true and faithfully till then.

Kab. Yet scarce not, least ye be forsworne again.

Lon. What fates Maria?

Marl. At the twelvemonths end,
Ile change my blacke Gowne, for a faithfull friend.

Lon. Ile stay with patience; but the time is long.

Marl. The liker you, few taller are fo yong.

Bra. Studies my Ladie? Midrette, looke on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eie:
What humble fuite attends thy anser there,
Impose some service on me for my love.

Rof. Oft have I heard of you my Lord Berowen,
Before I saw you: and the worlds large tongue
Proclames you for a man repelate with mockes,
Full of comparisons, and winding flutes:
Which you on all effates will execute,
That lie within the mercie of your wit.
To weed this Wormewood from your fruitfull braine,
And therewithall to win me, if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won:
You shall this twelvemonth terme from day to day,
Vifite the speechlesse ficke, and still concurne
With groaning wretches: and your taske shall be,
With all the fierce endeavoure of your wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Bra. To make wilde laughter in the thoratoe of death
It cannot be, it is impoffible.

Mirth cannot moue a soule in agonie.

Rof. Why that’s the way to chace a gibing spirit,
Whole influence is bogot of that loue grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers glue to foole:
A leis prosperitie, lies in the ear
Of him that heares it, neuer in the tongue
Of him that makes it; then, if fickely eares,
Dafft with the clamors of their owne deare grones,
Will heare your idle forones; continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withall.
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall finde you emptie of that fault,
Right joyfull of your reformation.

Bra. A twelvemonth? Well: befall what will befall,
Ile leat a twelvemonth in an Hopitall.

Qu. I sweet my Lord, and so I take my leaue.

King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.

Bra. Our waying doth not end like an old Play;
Lacke hath not Gill: thefe Ladies courtefe
Might wele have made our sport a Comedie.

Kin. Come fr, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
And then ‘twil end.

Bra. That’s too long for a play.

Enters Braggari.

Bra. Sweet Maleley vouchsafe me.

Qu. Was not that Heztor?

Dum. The worthie Knight of Troy.

Bra. I wil kiffe thy royal finger, and take leaue.

I am a Votarie, I haue vow’d to Luachettta to holde the Plough for her sweet louse three yeres. But moit efeemed greatnasse, wil you heare the Dialogue that the two Learned men have compiled, in praisf of the Owle and the Cuckow? It should have followed in the end of our fowel.

Kin. Call them forth quickly, we will do fo.

Bra. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This fide is Hien, Winter.

This Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owle, Th’other by the Cuckow.

Ver, begin.

The Song.

When Dafies pied, and Violets blew,
And Cuckow-buds of yellow hew:
And Ladie-smocks all siluer white,
Do paint the Medowes with delight.
The Cuckow then on euerie tree,
Mockes married men, for thus fings he,
Cuckow.

Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare,
Unpleasing to a married eare.

When Shepheards pipe on Osten frawes,
And merrie Larkes are Floughmens clockes:
When Turtles tread, and Rookes and Dawes,
And Maidens bleach their summe smocks:
The Cuckow then on euerie tree
Mockes married men; for thus fings he,
Cuckow.

Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare,
Unpleasing to a married eare.

Winter.

When Ificles hang by the wall,
And Dicke the Sphherhead blowes his naile;
And Tom beares Logges into the ball,
And Milke comes frozen home in palle:
When blood is nipt, and waies be fowle,
Then nightly fings the flaring Owle
Tu-whit to-who.
A merrie note,
While grefie lone doth keele the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coffin drownes the Parfons faw:
And birds fit brooding in the snow,
And Marrians nofe looke red and raw:
When rosted Crabs hiffe in the bowle,
Then nightly fings the flaring Owle,
Tu-whit to who:
A merrie note,
While grefie lone doth keele the pot.

Bra. The Words of Mercurie,
Are earth after the fongs of Apollo:
You that way; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.
A MIDSOMMER Nights Dreame.

Actus primus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, with others.

Theseus.

Thrice, my dear Hippolita, our nuptiall houre
Drawes on apace: foure happy daies bring in Another Moon: but oh, me thinkes, how slow
This old Moon wanes; She lingers my desires
Like to a Step-dame, or a Dowager,
Long withering out a yong mans reuennue.

Hippolita, I wold thee with my sword,
Now bent in heauen, that behold the night
Of our solemnities.

Thee. Go Philostrate,
Stirre vp the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Tune melancholly forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pompe,
Hippolita, I wold thee with my sword,
And wonne thy love, doing thee injuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pompe, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lyfander, and Demetrius.

Egeus. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke.
Thee. Thanks good Egeus: what's the news with thee?
Egeus. Full of vexation, come & with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia,
Stand forth Demetrius.

My Noble Lord,
This man hath my consent to marrie her.
Stand forth Lyfander.

And my gracious Duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosome of my child:
Thou, thou Lyfander, thou haft gien her times,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my childe:
Thou haft by Moone-light at her window sung,
With faining voice, veres of faining love,
And ftiyne the impression of her fantasies,
With bracelets of thy haire, rings, gawdes, conceits,
Knackes, trifles, Noe-gaies, sweet meats (mefengers
Of strong preualiment in vnhardened youth)

With cunning haft thou flich'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To ruffborne harfneffe. And my gracious Duke,
Be it fo the will not heere before your Grace,
Confent to marrie with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priuiledge of Athens:
As the is mine, I may difpofe of her;
Which shall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediatly prouided in that cafe.

Thee. What say you Hermia? be aduis'd faire Maide,
To you your Father should be as a God;
One that compouds your beauties; yea and one
To whom you are but as a forme in waxe
By him imprinted: and within his power,
To lease the figure, or disfigure it:
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.

Her. So is Lyfander.

Thee. In himselfe he is.

But in this kinde, wanting your fathers voyce.
The other muft be held the worther.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.

Thee. Rather your eyes muft with his judgment looke.

Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me.

I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern me my modellie
In such a prefence heere to pleade my thoughts:
But I befeech your Grace, that I may know
The want that may befall me in this cafe,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

Thee. Either to dye the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.

Therefore faire Hermia question your deffires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether (if you yeeld not to your fathers choice)
You can endure the liuerie of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloiifer mevd,'
To liue a barren fetter all your life.
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitleffe Moone,
Thrice bleffed they that mafter fo their blood,
To vndergo fuch maiden pilgrimage,
But carthilier happie is the Rofe diil'd,
Then that which withereth on the virgin thorne,
Growes,liues, and dies, in single blefledneffe.
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collid'd night,
That (in a spleene) vnfolds both heauen and earth;
And ere a man hath power to say, behold,
The lawes of darknesse do devour it vp:
So quicke bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true Louers have bene euer croft,
It stand as an edifick in definiti:
Then let us teach our triall patience,
Because it is a customearie croft,
As due to loue, as thoughts, and dreams, and sighes,
Wishes and tears; poor Fancies followers.

Lys. A good perfwiation; therefore heare me Hermia,
I have a Widdow Aunt, a dowager,
Of great reuennew, and she hath no childe,
From Athens is her house remou'd feuen leagues,
And he refpecks me, as her onely fonne:
There gentle Hermia, may I marie thee,
And to that place, the harpe Athenian Law
Cannot purge vs. If thou lou'dst me, then
Thee forth thy fathers house to morrow night:
And in the wood, a league without the towne,
(Where I did meete thee once with Helena,
To do obseruance for a morne of May)
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander,
I fware to thee, by Cupids frongest bow,
By his bent arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicitie of Venus Doves,
By that which knoteth foules, and profpers loue,
And by that faire which burn'd the Carthage Queene,
When the false Troyan ynder faille was feene,
By all the vowses that euer men haue broke,
(In more number then euer women spoke)
In that fame place thou haft appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meete with thee.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speede faire Helena, whither away?

Hel. Cal you me faire? that fare again vslopes,

Demetrius loues you faire: O happie faire!
Your eyes are loadifhars, and your tongues sweet ayre
More tuneable then Larke to shepheardes ear,
When wheate is Greene, when hauhorte buds appeare,
Sicknece is catching: O were fauer fo,
Your words I catch, faire Hermia ere I go,
My eare should catch your voice, my eye, your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongues sweet melodie,
Were the world mine, Demetrius being hated,
The reft Ile give to be to you translated.
O teach me how you looke, and with what art
You sawe the motion of Demetrius hart.

Her. I frowne upon him, yet he loues me till.

Hel. O that your frownes would teach my smilies fuch skil.

Her. I glue him curles, yet he glues me loue.

Hel. O that my prayers could fuch affection moue.

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly Helena is none of mine.

Hel.None but your beauty, wold that fault wer mine

Her. Take comfort: he no more shall fee my face,
Lysander and my selfe will fie this place.
Before the time I did Lysander fee,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradife to mee.
A Midsummer Night's Dream. 117

O then, what grace in my Loue do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven into hell.

Lyf. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold,
To morrow night, when Phoebe doth behold
Her flourer vifage, in the watry glaffe,
Decking with liquid pearle, the bladed grass
(� time that Louers flights doth still conceale)
Through Aths gates, have we deuils'd to theeale.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Upon faint Primrofe beds, were wont to lye, Emptying our bofomes, of their counfell fweal:
There my Lyfander, and my felle fhal meete,
And thence from Aths turne away our eyes
To feeke new friends and strange companions,
Farwell sweete play-fellow, pray thou for vs,
And good lucke grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keep word Lyfander we must furue our fight,
From louters foode, till morrow deepe midnight.

Exit Hermione.

Lyf. I will my Hermia. Helena adie,
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you. Exit Lyfander.

Hele. How happy fome, ore otherfome can be!
Through Aths I am thought as faire as shee.
But what of that? Demetrie thinks not so:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he erreers, dotting on Hermione eyes;
So I, admiring of his qualitez:
Things base and wilde, holding no quantity,
Loue can tranfpoefe to forme and dignity,
Loue lookes not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blinde.
Nor hath loues minde of any judgement taffe:
Wings and no eyes, figure, vnheedy hate.
And therefore is Loue fald to be a childe,
Because in chofe he is often beguil'd,
As wagifh boys in game themfelves forswear;
So the boy Loue is periu'd euery where.
For ere Demetrius lookt on Hermione eyene,
He hail'd downe othes that he was onely minde.
And when this Haile fome heat from Hermia felt,
So he diffolu'd, and howfres of othes did melt,
I will goe tell him of faire Hermia flight:
Then to the wood will he, to morrow night
Purfe her; and for his intelligence,
If I have thankes, it is a deere expence:
But herein meane I to enrich my paine, to haue his fight thither, and backe againe.

Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Ioyner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the belllowes-mercer, Snout the Tinker, and Starveling the Taylor.

Quin. Is all our company here?
Bot. You were beth to call them generally, man by man, according to the fcript.

Qui. Here is the frowele of euery mans name, which is thought fit through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Dutches, on his wedding day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quinc, say what the play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and so grow on to a full compleat fcript.

Quin. Marry our play is the moft lamentable Comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisbie.

Bot. A very good peec of worke I affure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quinc, call forth your Actors by the frowele. Matters spread your felues.

Quince. Anfwere as I call you, Nick Bottom the Weaver.

Bottom. Ready; name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quince. You Nick Bottom are fet downe for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus, a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A Lover that kills himselfe moft gallantly for loue.

Bot. That will aske fome teares in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience looke to their eyes: I will moue fторmes; I will condole in fome meafeure. To the ref yet, my chiefe humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to teare a Cat in, to make all fplit the raging Rocks; and thining thocks shall break the locks of prifon gates, and Phibibus carrera fhall flie from farre, and make and marre the foolish Fates. This was lofty. Now name the reft of the Players. This is Ercles vaine, a tyrants vaine: a lover is more concling.

Quin. Francis Flute the Bellows-mender.

Flot. Heere Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisbie on you.

Flot. What is Thisbie, a wandring Knight?

Quin. It is the Lady that Pyramus muft loue.

Flot. Nay faith, let not mee play a woman, I have a bearded comming.

Quin. That's all one, you shall play it in a Maske, and you may fpeeke as fmall as you will.

Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisbie too: Ile fpeeke in a monfrous little voyce; Thisbie, Thisbie, ah Pyramus my lover deare, thy Thisbie deare, and Lady deare.

Quin. No no, you must play Pyramus, and Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling the Taylor.

Star. Heere Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisbies mother?

Tom Snout, the Tinker.

Snout. Heere Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus father; my selfe, Thisbies father; Snugge the Ioyner, you the Lyons part: and I hope there is a play fittted.

Snug. Haue you the Lions part written? pray you if be, glue it me, for I am flow of fudie.

Quin. You may doe it extemporie, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the Lyon too, I will roare that I will doe any mans heart good to heare me. I will roare, that I will make the Duke fay, Let him roare againe, let him roare again.

Quin. If you should doe it too terribly, you would fright the Dutcheffe and the Ladies, that they would shrike, and that were enough to hang vs all.

All. That would hang vs every mothers fonne.

Bottom. I grant ye friends, if that you should fright the Ladies out of their Witnes, they would have no more discretion but to hang vs: but I will aggravate my voyce fo, that I will roare you as gently as any fucking Doue: I will roare and 'twere any Nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Piramus, for Piramus,

N 2
Enter a Fairy at one door, and Robin good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now spirit, whether wander you?

Fai. Ouer hil, ouer dale, through buses, through briar,
    Ouer parke, ouer pale, through flood, through fire,
    I do wander euerie where, twister then y Moons sphere;
    And I ferue the Fairy Queene, to drow her orbs upon
    The Cowflips tali, her penioneers bee,
    (green.)
    In their gold coats, spots you see,
    Tho'be Rubies, Fairy fupers,
    In thofe freckles, flue their fapers, I muft go feke fome dews drops here,
    And hang a pearle in every cowflies care.

Farewell thou Lob of fpirites, Ile be gone,
    Our Queene and all her Elues come heere anon.

Rob. The King doth keepe his Reuels here to night,
    Take heed the Queene come not within his light,
    For Oberon is paffing fell and wrath,
    Because that he, as her attendent, hath
    A louely boy falone from an Indian King,
    She never had fo sweet a changeling,
    And jeaulous Oberon would have the childe
    Knight of his traine, to trace the Forrests wide:
    But he (perforce) with-holds the loued boy,
    Crownes him with flowers, and makes him all her joy.
    And now they never meete in grous, or greene,
    By fountaine cleere, or spangled flar light fheene,
    But they do fquare, that all their Elues for feare
    Crepe into Acorne cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
    Or else you are that threw'd and knaughght spirit
    Cal'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not hee,
    That frights the maidens of the Villagare,
    Skim milke, and fometimes labour in the querne,
    And bootlelle make the breathleffe butwife cherne,
    And sometimse make the drinke to beare no barne,
    Miffeade night-wanderers, laughing at their harme,
    Tho'fe that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Pucke,
    You do their worcke, and they shall have good lucke.
    Are you not he?

Rob. Thou speakeft right;
    I am that merrie wanderer of the night:
    I left to Oberon, and made him smile,
    When I a fat and beane-fed horfe beguile,
    Neighing in likeneffe of a filly foale,
    And sometimse lurke I in a Gooseps bole,
    In very likeneffe of a roasted crab:
    And when the drinkes, against her lips I bob,
    And on her withered dewlop poure the Ale.
    The wilfe Aunt telling the faddfe tale,
    Sometime for three-foot floole, mihaftaketh me,
    Then flip I from her bum, dawne topples she,
    And tallour cries, and fals into a coffee.
    And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe,
    And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and fware,
    A merrier houre was never wafted there.
    But roome Fairy, heere comes Oberon.

Fair. And heere my Miftris:
    Would that he vvere gone.

Enter the King of Fairies at one door with his traine, and the Queene at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moone-light,
    Proud Tytania.

Qg. What, jeaulous Oberon? Fairy skip hence.
    I have forfowrne his bed and companie.

Ob. Tarrie rath Wanton; am not I thy Lord?

Qg. Then I muft be thy Lady: but I know
    When thou vvaft falone away from Fairy Land,
    And in the shape of Corin,fate all day,
    Playing onpipes of Corne, and verting loue
    To amorous Pelida. Why art thou heere
    Come from the fartheft fpeepe of India?
    But that forfooth the bounching Amaran
    Your buxik'd Miftrix, and your Warrior loue,
    To Thefeus muft be Wedded; and you come,
    To give their bed joy and prosperite.

Ob. How canft thou thus for thame Tytania,
    Glance at my credite, with Hippolita?
    Knowing I knovv thy loue to Thefeus?
    Didst thou not lead him through the glimering night
    From Peregenia, whom he raulifhed?
    And make him vwith faire Eagles breake his faith
    With Ariadne, and Atipha?

Qg. Those are the forgeries of jeaulousie,
    And never fince the middle Summers fpring
    Met vve on hil, in dale, forrest, or mead,
    By pauid fountaine, or by ruthie brooke,
    Or in the beached margent of the fea,
    To dance our ringlets to the whifling Winde,
    But vwith thy brauies thou haft difturbed our fport.
    Therefore the Winde, piping to vs in vaine,
    As in reuenue, haue fuck'd vp from the fea
    Contagious fogges: Which falling in the Land,
    Hath euerie petty Riuere made fo proud,
    That they haue ouer-borne their Continentis.
    The Oxe hath therefore ftrech't his yoke in vaine,
    The Ploughman loft his fweat, and the greene Corne
    Hath rotted, ere his youth attaint a beard:
    The fold flands empty in the drowned field,
    And Crowes are fatted with the murrion flokke,

The
The nine mens Morris is fild vp with mud,
And the quaint Mazes in the wanton greene,
For lacke of tread are vndistinguishable.
The humane mortals want their winter heere,
No night is now with hymne or caroll bieft;
Therefore the Moone (the gouernor of floods)
Pale in her anger, washes all the aire;
That Rheumaticke diseases doe abound.
And through this diatemperature, we fee
The feasons alter; hoarded headed frosts
Fall in the freth lap of the crimfon Rofe,
And on old Hyemn chinne and Iacie crowne,
An odorous Chaplet of sweet Sommer buds
Is as in mockry let. The Spring, the Sommer,
The childing Autumnne, angry Winter change
Their wonted Luries, and the mazed world,
By their increafe, now knowes not which is which;
And this fame progeny of euills,
Comes from our debate, from our diffention,
We are their parents and original.

Ober. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why should Titania croffe her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman.

Ob. Set your heart at ref,
The Fairy land buyes not the childe of me,
His mother was a Votrefle of my Order,
And in the spiced Indian aire, by night
Full often hath the goiffit by my side,
And fat with me on Nephtes yellow fands,
Marking thembarkeed traders on the flood,
When we have laught to fee the fails conceive,
And grow big bellied with the wanton winde:
Which, the with pretty, and with swimming gate;
Following (her wome more rich with my yong Iquire)
Would imitate, and faille vpon the Land,
To fetch me trifles, and returne again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But the being mortall, of that boy did die,
And for her fake I doe reare vp her boy,
And for her fake I will not part with him.
Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Ob. Perchance till after Thefleus wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And fee our Moone-light resels, goe with vs;
If not, than me and I will spare your haunts.
Ob. Give me that boy, and I will goe with thee.

Q. Not for thy Fairy Kingdome. Fairies away
We shall chide doone right, if I longer stay.

Exeunt.
Ob. Wel, go thy waye: thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Pucke come hither; thou remembreft
Since once I fat vpon a promontory,
And heard a Meare-maid on a Dolphins backe,
Vttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude fea grew chiull at her song,
And certaine farres shot madly from their Spheres,
To heare the Sea-maids muflcke.

Pac. I remember.
Ob. That very time I say (but thou couldst not)
Flying betweene the cold Moone and the earth,
Cupid the am’r’d with a certaine aim he tooke
At a faire Vefhall, throne of the Welt,
And loo’d his lous-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it shou’d pierce a hundred thousand hearts,
But I might fee young Cupid’s fiery shaft
Quencht in the chaft beames of the watry Moone;
And the imperiaall Votrefle paffed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy free.
Yet markt I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell vpon a little wefterne flower;
Before, nilke-white; now purple with loues wound,
And maidens call it, Loue in idleneffe.
Fetch me that flower; the heart I shew’d thee once,
The iuyce of it, on sleepeing eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Vpon the next lieue creature that it fees.
Fetch me this hearse, and be thou heere again,
Ere the Lenartban can swim a league.

Pucke. Ile put a girdle about the earth, in forty minutes.

Ober. Hauing once this iuyce,
Ile watch Titania, when she is asleepe,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing when the waking lookes vpon,
(Be it on Lyon, Beare, or Wolfe, or Bull,
On medling Monkey, or on buife Ape)
Shee shall pursue it, with the foule of loue.
And ere I take this charme off from her fight,
(As I can take it with another heare)
Ile make her render vp her Page to me.
But who comes heere? I am inuible,
And I will ouer-heare their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following bim.

Dem. I loue thee not, therefore pursue me not,
Where is Lysander, and faire Hermia?
The one Ile fly, the other flyeath me.
Thou toldst me they were floine into this wood;
And heere am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adaman,
But yet you draw not Iron, for my heart
Is true as fleele. Leaye you power to draw,
And I shall haue no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? do I speake you faire?
Or rather doe I not in plainest truth,
Tell you I doe not, nor I cannot loue you?

Hel. And even for that doe I loue thee more;
I am your Spaniel, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawnve on you.
Vfe me but as your spaniel; spurne me, strike me,
Neglect me, lofe me; onely glue me leaue
(Vnworthy as I am) to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your loue,
(And yet a place of high respect with me)
Then to be vfed as you doe your dogge.

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am fickle when I do looke on thee.

Hel. And I am fickle when I looke not on you.

Dem. You doe impeach your modesty too much,
To leaue the City, and commit your selfe
Into the hands of one that loues you not,
To truft the opportunity of night,
And the counsell of a desperat place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your vertue is my pruilege: for that
It is not night when I doe fee your face.
Therefore I thinke I am not in the night,
Nor doth this wood lacke worlds of company,
A Midsummer night's Dream.

For you in my respect are all the world. Then how can it be said I am alone, When all the world is heere to looke on me? Dem. Ile run from thee, and hide me in the brakes, And leave thee to the mercy of wilde beasts. Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you; Runne when you will, the story shall be chang'd: Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chafe; The Doue pursues the Griffin, the mild Hinde Makes speed to catch the Tyger. Booteffe speedes, When cowardiffe pursues, and valour flies. Demet. I will not stay thy questions, let me go; Or if thou follow me, doe not beleue, But I shall doe thee milchife in the wood. Hel. 1, in the Temple, in the Towne, and Field You doe me milchife. 3ye Demetrius, Your wrongs doe set a scandal on my fexe: We cannot fight for love, as men may doe; We should be wo'd, and were not made to woe. I follow thee, and make a heauen of hell, To die vpon the hand I love so well. Exit. Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he doe leave this grove, Thou shalt finde him, and he shall feake thy loue. Haft thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Pucke. Pucke. 1, there it is. Ob. I pray thee glue it me. I know a banke where the wilde time blowes, Where Oxflips and the nodding Violet growes, Quite over-cannoped with luscious woodbine, With sweet musique royes, and with Eglantine; There flepees Tytania, sometime of the night, Lull'd in those flowers, with dances and delight: And there the snake throws her enamel'd skinne, Weed wide enough to rap a Fairy in. And with the ioyce of this ile streake her eyes, And make her full of hatefull fantasie. Take thou some of it, and feek through this grove; A sweet Athenian Lady is in loue With a disdainfull youth: annoint his eyes, But doe it when the next thing he espies, May be the Lady. Thou shalt know the man, By the Athenian garments he hath on. Effect it with some care, that he may proue More fond on her, then the vpon her loue; And looke thou meet me ere the first Cocke crow. P3. Fear not my Lord, your servant shall do so. Exit. Enter Queen of Fairies, with her traine. Queen. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy song; Then for the third part of a minute hence, Some to kill Cankers in the muske rofe buds, Some ware with Eremerife, for their leathern wings, To make my small Elues coates, and some keepe backe The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders At our quaint spirts: Sing me now asleep, Then to your offices, and let me reft. Fairies Sing. Thou bristled Snakes with double tongue, Thorny Hedgehoggges be not seen, Newts and blinde wurmes do no wrong, Come not near our Fairy Queen. Philomel with melody, Sing in your sweet Lullaby, Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla, lulla, lullaby, Neuer harming, nor speele, nor charme, Come our louely Lady me, So good night with Lullaby. 2. Fairy. Weaung Spiders come not heere, Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence: Beetles blackes approach not heere; Worme nor Snayle doe no offence. Philomel with melody, &c. 1. Fairy. Hence away, now all is well; One alphes, fland Centinell. Seee sheeres. Enter Oberon. Ober. What thou seest when thou dost wake, Doe it for thy true Loue take: Loue and languish for his fake. Be it Ounce, or Catte, or Beare, Pard, or Boare with brilfit haire, In thy eye that shall appeare, When thou wak'ft, it is thy dear, Wake when some vile thing is neere. Enter Lysander and Hermia. Lys. Faire loue, you faint with wandring in 's woods, And to speake troth I haue forgot our way; We'll reft vs Hermia, if you thinke it good, And tarry for the comfort of the day. Her. Be it to Lysander; find you out a bed, For I vpon this banke will reft my head. Lys. One turfe shall feare as pillow for vs both, One heart, one bed, two bofomes, and one troth. Her. Nay good Lysander, for my fake my dee re Lie further of yet, doe not lie so neere. Lys. O take the fence sweet, of my innocence, Loue takes the meaning, in loues conference, I meaned that my heart vnto yours is knit, So that but one heart can you make of it. Two bofomes interchanged with an oath, So then two bofomes, and a fangle troth. Then by your side, no bed-roome me deny, For lying so, Hermia, I do not lye. Her. Lysander riddles very prettily; Now much bethrow my manners and my pride, If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied. But gentle friend, for loue and courtelie Lie further off, in humane modesty, Such separaion, as may well be faid, Becomes a vertuous batchelor, and a maide, So farre be diftant, and good night sweet friend; Thy loue nere alter, till thy sweet life end. Lys. Amen, amen, to that faire prayer, say I, And then end life, when I end loyalty: Here is my bed, sleepe glue thee all his reft. Her. With halfe that wilis, the wispers eyes be prest. Enter Pucke. They sleepe. Pucke. Through the Forreft haue I gone, But Athenian finde I none. One whole eyes I might approve This flowen force in stirring loue. Night and silence: who is heere? Weedes of Athen he doth weare: This is he (my master faid) Defpised the Athenian maide: And heere the maiden sleepeing found,
On the danke and durtie ground.
Pretty soule, she durt not lye
Neere this lacke-loue, this kill-curtesie.
Churie, vpon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charme doth owe:
When thou wilt, let love forbid
Sleepe his feate on thy eye-lid.
So awake when I am gone:
For I must now to Oberon.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweeete Demetrius.
De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
De. Stay on thy peril, I alone will goe.

Exit Demetrius.

Hel. I am out of breath, in this fond chase,
The more my prayer, the leffer is my grace,
Happy is Hermia, wherefore she lies;
For the hath bleffed and attracting eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with fault teares.
If so, my eyes are oftner wail than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a Besire;
For beafts that mette me, runne away for feare,
Therefore no maruaille, though Demetrius
Doe as a monfter, file my prudence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glaffe of mine,
Made me compare with Hermia sphyre eyne?
But who is here? Lyfander on the ground;
Deade or afepee? I fee no bloud, no wound,
Lyfander, if you lye, good fir awake.
Lyf. And run through fire I will for thy sweet take.
Transparent Helena, nature her thwes art,
That through thy bosome makes me fee thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perifh on my sword!
Hel. Do not say fo Lyfander, say not fo:
What though he love your Hermia Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia still loues you; then be content.
Lyf. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her haue spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena now I loue;
Who will not change a Rauen for a Douse?
The will of man is by his reafon swayd:
And reafon faies you are the worther Maide.
Things growing are not ripe vntill their feason;
So I being yong, till now rife not to reafon,
And touching now the point of humane skill,
Reafon becomes the Marshall to my will,
And leads me to your eyes, where I oreloue
Loues flories, written in Loues riches booke.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keenke mockery borne?
When at your hands did I defeuer this forme?
Ift not enowth, ift not enowth, yong man,
That I did neuer, no nor neuer can,
Defuer a sweete looke from Demetrius eye,
But you must flout my ifsufficieny?
Good troth you do me wrong(good-sooth you do)
In such difdainfull manner, me to woone.
But fare you well; perficte I must confesse,
I thought you Lord of true gentlenesse.
Oh, that a Lady of one man refud,
Should of another therefore be abus'd.

Lyf. She fees not Hermia: Hermia sleepe thou there,
And neuer maifit thou come Lyfander neere;

For as a sufferit of the sweettfe things
The deeweft loathing to the stomacke brings:
Or as the herefies that men do leave,
Are hated most of thofe that did deceiue:
So thou, my feluett, and my herefie,
Of all be hated; but the moft of me;
And all my powers addrefsfe your loue and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her Knight.

Her. Helpe me Lyfander, helpe me; do thy beft
To plucke this crawling ferpent from my breft.
Aye me, for pitty; what a dreame was here?
Lyfander looke, how I do quake with feare:
Me-thought a ferpent eate my heart away,
And yet fat fmilin at his cruel prey.
Lyfander, what remou'd ? Lyfander, Lord,
What, out of hearing, gone? No found, no word?
Alacke where are you? speake and if you heare:
Speake of all loues; I found almoft with feare.
No, then I well perceiue you are not nye,
Either death or you lie finde immediately.

Exit.
request you, or I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think me hither as a Lyon, it were pitty of my life. No, I am no such thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly he is Smug the ioyner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moonelight into a chamber: for you know, Piramus and Thisby meete by Moonelight.

Sn. Doth the Moon shine that night wee play our play?

Enter Pucke.

Quin. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moonelight into a chamber: for you know, Piramus and Thisby meete by Moonelight.

Quin. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moonelight into a chamber: for you know, Piramus and Thisby meete by Moonelight.

Sn. Doth the Moon shine that night?

Bot. Why then may you leave a chamber of the great chamber window (where we play) open, and the Moon may shine in at the chamber.

Quin. If ever one must come in with a bough of thorns and a lanthorne, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present the perfon of Moones-shine. Then there is another thing, we must have a wall in the great Chamber; for Piramus and Thisby (faies the story) did talke through the chinke of a wall.

Sn. You can never bring in a wall. What say you Botomnes?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall, and let him have some Paffet, or some Lome, or some rough caft about him, to signifie wall; or let him hold his fingers thus; and through that cranney, shall Piramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit downe every mother sonne, and rehearse your parts. Piramus, you begin; when you have spoken your speech, enter into that Brake, and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns have we swagging here, So neere the Cradle of the Faerie Queen? What a Play toward? Ile be an auditor, An Actor too perhaps, if I fee cause.

Quin. Speake Piramus: Thisby stand forth.

Pir. Thisby, the flowers of odious favours sweete.

Quin. Odours, odours. Pir. Odours favours sweete, So bath thy breath, my dearest Thisby deare, But harke, a voyce: thy thou but here a while, And by and by I will to thee appear. Exit. Pir. Puck. A stranger Piramus, then ere plaid here.

Toib. Muft I speake now?

Pet. I marry muft you. For you must vnderstand he goes but to fee a noytle he that heard, and is come a-gaine.

Toib. Most radiant Piramus, moft Lilly white of hue, Of colour like the red rife on triumphant bryer, Moft brisky Iumenall, and eke moft loue ilew, As true as truest horse, that yet would never tyre, Ile meeete the Piramus, at Ninnes toombe.

Pet. Ninus toombe man: why, you must not speake that yet; that you anfwere to Piramus; you speake all your part at once, cues and all. Piramus enter, your cue is pait; it is newer tyre.

Toib. O as true as truest horse, that yet would never tyre:

Pir. If I were faire, Thisby I were onely thine.

Pet. O monftrous. O strange. We are hanted; pray mafters, frye mafters, helpe.

The Clowns all Exit.

Puf. Ile follow you, Ile leade you about a Round, Through bogge, through buft, through brake, through Someetime a horse Ile be, someetime a hound: (bryer, A bogge, a headlefe beare, someetime a fire, And neig, and barke, and grunt, and rore, and burne, Like horse, bound, hog, beare, fire, at every turne. Exit. Enter Piramus with the Affe head.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knauery of them to make me afeard. Exit Snout.

Sn. O Bottom, thou art chang'd; What doe I fee on thee?

Bot. What do you fee? You fee an Affe-head of your owne, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Exit. Bot. I fee their knauery; this is to make an affe of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not flerre from this place, do what they can. I will walke vp and downe here, and I will finge that they shall heare I am not a-fraid.

Tyta. What Angell wakes me from my flowry bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Larke, The plainfong Cuckow gray; Whole note full many a man doth marke, And dares not anfwer, nay. For indeed, who would fet his wit to so foolifh a bird? Who would give a bird the lye, though he cry Cuckow, neuer fo?

Tyta. I pray thee gentle mortall, sing againe, Mine ear is much enamored of thy note; On the first view to fay, to weary I love thee. So is mine eye entrafled to thy shape, And thy faire vertues force (perforce) doth move me.

Bot. Me-thinks miftrefs, you should have little reafon for that: and yet to fay the truth, reafon and love keepe little company togethers, now-adayes. The more the pittie, that some honeft neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleake vpon occa- tion.

Tyta. Thou art as wife, as thou art beautiful. Bot. Not fo neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to ferue mine owne turne.

Tyta. Out of this wood, do not defire to goe, Thou shalt remaine here, whether thou wilt or no. I am a spirit of no common rate:

The Summer fill doth tend vp my flate, And I doe love thee; therefore goe with me, Ile glue thee Fairies to attend on thee; And they shall fetch thee Jewels from the deepes, And fing, while thou on prefied flowers dote deepe: And I will purge thy mortall groffenesse fo, That thou shalt like an aire spirit go.

Enter Peafe-bl Moss, Cobweb, Moth, Mustard- seede, and four Fairies. Faf. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Where shall we go? Tit. Be
As he fight, away his fellows flye,
And at our flame, here one and one falls;
He murther cries, and helps from _Abbes_ cats.
Their fenfe thus waake, left with their fears thus frong,
Made _feneffe_ things begin to do them wrong.
For briars and thornes at their apparell snatch,
Some fleeces, some hats, from yeelders all things catch,
I led them on in this distracted feare,
And left _fweete Piramus_ tranlated there:
When in that moment(_fo it came to paffe)_
_Tyztian_ wak'd, and straight way loud an _Arfe._

Ob. This falls out better then I could desier:
But haft thou yet lacht the _Athenian_ eyes,
With the loye eye, as I did bid thee doe?
Rob. I tooko thee sleeping (that is finift to)
And the _Athenian_ woman by his fide,
That when he wak't, of force the muft be eyde.

_Ob._ Stand close, this is the fame _Athenian._
Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man.
_Dem._ O why rebecke you him that loues you fo?
Lay breath fo bitter on your bitter foe.
_Her._ Now I but chide, but I shoulde vfe them worfe.
For thou (I feare) haft given me caufe to curfe,
If thou haft slaine _Lysander_ in his fleep,
Being ore whoes in bloud, plunge in the depee, and kill me too:
The Sunne was not fo true vnto the day,
As he to me. Would he haue follen away,
From _sleeping Hermit?_ I beleue as foone
This whole earth may be bode, and that the Moone
May through the Center creepe, and fo displeafe
Her brothers nonette, with th'Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou haft murdred him,
So should a muttherer looke, fo dead, fo grim.
Dem. So should the murderer looke, and fo shoulde I,
Pierft through the heart with your _fearne_ crueltie:
Yet you the murderer looks as bright as cleare,
As yonder _Demea_ in her glimmering fphere.
_Her._ What's this to my _Lysander_ where is he?
Ah good _Demetrius_, wilt thou giue him me?
_Dem._ I'de rather giue his carkaffe to my hounds.
_Her._ Out dog, out cur, thou druit me paft the bounds
Of maidens patience, and. Halft thou slaine him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.
Oh, once tell true, even for my fake,
Durf thou a lookt vpon him, being awake?
And haft thou kill'd him _sleeping?_ O braue tutch:
Could not a worme, an Adder do fo much?
An Adder did it: for with doubler tongue
Then thine(thou ferpent) neuer Adder flung.
_Dem._ You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood,
I am not guiltie of _Lysander'_s blood:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.
_Her._ I pray thee tell me then that he is well.
_Dem._ And if I could, what should I get therefor?
_Her._ A priulidge, neuer to fee me more:
And from thy hated preffence part I:fee me no more
Whether he be dead or no.
_Dem._ There is no following her in this fierce vaine,
Here therefore for a while I will remaine.
So forrowes heauenife doth heauier grow:
For debt that bankrout flip doth forrow owre,
Which now in some flight measurfe it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.
Lie down.
Ob. What hast thou done? Thou hast mistaken quite
And laid the louse byounce on true love's light;
Of thy misprision, must perforce enue.
Some true love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.
Rob. Then fate ore-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million false, confounding oath on oath.
Ob. About the wood, goe swifter then the wind,
And
Helena of Athens looks thou finde.
All fancy flocke the is, and pale of cheere,
With sibges of louse, that costs the freth bloud deare.
By some illusion fee thou bring her heere,
Ile charme his eyes against the doth appear.
Robin. I go, I go, looke how I goe,
Swifter then arrow from the Torture bowe.
Exit.
Ob.
Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Captits archery,
Sink in apple of his eye,
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky,
When thou wak't if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Pucks.
Puck. Captain of our Fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mytooke by me,
Pleading for a Louers fee.
Shall we their fond Pageant fee?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!
Ob. Stand averse the noyte they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once wooe one,
That must needs be sport alone:
And tho'te things doe best pleafe me,
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lyfander and Helena.

Lyf. Why should you think I should wooe in scorn?
Scorne and derision neuer comes in teares;
Looke where I vow I wepe, and vowes to borne,
In their natality all truth appears.
How can these things in me, feeme scorn to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.
Hel. You doe advance your cunning more & more,
When truth kils truth, O diuellih holy tray!
Thefe vows are Hermione. Will you glue her ore?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh.
Your vows to her, and me, (put in two scales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lyf. I had no judgement, when to her I swore.

Hel. Nor none in my minde, now you give her ore.

Lyf. Demetrius loves her and, he loves not you.

A dem, O Helen, goddeffe, nimph, perfect, divine,
To what my love, shall I compare thine eyne!
Chriftall is mudy, O how ripe in shoo,
Thy lips, those kifling cherries, tempting grow!
That pure concealed white, high
Taurus know,
Fan'd with the Eastern winde, turns to a cow,
When thou holdst vp thy hand.
O let me kiffe
This Princeesse of pure white, this scale of bliffe,
Holl. O spight! O hell! I fee you are all bent
To fet against me, for your merriment:
If you were ciuill, and knew curtezie,
You would not doe me such inward injury,
Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you must loyne in foules to mocke me to?
If you are men, as men you are in shoo,
You would not vse a gentle Lady so;
To vow, and sweare, and superfrase my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Riuals, and loue Hermione;
And now both Riuals to mocke Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To contrive tears vp in a poore maids eyes,
With your derision; none of noble fort,
Would so offend a Virgin, and extort
A poore foules patience, all to make you sport.
Lyf. You are vnkind Demetrius; be not fo,
For you loue Hermione; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermione loue I yeeld you vp my part;
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I do loue, and will do to my death.
Hel. Neuer did mockers waft more idle breath.

Lyf. Lyfander, keep thy Hermione, I will none:
If ere I lou'd her, all that loue is gone.
My heart to her, but as geutl-witte folourn'd;
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remaine.
Lyf. It is not so.
Dr. I perifarge not the faith thou doft not know,
Left to thy perill thou abide it deare.

Looke where thy Loue comes, yonder is thy deare.

Enter Hermes.
Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The eare more quicke of apprehension makes,
Wherein it doth improve the seeing senfe,
Ir paires the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lyfander found,
Mine eare (I thank it) brought me to that found.
But why vnkindly didst thou leaue me so? (to go)
Lyf. Lyfander. Why should hee itay whom Loue doth preffe
Her. What loue could preffe Lyfander from my side?
Faile Lyfander love (that would not let him beside)
Hermes; who more englids the night,
Then all you farte oes, and eies of light.
Why seek'S thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leaue thee so?
Her. You speake not as you thinkes; it cannot be.

Hel. Loe, she is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceiue they have conoy'd all three,
To fashion this falle sport in flipte of me.
Injurious Hermione, most vngratefull maid,
Have you confir'd, have you with these contriud
To baite me, with this foule derision?
Is all the counsell that we two have shar'd,
The fifters vowes, the houres that we have spent,
When wee had child the hally footed time,
For parting vs; O is all forgot?
All schoole-dates friendship, child-hood innocence?
We Hermia, like two Artificial gods,
Have with our needles,created both one flower,
Both on one samplers,fitting on one cuffion,
Both wanting of one fong, both in one key;
As if our hands, our fides, voices, and mindes
Had beene Incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet a union in partition.
Two lovely berries molded on one stem,
So with two seeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the first life coats in Heraldry,
Dye but to one and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love afiender,
To love with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'ts not maidenly.
Our fexe as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words,
I scorne you not; 'tis you I scorne me.
Hel. Have you not yet Lysander, as in scorne
To follow me, and prate my eies and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did spurne me with his foote)
To call me goddefle, nimph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celestiall! Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lysander
Denie your love (fo rich within his soule)
And tender me (foorth) affeflion,
But by your fettng on, by your content?
What though I be not fo in grace as you,
So hung vpon with love, fo fortunate?
(But miserable mort, to love vnou'd)
This you should pitte, rather then defife.

Her. I vnderstand not what you meane by this.
Hel. I, doe, perfeuer, counterfeit fad looke,
Make mouthes vpon me when I turne my backe,
Winke each at other, hold the sweete left vp:
This fport well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pitte, grace, or manners,
You would not make me fuch an argument:
But fare ye well, 'tis party mine owne fault,
Which death or abfence foone shall remedie.

Lys. Stay gentle Helena, heare my excuse,
My love, my life, my foule, faire Helena.
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweete, do not scorne her fo.
Dem. If she cannot entreate, I can compell.
Lys. Thou cantt compell, no more then she entreate.
Thy threats have no more strength then her weak prate.

Hel. I loove thee, by my life I doe;
I sweare by that which I will lofe for thee,
To prove him falle, that me I loue thee not.

Dem. I fay, I loue thee more then he can do.
Lys. If thou fay fo, with-draw and proue it too.

Dem. Quick, come.
Hel. Lysander, whereto tends all this?
Lys. Away, you Ethiope.

Dem. No, no, Sir, feeme to broke loofe;
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go.

Lys. Hang off thou cat, thou bountifull thing let loose,
Or I will drive thee from me like a repent.

Her. Why are you growne fo rude?
What change is this sweete Louve?

Lys. Thy loue? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loshed medicine; O hated poifon hence.

Her. Do you not left?
Hel. Yes footh, and fo do you.
Lys. Demetrius: I will keepe my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond: for I percieue
A broke word holds you; Ile not truift your word.

Lys. What, shoulde I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, Ile not harme her fo.

Her. What, can you do me greater harme then hate?

Hate me, wherefore? O me, what newes my Louve?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
I am as faire now, as I was ere while,
Since night you loued me; yet fince night you left me.
Why then you left me (O the gods forbid)
In earneff, shall I fay?
Lys. I, by my life;
And never did defire to fee thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt;
Be certaine, nothing truer: 'ts no left,
That I doe hate thee, and loue Helena.

Hel. O me, you iugler, you canker blofomme,
You theefe of loue; What, hauve you come by night,
And tilone my loues heart from him?

Hel. Fine fych:
Flane you no monely, no maiden shame,
No touch baithfulneffe? What, will you teare
Impatien answeres from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet, you.

Hel. Puppet? why fo? I, that way goes the game.
Now I perceiue that the hath made compare
Betweene our fatures, the hath vrg'd her height,
And with her perfonage, her tall perfonage,
Her height (foorth) the hath preuill'd with him,
And are you growne fo high in his esteeme,
Beaucau I am fo dwarfish, and fo low?
How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speake,
How low am I? I am not yet fo low,
But that my nails can reach vnto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you though you mocke me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me: I was neuer curf'd.
I have no gift at all in threewithelle;
I am a right maide for my cowardize;
Let her not frike me: you perhaps may thinke,
Because she is something lower then my felle,
That I can match her.

Hel. Lower? harke againe.

Hel. Good Hermia, do not be fo bitter with me,
I euemore did loue you Hermia,
Did euer keepe your counfels, neuer wronged you,
Save that in loue vnto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth vnto this wood.
He followed you, for loue I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatened me
To frike me, spurne me, nay to kill me too;
And now,fo you will let me quiet go,
To Athenes will I heare my folly backe,
And follow you no further. Let me go.

You see how fimpfe, and how fond I am.

Her. Why get you gone? who lift that hinders you?
Hel. A foolifh heart, that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander?
Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid, she shall not harme thee Helena.

Dem. No fir, she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O when she's angry, she is keene and threwd,
She was a vixen when she went to schoolie,
And though she be but little, she is fierce.

Her. Little againe? Nothing but low and little?
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone you dwarfe,
You minimus, of hindring knot-graffe made,
You beard, you acone.

Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalfe that scorner her ferules.

Let
Let her alone, speake not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou doft intend Neuer fo little shew of loue to her,
Thou shalt abide it.
Lyf. Now she holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar’st, to trye whose right,
Of thine or mine is most in Helena.
"Dem. Follow? Nay, Ie goe with thee cheeke by Iowle.
Hor. You Miiftrie, all this coyle is long of you.
Nay, goe not backe.
Hel. I will not trust you I,
Nor longer stay in your curf companie.
Your hands then mine, are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though to runne away.

Enter Oberon and Pucke.
Ob. This is thy negligence, still thou mistak’st,
Or else committ’st thy knauneries willingly.
Puck. Believe me, King of shadowes, I mislike,
Did not you tell me, I should know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And so faire blamelfe proyes my enterprize,
That I have nointed an Athenians eies,
And so faire am I glad, it so did fort,
As this theiriangling I esteeme a sport.
Ob. Thou seest these Louers seake a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin, overcast the night,
The fairee Welkin couer thou anon,
With drooping fogge as blacke as Athenon,
And lead thee tellee Riuials so afrray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lyfander, sometime frame thy tongue,
Then faire Demetrius vp with bitter wrong;
And sometime raile thou like Demetrius;
And from each other looke thou leade them thus,
Till ore their browes, death-counterfeiteing, sleepe
With leaden legs, and Battle-wings doth creepe;
Then cruze this heare into Lyfandere eie,
Whose liquor hath this vertuous propriety,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eie-bals role with wonedt fight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall see me a dreame, and fruitelie vision,
And backe to Aubens shall the Louers wend
With leaque, whose date till death shall neuer end.
Whiles I in this affaire do thee imply,
Ile to my Queene, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eie releafe
From monsters view, and all things shall be peace.
Puck. My Fairie Lord, this must be done with hafte,
For night-twift Dragons cut the Clouds full fast,
And yonder thines Auros harbinger;
At whose approach Ghosts wandring here and there,
Troope home to Church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in crosse-waies and flouds haue buriall,
Alreadie to their wormlie beds are gone;
For feare least day should looke their flames vp,
They wilfully themselues exile from light,
And must for aye comfort with blacke browd night.
Ob. But we are spirits of another fort:
I, with the mornings loue haue oft made sport,
And like a Forreeter, the groues may tread,
Euen till the Eafterne gate all fierie red,
Opening on Neptune, with faire bleffed beames,
Turnes into yellow gold, his falt greene freameas.

But notwithstanding hafte, make no dplay:
We may effect this buinellef, yet ere day.
Puck. Vp and downe, vp and downe, I will lead them vp and downe: I am fear’d in field and town.
Gebelin, lead them vp and downe: here comes one.

Enter Lyfander.
Lyf. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speake thou now.
Rob. Hiere wilние, drawne & readme. Where art thou?
Lyf. I will be with thee fraught.
Rob. Follow me then to planier ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speake in some buffet: Where doth thou hide thy head?
Rob. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look’st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou childe,
Ile whip thee with a rod. He is defill’d
That draws a sword on thee.
Dem. Yea., art thou there?
Ro. Follow my voice, we’l try no manhood here.
Exit.
Lyf. He goes before me, and still dares me on,
When I come where he calls, then he’s gone.
The villain is much lighter heel’d then I:
I followed faft, but fafter he did flye;
Appear of places.
That fallen am I in darke vnuen way,
And here will rest me. Come thou gentle day:
Hye down.
For if but once thou shew me thy gray light,
Ie finde Demetrius, and reuenge this night.

Enter Robin and Demetirus.
Rob. Ho, ho, ho; coward, why com’t thou not?
Dem. Abide me, if thou dar’st. For well I wot,
Thou runft before me, shifting every place,
And dar’ft not fland, nor looke me in the face.
Where art thou?
Rob. Come hither, I am here.

Dem. Nay then thou mock’st me; thou shalt buy this
If euer I thy face by day-light seee.
Now goe thy way: fainteffe constrainethe me,
To measure out my length on this cold bed,
By daies approche looke to be visithe:

Enter Helena.
Hel. O wearty night, O long and tedious night,
Abste thy houres, shine comfortes from the East,
That I may backe to Aubens by day-light,
From these the my poore companie deteile;
And sleepe that sometime shunts vp forrowes eie,
Steale me a while from mine owne companie.
Sleepe.
Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,
Two of both kindes makes vp soure.
Here she comes, curtif and fast,
Cupid is a knauffish lad,

Enter Hermia.

Thus to make poore females mad.

Herm. Neuer fo weare, nooer fo in woc,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torne with briers,
I can no further crave, no further goe;
My legs can keepe no pace with my desires.
Here will I reft me till the breake of day,
Heauens shield Lyfander, if they meane a fray.
Rob. On the ground sleepe sound,
Ile apply your eie gentle lourer, remedy.
When thou wak’st, thou tak’st
True delight in the fight of thy former Ladies eye,
And
A Midsummer night's Dreame.

Enter Queen of Fairies, and Clowne, and Fairies, and the King behind them.

Tita. Come, fit thee downe vpon this flowry bed, While I thy amiable cheekes doe coy, And tickte muske rotes in thy fleckke smoothe head, And kifte thy faire large eares, my gentle ioy.
Clown. Where's Peasfe-blossume?
Peaf. Ready.
Clown. scratch my head, Peasfe-blossome. Wher's Mounfeur Cobweb.
Cob. Ready.
Clown. Mounfeur Cobweb, good Mounfeur get your weapons in your hand, & kill me a red hipt humble-Bee, on the top of a thistle ; and good Mounfeur bring mee the hony bag. Doe not fret your selfe too much in the action, Mounfeur; and good Mounfeur haue a care the hony bag breake not, I would be loth to haue yon over-flowne with a hony-bag signloure. Where's Mounfeur Mustardseed?

Must. Ready.
Clo. Giue me your neafe, Mounfeur Mustardseed. Pray you leaue your countresie good Mounfeur.
Must. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing good Mounfeur, but to help Caulery Cobweb to fratch. I muft to the Barbers Mounfeur, for me-thinkes I am marveuolous hairy about the face. And I am such a tender affe, if my hair do buttickle me, I muft fratch.
Tita. What wilt thou haue of muficke, my sweet loue.
Clown. I haue a reaonable good eare in muficke. Let vs haue the tongs and the bones.
Muficke Tongs, Rurall Muficke.

Tita. Or say sweete Loue, what thou defirest to eate. Clowne. Truly a pecke of Prouender; I could munch your good dry Oates. Me-thinkes I haue a great desire to a bottle of hay : good hay, sweete hay hath no felow.
Tita. I haue a ventuorous Fairy, That shal fleete the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.
Clown. I had rather have a handfull or two of dried pease. But I pray you let none of your people fille me, I have an expostion of sleepe come vpon me.
Tita. Sleepe thou, and I will winde thee in my arms, Fairies be gone, and be always away.

They sleepe all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

And the Country Proverb knoune, That every man shoulde take his owne, In your wakind shall be flowne, Iacke shall haue Ill, nought shall goe ill, The man shall haue his Mare againe, and all shall bee well.

O how I loue thee! I how I dote on thee!

Enter Robin goodfellow and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin:
Sceft thou this sweete fight? Her dotage now I doe begin to pity. For meeting her of late behinde the wood, Seeking sweete favours for this hatefull foole, I did vpbraid her, and fall out with her. For the his hairy temples then had rounded, With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers. And that fame dew which fomtime on the buds, Was wont to swell like round and orient pears; Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes, Like teares that did their owne disgrace bewaile. When I had at my pleasure taunted her, And she in milde termes beg'd my patience, I then did aske of her, her changeling childe, Which straighthe the gauce me, and her Fairy sent To beare him to my Bower in Fairy Land. And now I haue the Boy, I will vnado This hatefull perfection of her eyes. And gentle Fuche, take this transformed scalpe, From off the head of this Athenian swaine; That he awaking when the other doe, May all to Athen backe againe repair, And thinke no more of this nights accidents, But as the fierce vexation of a dreame. But first I will releafe the Fairy Queene.

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queene.
Tita. My Oberon, what viuions haue I feene! Me-thought I was enamouerd of an Afse.
Ob. There lies your loue.
Tita. How came these things to paffe? Oh, how mine eyes doth loath this vilage now! Ob. Silence a while. Robin take off his head: Titania,mufick call, and strike more dead Then common sleepe of all the fleepers, fteue the felfe.
Tita. Muficke, ho muficke, fuch as charmeth sleepe.
Mufick fill.

Rob. When thou wak'st, with thine owne foolees eies pepee.
(m) Sound mufick; come my Queene, take hands with And rocke the ground whereon thofe sleepers be. Now thou and I are new in amity, And will to morrow mid night, take only Dance in Duke Teufes houfe triumphantely, And belle it to all faire potterties. There shal the pairs of faithful Louers be Wedded, with Teufes, all in iollity.
Rob. Faire King attend, and marke, I doe heare the morning Larke.
Ob. Then my Queene in silence sad, Trip we after the nights shade; We the Globe can compasse gone, Swifter then the wandering Moone.
Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight, Tell me how it came this night, That I sleepeing here was found, Sleepers Lye still.
O With
157
With these mortals on the ground.

Enter Theseus, Egeus, Hippolytus and all his train.

Thee. Go, one of you, find out the Forrester,
For now our obseruation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My Loue shall hear the muticke of my hounds.
Vncouple in the Wetherne valley, let them goe;
Dispache I say, and finde the Forrester.
We will faire Queene, vp to the Mountains top.
And mark the musicall confusion
Of hounds and echo in confusion.

Hipp. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they bayed the Beare
With hounds of Sparta; neuer did I heare
Such gallant chiding. For befides the groues,
The skies, the fountains, euer region neere,
Seeme all one mutuall cry. I never heard
So musickall a discord, such sweet thunder.
Thee. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kinde,
So few'd, so fanned, and their heads are hung
With ears that sweepe away the morning dew;
Crooke kneed, and dew-lapt, like Thebellian Bulls;
Slow in pursuite, but match'd in mouth like bels,
Each vnder each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hallowed to, nor cheer'd with horse,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thebass;
Judge when you heare. But soft, what nymphs are these?
Egeus. My Lord, this is my daughter heere asleep,
And this Laflander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, old Neare Helena,
I wonder of this being heere together.

Thee. No doubt they rose vp early, to obserue
The right of May; and hearing our intent,
Came heere in grace of our solemnity.
But speake Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should giue anfwer of her choice?
Egeus. It is, my Lord.
Thee. Goe bid the hunt-men wake them with their horses.

Horses and they wake.

Shout within, they all start vp.
Thee. Good morrow friends: Saint Valentine is past,
Begin these wood birds but to couple now?

Lyf. Pardon my Lord.
Thee. I prays you all stand vp.
I know you two are Rivall enemies.
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is to farre from jealouse,
To fleepe by hate, and fear no enemity.

Lyf. My Lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Halle fleepe, halle waking. But as yet, I fweare,
I cannot truly fay how I came heere.
But as I thinke (for truly would I speake)
And now I doe bethinke me, fo it is;
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Atheni, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord: you haue enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, upon his head:
They would haue fpone away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to haue defeated you and me:
Of your wife, and me of my consent;
Of my consent, that she should be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, faire Helen told me of their steaith,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood,

And I in furie hither followed them;
Faire Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I Wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is) my loue
To Hermia (melted as the snow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle guade,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd, ere I see Hermia,
But like a fackenesse did I loath this food,
But as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now doe I wish it, loue it, long for it,
And will for euermore be true to it.
Thee. Faire Louers, you are fortunate met;
Of this discouer we shall heare more anon.
Egeus, I will ouer-bare your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with vs,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is someting worse,
Our purpo't hunting shall be fret aside.
 Away, with vs to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnite.

Come Hippolytus.

Exit Duke and Lords.

Dem. These things seeme small & vnthinkinguffles,
Like farre off mountains turned into Clouds.
Her. Me-thinks I see these things with parted eye,
When every things feemes double.

Hel. So me-thinks I.

And I have foune Demetrius, like a jewell,
Mine owne, and not mine owne.

Dem. It feemes to mee,
That yet we sleepe, we dreame. Do not you thinke,
The Duke was heere, and bid vs follow him?

Her. Yea, and my Father,

Hel. And Hippolytus.

Lyf. And he bid vs follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake; let vs follow him,
And by the way let vs recount our dreames.

Bottoms wake.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quin. Haue you rent to Bottomes house? Is he come home yet?

Starv. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt hee is transported.

Thes. If
A Midsummer night's Dream.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus and his Lords.

_Hip._ This strange my Theseus, y these louers speake of. _Th._ More strange then true. I neuer may beleue These anticke fables, nor these Fairy toys, Louers and mad men haue such festishing braines, Such thaping phantacies, that apprehende more Then coole reason euer comprehends. The Lunaticke, the Louer, and the Poet, Are of imagination all compact. One fees more diucls then vaile hell can hold; That is the mad man. The Louer, all as frantickke, Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egips. The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling,doth glance From heauen, from earth to heauen. And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things Vaknowne; the Poets pen turns them to shapes, And glues to aire nothing, a local habitation, And a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination,

That if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some oringer of that joy. Or in the night, imagining some fear, How eafe is a bush luppard's a Beare? _Hip._ But all the storie of the night told ouer, And all their minds transfug'd to together, More witnessthe then facies images, And growes to something of great constancie; But howsoever,strange, and admirable.

_Enter lovers, Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena._

_Th._ Heere come the louers,full of joy and mirth : Joy, gentle friends, joy and freth days Of loue accompany your hearts, _Lys._ More then to vs, waite in your royall walkes, your boord, your bed. _Th._ The come now, what masks, what dances shall we haue, To weare away this long age of three hours, Between our after supper, and bed-time? Where is our visuall manager of mirth? What Reuels are in hand? Is there no play, To eafe the anguish of a torturing houre? Call _Egeus._

_Ege._ Heere mighty Theseus... _Th._ Say, what abridgement haue you for this euening? What maskes? What muicke? How shall we beguile The lasie time, if not with some delight? _Ege._ There is a breefe how many sports are rife: Make choife of which your Highnesse will fee first. _Lys._ The battell with the Centaurs to be fung By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harpe. _Th._ We'l none of that. That haue I told my Loue In glory of my kinman Hercules. _Lys._ The riot of the tipifie Bachanals, Tearing the Thracian finger,in their rage? _Th._ That is an old deuice, and it was plaid When I from _Thebes_ came laft a Conqueror. _Lys._ The thrice three Muses, mourning for the death of learning, late deceath in beggerie. _Th._ That is some Satire keene and critical, Not forting with a nupittial ceremonie. _Lys._ A tedious breefe Scene of yong _Piramus_, And his loue _Tibby_; very tragicall mirth, _Th._ Merry and tragicall? Tediouss, and briefe? That is, hot ice, and wondrouses strange snow. How shall wee finde the concord of this discord? _Ege._ A play there is, my Lord, some ten words long, Which is as breefe, as I haue knowne a play; But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long; Which makes it tedious. For in all the play, There is not one word apt, one Player fittted. And tragicall my noble Lord it is: for _Piramus_ Therein doth kill himselfe. Which when I saw _Rehearse_, I must confesse, made mine eyes water : But more merrie teares, the passion of loud laughter Neuer shed. _Th._ What are they that do play it? _Ege._ Hard handed men, that worke in Athens heere, Which never laboured'd in their minde till now; And now haue toyed their unbreathed memories With this same play, against your nuptiall. _Th._ And we will heare it.

Enter Seug the Icyner.

_Sneg._ Mafters, the Duke is comming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords & Ladies more maried: If our spofe had gone forward, we had all bin made men. _Th._ O sweet bully _Bottom_: thus hath he loft sixence a day, during his life; he could not have scaped sixence a day. And the Duke had not given him sixence a day for playing _Piramus_, Ile be hang'd. He would have deferved it. Sixence a day in _Piramus_, or nothing. _Enter Bottom._

_Bot._ Where are these Lads? Where are these hearts? _Quin._ _Bottom_, 6 most courageous day! O most hap-pie houre! _Bot._ Mafters, I am to difcourse with; but ask me not what. For if I tell you, I am no true _Athenian_. I will tell you everty thing as it fell out. _Quin._ Let vs heare, sweet _Bottom._

_Bot._ Not a word of me: all that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your apparell together; good things to your beards, new ribbands to your pumps, meece prefently at the Palace, every man looke ore his part: for the short and the long is, our play is preferred: In any cafe let _Thoby_ haue cleane linnen: and let not him that plays the Lion, pare his nailes, for they shall hang out for the Lions claws. And moft deare Actors, cate no Onions, nor Garlick; for wee are to vter sweete breath, and I doe not doubt but to heare them say, it is a sweete Comedy. No more words: away, go away. _Exeunt._

Enter the Prologue.  Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To shew our simple skil,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in desight.
We do not come, as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not heere. That you should here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their show,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Teuf. This fellow doth not fland upon points.
Lys. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Cowl; he knows not the stop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to speake, but to speake true.

Flor. Indeed hee hath plaid on his Prologue, like a childe on a Recorder, a found, but not in government.
Teuf. His speech was like a tangled chaine nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Tawyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus and Thisby, Wall, Moone-faine, and Lyon.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plaine.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know
This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certaine.
This man, with lyme and rough-caft, doth present Wall, that vile wall, which did thefe louers funder;
And through walls chink (poor foules) they are content To whisper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man, with Lanthorne, dog, and buft of thorne, Prefenteth moone-faine. For if you will know,
By moone-faine did thefe Louers think no fome
To meet at Nimus toome, there, there to woe.

This griye beast (which Lyon bright by name)
The trully Thisby, comming fift by night,
Did feare away, or rather did affright:
And as she fled, her mantile she did fall;
Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did flaine.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And findes his Thisbies Mantle flaine;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade,
He bravely brocht his boiling bloody breast,
And Thisby, tarrying in Mulberry tide,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the reft,
Let Lyon, Moone-faine, Wall, and Louers twaine,
At large difcource, while here they doe remaine.

Exit all but Wall.

Teuf. I wonder if the Lion be to speake.
Deme. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Asses doe.

Exit Lyon, Thisby, and Moone-faine.

Wall. In this fame Interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snee (by name) present a wall;
And such a wall, as I would have you thinke,
That had in it a crannied hole or chinke:
Through which the Louers, Pyramus and Thisbie
Did whisper often, very secretly.
This loame, this rough-caft, and this ftone doth fhew,
That I am that fame Wall; the truth is fo.
And this the cranny is, right and finifter,
Through which the fceafefull Louers are to whisper.

Teuf. Would you defire Lime and Haire to speake better?

Deme. It is the vvrileft partition, that eu’er I heard difcourage, my Lord.

Teuf. Pyramus draws neere the Wall, silence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pir. O grim lookt night, o night with hue fo blacke,
O night, which eu’er art, when day is not:
O night, o night, alacke, alacke, alacke,
I feare my Thisbies promife is forgot.
And thou o wall, thou sweet and lovely wall,
That fhands between her fathers ground and mine,
Thou wall, o wall, o wall and lovely wall,
Shew me thy chinke, to blinke through vwith mine eye.
Thankes courteous wall. Ioue fhield thee vwall for this.
But what vfee I? No Thisbie doe I feee.
O vwicked vwall, through vvhom I vfee no bliffe,
Curf be thy ftones for thus deceiving mee.

Teuf. The vwall me-thinkes being fensible, should curfe againe.

Pir. No in truth for, he shold not. Decieving me,
Is Thisbies cue; the is to enter, and I am to spy
Her through the vwall. You fhall see it will fall.

Enter Thisbie.

Pat as I told you; yonder she comes.
Teuf. O vwall, full often haft thou heard my mones,
For parting my faire Piramus, and me.
My cherry lips have ofteen kift thy ftones;
Thy ftones with Lime and Haire knitt vp in thee.
Pyra. I fee a voyce; now will I to the chinke,
To Ipy and I can heare my Thisbies face? Thisbie?
Teuf. My Loue thou art, my Loue I thinke.

Pir. Thinke vwhat thou vwall, I am thy Louers grace,
And like Limander am I trufly fyll.

Teuf. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.

Pir. Not Sgufalus to Procrus, was fo true.

Teuf. As Sgufalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pir. O
Enter Lyon and Moone-shine.

Lyon. You Ladies, you (whose gentle harts do fear
The smallest monfrous mouse that creeps o' where)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble heere,
When Lion rough in wilder rage doth roare.

Then know that I, one Smug the Joyner am
A Lion fell, nor else no Lions dam:
For if I should as Lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pittie of my life.

Du. A very gentle beast, and of a good confidence.
Dem. The verie beest at a beest, my Lord, ye ere I faw.
Lyr. This Lion is a verie Fox for his valor.
Du. True, and a Goose for his difcretion.
Dem. Not so my Lord: for his valor cannot carrie his difcretion, and the Fox carryes the Goose.

Du. His difcretion I am sure cannot carrie his valor:
for the Fox carries not the Fox. It is well; leave it to his difcretion, and let vs hearken to the Moone.

Moone. This Lanthorne doth the hornd Moone present.

De. He should have worne the horns on his head.
Du. Hee is no crescent, and his horns are invisuable, within the circumference.

Moone. This lanthorne doth the hornd Moone present:
My selfe, the man i' th Moone doth seeme to be.
Du. This is the greatest error of all the rest; the man should be put into the Lanthorne. How is it els the man i' th Moone?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle.
For you see, it is already in straw.

Du. I am vearie of this Moone; vould he would change.

Du. It appeares by his small light of difcretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courtese, in all reaum, you must stay the time.

Lyr. Proceed Moone.

Moone. All that I have to saie, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moone; I, the man in the Moone; this thorne buth, my thorne buth; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why all these should be in the Lanthornes: for they are in the Moone. But silence, heere comes Thabby.

Enter Thabby.

Thabby. This is old Ninnies tombe: where is my loue?
Lyon. Oh.

Dem. Well roard Lion.

Du. Well run Thabby.

Dut. Well shone Moone.

Truly the Moone shines with a good grace.

Du. Wel mou'r Lion.

Dem. And then came Piramus.

Lyr. And so the Lion vanisht.

Enter Piramus.

Pyr. Sweet Moone, I thank thee for thy funny beames,
I thanke thee Moone, for shining now so bright:
For by thy gracious, golden, glittering beames,
I truft to tale of truth Thabby's light.

But stay: O spight! but marke, poore Knight,
What dreadful dole is heere?

Eyes do you see! How can it be?
O dainty Ducke: O Deere!

Thy mantle good; what feud with blood!

Approch you Furies fell:
O Fate! come, come: Cut thred and thrum,
Quails, cruth, conclude, and quell.

Du. This passion, and the death of a deare friend,
Would go neere to make a man looke sad.

Dut. Befhrew my heart, but I pittie the man.

Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'ft thou Lions frame?
Since Lion wilde hath heere defour'd my deere:
Which is: no, no, which was the fairest Dame
That ill'd, that lou'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheere.
Come teares, confound: Out sword, and wound
The pap of Piramus:
I, that left pap, where heart doth hop;
Thus dye I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead, now am I fled, my soule is in the sky,
Tongue lofe thy light, Moone take thy flight,
Now dye, dye, dye, dye, dye.

Dem. No Die, but an ace for him; for he is but one.
Lyr. Lefte then an ace man. For he is dead, he is no thing.

Du. With the helpe of a Surgeon, he might yet recouer, and proue an Aife.

Dut. How chance Moone-shine is gone before?

Thabby comes back, and finds her Louer.

Enter Thabby.

Duke. She wil finde him by starre-light.
Heere she comes, and her passion ends the play.

Dut. Me thinkes shee should not we a long one for such a Piramus: I hope she will be brest.

Dem. A Moth will turne the ballance, which Piramus which Thabby is the better.

(eyes.

Lyr. She hath spied him already, with those sweete
Dem. And thus shee meanes, videlicet.

This. Asleepe my Loue! What, dead my Doue?

O Piramus arilie:

Speak,Speak. Quite dumble? Dead,dead? A tombe
May couer thy sweete eyes.

These Lilly Lips, this cherry noe,
These yellow Cowlip cheeckes
Are gone, are gone: Louers make mone:
His eyes were greene as Leekes.
O fitters three, come, come to mee,
With hands as pale as Milke,
Lay them in gore, since you haue shore
With theeers, his thred of fike.

Tongue not a word: Come trully sword:
Come blade, my breitt imbrue:

O 3

And
A Midsummer Night's Dreame.

And farewell friends, thus Thisbe ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duk. Moon-shine & Lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. I, and Wall too.

But, No, I assure you, the wall is downe, that parted their Fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to heare a Bergomaske dance, betweene two of our company?

Duk. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Neuer excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if hee that writ it had plaid Piramus, and hung himselfe in Thisbies garter, it would have beene a fine Tragedye; and so it is truely, and very notably dicharg'd. But come, your Burgomaske; let your Epilogue alone.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Louers to bed, 'tis almost Fairy time.

I feare we shall out-sleepe the comming morne,
As much as we this nigh haue ouer-watcht.

This palpable grove play hath well beguil'd
The beaute gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A forensic hold we this solemnity.

In nightly Reuels; and new iollitie.

Exeunt.

Enter Pucke.

Puck. Now the hungry Lyon roars,
And the Wolfe beholds the Moone:
Whilest the heavy ploughman inores,
All with weary taske fore-done.
Now the wafted brands doe glow,
Whil't the fritich-owl, fritiching loud,
Pun the wretch that lies in wo,
In remembrance of a throwd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his spight,
In the Church-way paths to glide.
And we Fairies, that do runne,
By the triple Heacates terme,
From the presence of the Sunne,
Following darkennesse like a dreame,
Now are frolick g; not a Moufe
Shall disurb the hallowed houfe.
I am fent with broome before,
To sweep the dust behinde the doore.

Enter King and Queen of Fairies, with their traine.
Ob. Through the house give glimmering light,

By the dead and drowsie fier,
Euerie Elfe and Fairie spight,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, sing and dance it trippinglie.

Tita. Firt rehearse this song by roate,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairie grace,
Will we finge and bleffe this place.

The Song.

Now untill the breaks of day,
Through this house each Fairy stray.
To the left Bride-bed will wee,
Which by ws shall bleffe be:
And the isfie there create,
Euer shall be fortunate:
So shall all the couples three,
Euer true in loving be:
And the kifs of Natures band,
Shall not in their isfie stand.
Neuer mole,barelip, nor scarre,
Nor marke prodigious, such as are Despised in Nativitie,
Shall open their children be.
With this field dew confrerate,
Every Fairy take his gate,
And each severall chamber bleffe;
Through this Pallace with quiet peace,
Euer shall in safety reft;
And the owner of it bleffe.
Trip away, make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

Robin. If we shadowes have offended,
Thinke but this (and all is mended)
That you have but thumbed here,
While those visions did appear.
And this weake and idle theame,
No more yealding but a dreame,
Centes, doe not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And as I am an honett Pucke,
If we haue vnearned lucke,
Now to scape the Serpents tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Elfe the Pucke a lyar call.
So good night vnto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

FINIS.
The Merchant of Venice.

Actus primus.

Enter Antonio, Salarino, and Salanio.

Antonio.

N'footh I know not why I am so sad,
It weares me; you say it weares you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuffe 'tis made of, whereof it is borne,
I am to learne, and such a Want-wit fadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know my felle.

Sal. Your minde is toisings on the Ocean,
There where your Argoses with portly fale
Like Signior and rich Burgers on the flood,
Or as it were the PAGEANTS of the sea,
Do ouer-peere the petite Traffickers
That courtie to them, do them reuerence
As they fye by them with their woven wings.

Salar. Beleue me sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections, would
Be with my hopes abroad. I shoulde be full
Plucking the grasse to know where fits the winde,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and rodes:
And ev'ry obiect that might make me fere
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.

Sal. My winde cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What barme a winde too great might doe at fea.
I should not fee the fandie houre-claffe runne,
But I should think of shallows, and of flats,
And fee my wealthy Andrew docks in fand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kiffe her burial; should I goe to Church
And fee the holy edifice of ftone,
And not bethinke me ftraight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Veffels fide
Would catte all her fpices on the flame,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my filkes,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To thinke on this, and shall I lacke the thought
That such a thing bechaunc'd would make me sad?
But tell not me, I know Antonio
Is sad to thinke vpon his merchandize.

Antb. Beleue me no, I thanke my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottome turfed,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole effate

Vpon the fortune of this preffent yeere:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad.

Sola. Why then you are in love.

Antb. Fie, fie.

Sola. Not in love neither: then let vs fay you are fad
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as ef fie
For you to laugh and leape, and fay you are merry
Because you are not sad. Now by two-headed Ianna,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore pepe through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrats at a bag-piper.
And other of fuch vinegar aspeft,
That they'll not fheer their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nefor fware the left be laughable.

Enter Baffiano, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Sola. Heere comes Baffiano,
Your moft noble kinfman,

Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Farywell,
We leave you now with better company.

Sola. I would have laid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very deere in my regard.
I take it your owne bufines calls on you,
And you embrace th'occasion to depart.

Sal. Good morrow my good Lords. (when?)

Baff. Good fignoros both, when fhall we laugh fi ay,
You grow exceeding strangre; muft Be fi?

Sal. We'll make our leyfures to attend on yours.

Exeunt Salarino, and Salanio.

Lor. My Lord Baffiano, fince you have found Antonio
We two will leaue you, but at dinner time
I pray you haue in minde where we muft meete.

Baff. I will not faie you.

Grat. You looke not well fignior Antonio,
You have too much repreff vpon the world:
They loofe It that doe buy it with much care,
Beleue me you are marcellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world Gratiano,
A raffe, where euery man muft play a part,
And mine a fad one.

Grati. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughter let old wrinckles come,
And let my Luer rather heate with wine,
Then my heart coole with mortifying grones.
Why should a man wholebloud be warme within,
Sit like his Grandfie, cut in Alablafier?
Sleepe when he wakes? and creep into the Iaundies

By
By being peevish? I tell thee what _Antipholus_, I love thee, and it is my love that speaks: There are a fort of men, whose vilefages Do ease and mantle like a standing pond, And do a wilfull selfe entertaine, With purpose to be drest in an opinion Of wildedome, gravity, profound conceits, As who should say, I am fit for an Oracle, And when I ope my lips, let no dogge bark, O _my Antipholus_, I do know of these That therefore onely are reputed wise, For saying nothing; when I am verie sure If they should speake, would almost dam those cares Which hearing them would call their brothers foolish: Ile tell thee more of this another time. But fille not with this melanchololy bate For this foole Gudgin, this opinion: Come good _Lorenzo_, faryewell a while, Ile end my exhortation after dinner. _Lor._ Well, we will leave you then till dinner time. I must be one of these fame dumber wise men, For _Gratiano_ neuer let’s me speake. _Grat._ Well, keepe me company but two yeares mo, Thou shalt not know the found of shine owne tongue. _Ant._ Far you well, Ile grow a talker for this geare. _Grat._ Thanks is faith, for silence is onely commendable In a neats tongue dri’d, and a maid not vnderable. _Exit._ _Ant._ It is that any thing now. _Baj._ _Gratiano_ speakes an infinite deale of nothing, more then any man in all Venice, his reasons are two graines of wheate hid in two buflws of chaffe you shall finde all day ere you finde them, & when you have them they are not worth the search. _Ant._ _Well_ : tel me now, what _Lady is the fame To whom you fwore a secret Pilgrimage That you to day promis’d to tel me of? _Baj._ ’Tis not vnknovne to you _Antipholus_ How much I have disabled mine eftate, By sometiming dinging a more dwelling port Then my faint meanes would grant continuance: Nor do I now make mone to be abridg’d From such a noble rate, but my cheefe care Is to come fairely off from the great debts Wherein my time someting too prodigall Hath left me gag’d: to you _Antipholus_ I owe the most in money, and in love, And from your love I have a warrantie To vnburthen all my plots and purposes, How to get cleere of all the debts I owe. _Ant._ I pray you good _Bajfiano_ let me know it, And if it fland as you your selfe still do, Within the eye of honour, be affur’d My perle, my perfon, my extremeast meannes _Lye_ all vnlock’d to your occasions. _Baj._ In _my schoole_ days, when I had loft one shaft I flort his fellow of the _selfe same_ flight The _selfe same_ way, with more aduised watch To finde the other forth, and by adventuring both, I oft found both. I vrge this child-hoode profe, Because what followes is pure innocence. I owe you much, and like a wilfull youth, That which I owe is lost: but if you please To flhoote another arrow that _selfe_ way Which you did flhoote the _first_, I do not doubt, As I will watch the _arrow_ : Or to finde both, Or bring your latter hazard backe againe, And thankfully rest debtor for the first. _An._ You know me well, and herein spend but time To winde about my loue with circumspection, And out of doubt you doe more wrong In making question of my vtermost Then if you had made wafe of all I haue: Then doe but say to me what I shoule doe That in your knowledge may by me be done, And I am pret vnto it: therefoure speake. _Bajf._ In _Belmont_ is a Lady richly left, And she is faire, and fainer then that word, Of wondrous vertues, sometimes from her eyes I did receive faire speechlesse messagges: Her name is _Portia_, nothing vndevallued To _Cato’s daughter_, _Brutus Portia_, Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth, For the foure winde blowes in from every coaste Renowned futors, and her funny locks, Hang on her temples like a golden fleec, Which makes her feat of _Belmont_ Cholces ftrond, And many _Ladios_ come in quest of her. O _my Antipholus_, had I but the meanes To hold a riuell place with one of them, I have a minde prefages me fuch thrift, That I should questionleffe be fortunate. _Antb._ Thou knowest till all my fortunes are at fea, Neither haue I money, nor commodity To rafie a prefent furme, therefore goo forth Try what my credit can in _Venice_ doe, That shall be rake out euon to the vtermonf, To furnish thee to _Belmont_ to faire _Portia_. Goe presently enquire, and fo will I Where myne is, and I no question make To hauie it of my truft, or for my fake. _Exit._

_Enter Portia with her waiting woman Nerissa._

_Portia._ By my troth _Nerissa_, my little body is a wea-rie of this great world. _Ner._ You would be sweet Madam, if your milieres were in the fame abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for ought I fee, they are as fickle that furfet with too much, as they that flour with nothing; it is no fmal happineffe therefore to bee feated in the meanes, superfluifte comes fooner by white haires, but competencie liues longer. _Portia._ Good sentences, and well pronounce’d. _Ner._ They would be better if well followed. _Portia._ If doe were as easie as to know what were good to doe, _Chappels_ had beene _Churches_, and poore mens cottages _Princes Pallaces_; it is a good Duiue that follows his owne instructions; I can eaiser teach twentie what were good to bee done, then be one of the twen-tie to follow mine owne teaching: the braine may de-uide lawes for the blood, but a hot temper leapes ore a colde decree, such a hare is madneffe the youth, to skip ore the mefhes of good counsale the cripple; but this reafon is not in fashion to choose me a husband: _O mee_, the word choofe, I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuie whom I dislike, fo is the wil of a liuing daugh-ter curmill by the will of a dead father it is not hard _Ner-issa_, that I cannot choose one, nor refuie none. _Ner._ Your father was auer vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations, therefore the lot-terie that he had deuised in thee three cheeffes of gold, filuer, and lead, whereof who chooef his meaning, chooefes chooses you, wilt no doubt never be chidden by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly lose: but what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these Princes futers that are already come?

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description leuell at my affection.

Ner. First there is the Neapolitan Prince.

Por. I that's a colt indeedes, for he doth nothing but talk of his horfe, and hee makes it a great appropration to his owne good parts that he can shoo him himselfe: I am much afraid my Ladie his mother plaid false with a Smyth.

Ner. Than is there the Countie Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but browne (as who should say, and you will not have me, choose: he heares merrie tales and fmites not, I feare hee will proue the weeping Phylophorer when he grows old, being to full of vn-mannerly fainefle in his youth.) I had rather to be marrieed to a deadhs head with a bone in his mouth, then to either of thefe: God defend me from thefe two.

Ner. How fay you by the French Lord, Mounfier Le Boune?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him passe for a man, in truth I know it is a finne to be a mockcr, but he, why he hath a horfe better then the Neapolitans, a better bad habite of frowning then the Count Palentine, he is every man in no man, if a Traffell fong, he fkae a caaping, he will fence with his owne shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twentie husbands: if hee would defpife me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madneffe, I fhoulde never require him.

Ner. What fay you then to Fauconbridge, the yong Baron of England?

Por. You know I fay nothing to him, for hee vnderstands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court & feware that I have a poore penny-worth in the Engliſh: hee is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converte with a dumbe fhow? how odly he is fuitd, I think he bought his doublet in Italie, his round hole in France, his bonnet in Germanie, and his behauour every where.

Ner. What thinke you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charifte in him, for he borrowed a boxe of the care of the Engliſhman, and fwere he would pay him againe when hee was able: I think the Frenchman became his furette, and feeld vnder for another.

Ner. How like you the yong Germanes, the Duke of Saxons Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when hee is fober, and most vildely in the afternoone when hee is drunkne: when he is beff, he is a little worfe then a man, and when he is worft, he is little better then a beuff: and the worft fall that euer fell, I hope I shall make shift to goo without him.

Ner. If he should offer to chooſe, and chooſe the right Casket, you should refuse to performe your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore for feare of the worft, I pray thee fet a deepe glaffe of Reinfh-wine on the contrary Casket, for if the diuell be within, and that temptation without, I know he will chooſe it. I will doe any thing Nerijfa ere I will be married to a fponge.

Ner. You neede not feare Lady the having any of these Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeede to returne to their home, and to trouble you with no more fuite, vntelle you may be won by fome other fort then your Fathers impoftition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I lie to be as olde as Sibilla, I will dye as chaffe as Dianas vntelle I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcelf of woowers are fo reaonable, for there is not one among them but I doate on his verie abfence: and I with them a faire departure.

Por. Doe you not remember Ladie in your Fathers time, a Venecian, a Scholler and a Soullior that came hithe in company of the Marquaffe of Mountferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Baffanio, as I thinke, so was hee call'd.

Ner. True Madam, hee of all the men that euer my fouleif eyes look'd vpon, was the beft deferving a faire Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Serviingman.

Ser. The foure Strangers feake you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift, the Prince of Morace, who brings word the Prince his Maifeer will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with fo good heart as I can bid the other fourre favevell, I should be glad of his approch: if he haue the condition of a Saint, and the complektion of a diuell, I had rather hee fhould thrive me then wiuze me. Come Nerijfa, firra go before; whiles wee fhit the gate vpon one woore, another knocks at the doore.

Ner. Enter Baffanio with Skylocke the Iew.

Sky. Three thoufand ducates, well.

Baff. I ft, for three months.

Sky. For three months, well.

Baff. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Sky. Antonio shall become bound, well.

Baff. May you fceed me? Will you pleafure me? Shall I know your anfwere.

Sky. Three thoufand ducates for three months, and Antonio bound.

Baff. Your anfwere to that.

Sky. Antonio is a good man.

Baff. Haue you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Sky. Ho no, no, no, no: my meaning in faying he is a good man, is to haue you vnderfand me that he is euffcient, yet his meanes are in fuppofition: he hath an Argoff bound to Tripolis, anothe to the Indies, I vnderfand moreover vpon the Ryan, he hath a third at Mexi-co, a fourth for England, and other venures hee hath ftquardred abroad, but fhips are but boords, Saylers but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water theeues, and land theeues, I meane Pyrats, and then there is the perill of waters, windes, and rocks: the man is nothifstanding fufficient, three thoufand ducates, I think I may take his bond.

Baff. Be affured you may.

Iew. I
Irew. I will be assured I may: and that I may be assured, I will bethinke mee, may I speake with Antonio? Baff. If it pleafe you to dine with vs.

Irew. Yes, to reme porke, to eate of the habitation which your Prophet the Nazarite conjured the diuell into: I will buy with you, fell with you, talke with you, walke with you, and so following: but I will not eate with you, drinke with you, nor pray with you. What newes on the Ryalta, who is he comes here?

Enter Antonio.

Baff. This is signior Antonio.

Irew. How like a flattering publican he lookes. I hate him for he is a Christian: But more, for that in low simplicitie He lends out money gratis, and brings downe The rate of vrice here with vs in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feeke fat the ancient bulge I bear him. He hates our sacred Nation, and he rashly Entraile where Merchants most doe congregate On me, my bargains, and my well-worne thrift, Which he cals interrife: Curfed be my Trybe If I forgive him.

Baff. Shylock, doe you heare. Shy. I am debating of my present flore, And by the neere gefle of my memorie I cannot infinitely calle vp the groffe Of full three thousand ducats - what of that? Tuball a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe Will furnish me but soft, how many months Do you defire? Reft you faire good signior, Your worship was the laft man in our mouths.

Ant. Shylocke, albeit I neither lend nor borrow By taking, nor by giving of excesse, Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I breake a cutome: is he yet poiffeft How much he would? Shy. I, I, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months. Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me fo. Well then, your bond: and let me fee, but heare you, Me thoughts you faid, you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage.

Ant. I doe neuer vfe it. Shy. When Laban graz'd his Uncle Labans sheepe, This Iacob from our holy Abram was (As his wife mother wrought in his behalfe) The third poiffeiter: I he was the third.

Ant. And what of him, did he take interrife? Shy. No, not take interrife, not as you would say Directly interrife, marke what Iacob did, When Laban and himselfe were compremeys'd That all the eannelings which were streake and pied Should fall as Iacobi hier, the Ewes being rancke, In end of Autumne turned to the Rammes, And where the worke of generation was Betweene these woollen breeders in the aether, The skilfull shepheard pil'd me certaine wands, And in the dooing of the deede of kinde, He flueke them vp before the fulforme Ewes, Who then conceasing, did in eating time Fall party-colour'd lambs, and thole were Iacobs. This was a way to thrise, and he was biet:

And thirth is blessing if men steale it not.

Ant. This is a ventur fir that Iacob Ieru'd for, A thing not in his power to bring to paffe, But Iwayd' and fisheon'd by the hand of heavne. Was this infected to make interrife good? Or is your gold and fluer Ewes and Rams? Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breede as saft, But note me signior.

Ant. Marke you this Baffianis, The diuell can cite Scripture for his purpose, An euil foule producinge holy witnisse, Is like a villain with a smiling cheecke, A goodly apple rotten at the heart. O what a goodly outside falsehood hath. Shy. Three thousand ducats, tis a good round sun. Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

Ant. Well Shylocke, shall we be beholding to you? Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft In the Ryalta you have rated me About my monies and my vances: Still have I borne it with a patient shrug, (For suffrance is the badge of all our Tribe.) You call me misbeleeuer, cut-throat, dog, And spet upon my Iewish gaberdine, And all for vfe of that which is mine owne. Well then, it now appears you neede my helpe: Go to then, you come to me, and you say, Shylocke, we would have moneyes, you say fo: You that did viode your rume upon my bead, And foote me as you spurn'd a stranger courte Over your threshold, moneyes is you ofete. What should I say to you? Should I not say, Hath a dog money? Is it possible A curve should lend three thousand ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key With bated breath, and whifpring humbleneffe, Say this: Faire sir, you spet on me on Wednesday laft; You spurn'd me such a day; another time You caied me dog: and for thefe curtesies Ile lend you thus much moneyes.

Ant. I am as like to call thee fo againe, To spet on thee againe, to spurne thee too. If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not As to thy friends, when did friendship take A breed of barray mettall of his friend? But lend it rather to thine enemie, Who if he breake, thou maiflt with better face Exact the penalties. Shy. Why looke you how you foarme, I would be friends with you, and haue your loue, Forget the shame that you have stainde me with, Suppleie your preynt wants, and take no doite Of vince for my moneyes, and youle not heare me, This is kinde I offer.

Baff. This were kindnesse. Shy. This kindnesse will I showe, Goe with me to a Notarie, feale me there Your fingle bond, and in a merrie sport If you repair me not on such a day, In such a place, such fum or fums as are Expreft in the condition, let the forfeiture Be nominated for an equall pound Of your faire fleth, to be cut off and taken In what part of your bodie it pleafeth me.

Ant. Content infaith, Ile feale to such a bond, And say there is much kindnesse in the Iew.
Exit. My Cornets. This If. Is. If. As. Who of. If. Of. This bond expires, I do expect returne. Of thrice three times the valew of this bond. Syl. O father Abram, what these Christians are, Whole owne hard dealings teach them suspicion. The thoughts of others: Praise you tell me this, If he should breake his daie, what should I gaine By the exaction of the forfeiture? A pound of mans flesh taken from a man, Is not to effimable, profitable neither As flesh of Muttons, Beeves, or Gostes, I say To buy his favour, I extend this friendship, If he will take it, so if not adiew, And for my love I praire you wrong me not. Ant. Ye's Skythes, I will faire vnto this bond. Syl. Then meet me forthwith with the Notaries, Glue him direction for this merrie bond, And I will goe and purs the ducats frilate. See to my house left in the fearefull gard Von an vrthriftie knaue: and pretentie Ile be with you. Exit. Ant. Hee the gentle Jew. This Hebrew will turne Chriflian, he grows kinde. Baff. I like not faire teemes, and a villains minde. Ant. Come on, in this there can be no difmaie, My Shippes come home a mouth before the daie. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Morochus a tawnie Moore all in white, and three or foure followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerifia, and their traine. Fb. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my composition, The shadowed liuerie of the burnish'd fonne, To whom I am a neighbour, and neere bred. Bring me the fairest creature Northward borne, Where Phæbus fire scareth the vicles, And let vs make incifion for your love, To prove whose blood is reddeffe, his or mine. I tell thee Ladie this aspect of mine Hath feared the valliant, (by my love I sweare) The beft regarded Virgins of our Cyme. Hau'e lou'd it to: I would not change this hue, Except to feele your thoughts my gentle Queene. Per. In tearmes of choife I am not faile led By nice direction of a maidens eies: Besides, the lottie of my delitienie Bars me the right of voluntarie choosing: But if my Father had not scanteed me, And hedg'd me by his wit to yeeld me felfe His wife, who wins me by that meanes I told you, Your felle (renowned Prince) than foode as faire As any commer I haue look'd on yet For I affeccion. Mor. Even for that I thank you, Therefore I pray you leade me to the Caskets To trie my fortune: By this Symtare

That flew the Sophie, and a Perifhan Prince That won three fields of Sultan Solymon, I would ore-flare the sternerft eies that looke: Out-braue the heart moft doring on the earth: Plucke the yong fucking Cubes from the fee Beare, Yea, mocke the Lion when he rores for pray To win the Ladie. But alas, the while If Hercules and Lyonare plaine at dice Which is the better man, the greater throw May turne by fortune from the weaker hand: So is Alcides beaten by his rage, And so may I, blinde fortune leading me Miffe that which one vnworthier may attaine, And die with grieuing.

Port. You must take your chance, And either not attempt to choose at all, Or sweare before you choose, if you choose wrong Neuer to speake to Ladie afterward In way of marriage, therefore be aduis'd. Mor. Nor will not, come bring me vnto my chance. Per. First forward to the temple, after dinner Your hazard shall be made. Mor. Good fortune then, Cornets. To make me bleft or curfed among men. Exeunt.

Enter the Cleweone alone.

Clo. Certainly, my confience will ferue me to run from this Iew my Maitfer: the fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me,saying to me, Jobbe, Launeclet Jobbe, good Launeclet, or good Jobbe, or good Launeclet Jobbe, vie your legs, take the start, run awaie: my confience faies no; take heed honest Launeclet, take heed honest Jobbe, or as afoe-ed honest Launeclet Jobbe, doe not runne, fororne running with thy heeles; well, the moft coragious fiend bids me pakke, flat faies the fiend, away faies the fiend, for the heauens roufe vp a braue minde faies the fiend, and run; well, my confience hanging about the necke of my heart, faies verie wifely to me: my honest friend Launeclet, being an honest mans fonne, or rather an honest womans fonne, for indeede my Father did something smack, something grow low too: he had a kinde of tale: well, my confience faies Launeclet bouge not, bouge faies the fiend, bouge not faies my confience, confiance faies I you confaile well, fiend faies I you confaile well, to be rul'd by my confience I should faie with the Iew my Maitfer,(who God bleffe the marke)is a kinde of diuell: and to run away from the Iew I should be ruled by the fiend, who faying your reverence is the diuell himfelfe: certainly the Iew is the verie diuell incarnacion, and in my confience, my confience is a kinde of hard conffience, to offer to confaile me to fawy with the Iew; the fiend giues the more friendly confaile: I will runne fiend, my heeles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbe with a Bafket.

Gob. Maitfer yong-man, you I praire you, which is the waie to Maitfer Iewes? Lan. O heauens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then hand-blinde, high gruel blinde,knows me not, I will trie confusions with him. Gob. Maitfer yong Gentilmen, I praire you which is the waie to Maitfer Iewes.

Lawn. Turne vpon your right hand at the next turn-
The Merchant of Venice.

nig, but at the next turning of all on your left; marrie at the verie next turning, turne of no hand, but turn down indirectie to the Jews house.

Geb. Be Gods fontes 'twill be a hard waie to hit, can you tell me whether one Launcelot that dwells with him, dwell with him or no.

Lan. Talk ye of yong Master Launcelot, marke me now, will I raife the waters; talke you of yong Master Launcelot?

Geb. No Master sir, but a poore mans sonne, his Father though I sayt's an honnelt exceeding poore man, and God be thanked well to blame.

Lan. Well, let his Father be what a will, wee talke of yong Master Launcelot.

Geb. Your worship's friend and Launcelot.

Lan. But I praiye you ergo old man, ergo I befeech you, talke you of yong Master Launcelot.

Geb. Of Launcelot, ant please your maitership.

Lan. Ergo Master Launcelot, talke not of maiter Lance- let Father, for the yong gentleman according to fates and definities, and such oddly fayings, the filters three, & fuch branches of learning, is indeede deceafed, or as you would faie in plaine tearmes, gone to heauen.

Geb. Marrie God forbid, the boy was the verie staffe of my age, my verie prop.

Lan. Do I look like a cudgel or a howell-poft, a staffe or a prop; doe you know me Father.

Geb. Alacke the day, I know you not yong Gentle- man, but I praiye you tell me, is my yong God rest his foule alive or dead.

Lan. Doe you not know me Father.

Geb. Alacke sir I am fand blinde, I know you not.

Lan. Nay, indeepe if you had your eies you might faile of the knowing me: it is a wife Father that knowes his owne child. Weel, old man, I will tell you newes of your fon, give me your bleffing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans fonne may, but in the end truth will out.

Geb. Praiye you fir ftrand vp, I am sure you are not Lancet my boy.

Lan. Praiye you let's haue no more fooling about it, but gie me your bleffing: I am Lancet your boy that was, your fonne that is, your childe that shall be.

Geb. I cannot thiŋke you are my fonne.

Lan. I know not what I shal thiŋke of that; but I am Lancet the Iewes man, and I am sure Margerie your wife is my mother.

Geb. Her name is Margerie indeepe, Ile be sborne if thou be Lancet, thou art mine owne flesh and blood: Lord worlipt might he be, what a beart haft thou got; thou haft got more haire on thy chin, then Dobbin my philibobs has on his talle.

Lan. It should seeme then that Dobbins talle grows backward. I am sure he had more haire of his talle then I haue of my face when I loft faw him.

Geb. Lord how art thou chang'd: how dooth thou and thy Master agree, I haue brought him a prefect; how gree you now?

Lan. Well, well, but for mine owne part, as I haue fet vp my reft to run awaie, so I will not reft till I haue run some ground; my Maidier's a verie Iew, give him a pre- fent, gie him a halter, I am famihf in his service. You may tell euuerie finger I haue with my rifs: Father I am glad you are come, gie me your present to one Maister Baffiano, who indeede gies rare new Liiories, if I ferue not him, I will run as far as God has anie ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Jew if I ferue the Iew anie longer.

Enter Baffiano with a follower or two.

Baff. You may doe fo, but let it be so hafted that supper be readie at the fairest by five of the clocke; see thefe Letters deliuered, put the Liiurities to mak- ing, and deferve Gratiano to come anone to my lodg- ing.

Lan. To him Father.

Geb. God bleffe your worship.

Baff. Gramercie, would it thou ought with me.

Geb. Here's my fonne fir, a poore boy.

Lan. Not a poore boy fir, but the rich Iewes man that would fir as my Father shal speffe.

Geb. He hath a great infection fir, as one would fay to ferue.

Lan. Indeede the short and the long is, I ferue the Iew, and haue a defire as my Father shal speffe.

Geb. His Maifter and he(faying your worliips reue- rence) are scarce ceterofins.

Lan. To be briefe, the verie truth is, that the Iew hauling done me wrong, doth caufe me as my Father bein- ing I hope an old man shall frutifie vnto you.

Geb. I haue here a dift of Doues that I would beftow vpon your worship, and my fute is.

Lan. In verie briefe, the fuite is impertinent to my felfe, as your worship shal know by this honeft old man, and though I fay it, though old man, yet poore man my Father.

Baff. One speake for both, what would you?

Lan. Serue you fir.

Geb. That is the verie defect of the matter fir.

Baff. I know thee well, thou haft obtaiedn't fuite.

Shylocke thy Maifter spoke with me this day, and hath preferr'd thee, if it be proferrment.

To leave a rich Iewes fervice, to become

The follower of fo poore a Gentleman.

Clo. The old prouerbe is verie well parted betweene my Maifter Shylocke and you fir, you haue the grace of God fir, and he hath enough.

Baff. Thou fpokeft it well; goe Father with thy Son, Take leave of thy old Maifter, and enquire

My lodging out, gie him a Liierie

More garded then his fellows: fee it done.

Clo. Father in, I cannot get a fervice, no, I haue nec- e a tongue in my head, well: if anie man in Iitalie haue a faireer table which doth offer to fware upon a booke, I shal haue good fortune; goo too, here's a fimple line of life, here's a small tripe of wifes, alas, fifteen wifes is nothing, a leuen widdowes and nine maides is a fimple comming in for one man, and then to scape drowning thricke, and to be in perill of my life with the edge of a featherbed, are fimple fcape: well, if Fortune be a woman, the's a good wench for this gree: Father come, Ile take my leaue of the Iew in the twinkling.

Exit Clorene.

Baff. I praiye thee good Leonardo thiŋke on this,

These things being bought and orderly betowe

Returne in hafe, for I doe feate to night

My beft esteemed acquaintance, hie thee goe.

Leon. My beft endeavors shall be done herein. Exiit. Le.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Maifter.

Leon. Yonder.

168
Exit.

Lan. Nay, we will flinke away in supper time,
Difguife vs at my lodging, and returne all in an houre.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Sal. We have not spoke vs yet of Torch-bearers.

Sl. 'Tis vile vnleague it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my minde not vnnderooke.

Lor. 'Tis now but foure of clocke, we haue two hours
To furnishe vs; friend Lancelot what's the newes.

Enter Lancelot with a Letter.

Lan. And so shall please you to break vp this, shall it seeme to signifie.

Lor. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a faire hand
And whiter then the paper it writ on,
I the faire hand that writ.

Gra. Loue newes in faith.

Lan. By your leave sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou?

Lan. Marry sir to bid my old Mafter the Iew to sup to night with my new Mafter the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Ieffica.
I will not faile her, speake it privately:
Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Maske to night;
I am prouided of a Torch-bearer.

Exit.

Sal. I marry, Ile be gone about it strait.

Sal. And so will I.

Lor. Meete me and Gratiano at Gratianos lodging
Some houre hence.

Sal. 'Tis good we do so.

Exit.

Gra. Was not that Letter from faire Ieffica?

Lor. I must needs tell thee all, I have directed
How I shall take her from her Fathers houfe,
What gold and iewels she is furnishe with,
What Pages suits the hath in readinesse:
If ere the Iew her Father come to heauen,
It will be for his gentle daughters fake;
And neuer dare misfortune croffe her foote,

Valeffe the doe it vnder this excuse,

That she is issue to a faithlesse Iew:

Come goe with me, pervse this as thou goest,
Faire Ieffica shall be my Torch-bearer.

Exit.

Enter Iew, and bid man that was the Clowne.

Iew. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Skylocks and Baffianie;
What Ieffica, thou shalt not garmandize
As thou hast done with me: what Ieffica?
And deepe, and sorne, and rend apparrell out.

Why Ieffica I say.

Clo. Why Ieffica.

Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me,
I could doe nothing without bidding.

Enter Ieffica.

Ief. Call you? what is your will?
Sgy. I am bid forth to suppe Ieffica,
There are my Keyes: but wherefore should I goe?
I am not bid for loue, they flatttrr me,
But yet Ile goe in hate, to feeede vpon
The prodigall Christian. Ieffica my girle,
Looke to my houfe, I am right loath to goe,
There is some ill a bruining towards my rett,
For I did dreame of money bags to night.

Clo. I befeech you sir goe, my yong Mafter
Doth expect your reproach.

Sgy. So doe I his.

Clo. And they have conspiret together, I will not say you shall fee a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my nofe fell a bleeding on blacke monday
P falf.
The Merchant of Venice.

Here dwells my father Lew. Hoa, who's within?

Iffica about.

Iff. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit Ie I were that I do know your tongue.
Lor. Lorenzo, and thy Loue.
Iff. Lorenzo certaine, and my loue indeed,
For whom loue I am much? and now who knowes
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
Lor. Heauen and thy thoughts are witnesses thou art.
Iff. Heere, catch this casket, it is worth the paines,
I am glad 'tis night, you do not looke on me,
For I am much aphas'd of my exchange:
But loue is blinde, and louers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit,
For if they could, Cupid himselfe would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.
Lor. Defend, for you must be my torch-bearer.
Iff. What, must I hold a Candle to my thames?
They in themselues goodfooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discouery Loue,
And I should be obsecur'd,
Lor. So you are sweet,
Even in the lonely garnish of a boy: but come at once,
For the close night doth play the run-away,
And we are staid for at Baffanie's feast.
Iff. I will make fast the doores and guild my selfe
With some more ducats, and be with you fraught.
Gra. Now by my hood, a gentle, and no Jew.
Lor. Behire me but I loue her heartily.
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And faire she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath prov'd her felse:
And therefore like her felse, wife, faire, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant foule.

Enter Iffica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for vs stay.

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Antonio?
Ant. Fe, fe, Gratiano, where are all the rest?
'Tis nine a clocke, our friends all stay for you,
No maske to night, the winde is come about,
Baffanie prefently will goe aboard,
I have lent twenty out to seake for you.
Gra. I am glad on't, I defire no more delight
Then to be vnder falle, and gone to night.

Enter Portia with Morroco, and both their traines.

Por. Goe, draw aside the curtaines, and discouer
The feuerall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choyse.
Mor. The first of gold, who this inscriptions beares,
Who chooseth me, shall gaine what men desire.
The second fliuer, which this promishe carrieth,
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he defferes.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooseth me, must glue and hazard all he hath.
How shall I know if I doe chooze the right?
Por. The
How shall I know if I do choose the right.

Por. The one of them contains my picture Prince,
If you choose that, then I am yours withall.

Mor. Some must direct my judgement, let me see,
I will furrow the inscriptions, backe againe:
What fayes this leaden casket?

Who chooeth me, must glue and hazard all he hath.

Muft glue, for what? for lead, hazard for lead?

This casket threatens men that hazard all

Doe it in hope of faire advantages:
A golden minde floopes not to showes of droffe,
It then nor glue nor hazard ought for lead.

What fayes the Silver with her virgin hue?

Who chooeth me, shall get as much as he defueres.
As much as he defueres; paufe there Morocco,
And whereby value with an euen hand,
If thou beest rated by thy estimation
Thou dost defuerse enough, and yet enough.
May not extend fo farre as to the Ladie:
And yet to be afraid of my deferuing,
Were but a weake disabling of my selfe.

As much as I defuer, why that's the Lady.
I doe in birth defuerse her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding;
But more then thefe, in loue I doe defuerse.
What if I ftray'd no farther, but chose here?

Let's see more this faying graud in gold.

Who chooeth me shall gaine what many men defire:
Why that's the Lady, all the world defires her:
From the four corners of the earth they come
To kifte this throne, this mortall breathing Saint.

The Hircanian deferts, and the vafte wildes
Of wide Arabia are as throughfares now
For Princes to come view faire Portia.

The waterie Kingdome, whose ambitious head
Spets in the face of heauen, is no barren
To stop the forraigne spirits, but they come
As ore a brooke to fee faire Portia.

One of thefe three contains her heauenly picture.
It's like that Lead contains her?twere damnation
To thinke fo base a thought, it were too grofe
To rib her facecloth in the obscure graue:
Or shal I thinke in Silver she's immur'd
Being ten times vndervalued to tride gold;
O finfull thought, never fo rich a Lem
Was fet in worfe then gold! They have in England
A coyne that bears the figure of an Angell
Stampt in gold, but that's inculp't vpon:
But here an Angell in a golden bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the key:
Here doe I choo'e, and thrive I as I may.

Por. There take it Prince, and if my forme yeare there
Then I am yours.

Mor. O hell! what have we here,a carrion death,
Within whose emplie eye there is a written scroute;
Ile reade the writing.

All that glifters is not gold,
Often base you heard that told
Many a man his life bath fold
But my oue fate I know:
Gilded timber doe wormes infold:
Had you beene as wife as bold,
Tong in tongues, in judgement old,
Your answere had not beene infold;
Farsyowell,your suite is cold,

Mor. Cold indeede, and labour loft,
Then farewell heare, and welcome froft:
Peria adew, I have too grieud a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus loosers part.

Por. A gentle riddance: draw the curtaines, go:
Let all of his complexion choo'e me fo.

Enter Salario and Solanio.

Fl. Cornets.

Sal. Why man I saw Baffiano vnder wayle,
With him is Grattiano gone along;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.

Sol. The villain Iew with outcries raifd the Duke.
Who went with him to search Baffiano ship.

Sal. He comes too late, the ship was vnderfaile;
But there the Duke was gien to vnderfland
That in a Gondilo were feene together
Lorenzo and his amorous Ificia.

Befides, Antonio certified the Duke
They were not with Bassiano in his ship.

Sal. I never heard a passion fo confud,
So strange,outrarious, and fo variable,
As the dogge Iew did vitter in the streets;
My daughter, O my daughter, O my daughter,
Fled with a Christian, O my Christian ducats!

Ifius the law, my ducats, and my daughter;
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, that doth from me, by my daughter,
And jewels, two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stone by my daughter: Ifius, finde the girl,
She hath the stones vpon her, and the ducats.

Sal. Why all the boyes in Venice follow him,
Crying his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.

Sal. Let good Antonio looke he keepe his day
Or he shall pay for this.

Sal. Marry well remembered,
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part
The French and English, there miscaried
A vessell of our country richly fraught:
I thought vpon Antonio, when he told me,
And wifht in silence that it were not his.

Sal. Yo were beft to tell Antonio what you heare.
Yet doe not fuddainly, for it may grieue him.

Sal. A kinder Gentleman treads not the earth,
I saw Bassiano and Antonio part,
Bassiano told him he would make some speede
Of his returne: he anfwered, doe not fo,
Slubber not buifie for my fake Bassiano,
But fay the very rising of the time,
And for the Ieues bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your minde of loue:
Be merry, and impoy your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and fuch faire offents of loue
As shall conveniently become you there;
And even there his eye being big with teares,
Turning his face, he put his hand behinde him,
And with affection wondrous fencible
He wrung Bassiano hand, and fo they parted.

Sal. I thinke he onely loues the world for him,
I pray thee let us goe and finde him out
And quicke en his embraced heauenife
With some delite or other.

Sal. Doe we fo.

Enter Nerissa and a Scrutine.

Ner. Quick! quick! I pray thee, draw the curtain strait,

The Merchant of Venice. 171
The Prince of Arragon hath tane his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his trains, and Portia.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choose that wherein I contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptiall rights be solemniz'd:
But if thou faile, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoyed by oath to observre three things:
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I faile
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maide in way of marriage:
Lastly, if I do faile in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard for my worthlesse felie.

Ar. And so haue I addrest me, fortune now
To my hearts hope: gold, filuer, and base lead.
Who chooseth me shall glue and hazard all he hath.
You shall looke fairer ere I glue or hazard.
What failest the golden chest, ha, let me fee:
Who chooseth me, shall gaine what many men defire:
What many men defire, that many may be meant
By the foole multitude that choose by throw,
Not learning more then the fond eye doth teach,
Which pries not to th'interior, but like the Martlet.
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Euen in the force and rode of casualtie.
I will not choose what many men defire,
Because I will not lumpe with common spirits,
And ranke me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee thou Siluer treasure house,
Tell me once more, what title thou dost beare;
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he defers;
And well paid too; for who shall goe about
To cofen Fortune, and be honourable.
Without the flame of merrit, let none presume
To weare an undervered dignitie:
O that effates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deri'd corruptly, and that cleare honour
Were purchase by the merrit of the wearer;
How many then should couer that fland bare?
How many be commanded that command?
How much low pleasantrie would then be gleaned
From the true feede of honor? And how much honor
Pickt from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new varnished: Well, but to my choice.
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he defers.
I will assume defert; give me a key for this,
And instantly unloake my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you finde there.
Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a schedule, I will read it:
How much unlike art thou to Portia?
How much unlike my hopes and my deserings?
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he defers.
Did I deferue no more then a foole head,
Is that my prize, are my deferts no better?
Ar. To offend and judge are diffcunt offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

Seaven times tried that judement is,
That did never choose ame,
Some there be that foadowes kiffe,
Such haue but a foadowes bliffe:
There be fooleys alio Iweu
Siluer'd one, and so was this:
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone, you are ipe.

Ar. Still more foole I shall appear
By the time I linger here,
With one fooleys head I came to woo,
But I goe away with two.
Sweet adue, Ile keepe my oath,
Patiently to bear my wrooth.

Por. Thys hath the candie fing'd the moath:
O thefe deliberate fooles when they doe choose,
They haue the wisdome by their wit to looke.

Ner. The ancient faying is no herefie,
Hanging and wiuing goes by delitine.

Por. Come draw the curtain Nerissa.

Enter Messengers.

Mef. Where is my Lady?

Por. Here, what would my Lord?

Mef. Madam, there is a lighted at your gate
A yong Venetian, one that comes before
To signifie th'approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth fensible regreets;
To wit (besides commendes and curteous breath)
Gifts of rich value: yet I haue not seene
So likely an Embassador of loute.
A day in April neuer came fo frete
To shew how cooffly Sommer was at hand,
As this fore-fpurrer comes before his Lord.

Por. No more I pray thee, I am halfe a-feard
Thou wilt lay anone he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him:
Come, come Nerissa, for I long to fee
Quickke Capida Poa, that comes fo mannerely.

Ner. Baffiano Lord, loove if they will it be.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Saliatio and Salarino.

Sal. Now, what newes on the Ryalto?

Sal. Why yet it liues there vncheckt, that Antonio Hath a flip of rich lading wrackt on the narrow seas; the Goodwins I thinkke they call the place, a very dangerous
Flat, and fatal, where the carackets of many a tall ship, ly
Buried, as they say, if my golffips report be an honett
Woman of her word.

Sal. I should the were as lying a golffip in that, as ever
Knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours beleue the wept
For the death of a third husband: but it is true, without Any flips of prolixity, or crossing the plaine high-way of talk, that the good Antonio, the honett Antonius; that I had a title good enough to keepe his name company!
Sal. Come, the full stop.

Sal. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath loft
A flip.
The Merchant of Venice.

Sal. I would it might prove the end of his looses.

Sal. Let me, Sir. Amen betimes, leaff the diuell crosse my prayer, & here he cometh in the likenes of a Jew, how now Shylocks, what newes among the Merchants?

Enter Shylock.

Shy. You knew none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sal. That’s certain, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings she flew with.

Sal. And Shylocks for his own part knew the bird was fledg, and then it is the complexion of them al to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damm’d for it.

Sal. That’s certain, if the diuell may be her ludge.

Shy. My owne flesh and blood to rebell.

Sal. Out vpon it old carrion, rebelts it at these yeeres.

Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Sal. There is more difference betweene thy flesh and hers, then betweene Let and Luorie, more betweene your bloods, then there is betweene red wine and rennill: for tell vs, doe you heare whether Antonio have had nie loffe at fea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce shew his head on the Ryalto, a beggar that was vfd to come so smug vpon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Vfurter, let him looke to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian curtice, let him looke to his bond.

Sal. Why I am sure if he forfeite, thou wilt not take his flesh, what’s that good for?

Shy. To baite fih withall, if it will feede nothing else, it will feede my revengue; he hath defaced me, and hindred me halfe a million, laught at my lofes, mockt at my gaines, scorned my Nation, thwarted my bargaines, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies, and what’s the reafon? I am a Jew: Hatth not a Jew eyes? hatth not a Jew hands, organs, dementions, fences, affections, passions, fed with the same foode, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same medicines, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Summer as a Christian is: if you prick vs doe we not bleed? if you tickle vs, doe we not laugh? if you poison vs doe we not die? and if you wrong vs shall we not revengue? if we are like you in the reft, we will revenge you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility, revengue? If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example, why revengue? The vilianie you teach me I will execute, and it shall goe hard but I will better the infruction.

Enter a man from Anthonio.

Gentlemen, my mafter Anthonio is at his houfe, and defires to speake with you both.

Sal. We have beene vp and downe to seeke him.

Enter Tuball.

Sal. Here comes another of the Tribe, a third cannot be matcht, vnleffe the diuell himselfe turne Jew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tuball, what newes from Genowaw haft thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did heare of her, but cannot finde her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, a diamond gone colt me two thousand ducats in Franscford, the curfe never fell vpon our Nation till now, I never felt it till now, two thousand ducats in that, and other precious, preclous jewel: I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewel in her care! would the be heart at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin: no newes of them, why so? and I know not how much is spent in the search: why thou loste vpon loste, the thefe gone with fo much, and so much to finde the thefe, and no satisfacci, no renue, nor no ill lucke flirring but what lights a my shoulnders, no sigthes but a my breathing, no tears but a my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill lucke too, Anthonio as I heard in Genova?

Tub. Hath an Argollie caft away comming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thanke God, I thanke God, is it true, is it true?

Tub. I spake with some of the Saylers that escaped the wracke.

Shy. I thanke thee good Tuball, good newes, good newes: ha, ha, here in Genova.

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genowa, as I heard, one night fourefcor ducats.

Shy. Thou flietk a dagger in me, I shall never fee my gold againe, fourefcore ducats at a fitting, fourefcor ducats.

Tub. There came divers of Anthonios creditors in my company to Venice, that fware hee cannot choose but breake.

Shy. I am very glad of it, Ile plague him, Ile torture him, I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them shewed me a ring that hee had of your daughter for a Monkie.

Shy. Out vpon her, thou tortureft me Tuball, it was my Turkies, I had it of Leab when I was a Batcheler: I would not haue given it for a wildenfeal of Monikes.

Tub. But Anthonio is certainly vndone.

Shy. Nay, that’s true, that’s very true, goe Tuball, see me an Officer, bespeak him a forthright before, I will haue the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he out of Venise, I can make what merchandise I will: goe Tuball, and meete us at our Sinagoque, goe good Tuball, at our Sinagoque Tuball.

Exeunt.

Enter Baffiano, Pertio, Graziano, and all their trains.

Por. I pray you tarrie, paufe a day or two

Before you hazard, for in choosing wrong I loofe your company; therefore forbear a while, There’s something tells me (but it is not love) I would not loofe you, and you know your felfe, Hate counfalias in not fuch a quallilie; But leaff you should not vnderstand me well, And yet a maiden hath no tongue, but thought, I would detaine you here some month or two

Before you venture for me. I could teach you How to choose right, but then I am forsworne, So will I never be, so may you misse me, But if you doe, youle make me with a finne,

That I had beene forsworne: Befrow your eyes, They haue ore-lookt me and deuised me, One halfe of me is yours, the other halfe yours, Mine owne I would say: but of mine thine yours, And so all yours; O these naughtie times

Puts bars betweene the owners and their rights.

And so though yours, not yours (prove it so)

Let Fortune goe to hell for it, not I.

I speake too long, but ‘tis to peize the time,

To ich it, and to draw it out in length,

To fay you from elecution.

P 3

Baff. Let
The Merchant of Venice.

Baff. Let me choose,
For as I am, I live upon the racke.
Per. Upon the racke Baffiano, then confesse
What treason there is mingled with your louse.
Baff. None but that vile treason of mistrust.
Which makes me fear the enjoying of my louse:
There may as well be amity and life,
'Twixt eare and fire, as treason and my louse:
Per. 1, but I fear you speake upon the racke,
Where men enforced doth speake any thing.
Baff. Promises me life, and ile confesse the truth.
Per. Well then, confesse and lue.
Baff. Confesse and lue
Had beene the vertue sum of my confession:
O happie torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance:
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Per. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe love me, you will finde me out.
Nerissa and the reft, fland all aloofe,
Let musicke found while he doth make his choise,
Then if he looke he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in musique. That the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the streame
And warie death-bed for him: he may win,
And what is musique than? Than musique is Even as the flourith, when true subjicets bowe
To a new crowned Monarch: Such it is,
As are those dulcet sounds in breake of day,
That creep into the dreaming bride-groomes ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no leafe preference, but with much more lour
Then yong Alcides, when he did redeeme
The virgin tribute, paied by howling Troy
To the Sea-monster: I stand for sacrificse,
The reft aloofe are the Dardanian wiuos:
With blearied visages come forth to view
The issue of th'exploit: Goe Hercules,
Loue thou, I live with much more dimay
I view the fight, then thou that mak'th the fray.
Here Musick.

A Song the vbibbit Baffiano comments on the Caskets to bimselfe.

Tell me wheres the fancie bred,
Or in the heart, or in the bead:
How beguys, how mourrified.
Reple, reple.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and Fancie diis,
In the cradle where it lies:
Let us all ring Fancie knell.
Ile begin it.
Ding, dong, bell.
All. Ding, dong, bell.

Baff. So may the outward showes be leafe themselues
The world is still deceu'd with ornament.
In Law, what Plea so tanted and corrupt,
But being feason'd with a gracious voice,
Oblores the show of euil? In Religion,
What dammed error, but some sober brow
Will blest it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grovemette with faire ornament:
There is no voice so simple, but affumes
Some marke of vertue on his outward parts;

How manie cowardes, whose hearts are all as faine
As thayers of fand, weare yet vpon their chins
The beard of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who inward searcht, haue lyuers white as milke,
And these affume but valors excrement,
To render them redoubted. Looke on beautie,
And you shall fee 'tis purchas't by the weight,
Which therein workes a miracle in nature,
Making them lighteft that weare moft of it:
So are those crifped snakie golden lockes
Which makes fuch wanton gambols with the winde
Vpon suppofede faireneffe, often knowne
To be the dowel of a second head,
The fcall that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the gilded shore
To a most dangerous fea: the beautious scarfe
Vailing an Indian beautie; In a word,
The feeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wifeft. Therefore then thou gaudie gold,
Hard food for Midos, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
'Twenee man and man: but thou, thou meager lead
Which rather threatnest then doft promise ought,
Thy paleneffe moves me more then eloquence,
And here choose I, joy be the confequence.
Per. How all the other passions fleet to ayre,
As doubtfull thoughts, and rash imbrac'd despaire:
And shuddering fears, and greene-eyed lealoufie.
O loue be moderate, alle thy exftase,
In meaure raine thy joy, fcan't this excelle,
I feel too much thy bleffing, make it leffe,
For feare I forfeitt.
Baff. What finde I here?
Faire Portia counterfeitt. What demie God
Hath come to noere creation? moue these eies?
Or whether riding on the bals of mine
Seeme they in motion? Here are feu'd lips
Parted with fuger breath, fo sweet a barre
Should funder fuch sweet friends: here in her haires
The Painter plaies the Spider, and hath wouen
A golden web with the hearts of man
Faler then gnats in cobwebs: but her eies,
How could he fee to doe them? hauing made one,
Me thinks it should haue power to fieale both his
And leaue it felle vnfurift: Yet looke how farre
The Subftance of my praffe doth wrong this shadow
In vnderprifing it, to farre this shadow
Doth limpe behind the Subftance. Here's the Scroule,
The continent, and fummarie of my fortune.

You that choofe not by the view
Chance at faire, and chooseth as true:
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek me no new.
If you be well pleased with this,
And hold your fortune for your biffes,
Turne you wherefore your Lady is,
And claim it with a loving kiffe.

Baff. A gentle scroule: Faire Lady, by your leaue,
I come by note to glue, and to receive,
Like one of two contending in a prize
That thinkes he hath done well in peoples eies:
Hearing applaufe and vniuerfall shoue,
Giddie in spiritt, still gazing in a doubt
Whether thoe peales of praffe be his or no.

So
So thrice faire Lady, stand I even fo,
As doubtfull whether what I see be true,
Vntill confirmd, sign'd, ratifid by you.

Por. You fee my Lord Baffiano where I stand,
Such as I am; though for my selfe alone
I would not be ambitious in my wife,
To wifh my selfe much better, yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my selfe,
A thousand times more faire, ten thousand times
More rich, that only to stand high in your account,
I might in vertues, beauties, luings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full fumme of me
Is fum of nothing: which to term in groffe,
Is an unfeffoned girl, vnfohool'd, vnpractiz'd,
Happie in this, she is not yet fo old
But the feae leane: happier then this,
Shee is not bred fo dull but she can leare;
Happiefl of all, is that her gentile fpirit
Commits it felle to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Governour, her King.
My felle, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now confuered. But now I was the Lord
Of this faire manfor, matter of my fermen,
Queene ore my felle: and even now but now,
This house, these fermen, and this fame my felle.
Are yours, my Lord, I give them with this ring,
Which when you part from, loofe, or glue away,
Let it prefage the ruine of your hone,
And be my vantage to exclaime on you.

Baff. Madam, you have hereft of me all words,
Onely my bloud speakes to you in my vaines,
And there fuch confusion in my powers,
As after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved Prince, there doth appeare
Among the buzzing pleafed multitude,
Where every fomething being blent together,
Turnes to a wildly of nothing, faue of my Expreft, and not expreft: but when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence,
O then be bold to fay Baffiano's dead.

Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That haue flood by and feene our widhes proper,
To cry good joy, good joy my Lord and Lady.

Gra. My Lord Baffiano and my gentle Lady,
I withe you all the joy that you can with:
For I am fure you can with none from me:
And when your Honours mean to folemnize
The bargaine of your faith: I doe beleefee you
Even at that time I may be married too.

Baff. With all my heart, fo thou canft get a wife.

Gra. I thanke your Lordship, you gave me one.
My eyes my Lord can looke as fwit as yours:
You faw the mistres, I beheld the maid:
You lou'd, I lou'd for intermiffion,
No more pertaines to me my Lord then you;
Your fortune flood vpon the caskets there,
And fo did mine too, as the matter falls:
For woeing here, vntil I fweat again,
And swearing till my very rough was dry
With oaths of love, at laft, if promife laft,
I got a promife of this faire one heere
To haue her love: promis'd that your fortune
Atchieu'd her miftref.

Por. Is this true Neriffa?

Ner. Madam it is fo, fo you stand pleas'd withall.

Baff. And doe you Gratiano mean god faith?

Gra. Yes faith my Lord.

Baff. Our feaft shall be much honored in your marraige.

Gra. Weele play with them the firt boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What and take downe?

Gra. No, we shall here win at that sport, and take downe.

But who comes heere? Lorenzo and his Infidell?

What and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Juffica, and Salerio.

Baff. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hether,
If that the youth of my new intereft heere
Have power to bid you welcome: by your leaue
I bid my verie friends and Countrimen
Sweet Portia welcome.

Por. So do I my Lord, they are intirely welcome.

Lor. I thanke your honor; for my part my Lord,
My purpofe was not to haue feene you heere,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did intreate me paft all faying nay
To come with him along.

Salerio. I did my Lord,
And I have reafon for it, Signior Antonio
Commends him to you,

Baff. Ere I ope his Letter
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Salerio. Not ficke my Lord, vnfele it be in minde,
Nor wele, vnfele in minde: his Letter there
Wifh fheu you his eftate.

The Merchant of Venice. 175

Openes the Letter.

Gra. Neriffa, cheere yond stranger, bid her welcom.
Your hand Salerio, what's the newes from Venice?
How doth that royal Merchant good Antonio;
I know he vili be glad of our successe,
We are the Jufans, we haue won the fleec.

Salerio. I would you had won the fleec that hee hath loft.

Por. There are some shrewd contents in yond fame Paper,
That fteales the colour from Baffanios cheeke,
Some deere friend dead, elfe nothing in the world
Could turne fo much the conflation
Of any conftant man. What, worfe and worfe?
With leaue Baffiano I am halfe your felle,
And I must freely have the halfe of any thing
That this fame paper brings you.

Baff. O sweet Portia,

Heree are a few of the vnplefant words
That euerm blotted paper. Gentle Ladie
When I did firft impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my vaines; I was a Gentleman,
And then I told you true: and yet deere Ladie,
Rating my felle at nothing, you hall fee
How much I was a Braggart, when I told you
My flate was nothing, I shold then haue told you
That I was worfe then nothing: for indeede
I haue ingag'd my felle to a deere friend,
Inag'd my friend to his meere enemie
To feeede my meanes. Heree is a Letter Ladie,
The paper as the bodie of my friend,
And euerie word in it a gaping wound
Ifuing life blood. But is it true Salerio,

Hath
Hath all his ventures fail'd, what not one hit,
From Tripolis, from Mexico and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one vessell scape the dreadful touch
Of Merchant-manning rocks?

Said. Not one my Lord.

Bifdes, it should appeare, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it: never did I know
A creature that did bear the shape of man
So keene and greedy to confound a man.
And doth impeach the freedom of the state
If they deny him iustice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himselfe, and the Magnificoes
Of greatest port have all perfwaded with him,
But none can drue him from the enuious plea
Of forfeiture, of iustice, and his bond.

Baff. When I was with him, I have heard him swearc
To Taball and to Gious, his Countri-men.
That he would rather have Antbonio's flesh,
Then twenty times the value of the fumme
That he did owe him: and I know my Lord,
If law, authoritie, and power deny not,
It will goe hard with poore Antbonio.

Por. Is it your deere friend that is thus in trouble?

Baff. The deereft friend to me, the kindeft man,
The beft condition'd, and unwaried spirit
In doing curtesies: and one in whom
The ancient Romane honour more appeares
Then any that draws breath in Italie.

Por. What fumme owes he the Jew?

Baff. For me three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?

Pay him fixe thousand, and deface the bond:
Double fixe thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lofe a haire through Baffam's fault.
First goe with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend:
For neuer shall you lie by Portias fide
With an vaquet foule. You shall haue gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is payd, bring your true friend along,
My maid Nerifia, and my felle meane time
Will live as maides and widdowes: come away,
For you shall hence with your wedding day:
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheere,
Since you are deere bought, I will loue you deere.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Sweet Baffamio, my fhips have all miscarried, my Creditors grow cruel, my estate is very iow, my bond to the Jew is forfeit, and since in paying it, it is imposfible I should live, all debts are clearer between you and I. If I might fee you at my death: now with this I fende you as your ploofures: if your lowe doe not persuade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O loue! dispatch all busines and be gone.

Baff. Since I haue your good leaue to goe away,
I will make haste, but till I come againe,
No bed shall ere be guilty of my pay,
Not that the interpreter twixt us twaine

Por. Enter the Jew, and Solanio, and Antbonio, and the Taylor.

Jew. Baffamio, looke to him, tell not me of mercy,

This is the fool that lends out money gratis.
Jaylor, looke to him.

Ant. Heare me yet good Sbylo.
Jew. Ille haue my bond, speake not against my bond,
I haue iworne an oath that I will haue my bond:
Thou call'd me dog before thou hadst a caufe,
But since I am a dog, beware my phangs,
The Duke shall grant me iustice, I do wonder
Thou naughtie Taylor, that thou art fo fond
To come abroad with him at his requent.

Ant. I pray thee heare me speake.
Jew. Ille haue my bond, I will not heare thee speake,
Ile haue my bond, and therefore speake no more.
Ille not be made a foft and dull ey'd foolie,
To make the head, relented, and flipt, and yeeld
To Christian interceffors: follow not,
Ille haue no speaking, I will haue my bond.

Said. It is the most impenectrable erre
That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone,
Ille follow him no more with bootleffe prayers:
He seeks my life, his reafon well I know;
I oft delier'd from his forfeitures
Many that haue at times made mone to me,
Therefore he hates me.

Said. I am fure the Duke will never grant this forfeiture to hold.

Ant. The Duke cannot deny the course of law:
For the commoditie that strangers haue
With vs in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the iustice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Confiseth of all Nations. Therefore goe,
Thefe geerees and loffes haue fo bated mee,
That I shall hardly ipare a pound of fleth
To morrow, to my bloudy Creditor.
Well Taylor, on, pray God Baffamio come
To fee me pay his debts, and then I care not.

Enter Pertia, Neriffa, Loreno, Iffica, and a man of Portia.

Lor. Madam, although I speake it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appeares most strongly
In bearing the abfence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you shew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you fend releefe,
How deere a louer of my Lord your husband,
I know you would be prouer of the worke
Then cuftomary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall now; for in companions
That do conceufe and waife the timetogather,
Whofe foules doe bear an egal yoke of loue,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lynnaiements, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me thinke that this Antbonio
Being the boforme louer of my Lord,
Muf't needs be like my Lord. If it be fo,
How little is the cost I haue bestowed
In purchasing the fembleance of my foule;
From out the flatte of hellifh crueltie,
This comes too neere the praiing of my felfe,
Therefore no more of it: here other things
Lorens I commit into your hands,
The husbandry and manage of my house,
Vntill my Lords returne: for mine owne part
I have towards heaven breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attended by Nerrijfa heere,
Vntill her husband and my Lords returne:
There is a monastery too miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe desire you
Not to denie this imposition,
The which my loue and some necessitie
Now lays vpon you.

Loren. Madame, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all faire commands.

Per. My people doe already know my minde,
And will acknowledge you and Iffica
In place of Lord Baffiano and my felfe.
So far you well till we shall meete againe.

Lor. Faire thoughts & happy hours attend on you,
Iffiji. I wish with your Ladiship all hearts content.

Per. I thankke you for your wife, and am well ples'd
To wish it backe on your fawyowell Iffica.

Exeunt. Now Balthazar, as I have euer found thee honest true,
So let me finde thee still : take this fame letter,
And vs thou all the indeaun of a man,
In speed to Mantua, fee thou render this
Into my cofins hand, Doctor Belario,
And looke what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them I pray thee with imagin'd speed
Vnto the Tranekt, to the common Ferrie
Which trades to Venice; waite no time in words,
But get thee gone, I shal be there before thee.

Baltb. Madam, I goe with all convenient speed.

Per. Come on Iffica, I have worke in hand
That you yet know not of; we'll fee our husbands
Before they thinke of vs?

Nerriffa. Shall they see vs?

Portia. They shal Nerriffas; but in such a habit,
That they shall thinke we are accomplished
With that we lacke; Ie hold thee any wager
When we are both attouder like yong men,
Ie proe the prettier fellow of the two,
And weare my DAGGER with the brauer grace,
And speake betweene the change of man and boy,
With a reede voyage, and turne two minfing steps
Into a manly stride ; and speake of frayses
Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lyes
How honourable Ladies fought my loue,
Which I denying, they fell fickle and died.
I could not doe withall; then Ie repent,
And with for all that, that I had not kill'd them;
And twentine of thesepignie lies Ie tell,
That men shall sweare I have discontinued school
Above a twelve moneth: I have within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practife.

Nerriffa. Why, shall we turne to men?

Portia. Fie, what a questions that?

If thou wert here a lewd interpreter:
But come, Ie tell thee all my whole deuice
When I am in my coach, which flaves for vs
At the Parke gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twentie miles to day.

Exeunt.

Enter Clowne and Iffica.

Clown. Yes truely; for looke you, the finnes of the Fa-
To offices of tender curtesie,
We all expect a gentle anfwer Jew?
Jew. I hope perfett your grace of what I purpose,
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworne
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Vpon your Charter, and your Cities freedom.
You'll ask me why I rather choose to have
A weight of carront fleth, then to receive
Three thousand Ducats; I le not anfwer that:
But fay it is my humor; Is it anfwered?
What if my house be troubled with a Rat,
And I be peale'd to give ten thousand Ducates
To have it bain'd? What, are you anfwer'd yet?
Some men there are loue not a gaping Pigge:
Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat:
And others, when the bag-pipe fings it's nofe,
Can not containe their Vrine for affection.
Maters of paffion fways it to the moode
Of what it likes or loaths, now for your anfwer:
As there is no firme reafon to be rendred
Why he cannot abide a gaping Pigge?
Why he a harmlesse neceffarie Cat?
Why he a woollen bag-pipe? But of force
Muft yeeld to fuch ineuitable flame,
As to offend himfelfe being offended:
So can I glue no reafon, nor I will not,
More then a lodg'd hate, and a certaine loathing
I ear Antbonio, that I follow thus
A looking fuite against him? Are you anfwered?
Baff. This is no anfwer thou vnfeeling man,
To excufe the currant of thy cruelty.
Iew. I am not bound to pleafe thee with my anfwer.
Baff. Do all men kill the things they do not loue?
Iew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Baff. Euerie offence is not a hate at firft.
Iew. What wouldft thou have a Serpent fing thee twice?
Ant. I pray thee think you quefition with the Jew:
You may as well go fand vpon the beach,
And bid the malne flood bate his vifual height,
Or even as well vfe quefition with the Wolfe,
The Ewe bleeate for the Lambe:
You may as well forbid the Mountaine Pines
To waghe their high tops, and to make a noife
When they are fretted with the guls of heaven:
You may as well do any thing molt hard,
As feke to foften that, then which what harder?
His Jewifi heart. Therefore I do baffe you
Make no more offers, vfe no farther meanes,
But with all briefe and plaine conueniencie
Let me have judgement, and the Jew his will.
Baff. For thy three thoufand Ducates heereis fix
Iew. If euerie Ducat in fix thoufand Ducates
Were in fixe parts, and every part a Ducate,
I would not draw them, I would have my bond?
Da. How fhalt thou hope for mercie, rendring none?
Iew. What judgement fhall I dread doing no wrong?
You have among you many a purchaft flau,
Which like your Affes, and your Dogs and Mules,
You vfe in abuif and in flauifh parts,
Becaufe you bought them. Shall I fay to you,
Let them be free, marrie them to your hearces?
Why fweate they vnder burthen? Let their beds
Be made as foft as yours: and let their pallatts
Be feafton'd with fuch Viands: you will anfwer

Enter 'Duke', the Magnificus, Antbonio, Baffano, and Gratiano.
Duke. What, is Antbonio heere?
Ant. Ready, fo pleafe your grace?
Duke. I am forry for thee, thou art come to anfwer
A ftonie adverfary, an inhuman wretch,
Vncapeable of pitty, voyd, and empty
From any dram of mercie.
Ant. I have heard
Your Grace hath tane great paines to quallifie
His rigorous courfe: but fince he flands obdurate,
And that no lawful meanes can carry me
Out of his enuies reach, I do oppofe
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
Touffer with a quietneffe of spirit,
The very trannif and rage of his.
Du. Go one and call the Jew into the Court.
Sal. He is ready at the doore, he comes my Lord.

Enter Skylocke.
Du. Make roome, and let him fland before our face.
Skylocke the world thinkske, and I thinkke fo to
That thou but leadeft this fashion of thy mallice
To the late houre of aft, and then 'tis poffible
Thou'll fheat thy mercy and remorfe more fhange,
Than is thy fhange apparant crueltie;
And where thou now exaft the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor Merchants flefth,
Thou wilt not onely loose the forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentlenefe and loue:
Forgive a moytie of the principall,
Glancing an eye of pitty on his losfes
That haue of late fo hulled on his backe,
Enow to preffe a royal Merchant downe:
And plucks commifion of his fate
From braffe bofomes, and rough hearts of flints,
From ftubborne Turkes and Tarters neuer traign
to offices of tender curtesie,
We all expect a gentle anfwer Jew?
Jew. I hope perfett your grace of what I purpose,
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworne
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.

Why fweate they vnder burthen? Let their beds
Be made as foft as yours: and let their pallatts
Be feafton'd with fuch Viands: you will anfwer
The flukes are ours. So do I anwser you. The pound of flesh which I demand of him is deereely bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it. If you deny me; &c vpon your Law, There is no force in the decrees of Venice; I stand for judgement, answer, Shall I have it? Du. Vpon my power I may dismisse this Court, Vnlesse Bellario a learned Doctor, Whom I have sent for to determine this, Come heere to day. Sal. My Lord, heere flaves without A Meffenger with Letters from the Doctor, New come from Padua. Du. Bring vs the Letters, Call the Meffengers. Bajf. Good cheere Antonio, What man, corage yet: The Iew hall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all, Ere thou shalt loffe for one drop of blood. Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flocke, Mercett for death, the weakest kinde of fruité Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me; You cannot better be employ'd Bellario, Then to blue flill, and write mine Epitaph. Enter Nerijfa. Du. Came you from Padua from Bellario? Ner. From both. My Lord Bellario greets your Grace, Bajf. Why doot thou what thy knife so earnestly? Iew. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrout there, Gra. Not on thy foale: but on thy foule hard lew Thou mak't thy knife keene: but no mettal can, No, not the hangmans Axe beare halfe the keeness of Thy sharpe enuy. Can no prayers pierce thee? Iew. No, none that thou haft wit enough to make. Gra. O be thou damn'd, inexecrable dogge, And for thy life let justice be accus'd: Thou almoft mak'ft me wauer in my faith; To hold opinion with Pythagoras, That foules of Animals infule themselves Into the trunks of men. Thy curiufl spirit Gene'md a Wolfe, who hang'd for humane slaughter, Euen from the gallowes did his fell foule fleet; And whil'st thou layest in thy vnhaunded dam, Infusi'd it selfe in thee: For thy defires Are Wolwifh, bloody, fier'd, and rauenous. Iew. Till thou canst take the foale from off my bond Thou but offend' thy Lungs to speake so loud: Repaire thy wit good youth, or it will fall To endlefe ruine. I stand heere for Law. Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend A yong and Learned Doctor in our Court; Where is he? Ner. He attendeth heere hard by To know your anwser, whether you'd admit him. Du. With all my heart. Some three or four of you Go give him curteous conduct to this place, Meane time the Court shall heare Bellarios Letter. Your Grace shal understand, that at the receit of your Letter I am very fakke: but in the infant that your mes- fenger came, in loving vallitation, was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthasar: I acquainted him with the caufe in Controuerzie, between the Iew and Anthony the Merchant: We turn'd ore many Boakes together: kee it furnisht with my opinion, which betterd with his owne learning, the greatest whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity, to fill up your Grace's request in my fliet. I beseech you, let his lackes of years be no impediment to let him lacke a requercnt apposition: for I never knew fo yong a body, with fo old a band. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, subjes trial shall better publishe his commendation. Enter Portia for Baltazar. Duke. You heare the learn'd Bellario what he writes, And heere I take it is the Doctor come. Give me your hand: Came you from old Bellario? Por. I did my Lord. Du. You are welcome: take your place; Are you acquainted with the difference That holds this present question in the Court. Por. I am enformed throughly of the caufe. Which is the Merchant here? and which the Iew? Du. Antonio and old Skylocks, both stand forth. Por. Is your name Skylocks? Iew. Skylocks is my name. Por. Of a strange nature is the fute you follow, Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Law Cannot impugne you as you do proceed. You stand within his danger, do you not? Ant. I, fo he fayes. Por. Do you confesse the bond? Ant. I do. Por. Then mult the Iew be mercifull. Iew. On what compulsion mult I? Tell me that. Por. The quality of mercy is not ftrain'd, It dropeth as the gentle raine from heaven Upon the place benefic. It is twice bleff, It bleffeth him that giveth, and him that takes, 'Tis mightieft in the mightieft, it becomes The throned Monarch better then his Crown, His Scepter shewes the force of temporall power, The attribute to awe and Malefifie, Wherein doth fit the dread and feare of Kings: But mercy is above this fceptred sway, It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings, It is an attribute to God himfelfe; And earthly power doth then fwell likef God When mercie feasons Justice. Therefore Iew, Though Justice be thy plen, confider this, That in the course of Justice, none of vs Should fee falution: we do pray for mercie, And that fame prayer, doth teach vs all to render The deeds of mercie. I haue spoke thus much To mitigatte the lujifice of thy plea: Which if thou follow, this striet courfe of Venice Must needs gie sentence 'gainft thc Merchant there. Sky. My deeds vpon my head, I crave the Law, The penalitie and forfeite of my bond. Por. Is he not able to discharge the money? Bajf. Yes, heere I tender it for him in the Court, Yes, twice the famine, if that will not suffice, I will be bound to pay it ten times ore, On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart: If this will not suffice, it must appeare That malice bearers downe truth. And I befeech you Wret once the Law to your authority, To do a great right, do a little wrong, And curbe this cruel diuell of his will. Por. It must not be, there is no power in Venice Can alter a decree eftablisht: 'Twill be recorded for a President,
And many an error by the same example,
Will rush into the fleet: It cannot be.

Iew. A Daniel come to judgement, say a Daniel.

O wife young Judge, how do I honour thee.

Por. I pray you let me looke upon the bond.

Iew. Here: 'tis most revered Doctor, here it is.

Por. Skylocke, there's thrixe thy monie offered thee.

Sly. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heauen:
Shall I lay perjurie upon my foule?
No not for Venice.

Por. Why this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the law may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off

Neeref the Merchants heart; be mercifull,
Take thrixe thy money, bid me teare the bond.

Iew. When it is paid according to the tenure.

It doth appeare you are a worthy Judge:
you know the Law, your explocation
Hath beene most sound. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-defacing pillar.

Por. Proceede to judgement: By my foule I sweare,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

An. Moft heartily I do beseech the Court
To give the judgement.

Por. Why then thus it is:
you must prepare your boform for his knife.

Iew. O noble Judge, O excellent yong man.

For the intent and purpose of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which heere appeareth due vpon the bond.

Iew. 'Tis verie true: O wife and vright Judge,
How much more elder art thou then thy lookes?

Por. Therefore lay bare your boforme.

Iew. I, his breff,
So says the bond, doth it not noble Judge?

Neeref his heart, those are the very words.

Por. If it is so: Are there balance heere to weign the flesh?

Iew. I haue them ready.

Por. Haue by some Surgeon Skylock on your charge
To stop his wounds, lest he should bleed to death.

Iew. It is not nominated in the bond.

Por. It is not so expressely: but what of that?

Twere good you do so much for charite.

Iew. I cannot finde it, 'tis not in the bond.

Por. Come Merchant, haue you any thing to say?

Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.

Give me your hand Bassfani, fare you well.

Greeue not that I am talme to this for you:
For herein fortune shewes her felpe more kinder
Then is her coute. It is still her vie
To let the wretche man out-live his wealth,
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow
An age of povertie. From which lingring penance
Of fuch miserie, doth she cut me off:
Commend me to your honourable Wife,
Tell her the proccesse of Antonio's end:
Say how I lou'd you; speake me faire in death:
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassfani had not once a Love:
Repent not you that you shall lookee your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt.
For if the Iew do cut but deepe enough,
Hee pay it infantly, with all my heart.

Bassf. Antonio, I am married to a wife,

Which is as deere to me as life it selfe,
But life it selfe, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteeme'd above thy life,
I would loose all, I sacrifice them all
Heere to this deuell, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would guie you little thanks for that
If she were by to heare you make the offer.

Gra. I haue a wife whom I protest I love,
I would shee were in heauen, so the could Intreat some power to change this currifh Iew.

Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her backe,
The whif would make elfe an vnquiet house.

(ter

Iew. These be the Christian husbands: I haue a daught-
Would any of the stocke of Barrabas
Had beene her husband, rather then a Christian.

We triffe time, I prays thee pursue sentence.

Por. A pound of that fame marchants flesh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the law doth gie it.

Iew. Moft rightfull Judge.

Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast,
The Law allows it, and the Court awards it.

Iew. Moft learned Judge, a sentence, come prepare.

Por. Tarry a little, there is something else,
This bond doth guie thee heere no iot of bloud,
The words expressly are a pound of flesh:
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh,
But in the cutting it, if thou doest find
One drop of Christian bloud, thy lands and goods
Are by the Lawes of Venice conficrate
Vnto the flate of Venice.

Gra. O vright Judge,
Markle Iew, 'o learned Judge.

Sly. Is that the law?

Por. Thy selpe shalt fea the Act:
For as thou vrgest justice, be affur'd
Thou shalt have justice more then thou defirest.

Gra. O learned Judge, mark lew, a learned Judge.

Iew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian goe.

Baff. Here is the money.

Por. Soft, the Iew shall have all iustice, soft, no haft,
He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Iew, an vright Judge, a learned Judge.

Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh,
Shed thou no bloud, nor cut thou leffe nor more
But iust a pound of flesh: if thou tak'ft more
Or leffe then a iust pound, be it so much
As makes it light or heavy in the substance,
Or the defilution of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple, may, if the scale doe turne
But in the estimation of a hayre,
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel Iew,
Now inndiell I haue thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Iew paule, take thy forfeiture.

Sly. Give me my principal, and let me goe.

Baff. I haue it ready for thee, heere it is.

Por. He hath refud it in the open Court,
He shall haue meerly iustice and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel still say I, a second Daniel,
I thanke thee Iew for teaching me that word.

Sly. Shall I not haue barely my principal?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be taken fo at thy perill Iew.

Sly. Why then the Deuill gie him good of it:
Ile stay no longer question.
Haye by your wifedome beene this day acquired
Of greatesse penalties, in lues whereof,
Three thoufand Ducats due vnto the Jew
We freely cope your curteous paines withall.

\[An.\] And fand indebted ouer and aboue
In loue and feruice to you euermore.

\[Por.\] He is well paid that is well fatisfied,
And I deliuering you, am fatisfied,
And therein doe account my felfe well paid,
My minde was neuer yet more mercinarie.
I pray you know me when we meeet againe,
I with you well, and fo I take my leave.

\[Baff.\] Deare fir, of force I muft attempt you further,
Take fome remembrance of vs as a tribute,
Not as fee : grant me two things, I pray you
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

\[Por.\] You prefume mee farre, and therefore I will yeld,
Gue me your gloues, Ile weare them for yourfake,
And for your loue Ile take this ring from you,
Doe not draw baccke your hand, Ile take no more,
And you in loue shall not deny me this?

\[Baff.\] This ring good fir, alas it is a trife,
I will not shame my felfe to give you this.

\[Por.\] I will haue nothing elle but onely this,
And now methinks I haue a minde to it.

\[Baff.\] There's more depends on this then on the valew,
The deareft ring in Venice will I give you,
And finde it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me.

\[Por.\] I fee fir you are liberal in offers,
You taught me firft to beg, and now me thinke
You teach me how a beggar should be anfwer'd.

\[Baff.\] Good fir, this ring was guen me by my wife,
And when the put it on, the made me vow
That I should neither fell, nor guie, nor lofe it.

\[Por.\] That fceue ferues many men to faue their gifts,
And if your wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I haue deferued this ring,
Shee would not hold out enemey for euer
Figure it to me : well, peace be with you.

\[Exeunt.\]

\[Ant.\] My L. Baffiano, let him haue the ring,
Let his deferuings and my loue withall
Be valued againft your wives commandement.

\[Baff.\] Go Graffiano, run and ouer-take him,
Give him the ring, and bring him if thou canst
Vnto Antionius houfe,away,make hafe.

\[Exeunt.\]

Come, you and I will thither prefently,
And in the morning early will we both
File toward Belmont, come Antonio.

\[Enter Portia and Nerissa.\]

\[Por.\] Enquire the Iewes houfe out, gie him this deed,
And let him figne it, wee'ell away to night,
And be a day before our husbands home :
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

\[Enter Graffiano.\]

\[Gra.\] Faire fir,you are weel ore-tane :
My L. Baffiano vpon more aduice,
Hath fent you heere this ring, and doth intreast
Your company at dinner.

\[Por.\] That cannot be ;
His ring I doe accept moft thankfully,
And fo I pray you tell him : furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylocks houfe.

\[Gra.\] That will I doe.

\[Ner.\] Sir, I would speake with you :
The Merchant of Venice.

Ile fee if I can get my husbands ring
Which I did make him fware to keepe for ever.
Por. Thou maist I warrant, we shall have old fwareing
That they did glue the rings away to men;
But weele out-face them, and out-fwareing them to:
Away, make halfe, thou know'rt where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you fwoe me to this house.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lorenzo and Ieffica.

Lor. The moone fhines bright. In fuch a night as this,
When the sweet wifnes did gently kiffe the trees,
And they did make no mynfes, in fuch a night
Troylus me thinkes mounted the Trojan walls,
And figh'd his foute toward the Grecian tents
Where Grêiff laid that night.

Iff. In fuch a night
Did Thibbe fearfully one-trip the dewe,
And faw the Lyons shadow ere hiulfel,
And ranne difmayed away.

Loren. In fuch a night
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Upon the wifte fee banke, and waft her Loue
To come againe to Cartaghe.

Iff. In fuch a night
Made gathered the inchanted hearbs
That did renewe Efien.

Loren. In fuch a night
Did Ieffica fetch from the weathy Iewe,
And with an Vntreffit Loue did runne from Venice,
As farre as Belmont.

Iff. In fuch a night
Did young Lorenzo (were he lou'd her well,
Stealing her foule with many vowes of faith,
And see a true one.

Loren. In fuch a night
Did pretty Ieffica (like a little throw
Slander her Loue, and he forgau her it.

Iff. I would out-night you did no body come:
But harke, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Meflenger.

Lor. Who comes fo falt in flence of the night?
Mef. A friend.

Loren. A friend, what friend? Your name I pray you
Mef. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My Miitreffe will before the breake of day
Be heere at Belmont, the doth fay about
By holy croffes where the kneelles and prayers
For happy wedlocke houres.

Loren. Who comes with her?
Mef. None but a holy Hermit and her maid:
I pray you it my Mafter yet return'd?

Loren. He is not, nor we have not heard from him,
But goe we in I pray thee Ieffica,
And ceremoniously let vs vs prepare
Some welcome for the Miitreffe of the house,

Enter Clorons.

Clo. Sola, fola: wo ha ho, fola, fola.

Loren. Who calls?
Clo. Sola, did you fee M. Lorenzo, & M. Lorenzo, fola,
Lor. Leave hollowing man, heere.
Clo. Sola, where, where?
Lor. Heere.

Clo. Tel him ther's a Poft come from my Mafter, with his hone full of good newes, my Mafter will be here ere morning sweet foule.

Loren. Let's in, and there expect their comming.
And yet no matter; why should we goe in?
My friend Stephan, signifie pray you
Within the house, your Miitreffe is at hand,
And bring your musique fortho into the ayre.
How sweet the moone-light fleepes upon this banke,
Heere will we fit, and let the sounds of musicke
Creep in our ears soft, flines, and the night
Become the tutches of sweet harmony:
Sit Ieffica, looke how the floore of heauen
Is thicke inlayed with pattems of bright gold,
There's not the smallest orb which thou beholdst
But in his motion like an Angell fings,
Still quiring to the young eyed Cherubins;
Such harmonie is in immortall foules,
And whilst this muddy vefure of decay
Doth groly close in us, we cannot heare it:
Come hoe, and wake Diana with a humne,
With sweetefut tutches pearce your Miitreffe ear,
And draw her home with musicke.

Iff. I am never merry when I hear sweet musique.

Play musicke.

Lor. The reafon is, your spirits are attentive:
For doe but note a wilde and wanton heard
Or race of youthful and unhandled cols,
Fething mad bounds, bellowing and neiging loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blooud,
If they but hear perceiue a trumpet found,
Or any ayre of musicke touch their ears,
You shall perceiue them make a mutuall fland,
Their fauge eyes turnd to a modest gare,
By the sweet power of musicke: therefore the Poet
Did fame that Orpheus drew trees, flones, and floods.
Since naught fo flockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musicke for time doth change his nature,
The man that hath no musicke in himfelfe,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet founds,
Is fit for treafons, fratagems, and iployles,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affeccions dake as Erebus,
Let no such man bee trusted: make the musicke.

Enter Portia and Neroiffa.

Por. That light we fee is burning in my hall:
How farre that little candell throwes his beams,
So fhines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moone fhone we did not fee the can
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the leffe,
A fubftitute chimes brightly as a King
Vntill a King be by, and then his flate
Empties it felfe, as doth an inland brooke
Into the maine of waters: musique, harke.

Musicke.

Ner. It is your musicke Madame of the house.
Por. Nothing is good I fee without repect,
Methinks it sounds much sweeter then by day?

Ner. Silence befoves that vertue on it Madam,
Por. The Crow doth finge as sweety as the Larke

When
When neither is attended: and I think
The Nightingale if she should sing by day
When every Goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a Multian than the Wren?
How many things by feason, season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection:
Peace, how the Moone sleepe with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd.

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deciu'd of Portia.

Por. He knows me as the blind man knowes the Cuckow by the bad voice?
Lor. Deere Lady welcome home?
Por. We have bene praying for our husbands welfare
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return'd?
Lor. Madam, they are not yet:
But there is come a Messenger before
To signifie their comming.
Por. Go in Nerriffa,
Gie order to my seruants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Iffica nor you.
A Bucket sounds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I heare his Trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam, feare you not.
Por. This night methinks is but the daylight skie,
It lookes a little paler, 'tis a day,
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid.

Enter Baffanio, Antononio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Baff. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in absence of the sunne.
Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light,
For a light wife doth make a heanie husband,
And neuer be Baffanio so for me,
But God for all; you are welcome home my Lord.

Baff. I thank you Madam, give welome to my friend
This is the man, this is Antononio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You shoud in all fence be much bound to him,
For as I heare he was much bound for you.
Amb. No more then I am wel acquitted of.
Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appeare in other wais then words,
Therefore I flant this breathing curtefie.

Gra. By yonder Moone I sweare you do me wrong,
Infaith I gieue it to the Judges Clearke,
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you do take it Loue so much at hart.

Por. A quarrel how alredie, what's the matter?
Gra. About a hoop of Gold, a paire Ring
That the did give me, whose Poetie was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetry
Vpon a knife;

Lor. What talkes you of the Poetie or the valve:
You swore to me when I did gieue it you,
That you would weare it til the houre of death,
And that it shou'd lye with you in your graue,
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You shou'd have beene respectfullie and have kept it.
Gave it a Judges Cearke: but well I know
The Cearke will here wearie halie on's face that had it.

Gra. He wil, and if he live to be a man.
Nerriffa. I, if a Woman line to be a man,
Gra. Now by this hand I gieue it to a youth,
A kinde of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher then thy selfe, the Judges Clearke,
A prating boy that begged it as a Fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were too blame, I must be plaine with you,
To part to lightly with your wifes first gift,
A thing diuine on with oaths upon your finger,
And so riueteu with faith vnto your flesh.
I gane my Loue a Ring, and made him swiare
Neuer to part with it, and here he stands:
I dare be sworne for him, he would not leave it,
Nor plucke it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world matters. Now in faith Gratiano,
You gieue your wife too vnkinde a caufe of greefe,
And 'were to me I shold be mad at it.

And swiare I loft the Ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Baffanio gaeue his Ring away
Vnto the Judge that beg'd it, and indeede
Deferu'd it too: and then the Boy his Clearke
That tooke some pains in writing, he beg'd mine,
And neyther man nor matter would take ought
But the two Rings.

Por. What Ring gaeue you my Lord?
Not that I hope which you receu'd of me.
Baff. If I could adue a lie vnto a fault,
I would deny it: but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring vpon it, it is gone.
Por. Euen so voide is your falsie heart of truth.
By heauen I wil nere come in your bed
Vntil I fee the Ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours, til I againe fee mine.
Baff. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gau the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gau the Ring,
And would concerne for what I gau the Ring,
And how vnwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your dilepasure?

Por. If you had knowne the vertue of the Ring,
Or halfe her worthinesse that gau the Ring,
Or your owne honour to continue the Ring,
You would not then have parted with the Ring:
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleasd to have defended it
With any termes of Zeale wanted the modelle
To vrgue the thing held as a ceremonie:

Nerriffa teaches me what to beleue,
Ile die for't, but some Woman had the Ring?

Baff. No by mine honor Madam, by my loule
No Woman had it, but a ciuill Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducates of me,
And beg'd the Rings the which I did denie him,
And suffer'd him to go dilepasure'd away:
Even he that had held vp the verie life
Of my deere friend. What should I say sweete Lady?
I was infor'd to fend it after him,
I was beset with flame and curtefie,
My honor would not let ingratitude
So much befnaere it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by thee bleffed Candles of the night,
Had you bene there, I thinke you would have beg'd
The Ring of me, to gueue the worthie Doctor?
The Merchant of Venice

Por. Let not that Doctor ere come neere my house,
Since he hath got the Jewell that I loved,
And that which you did sware to keepe for me,
I will become as liberall as you,
Ile not deny him any thing I haue,
No, not my body, nor my husbands bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.
Lye not a night from home. Watch me like Argos,
If you doe not, if I be left alone,
Now by mine honour which is yet mine owne,
Ile haue the Doctor for my bedfellow.

Nerissa. And I his Clarke: therefore be well aduiz'd
How you doe leave me to mine owne protection.

Gra. Well, doe you so : let not me take him then,
For if I doe, ile mar the yong Clarks pen.

Ant. I am the happy subject of these quarrels.

Por. Sir, griuell not you,
You are welcome notwithstanding.

Baf. Poritia, forgive me this enforced wrong,
And in the hearing of these manie friends
I sware to thee, even by thine owne faire eyes
Wherein I see my selfe.

Por. Mark but that?
In both my eyes he doubtly sees himselfe:.
In each eye one, sware by your double selfe,
And there's an oath of credit.

Baf. Nay, but heare me.
Pardon this fault: and by my soule I sware
I never more will breake an oath with thee.

Antb. I once did lend my bodie for thy wealth,
Which but for him that had your husbands ring
Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound againe,
My soule vpon the forfeit, that your Lord
Will never more breake faith adulter'de.

Por. Then you shalbe his forrester: sware him this,
And bid him keepe it better then the other.

Ant. Here Lord Baffanio, sware to keep this ring.

Baf. By heauen it is the fame I gaued the Doctor.

Por. I had it of him: pardon Baffanio,
For by this ring the Doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me my gentle Gratiana,
For that fame scrubbed boy the Doctors Clarke
In liwe of this, last night did lye with me.

Gra. Why this is like the mending of high waies
In Sommer, where the waies are faire enough:.
What, are we Cuckolds ere we haue derer'd it.

Por. Speake not so grosselee,you are all amaz'd;
Here is a letter, reade it at your leyfure,
It comes from Padua from Bellario,
There you shal finde that Poritia was the Doctor,

Nerissa the her Clarke. Lorenzo heere
Shall witnesse I let forth as foonie as you,
And but eu'n now return'd: I haue not yet
Entred my house. Anthonio you are welcome,
And I haue better newes in store for you
Then you expect: vnseale this letter foonie,
There you shal finde three of your Argosies
Are richly come to harbour Fodainle.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Antio. I am dumbe.

Baff. Were you the Doctor, and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the Clarke that is to make me cuckold.

Ner. I, but the Clarke that never meanes to doe it,

Vnseale he liue vntill he be a man.

Baff. (Sweet Doctor) you shall be my bedfellow,
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

An. (Sweet Ladie) you have given me life & liuing;
For heere I reade for certaine that my ships
Are safelee come to Rode.

Por. How now Lorenzo?

My Clarke hath some good comforts to for you.

Ner. I, and leue them him withoout a fee.

There doe I glue to you and Ieffica
From the rich Iewe, a speecchfull deed of gift
After his death, of all he dies posseff'd of.

Loren. Faire Ladies you drop Manna in the way
Of starued people.

Por. It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of thes events at full. Let vs goe in,
And charge vs there upon intergatories,
And we will answere all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so, the first intergatory
That my Nerissa shall be sworne on, is,
Whether till the night she had rather stay,
Or goe to bed, now being two houres to day,
But were the day come, I should with it darke,
Till I were couching with the Doctors Clarke.

Well, while I liue, Ie feare no other thing
So faire, as keeping iafe Nerissa's ring.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
As you Like it.

Actus primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando.

As I remember Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but poor a thousand Crownes, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed mee well: and there begins my fadness: My brother Iaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me raffically at home, or (to speak more properly) slaves me here at home unkept: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the flailing of an Oxe? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are faire with their feeding, they are taught their manmage, and to that end Riders dearely hir'd: but I (his brother) gaines nothing vnder him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I: besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave mee, his countenance feemes to take from me: hee lets mee feede with his Hinders, barres mee the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it Adam that grieves me, and the spirit of my Father, which I thinke is within mee, begins to mutinie against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wife remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.
Orlan. Goe a part Adam, and thou shalt heare how he will make me vp.
Oli. Now Sir, what make you heere?
Oli. Nothing; I am not taught to make any thing.
Oli. What mar you then sir?
Oli. Marrie sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poore vnworthy brother of yours with idleness.
Oliuer. Marrie sir be better employed, and be naught a while.
Orlan. Shall I keepe your hogs, and eat huskes with them? what prodigall portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?
Oli. Know you where you are sir?
Oli. O sir, very well: heere in your Orchard.
Oli. Know you before whom sir?
Oli. I, better then him I am before knowes mee: I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courteous of nations allows you my better: in that you are the first borne, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt vs: I haue as much of my father in mee, as you, albeit I confesse your coming before me is neerer to his reverence.
Oli. Come, come elder brother, you are too yong in Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villain?
Oli. I am no villain: I am the yongest sonne of Sir Rovoland de Boyes, he was my father, and he is thrice a villain that faies such a father begot villains: wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pul'd out thy tongue for saying so, thou haft rai'd on thy selfe.
Adam. Sweet Matters bee patient, for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.
Oli. Let me goo I say.
Oli. I will not till I pleafe; you shall haere mee: my father charg'd you in his will to give me good education: you haue train'd mee like a peasant, obfucing and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualitez: the spirit of my father growes strong in mee, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercis: as may become a gentleman, or glue mee the poore allottery my father left me by tefament, with that I will goo buy my fortunes.
Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg when that is spent? Well sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall haue some part of your will, I pray you leave me.
Oli. I will no further offend you, then becomes mee for my good.
Oli. Get you with him, you olde dogge.
Adam. Is old dogge my reward: most true, I have loft my teeth in your service: God be with my olde master, he would not haue spke such a word. Ex. Oli. Ad. Oli. Is it euen so, begin you to grow vpon me? I will phyfcke your ranckenelle, and yet giue no thousand crownes neyther: holla Dennis.
Enter Dennis.
Den. Calls your worship?
Oli. Was not Charles the Dukes Wraftler heere to speake with me?
Den. So pleafe you, he is heere at the doore, and importunes accesse to you.
Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way: and to morrow the wrafling is.
Enter Charters.
Char. Good morrow to your worship.
Oli. Good Mounffer Charles: what's the newes at the new Court?
Char. There's no newes at the Court Sir, but the olde newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his yonger brother the new Duke, and three or foure loving Lords.
As you like it.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia.

C. I pray thee Rosalind, sweet my Cos, be merry.

R. Deere Celia; I shou: more mirth then I am mitraitfe of, and would you yet were merrier: vneife you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learne mee how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

C. Herein I fee thou lou't mee not with the full weight that I loue thee; if my Vnclle thy banished father had banished thy Vnclle the Duke my Father, fo thou hadt beene still with mee, I could haue taught my loue to take thy father for mine; fo wouldst thou, if the truth of thy loue to me were fo righteously temper'd, as mine is to thee.

R. Well, I will forget the condition of my eftate, to rejoyce in yours.

C. You know my Father hath no childe, but I, nor none is like to haue: and truely when he dies, thou shalt be his heire; for what hee hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee againe in affection: by mine honor I will, and when I breake that oath, let mee turne monftertherefore my sweet Ros, my deare Ros, be merry.

R. From henceforth I will Cos, and deifie sports:
let me fee, what thinke you of falling in Louse?

C. Marry I prethee doe, to make sport withall: but loue no man in good earneft, nor no further in sport nether, then with safety of a pure blush, thou maist in hor come off again.

R. What shall be our sport then?

C. Let vs ft & mocke the good houeshwife Fur-tune from her wheele, that her gifts may henceforth be beflowed equally.

R. I would wee could doe so: for her benefits are mightily misplace'd, and the bountiffull blinde woman doth moft miitake in her gifts to women.

C. "Tis true, for thothat she makes faire, the scarce makes honeft, & thothat she makes honefl, the makes very illafourely.

R. Nay now thou goest from Fortunes office to Natures: Fortune reignes in gifts of the world, not in the linements of Nature.

Enter Celia.

C. No; when Nature hath made a faire creature, may he not by Fortune fall into the fire: though nature hath giuen vs wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this foole to cut off the argument?

R. Indeed there is fortune too hard for nature, when fortune makes nature natural, the cutter off of natures witte.

C. Peraduenture this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who percuieus our natural witts too dull to reasong of fuch goddefes, hath fent this Natural for our whetstone. for alwaies the dunfele of the foole, is the whetstone of the wits. How now Witte, whether wander you?

Cle. Mistreffe, you must come away to your father.

C. Were you made the meffenger?

Cle. No by mine honor, but I was bid to come for you Ref.

As you like it.

Ref. Where learned you that oath fools?

Clo. Of a certaine Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pan-cakes, and swore by his Honor the Muffard was naught: Now Ie fland to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Muffard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworne.

Clo. How prove you that in the great heape of your knowledge?

Ref. I marry, now vamuzzle your wifedome.

Clo. Stand you both forth now: flroke your chinnes, and flwre by your beards that I am a knaue.

Clo. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knauerie (if I had it) then I were: but if you flwre by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight flwearing by his Honor, for he never had anie; or if he had, he had sworne it away, before ever he faw those Pancakes, or that Muffard.

Clo. Prethee, who is’t that thou means’t?

Clo. One that old Fredericke your Father loves.

Ref. My Fathers love is enough to honor him enough; speake no more of him, you’ll be whipt for taxation one of these daies.

Clo. The more pittie that fooles may not speake wisely, what Wifemen do foolishly.

Clo. By my troth thou failest true: For, since the little wit that fooles have was silenced, the little foolerie that wife men haue makes a great shew; Heere comes Monfieur the Beu.

Enter le Beu.

Ref. With his mouth full of newes.

Clo. Which he vvill put on vs, as Pigeons feed their young.

Ref. Then shall we be newes-cram’d.

Clo. All the better: we shallbe the more Marketable.

Booz-court Monfieur le Beu, what’s the newes?

Le Beu. Faire Princefe, you haue loft much good sport.

Clo. Sport: of what colour?

Le Beu. What colour Madame? How shal I aunswer you?

Ref. As wit and fortune will.

Clo. Or as the deffinies decrees.

Clo. Well said, that was laid on with a trowell.

Clo. Nay, if I keepe not my ranke.

Ref. Thou looofeth thy old sell.

Le Beu. You amaze me Ladies: I would have told you of good wraftling, which you haue loft the fight of.

Ref. Yet tell vs the manner of the Wraffling.

Le Beu. I will tel you the beginning: and if it please your Ladifhips, you may fee the end, for the bell is yet to doe, and heere where you are, they are comming to performe it.

Clo. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beu. There comes an old man, and his three fons.

Clo. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beu. Three proper yong men, of excellent growth and preience.

Ref. With bills on their neckes: Be it knowne vnto all men by these presents.

Le Beu. The eldest of the three, wraftled with Charles the Dukes Wraffler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he feru’d the second, and fo the third: yonder they lie, the poore old man their Father, making such pittifull sole ouer them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ref. Alas.

Clo. But what is the sport Monfieur, that the Ladies haue loft?

Le Beu. Why this that I speake of.

Clo. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribbes was sport for Ladies.

Clo. Or I, I promife thee.

Clo. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musickie in his fides? Is there yet another doates vpon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrafling Cofn?

Le Beu. You mutt if you stay heere, for heere is the place appointed for the wraftling, and they are ready to performe it.

Clo. Yonder sure they are comming. Let vs now stay and fee it.

Fleurish. Enter Duke, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendant.

Duke. Come on, since the youth will not be intreated His owne peril on his forwardnesse.

Ref. Is yonder the man?

Le Beu. Even he, Madam.

Clo. Alas, he is too yong: yet he looks succefffully.

Du. How now daughter, and Cousin: Are you crept hither to fee the wraftling?

Ref. I my Lige, fo pleae you glue vs leave.

Du. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you there is fuch oddes in the man: In pite of the challengers youth, I would faine diffwade him, but he will not bee entreated. Speake to him Ladies, fee if you can moue him.

Le Beu. Call him hether good Monfieur Le Beu.

Duke. Do fo: Ile not be by.

Le Beu. Monfieur the Challenger, the Princefle calls for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and dutie.

Ref. Young man, haue you challeng’d Charles the Wraffler?

Orl. No faire Princefe: he is the generall challenger, I come but in as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Clo. Yong Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your yeanes: you have feene cruell prove of this mans strength, if you faw your felle with your eye, or knew your felle with your judgment, the fear of your aduenture would counsel you to a more equall enterprize. We pray you for your owne fake to embrace your owne safe-tie, and guee over this attempt.

Ref. Do yong Sir, your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our fuite to the Duke, that the wraftling might not go forward.

Orl. I befeech you, punifh mee not with your harde thoughts, wherein I confesse me much guiltie to deny fo faire and excellent Ladies anie thing. But let your faire eyes, and gentle wilhes go with mee to my triall; wherein if I bee foil’d, there is but one tham’d that was never gracious: if kil’d, but one dead that is willing to be fo: I shal do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament moreworld no injuriue,for in it I have nothing: onely in the world I flil vp a place, which may bee better supplied, when I have made it empytie.

Ref. The little strength that I haue, I would it were with you.

Clo.
Col. And mine to eek out hers.
Rof. Fare you well! praise heaven I be deceui'd in you.
Col. Your hearts desires be with you.
Char. Come, where is this yong gallant, that is so defareus to lie with his mother earth?
Orl. Readie Sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.
'Duk. You shall trle but one fall.
Char. No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightilie perfwaded him from a first.
Orl. You mean to mocke me after: you should not haue mockt me before: but come your waies.
Rof. Now Hercules, be thy speede yong man.
Col. I would I were insensible, to catch the strong fellow by the legge.
Wraffe.
Rof. Oh excellent yong man.
Col. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eie, I can tell who should downe.
Sloot. No more, no more.
Orl. Yes I befeech your Grace, I am not yet well breath'd.
Duk. How do't thou Charles?
Le Beau. He cannot speake my Lord.
Duk. Beare him awaie:
What is thy name yong man?
Orl. Orlando my Liege, the yongest sonne of Sir Roland de Boys.
Duk. I would thou hadst beene fon to some man else,
The world eetem'd thy father honourable,
But I did finde him full wise eneme:
Thou shoul'dt have better plea'd me with this deede,
Hadst thou defenced from another house:
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,
I would thou hadt't told me of another father.
Exit Duk.
Col. Were I my Father (Coze) would I do this?
Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rolands fonne,
His yongest fonne, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heire to Fredrick.
Rof. My Father lou'd Sir Roland as his soule,
And all the world was of my Fathers minde,
Had I before knowne this yong man his fonne,
I should have given him these entretis,
Ere he should thus haue ventur'd.
Col. Gentle Coen,
Let vs goe thanke him,and encourage him:
My Fathers rough and enious disposition
Sticks me at heart: Sir, you have well deuer'd,
If you doe keep your promisses in love;
But iully as you have exceeded all promisse,
Your Miftrys shall be happie.
Rof. Gentleman,
Weare this for me: one out of suites with fortune
That could glue more, but that her hand lacking means.
Shall we goe Coze?
Col. I fare you well faire Gentleman.
Orl. Can I not fay, I thank you? My better parts
Are all throwen downe, and that which here flands vp
Is but a quinte, a metre listelle blocke.
Rof. He calls vs back: my pride fell with my fortunes,
He askes him what he would: Did you call Sir?
Sir, you haue wraffled well, and ouerthrowne
More then your enemies.
Col. Will you goe Coze?
Rof. Haeve with you: fare you well.
Exit.
Orl. What passion hangs these weights vpon my toog?
I cannot speake to her, yet the wrg'd conference.
Enter Le Beau.
O poore Orlando! thou art ouerthrowne
Or Charles, or something weaker matters thee.
Le Beau. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsaille you
Te leue this place; Albeit you haue deuer'd
High commendation, true applaufe, and loue;
Yet fioch is now the Dukes condition,
That he milconfers all that you haue done:
The Duke is humorous, what he is indeede
More suites you to conceiue, then I to speake of.
Orl. I thanke you Sir; and pray you tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the Wraffling?
Le Beau. Neither his daughter,if we judge by manners,
But yet indeede the taller is his daughter,
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her vfurping Vole.
To keepe his daughter companie, whose loues
Are dearer then the naturall bond of Sifters:
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke
Hath tane difpleasure'gainft his gentle Neece,
Grounded vpon no other argument,
But that the people praffle her for her vertues,
And pittle her, for her good Fathers fake;
And on my life his malice 'gainft the Lady
Will sodainly breake forth: Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter in a better world then this,
I shall desire more loue and knowledge of you.
Orl. I reft much bounden to you: fare you well.
Thus muft I from the smoke into the fmother,
From tyrant Duke,vnto a tyrant Brother.
Orl. Eext
Scena Tertius.

Enter Celia and Rosaline.
Col. Why Cofen, why Rosaline: Capit haue mercie,
Not a word?
Rof. Not one to throw at a dog.
Col. No, thy words are too preicious to be cast away upon curs,throw some of them at me; come lame mee with reaons.
Rof. Then there were two Cofen laid vp, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.
Col. But is all this for your Father?
Rof. No, some of it is for my childes Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world.
Col. They are but burs, Cofen, throwme vpon thee in holiday foolerie, if we walke not in the trodden paths our very petty-coates will catch them.
Rof. I could shake them off my coate, these burs are in my heart.
Col. Hem them away.
Rof. I would try if I could cry hem,and haue him.
Col. Come,come,wraffle with thy affections.
Rof. O they take the part of a better wraffler then my selfe.
Col. O, a good with vpon you: you will trie in time
As you like it.

in dipight of a fall but turning these leaves out of seruice, let us take in good earnef: Is it poifible on fuch a fodaine,you should fall into fo strong a liking with old Sir
Rouland's young fonne?

Ref. The Duke my Father lou'd his Father deerelie.
Cel. Doth it therefore enufe that you should loue his Sonne deerelie? If by this kinde of chafe, I should hate him, for my father hated his father deerefly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ref. No faith, hate him not for my fake.
Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deferue well?

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ref. Let me loue him for that, and do you loue him
Because I doe. Louke, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eies full of anger.

Duk. Mistries, dispatch you with your safest haft,
And get you from our Court.

Ref. Me Vnecl.

Duk. You Cofen,
Within these ten daies if that thou beeft found
So neere our publike Court as twentie miles,
Thou dieft for it.

Ref. I doe befeech your Grace
Let me the knowledge of my fault beare with me :
If with my felfe I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine owne defires,
If that I do not dreame, or be not franticke,
(As I doe trut I am not) then deere Vnecl,
Never fo much as in a thought vnborne,
Did I offend your highefelf.

Duk. Thus doe all Traitors,
If their purgation did confift in words,
They are as innocent as grace it felfe ;
Let it suffice thee that I trut thee not.

Ref. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a Traitor
Tell me whereon the likelikonds depends?

Duk. Thou art thy Fathers daughter,there's enough.

Ref. So was I when your highnes took his Dukdome,
So was I when your highnefe banifh him ;
Trayfion is not inherited my Lord,
Or if we did derue it from our friends,
What's that to me, my Father was no Traitor,
Then good my Leige, mistake me not fo much,
To thinke my pouerite is treacherous.

Cel. Deere Sournaine heare me speake.

Duk. 1 Celia, we flaid her for your fake,
Elfe shee with her Father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then intent to haue her flay,
It was your pleafure, and your owne remorse,
I was too yong that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a Traitor,
Why fo am I : we fhill haue fleft together,
Rofe at an infiant, learn'd, plaid, eate together,
And wherefoere we went, like Iames Swans,
Sill we went coupled and infeparable.

Duk. She is too subtle for thee, and her smoothnes;
Her verie fience, and per patience,
Speake to the people, and they plight her :
Thou art a foole, the robst thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright, & feem more vertuous
When he is gone : then open not thy lips
Firme, and irreneeable is my doome,
Which I haue paft vpon her, she is banifh'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me my Leige,
I cannot liue out of her companie.

Duk. You are a foole : you Neice prouide yourfelfe,
If you out-flay the time, vpon mine honor,
And in the greatefe of my word you die.

Exit Duke,&c.

Cel. O my poore Rofaline,whether wilt thou goe?
Wilt thou change Fathers? I will glue thee mine :
I charge thee be not thou more grieu'd then I am.
Ref. I haue more caufe.

Cel. Thou haft not Cofen,
Prethee be cheerefull; know'ft thou not the Duke
Hath banifh'd me his daughter?

Ref. That he hath not.

Cel. No, hath not? Rofaline lacks then the loue
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one,
Shall we be freed? shall we part fweete girls?
No, let my Father feke another heire :
Therefore deuife with me how we may fie
Whether to goe, and what to beare with vs,
And doe not feke to take your change vpon you,
To beare your griefes your felfe, and leave me out :
For by this heauen, now at our fouerane pale;
Say what thou canft, Ie goe along with thee.

Ref. Why, whether shall we goe?

Cel. To feke my Vnecl in the Forrest of Arden.

Ref. Alas, what danger will it be to vs,
( Maides as we are) to trauell forth so farre?
Beautie proueketh theues fooner then gold.

Cel. Ille put my felfe in poore and meane attire,
And with a kinde of vmbre fmarine my face,
The like doe you, fo shall we passe along,
And never fir affillants.

Ref. Were it not better,
Because that I am more then common tall,
That I did fuite me all points like a man,
A gallant curtelax vpon my thigh,
A bore-speare in my hand, and in my heart
Lye there what hidden womans feare there will,
Weele have a swaffhing and a marshall outside,
As many other mannifh cowards have,
That doe outface it with their fembilances.

Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?
Ref. Ile have no worfe a name then Iames owne Page,
And therefore looke you call me Ganined.

But what will you by call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my flate:
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ref. But Cofen, what if we affaid to fieale
The clownifh Foole out of your Fathers Court:
Would he not be a comfort to our trauaille?

Cel. Heele goe along ore the wide world with me,
Leave me alone to woe him; Let's away
And get our Ievels and our wealth together,
Deuife the fittest time, and safest way
To hide vs from pursuite that will be made
After my flight: now goe in we content
To libertie, and not to banifhment.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke Senior: Amyens, and two or three Lords lke Forrefters.

Duk. Sen. Now my Coe-mates, and brothers in exile:
Hath not old cuftome made this life more sweete

Then
As you like it.

Then that of painted pome? Are not these woods
More free from peril then the emulous Court?
Here I feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The feasons difference, as the Icle phange
And carfulh chiding of the winters windes,
Which when it bites and blows upon my body
Even till I shrinke with cold, I smite, and say
This is not flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly perwade me what I am:
Sweet are the vies of aduérside
Which like the toad, ugly and venemous,
Wereas yet a precious jewel in his head.
And this our life exempt from publike baunt,
Findes tongues in trees, books in the running brookes,
Sermons in flowers, and good in every thing.
Amin. I would not change it, happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a file.

Du. Sen. Come, shall we goe and kill vs venison?
And yet it irkes me the poore dampled fools
Being native Burgers of this defert City,
Should intheir owne confines with forked heads
Have their round hanches goard.
1. Lor. Indeed my Lord
The melancholy Jaques grieues at that,
And in that kinde Iwearer you doe more vifurpe
Then doth your brother that hath banish'd you:
To day my Lord of Amiens, and my selfe,
Did feale behinde him as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antick roote peepes out
Upon the brooke that brawles along this wood,
To the which place a poore fequerted Stag
That from the Hunters aime had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed my Lord
The wretched annimall he'nd forth fuch groanes
That his dicharge did stretch his leatheern coat
Aimsto burfting, and the big round teares
Cours'd one another downe his innocent nofe
In pitrous chafe: and thus the haire foole,
Much marked of the melancholie Jaques,
Stood on th'extempest verge of the swift brooke,
Augmenting it with teares.

Du. Sen. But what faid Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
1. Lor. O yes, into a thousand families.
First, for his weeping into the needlele flame;
Poore Deere quoth he, thou mak'ft a tennent
As worlilings doe, gling thy fum of more
To that which had to much: then being there alone,
Left and abandond of his velout friend;
'Tis right quoth he, thus miserie doth part
The Fluex of companie: anon a careleffe Heard
Full of the pature, jumps along by him
And never flaes to greet him: 1 quoth Jaques;
Sweep on you fat and grezie Citizens,
'Tis laft the fashion; wherefore doe you looke
Vpon that poore and broken bankrupt there?
Thus mift iewedily he pierceth through
The body of Countrie, Citie, Court,
Yes, and of this our life, swearing that we
Are meere vifurers, tyrants, and whates worfe
To fright the Annimals, and to kill them vp
In their affign'd and native dwelling place.
D. Sen. And did you blame him in this contemplation?
2. Lor. We did my Lord, weeping and commeting
Vpon the sobbing Deere.

Du. Sen. Show me the place,
I love to cope him in thefe fullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.
Exunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, with Lords.

Duk. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villains of my Court
Are of content and sufferance in this.
1. Lor. I cannot hear of any that did see her,
The Ladies her attendants of her chamber
Saw her a bed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed vntreasur'd of their Mistres.
2. Lor. My Lord, the roynish Clown, at whom so oft,
Your Grace was wont to laugh is also missing.
Hifperia the Princefse Centlewman
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cofen much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrafter
That did but lately folle the fyновe Charles,
And she believe where ever they are gone
That youth is surely in their companie.

Duk. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither,
If he be absent, bring his Brother to me,
Ile make him finde him: do this foadily;
And let not search and inquisition quail,
To bring against those foolish runawies.
Exunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?
Ad. What my yong Mafter, oh my gentle mafter,
Oh my sweet mafter, 0 you memorie
Of old Sir Rowland; why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be fo fond to ouercome
The bonnie prifer of the humorous Duke?
Your prife is come too fwithily home before you.
Know you not Mafter, to feeme kinde of men,
Their graces ferue them but as enemies,
No more doe yours: your vertues gentle Mafter
Are fanchifie and holy traiors to you:
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it?
Why, what's the matter?
Ad. O vnappie youth,
Come not within these doores: within this rooffe
The enemie of all your graces lies
Your brother, no, no brother, yet the fonne
(0 yet not the fon, I will not call him fon)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your prifes, and this night he means,
To burne the lodging where you vie to lye,
And you within it: if he faile of that

He
As you like it.

He will have other means to cut you off;
I overheard him and his projects:
This is no place, this house is but a butcherie;
Abhorre it, fear it, do not enter it.
Ad. Why whether Adam would't haue me go?
Ad. No matter whether, so you come not here.
Orl. What, would't thou haue me go & beg my food,
Or with a bafe and boistrous Sword enforce
A theeuish lying on the common rode?
This I must do, or know what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can.
I rather will fabricate me to the malice
Of a diuerted blood, and bloudie brother.
Ad. But do not so: I haue five hundred Crownes
The thrieffe hire I faued vnder your Father,
Which I did flore to be my foffer Nurse,
When feruice should in my old limbs lie lame,
And vnregarded age in corners throwne,
Take that, and he that doth the Rauens feede,
Yea prouudently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age: here is the gold,
All this I gliue you, let me be your fervant:
Though I looke old, yet I am strong and luffie;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot, and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with vnbashfull forehead woe,
The meanes of weakeknesse and debilitie,
Therefore my age is as a luffie winter,
Fruifie, but kindely; let me goe with you,
Ile doe the feruice of a young man
In all your businesse and necessitie.
Orl. Oh good old man, how well in thee appeares
The constant feruice of the antique world,
When feruice sweate for dutie, not for meede:
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweate, but for promotion,
And hauing that do choake their feruice vp,
Euen with the hauing, it is not fo with thee:
But poore old man, thou prun't h a rotten tree,
That cannot do much as a bloffome yeilde,
In lieu of all thy paines and husbandrie,
In come thy waies, weelee goe along together,
And ere we haue thy youthfull wages spent,
Weele light vpon some feted low content.
Ad. Master goe on, and I will follow thee
To the last gape with truth and loyaltie,
From feauentie yeeres, till now almost foureescore
Here lised I, but now live here no more
At feauentene yeeres, many their fortunes fecke
But at foureescore, it is too late a weeks,
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Then to die well, and not my Masters debter.
Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganined, Celia for Aliena, and Clowne, alias Touchstone.

Ref. O Jupiter, how merry are my spirits?
Clo. I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not wearie.
Ref. I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparell, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hofe ought to shew it selfe coragious to petty-coate; therefore courage, good Aliena.
Clo. I pray you beare with me, I cannot goe no further.
Clo. For my part, I had rather beare with you, then beare you: yet I should beare no crosse if I did beare you, for I thinke you have no money in your purse.
Ref. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.
Clo. I saw you in Arden, the more fool I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but Traveillers must be content.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Ref. Ibe so good Touchstone Look you, who comes here, a young man and an old in solome talke.
Cor. That is the way to make her fcone you fill.
Sil. Oh Corin, that thou knowest how I doe love her.
Cor. I partly guesse: for I haue lou'd ere now.
Sil. No Corin, being old, thou canst not guesse,
Though in thy youth thou waft as true a lover
As ever figh'd upon a midnight pillow:
But if thy loue were ever like to mine,
As fure I thinke did never man loue so:
How many actions most ridiculous,
Hast thou beene drawn to by thy fantasie?
Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Sil. Oh thou didst then never loue so heartily,
If thou rememberst not the flighthest folly,
That euer loue did make thee run into,
Thou haft not lout'd.
Or if thou haft not sat as I doe now,
Wearing thy hearer in thy Misritis praine,
Thou haft not lout'd.
Or if thou haft not broke from companie,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou haft not lout'd.
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe.
Exit.
Ref. Alas poor Shephard searching of they would,
I have by hard adventure found mine owne.
Clo. And I mine: I remember when I was in love, I broke my sword vpon a flone, and bid him take that for comming a night to Jane Smile, and I remember the kiffing of her batler, and the Cowes dogs that her prettie choypt hands had milk'd; and I remember the wooling of a peacled instead of her, from whom I tooke two coeds, and givinf her them againe, fald with weeping tears, weare thefe for my fake: wee that are true Louers, runne into erange capers; but as all is mortall in nature, so is all nature in loue, mortall in folly.
Ref. Thou speak't wiser then thou art ware of.
Clo. Nay, I shal neither be ware of mine owne wit, till I breake my thins against it.
Ref. Iose, Iose, this Shepherds paifion,
Is much vpon my fashion.
Clo. And mine, but it groes something stale with mee.
Cel. If I pray you, one of you question you'd man,
If he for gold will gue vs any foode,
I faint almoft to death.
Clo. Holls; you Clowne.
Ref. Peace foolie, he's not thy kinsman.
Cor. Who calls?
Clo. Your betters Sir.
Cor. Elle are they very wretched.

Ref. Peace
As you like it.

Ref. Peace I say; good even to your friend.
Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.
Ref. I prethee Shepheard, if that loye or gold
Can in this desart place buy entertainment.
Bring vs where we may reft our felues, and feed:
Here's a yong maide with trauaille much oppressed,
And faints for succour.
Cor. Fare Sir, I pitie her,
And with for her sake more then for mine owne,
My fortunes were more able to releue her:
But I am theheared to another man,
And do not theere the Fleeces that I graze:
My matter is of curulith dispoition,
And little wreakes to finde the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitalitie.
Besides his Coate, his Flockes, and bounds of feede
Are now on fale, and at our sheep-cost now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on: but what is, come fee,
And in my voice moft welcome shall you be.
Ref. What is he that shall buy his flocke and pasture?
Cor. That yong Swaine that you saw heere but creste.
That little cares for buying any thing.
Ref. I pray thee, if it fland with honestie,
Buy thou the Cottage, pasture, and the flocke,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of vs.
Col. And we will mend thy wages:
I like this place, and willingly could
Waitte my time in it.
Cor. Affuredly the thing is to be fold:
Go with me, if you like vpon report,
The foile, the profit, and this kinde of life,
I will your very faithfull Feeder be,
And buy it with your Gold right foddainly.  Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter, Amyens, Jaques, & others.

Song.
Under the greene wood tree,
Who loves to bee with mee,
And turne his merry Note,
Unto the fweetest Birds throate:
Come bitter, come bitter, come bitter;
Here shall be fea no enemie,
But Winter and rough Weather.

Ian. More, more, I pre'thee more.
Amy. It will make you melancholy Monfieur Jaques.
Ian. I thanke it: More, I prethee more,
I can fucke melancholy out of a fong,
As a Weazel fuckes egges: More, I pre'thee more.
Amy. My voice is ragged, I know I cannot please you.
Ian. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to finge:
Come, more, another fzano: Cal you'em flazo's?
Amy. What you wil Monfieur Jaques.
Ian. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe mee nothing: Will you finge?
Amy. More at your request, then to please my felfe.
Ian. Well then, if euer I thanke any man, Ile thanke you: but that they cal complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thankes me heartily,
I me thinkes I haue given him a penie, and he renders me the begggerly thankes. Come finge; and you that wil not hold your tongues.
Amy. Wel, Ile end the Song. Sirs, cover the while,
The Duke wil drinke vnder this tree; he hath bin all this to day to looke you.
Ian. And I have bin all this day to avoid him:
He is too difuteable for my companie:
I think of as many matters as he, but I glue
Heauen thankes, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

Song, Altogether beare.
Who doth ambitious fonne, and longs to live i'th Sunne
Seeking the food be eate, and pleas'd with what he gets:
Come bitter, come bitter, come bitter,
Here shall be fée, & c.

Ian. Ile give you a verfe to this note,
That I made yesterdays in deligft of my Invention.
Amy. And Ile fing it.
Amy. Thus it goes.
If it do come to paffe, that any man tumne Aife:
Leaving his wealth and safe,
A fubborne wall to pleafe,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:
Herefhall be fee, groffe foles as be,
And if he wall come to me.
Amy. What's that Ducdame?
Ian. 'Tis a Greekke inquocation, to call fools into a circle.
Ile go fleee if I can: if I cannot, Ile raife against all the firft borne of Egypt.
Amy. And Ile go fecke the Duke,
His banquet is prepar'd. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, & Adam.

Adam. Deere Mafter, I can go no further:
O I die for food. Heere lie I downe,
And mesure out my graue. Farwel kinde mafter.
Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee:
Lye a little, comfort a little, cheere thy felfe a little.
If this vncoth Forrest yield any thing faugue,
I will either be food for it, or bring it for foode to thee:
Thy conceite is nearer death, then thy powers.
For my fake be confortable, hold death a while
At the armes end: I wil heere be with thee prefently,
And if I bring thee not fomthing to eate,
I wil giue thee leaue to die: but if thou diest
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labor.
Wel faid, thou lookt' cheeries,
And Ile be with thee quickly: yet thou lieft
In the bleake aire. Come, I wil beare thee to fome helter, and thou shalt not die
For lacke of a dinner,
If there lie anything in this Defert.
Cheereely good Adam. Exeunt Scena

Du. Sen. I think he be transform'd into a beast;
For I can no where finde him, like a man.

1. Lord. My Lord, he is but euen now gone hence,
Heere was he merry, hearing of a Song.

Du. Sen. If he compact of larrys, grow Muscall,
We shall have shortly discord in the Spheres:
Go fecke him, tell him I would speake with him.

Enter L aun.

1. Lord. He faues my labor by his owne approach.

Du. Sen. Why do now Monfieur, what a life is this
That your poor friends must woe your compaine,
What, you looke merrily.

Iaq. A Foole, a foole: I met a foole i' th' Forrest,
A motley Foole (a miserable world.)
As I do liue by foole, I met a foole,
Who laid him downe, and bask'd him in the Sun,
And raill'd on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good fet terms, and yet a motley foole.
Good morrow foole (quoth i:) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not foole, till heauen hath lent me fortune,
And then he drew a diall from his poache,
And looking on it, with lache-luthe eye,
Says, very wisely, it is ten a clocke:
Thus we may fee (quoth he) how the world waggis:
'Tis but an hour auge, since it was nine,
And after one hour more, 'twill be eleuen,
And so from hour to hour, we rippe, and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did heare
The motley Foole, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chanticleere,
That Fooles should be so depe contemplative:
And I did laugh, fans intemination
An hour by his diall. Oh noble foole,
A worthy foole: Motley's the only weare.

Du. Sen. What foole is this?

Iaq. O worthie Foole: One that hath bin a Courtier
And fayes, if Ladies be but yong, and faire,
They haue the gift to know it: and in his braise,
Which is as drie as the remainder basket
After a voyage: He hath strange places cram'd
With obfcrution, the which he vents
In mangled forms. O that I were a foole,
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Du. Sen. Thou shalt haue one.

Iaq. It is my onely fuite,
Prouided that you heed your better judgements
Of all opinion that groves ranke in them,
That I am wife. I must haue libertie
Withall, as large a Charter as the winde,
To blow on whom I please, for fo foole haue:
And they that are most gaude with my folly,
They moft muft laugh: And why sir muft they fo?
The why is plaine, as way to Parith Church:
Hee, that a Foole doth very wily hit,
Doth very fooliilly, although he smart
Seeme fenfeleffe of the bob. If not,
The Wife-mans folly is anathomiz'd
Euen by the squandering glances of the foole.

Inseft me in my motley: Glue me leave
To speak in my minde, and I will through and through Cleanse the foule bodie of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receiue my medicine.

Iaq. What, for a Counter, would I do, but good?

Du. Sen. Mof't miccheuous foule fin, in chiding fin:
For thou thy felfe haft bene a Libertine,
As fenfull as the brutth fing it felle,
And all th'imbossed fores, and headed euils,
That thow with license of free foot haft caught,
Would'st thou diggore into the general world.

Iaq. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein taxe any private party:
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the wearie verie meanes do ebe.
What woman in the Citie do I name,
When that I faie the City woman beares
The cift of Princes on vnworthy shoulders?
Who fhould come in, and faie that I meane her,
When fuch a one as thee, fuch is her neighbor?
Or what is he of baifeft function,
That fayes his brauerie is not on my cof,
Thinking that I meane him, but therein fuites
His folly to the mettle of my speech,
There then, how then, what then, let me fee wherein
My tongue hath wrongd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himfelfe: if he be free,
why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies
Vnclim'd of any man. But who come here?

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Forbeare, and eate no more.

Iaq. Why I haue eate none yet.

Orl. Nor thalt not, till neceffity be feru'd.

Iaq. Of what kinde fhould this Cocke come of?

Du. Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy diftres?
Or eile a rude defpifer of good manners,
That in ciuity thou feem'dst to emptie?

Orl. You touch'd my veine at firft, the thorny point
Of bare deftreffe, hath tane from me the fhw
Of smooth ciuility: yet am I in-land bred,
And know fome nourture: But forbeare, I fay,
He dies that touches any of this fruite,
Till I, and my affaires are anwer'd.

Iaq. And you will not be anwer'd with reafon,
I muft dye.

Du. Sen. What would you have?
Your gentlenesse fhall force, more then your force
Moue vs to gentlenesse.

Orl. I almoft die for food, and let me haue it.

Du. Sen. Sit downe and feed, & welcom to our table

Orl. Speake you fo gently? Pardon me I pray you,
I thought that all things had bin fanae heere,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of ferue command'ment. But what ere you are
That in this defert inacceffible,
Vnder the shade of melancholly boughs,
Loofe, and neglecd the creeping hours of time:
If euer you have look'd on better dayes:
If euer beene where bels have knoll'd to Church:
If euer fate at any good mans feaft:
If euer from your eye-lds wip'd a teare,
And know what 'tis to pittie, and be pittied:
Let gentlenesse my strong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I blufh, and hide my Sword.

As you like it.
As you like it.

Du. Sen. True is it, that we haue seene better dayes;
And haue with holy bell bin knowed to Church,
And fat at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eies
Of drops, that sacred sly hath engendred:
And therefore fit you downe in gentienesse,
And take vpon command, what helpe we haue
That to your wanting may be ministr'd.
Ori. Then but forbear your food a little while:
Whiles (like a Doe) I go to finde my Fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poore man,
Who after me, hath many a weary steppe
Limp't in pure loue; till he be sifting'd,
Opprest with two weake euls, age, and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.
And we will nothing waffe till you returne.
Ori. I thanke ye, and be blest for your good comfort.
Du. Sen. Thou feeft, we are not all alone vnhappy:
This wide and vnsett fall Theater
Preferr'd more wofull Pageants then the Scane
Wherein we play in.
Ja. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women, meerely Players;
They have their Exits and their Entrees,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His Acts being feuen ages. At sirft the Infant,
Mewing, and puking in the Nurseries arms:
Then, the whining Schoole-boy with his Satchell
And shining morning face, creeping like snale
Vnwillingly to schoole. And then the Lauer,
Sighing like Furnace, with a wofull ballad
Made to his Miftreffe eye-brow. Then, a Soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the Pard,
Ielous in honor, fadaine, and quicke in quarrell,
Seeking the bubble Reputation
Euen in the Canons mouth: And then, the Iuflice
In faire round belly, with good Capon lin'd,
With eyes seere, and beard of formall cut,
Full of wise fawes, and moderne inranges,
And so he playes his part. The flat age shifts
Into the leane and flipper'd Pantaloone,
With fpecacles on nofe, and pouch on fide,
His youthfull hofe well su'd, a world too wide,
For his shrinke thanke, and his bigge manly voice,
Turning againe toward childifh trebble pipes,
And whistles in his sound. Laft Scene of all,
That ends this strange euentfull historie,
Is second childifhneffe, and meer eoliuion,
Sans teeth, fans eyes, fans tafe, fans euerie thing.

Enter Orlando with Adam.
Du. Sen. Welcome; let downe your venerable burthen,
And let him feede.
Ori. I thanke you moft for him.
Ad. So had you neede,
I scarce can speake to thanke you for my selfe.
Du. Sen. Welcome, fall too: I will not trouble you,
As yet to question you about your fortunes:
Glue vs some Mufick, and good Cozen, fing.

Song.
Blew, blow, thou winter windes,
Thou art no soonkinde, as mans ingratitude
Thy tooth n'ut for keenes, because thou art not fuent, although thy breath be rude.

Heigh bo, sing heigh bo, unto the greene bally,
Moft friendship, & fayning; most Louing, meerely folly:
The heigh bo, the bally,
This Life is moft folly.

Freins, freins, thou bitter skit that daft not bight so nigh
as benefits forget:
Though thou the waters wapere, thy fling is not so sharpe,
as freind remembered not.
Heigh bo, Singh and.

Duke Sen. If that you were the good Sir Rowlands son,
As you haue whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witneffe,
Moft truly lim'd, and luing in your face,
Be truly welcome hither; I am the Duke
That lou'd your Father, the residue of your fortune,
Go to my Cave, and tell mee. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy matters is:
Support him by the arme; give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes vnderstand. Exeunt.

Aetius Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Lords, & Olier.
Du. Not see him since? Sir, fit, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercie,
I shoul not seeke an abstent argument
Of my reuenge, thou prefent: but looke to it,
Finde out thy brother wherefore he is,
Seek he him with Candle: bring him dead, or luing
Within this twelvemonth, or turne thou no more
To seeke a luing in our Territorie.
Thy Lands and all things that thou doft call thine,
Worth feiture, do we feize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brethren mouth,
Of what we thinke againft thee.
Oli. Oh that your Highneffe knew my heart in this:
I never lou'd my brother in my life.
Duke. More villainous thou. Well push him out of dores
And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent vpon his house and Lands:
Do this expediently, and turne him going. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando.
Ori. Hang there my verme, in witneffe of my love,
And thou thrice crowned Queene of night suruer
With thy chaffe eye, from thy pale sphare aboue
Thy Huntrefle name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, thinke Trees shall be my Bookes,
And in their barkes my thoughts Ie charactrer,
That euerie eye, which in this Forrest lookes,
Shall fey thy vertue witneffe euerie where.
Run, run Orlando, carue on euerly Tree,
The faire, the chaffe, and vnxpreffue thee.
Exit.

Enter Corin & Cloume.
Co. And how like you this shepherds life Mr Touchstone?
Cl.

As you like it.

Close. Truely Shepheard, in respect of it felle, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepheards life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very wild life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth mee well: but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a faire life (looke you) it fits my humor well: but as there is no more plentie in it, it goes much against my stomacke, Havest any Philosophie in thee shepheard?

Cor. No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at exe he is: and that bee that wants money, meanes, and content, is without three good frends. That the propertie of raine is to wet, and fire to burne: That good pasture makes fat sheepe: and that a great caufe of the night, is lacke of the Sunne: That heat that hath learned no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complaine of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a naturall Philosopher. Was't ever in Court, Shepheard?

Cor. No truly.

Clo. Then thou art deadd, like an ill roated Egge, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at Court? your reason.

Clo. Why, if thou neuer was't at Court, thou neuer fawe good manners; if thou neuer fawe! good manners, then thy manners must be wicked, and wickednes is fin, and finne is damnation: Thou art in a parlous state shepheard.

Cor. Not a whit Touched, tho' that are good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Country, as the behauiour of the Countrie is most mockeable at the Court. You told me, you falute not at the Court, but you kiffe your hands: that courtefy would be vncleanlie if Courtiers were shepheards.

Clo. Infance, briefly: come, infance.

Cor. Why we are still handling our Ewes, and their Fels you know are grease.

Clo. Why do not your Courtiers hands sweate and is not the grease of a Mutton, as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: A better infance I say: Come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips wil feele them the sooner. Shallow a-gien: a more founder infance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd ouer, with the surgery of our sheepe: and would you haue vs kiffe Tarre? The Courtiers hands are perfum'd with Cluet.

Clo. Most shallow man: Thou wormes meate in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed: leane of the wife and perpend: Cluet is of a bafer birth then Tarre, the verie vncleanlie fluxe of a Cat. Mend the infance Shepheard.

Cor. You have too Courtly a wit, for me, Ile reft.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labour'd, I earne that I eat: get that I weare; owe no man hate, ennie no mans hapINESE: glad of other mens good content with my harme: and the grestef of my pride, is to see my Ewes graze & my Lambs fucke.

Clo. That is another finple finne in you, to bring the Ewes and the Rammes together, and to offer to get your liuing, by the copulation of Cattle, to be bawd to a Belweather, and to betray a shee-Lambe of a twelvemonth to a crooked-pated olde Cuckoldly Ramme, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damm'd for this, the duell himselfe will have no shepheards, I cannot see elfe how thou shouldeft scape.

Cor. Heere comes yong Mr'Gaminde, my new Mitrifles Brother.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. From the caft to westerne Inde, no iewel is like Rosalinde,
Hir worth being mounted on the winde,
through all the world heares Rosalinde.
All the pictures fairest Linds, are but blackes to Rosalinde:
Let no face bee kept in mind,
but the faire of Rosalinde.

Clo. Ile rime you fo, eight yeares together; dinners, and suppers, and sleepings hours excepted: it is the right Butter-womens ranke to Market.

Ros. Out Fool.

Cor. For a taffe.

If a Hart doe lacke a Hinde,
Let him seeketh out Rosalinde:
If the Cat will all with kinde,
So be sure will Rosalinde:
Wintred garments must be linde,
So must slender Rosalinde:
They that reap muft beafe and binde,
then to carie with Rosalinde.
Sweeteft nut, bath freweft rindes,
such a nut is Rosalinde.
He that beweteast rofe will finde, must finde Loues pricks, & Rosalinde.

This is the verie falsely gallop of Verfes, why do you inceff your felle with them?

Ros. Peace you dull foole, I found them on a tree.

Clo. Truely the tree yeilds bad fruite.

Ros. He graffe it with you, and then I shall graffe it with a Medler: then it will be the earliest fruite of the country: for you'll be rotten ere you bee halfe ripe, and that's the right vertue of the Medler.

Clo. You haue fayd: but whether wisely or no, let the Forreft judge.

Enter Celia with a writing.

Ros. Peace, here comes my fitter reading, stand aside.

Cel. Why should this Delfert bee, for it is unpeopled? Not: Tongs Ite bang on entwre tree, that fball cull faying fhee.
Somes, how briefe the Life of man runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the fretching of a fern,
buckles in his funne of age.
Some of isolated worms,
make the foules of friends, and friends
But upon the faireft beares, or at euerie sentence end;
Will I Rosalinde avert, teaching all that readeth, to know
The quintewence of euerie frite, beauten would in little flowe.
Therefore beaue Nature char'd, that one bodie should be fill'd
With all Graces vince enlarg'd, nature prouely diftil'd.

Helens
Ref. Nay, but the diuell take mocking: speake fadde brow, and true maid.
Cel. Nay (Coz) tis he.
Ref. Orlando?
Cel. Orlando.
Ref. Alas the day, what shall I do with my doublet & hole: What did he when thou faw’st him? What fayde he? How look’d he? Wherein went he? What makes heere heere? Did he aske for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou fee him again? Anfwere me in one word.
Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuous mouth first: ‘tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages size, to fay I and no, to thefe particulars, is more then to anfwere in a Catechifme.

Ref. But doth he know that I am in this Forreft, and in mans apparrell? Looks he as frefhly, as he did the day he Wraffled?
Cel. It is as cafe to count Atomies as to refolve the refolutions of a Louer: but take a tafe of my finding him, and relifh it with good obfervation. I found him under a tree like a drop’d Acorne.
Ref. It may vveel be cal’d Loues tree, when it droppes forth fruite.
Cel. Give me audience, good Damad.
Ref. Proceed.
Cel. There lay hee stretch’d along like a Wounded knight.
Ref. Though it be pittie to fee fuch a fight, it vveel becomes the ground.
Cel. Cry holla, to the tongue, I prethee: it curuettes vnfeasonymouly. He was furnifh’d like a Hunter.
Ref. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.
Cel. I would sing my fong without a burthen, thou bring’t me out of tune.
Ref. Do you not know I am a woman, when I thinke, I muft speake? sweet, fay on.

Enter Orlando & Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not here?
Ref. ‘Tis he, flinke by, and note him.
Jaq. I thanke you for your company, but good faith I had as liefle haue beene my felfe alone.
Orl. And fo had I: but yet for fahion fake I thanke you too, for your societie.

Jaq. God buy you, let’s meet as little as we can.
Orl. I do defire we may be better strangers.
Jaq. I pray you marre no more trees: with Writing Loue-fongs in their barks.
Orl. I pray you marre no moe of my verfes with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Refalinde is your loues name? Orl. Yes, luft.
Jaq. I do not like her name.
Orl. There was no thought of pleafing you when she was wriften.
Jaq. What figure is the of?
Orl. Luft as high as my heart.
Jaq. You are full of prety anfwers: haue you not bin acquainted with goldsmiths wifes, & cond the out of rings
Orl. Not fo: but I anfwere you right painted cloath, from whence you have studied your queftions.
Jaq. You have a nimble wit: I thinke ‘twas made of Attalanta’s hecles. Will you fitte downe with me, and we two, will raife againft our Miftirs the world, and all our miserie.
Orl. I will childe no breather in the world but my felfe against
As you like it.

against whom I know most faults.

Ofl. The word that you have, is to be in love.

Ofl. 'Tis a fault I will not change, for your best ver-tue: I am ware of you.

Iaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a Foole, when I found you.

Ofl. He is drow'd in the brooke, looke but in, and you shall see him.

Iaq. There I shall see mine owne figure.

Ofl. Which I take to be either a foole, or a Cipher.

Iaq. Ile tarrie no longer with you, farewell good fig-

Ofl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Mon-

Ofl. Ref. I wil speake to him like a sawcie Lucky, and der that habit play the knave with him, do you hear For-

Ofl. Verie wel, what would you? (refter.

Ref. I pray you, what i'ft a clocke?

Ofl. You should ask me what time o'day: there's no clocke in the Forrest.

Ref. Then there is no true Louer in the Forrest, elfe fighting euery minute: and groaning euery houre would detect the lazie foot of time, as well as a clocke.

Ofl. And why not the swift foot of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Ref. By no means sir; Time travels in diuers paces, with diuers perons: Ile tell you who Time ambles with-all, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops with, and who he runs full withal.

Ofl. I prethee, who doth he trot withal?

Ref. Marry he trots hard with a yong maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized:
if the interim be but a fennent, Times pace is so hard,
that it feemes the length of feuen yeares.

Ofl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ref. With a Priest that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Govt: for the one fleepes eaily because he cannot study, and the other lues merrily, because he feeleth no paine: the one lacking the burthen of leane and waffeful Learning; the other knowing no burthen of heaste tedious penurie. These Time ambles withal.

Ofl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ref. With a thief to the gallowes: for though hee go as softly as foot can fall, he thinkes himselfe too soon there.

Ofl. Who stalest it full withal?

Ref. With Lawiers in the vacation: for they sleepe betweene Terme and Terme, and then they perceiue not how time move.

Ofl. Where dwel you prettie youth?

Ref. With this Shepheardesse my sister: heere in the skirts of the Forrest, like fringe vpon a petticoot.

Ofl. Are you natiue of this place?

Ref. As the Conie that you see dwell where hee is kindled.

Ofl. Your accent is something finer, then you could purchase in fo remoued a dwelling.

Ref. I have bin told fo of many: but indeed, an olde religious Vnckle of mine taught me to speake, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtship too well: for there he fel in love. I have heard him read many LeCtours against it, and I thanke God, I am not a Woman to be touch'd with fo many giddie offences as hee hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Ofl. Can you remember any of the principall eulps, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ref. There were none principal, they were all like one another, as halfe pence are, euery one fault feeming monstrous, till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Ofl. I prethee recount some of them.

Ref. No: I wil not caft away my phycick, but on those that are ficker. There is a man haunts the Forrest, that a-bumes our yong plants with careing Rosalinde on their barkes; hangs Oades vpon Hauorthunes, and Elegies on brambles: all (forsooth) defying the name of Rosalinde.
If I could meet that Fancie-monger, I would give him good condulc, for he feemes to have the Quotidian of Loue vpon him.

Ofl. I am he that is fo Loue-shak'd, I pray you tell me your remedie.

Ref. There is none of my Vnckles marks vpon you:
he taught me how to know a man in loue: in which cage of rufhes, I am sure you art not prisoners.

Ref. What were his marks?

Ref. A leane cheeke, which you have not: a blew eie and funken, which you have not: an vnqueftionable spir, which you have not: a head neglected, which you have not: (but I pardon you for that, for simply your having in bearding, is a yonger brethren renewne) then your hoefe should be vngarter'd, your bonnet vnbanded, your feene vnbutton'd, your hone vntide, and euery thing about you, demonstrating a carelesse defolation: but you are no fuch man; you are rather point deuice in your ac-countments, as louing your felie, then feeming the Lou-er of any other.

Ofl. Fare youth, I would I could make thee beleue Ref. Me beleue it? You may affonne make her that you Loue beleue it, which I warrant she is apter to do, then to confefte she do's: that is one of the points, in the which women fullie the lie to their concidences. But in good faith, are you he that hangs the veries on the Trees, wherein Rosalinde is fo admired?

Ofl. I sweare to thee youth, by the white hand of Rosalinde, I am that he, that vnofteake he.

Ref. But are you so much in loue, as your times speake?

Ofl. Neither time nor reason can expresse how much.

Ref. Loue is meerely a madnede, and I tel you, de-feres as wel a darke houfe, and a whip, as madmen do:
and the reafon why they are no so punisht and cured, is that the Lunacie is fo ordinarie, that the whippers are in love to: yet I profess er curer it by counfel.

Ofl. Did you euer cure any so?

Ref. Yes one, and in this manner. Hee was to imagine me his Loue, his Miliftus: and I fet him euery day to woe me. At which time would I, being but a mooniyouth, greene, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantafical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full e of tears, full of smiles: for euery passion somthing, and for no passion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him: then entertaine him, then forwear him: now wepe for him, then flipt at him: that I drawe my Sutor from his mad humor of love, to a living humor of madness, I was to forwearwe the full streame of'
y world, and to liue in a nooke meerly Monatrick: and thus I cur'd him, and this way wil I take vpon mee to wae thy Liuer as clean as a sound sheepe hearth, that there flall not be one spot of Loue in't.

Ofl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ref. I would cure you, if you would but call me ROSlinde, and come euery day to my Coate, and woe me.

R 3.

Ofl.
As you like it.

Ofran. Now by the faith of my ioue, I will ; Tel me where it is.

Ref. Go with me to it, and lbe shew it you: and by the way, you shall tell me, where in the Forrest you liue : Will you go ?

Ofr. With all my heart, good youth.

Ref. Nay, you must call mee Refallind: Come sifter, will you go?

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cloues, Andrej, & Iacques:

Cl. Come apace good Andrej, I wil fetch vp your Goates, Andrej : and how Andrej am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant vs: what features?

Cl. I am heere with then, and thy Goates, as the most capricious Poet honf Ouid was among the Gothes.

Iaq. O knowledge ill inhabited, worfe then Ioue in a thatch’d house.

Cl. When a mens verfe cannot be vnderstood, nor a mans good wit fecorded with the forward childe, vnderstanding: it striketh a man more dead then a great rejoyning in a little roome: truly, I would the Gods hadde made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what Poetical is: is it honfet in deed and word: is it a true thing?

Cl. No trulie: for the trueft poetrie is the most faining, and Louers are given to Poetrie: and what they sweare in Poetrie, may be faid as Louers, they do feigne.

Aud. Do you with then that the Gods had made me poetical?

Clou. I do truly: for thou (weare’t to me thou art honfet: Now if thou were a Poet, I might have some hope thou didst feigne.

Aud. Would you not have me honfet?

Cl. No trulie, vnlesse thou wert hard favor’d : for honfetle coupled to beautie, is to haue Honie a fawce to Sugar.

Iaq. A materiall flooe.

Aud. Well, I am not faire, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honfet.

Cl. Truly, and to caft away honfetle vppon a foule flat, were to put good meate into an vncheane dish.

Aud. I am not a flat, though I thanke the Gods I am foule.

Cl. Well, praiied be the Gods, for thy foulnesse:flattinnesse may come hereafter. But be it, as it may bee, I wil marrie thee: and to that end, I haue bin with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the Vicar of the next village, who hath promis’d to mee in this place of the Forrest, and to couple vs.

Iaq. I would faine fee this meeting.

Aud. Wel, the Gods give vs ioy.

Cl. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt : for here wee haue no Temple but the wood, no assemblie but hornbe-beats. But what thoufht Couflage. As hornes are odious, they are necerfarie. It is fald, many a man knowes no end of his goods; right: Many a man has good Hornes, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowrie of his wife, ‘tis none of his owne getting ; hornes, even fo poore men alone:

No, no, the nobleft Deere hath them as huge as the Rafe- call: Is the fingle man therefore bleffed? No, as a wall’d Towne is more worthier then a village, fo is the fore- head of a married man, more honourable then the bare brow of a Batcheller : and by how much defence is better then no skill, by fo much is a horn more precious then to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Heere comes Sir Oliver, Sir Oliver Mar-text you are wel met. Will you dispatch vs here: vnder this tree, or shal we go with you to your Chappell?

Ofr. Is there none heere to give the woman?

Cl. I wil not take her on guilt of any man.

Ofr. Truly the must be guen, or the marriage is not lawfull.

Iaq. Proceed, proceede: Ile glue her.

Cl. Good even good M’s what ye call’ : how do you Sir, if you are verie well met? goddil the for your last company, I am verie glad to fee you, euen a toy in hand here: Sir Nay, pray be couer’d.

Iaq. Wil you be married, Motley?

Cl. As the Oxe hath his bow fyr, the horfe his curb, and the Falcon her bels, fo man hath his defires, and as Pigeons bill, fo wedlocke would be nibling.

Iaq. And wil you (being a man of your breeding) be married vnder a buft like a begger? Get you to church, and haue a good Priest that can tel you what marriage is, this fellow wil but ioyne you together ; as they ioyne Wainfcoft, then one of you wil proue a frunke pannell, and like greene timber, warpe, warpe.

Cl. I am not in the minde, but I were better to bee married of him then of another, for he is not like to mar- rie me wel : and not being well married, it wil be a good excuse for me hereafter, to leave my wife.

Iaq. Goe thou with mee,

And let me counfel thee.

Ofr. Come sweete Andrej, We must be married,or we must iue in baudrye: Farewel good M’ Oliver. Not O sweet Oliver, O braue Oliver leave me not behind thee: But winde away, bee gone I say, I wil not to wedding with thee.

Ofr. ’Tis no matter; Ne’re a fantatitical knaue of them all shal flout me out of my calling.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Refalind & Celia.

Ref. Neuer talke to mee, I wil weep.

Cl. Neuer, but yet haue the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ref. But haue I not caufe to weep?

Cl. As good caufe as one would defire, Therefore wepe.

Ref. His very hair is of the diffembling colour.

Cl. Something browner then Iudaffes: Marrie his kifles are Iudaffes owne children.

Ref. I’faith his hair is of a good colour.

Cl. An excellent colour: Your Cheffenut was euer the onely colour: RefAnd his kifling is as ful of lanclite, As the touch of holy bread.

Cl.
Col. Hee hath bought a pair of caft lips of Diana: a Nun of winters sisterhood kissey not more religiouse, the very yce of chafitye in them.

Ref. But why did hee sweare hee would come this morning, and comes not ?

Col. Nay certainly there is no truth in him.

Ref. Doe you thinke so ?

Col. Yes I thinke he is not a picke purfe, nor a horfe-stealer, but for his verity in loue, I doe thinke him as conceaue as a covered golphet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Ref. Not true in loue ?

Col. Yes, when he is in, but I thinke he is not in.

Ref. You have heard him sweare downright he was.

Col. Was,is not is besides, the oath of Louer is no stronger then the word of a Taffper, they are both the confrimer of falfe reckonings, he attends here in the forfeit on the Duke your father.

Ref. I met the Duke yesterday, and had much queftion with him : he ask me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he, so he laugh'd and let mee goe. But what talke wee of Fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando ?

Col. O that's a braue man, hee writes braue verfes, speaks braue words, sweare braue oaths, and breaks them brauely, quite trauers athwart the heart of his loyer, as a pulny Tilter, yl spur his horfe but on one side, breaks his slaffe like a noble goole; but all braue that youth mounts, and folly guides : who comes heere ?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Milftrefte and Mafter, you have oft enquired After the Shepherd that complain'd of loue, Who you faw fitting by me on the Turph, Praifing the proud disdainfull Shepherdiffe That was his Milftrefte.

Col. Well : and what of him ?

Cor. If you will fee a pageant truely plaid Betwenee the pale complexion of true Loue, And the red glowe of scorne and proud disdaine, Goe hence a little, and I shall conduct you If you will marke it.

Ref. O come, let vs remoue, The fight of Louers feedeth thofe in loue : Bring vs to this fight, and you fhall fay Ile proue a bufe actour in their play. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe doe not scorne me, do not Phebe Say that you loue me not, but fay not fo In bittennesse; the common executioner Whofe heart th'accumfom'd fight of death makes hard Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck, But firft begs pardon ; will you fterne be Then he that dies and liues by bloody drops ?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner, I flye thee, for I would not injure thee : Thou tellit me there is murder in mine eye, 'Tis pretty fure, and very probable

That eyes that are the frailft, and loofett things, Who fuit their coward gates on atomyes, Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers. Now I doe frowne on thee with all my heart, And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee: Now counterfeit to fwoond, why now fall downe, Or if thou canst not, oh for shame, for shame, Lye not, to fay mine eyes are murtherers: Now flew the wound mine eye hath made in thee, Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remaifes Some fcarre of it : Leane vpon a ruff The Cicatrice and capable impreffure Thy palme fome moment keepe : but now mine eyes Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not, Nor I am sure there is no force in eyes That can doe hurt. Sil. O deere Phebe,

If ever (as that ever may be neede) You meet in some refresh checke the power of fancie, Then fhall you know the wounds inuifible That Loues keene arrows make.

Phe. But till that time Come not thou neere me : and when that time comes, Affict me with thy mockes, pitty me not, As till that time I fhall not pitty thee.

Ref. And why I pray you? who might be your mother That you influf, exult, and all at once Over the wretched? what though you hau no beauty As by my faith, I fee no more in you Then without Candle may goe darke to bed: Muft you be therefore proud and pittiflee? Why what meanes this? why do you looke on me? I fee no more in you then in the ordinary Of Natures fale-worke? ods my little life, I thinke he meanes to tangle my eyes too : No faith proud Milftrefte, hope not after it, 'Tis not your inkle browes, your blakke filke hair, Your huggle eye-balls, nor your checke of creame That can entame my spirif to your worship: You foolifh Shepherd, wherefore do you follow her Like fogy South, puffing with winde and raine, You are a thoufand times a properer man Then fhe a woman. 'Tis fuch fooles as you That makes the world full of ill-fauourd children: 'Tis not her glaffe, but you that futters her, And out of you fhe fes her felfe more proper Then any of her lineaments can fhow her : But Milftritis, know your felfe, downe on your knees And thanke heauen, faffing, for a good mans loue; For I muft tell you friendly in your care, Sell when you can, you are not for all markets: Cry the man mercy, loue him, take his offer, Foule is mort foule, being foule to be a fcoffer. So take her to thee Shepherd, fareyouwell. Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a yere togethre, I had rather here you chide, then this man woot. Res. Hee falne in loue with your souleffe, & the'll fall in loue with my anger. If it be fo, as falt As she anfweres thee with frowning lookes, ile fauce Her with bitter words: why looke you so vpon me? Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ref. I pray you do not fall in loue with mee, For I am faller then vowes made in wine : Beffides, I like you not: if you will know my house, 'Tis at the tuff of Oliures, here hard by : Will you goe Sifer ? Shephedy ply her hard :
Come Sirs: Shepherds, looke on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could fee,
None could be so bold'd in fight as hee.
Exit.

Come, to our flocke,
Phe. Dead Shephard, now I find thy fav of might,
Who euer lovd that? lovd not at first fight?
Sil. Sweet Phebe.
Phe. Ha! what saith thou Siluia?
Sil. Sweet Phebe pitty me.
Phe. Why I am sorry for thee gentle Siluia.
Sil. Where euer forrow is, reliefe would be:
If you doe forrow at my griefe in love,
By giving loye your forrow, and my griefe
Were both extermind:
Phe. Thou haft my loye, is not that neighbourly?
Sil. I would haue you.
Phe. Why that were coutoueneffe:
Siluia, the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love,
But since that thou canst not talk of loye so well,
Thy company, which erit was irksome to me
I will endure; and I leese thee too;
But doe not looke for further recompenne
Then thine owne gladneffe, that thou art employed.
Sil. So haly, and so perfect is my loye,
And in such a poerty of grace,
That I shall thinke it a most plentiful crop
To gleece the broken exres after the man
That the maine haureft repeates:loose now and then
A gattend smile, and that Ie live vpon.

(while?)
Phe. Knowsf thou the youth that spooke to mee yere-
Sil. Not very well, but I haue met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds
That the old Carlot once was Matter of.
Phe. Thinksf not I lose him, though I ask for him,
Tis but a peeuifh boy; yet he talkes well;
But what care I for words? yet words do well
When he that fpeakes them pleaes fthose that hear:
It is a pretty youth, not very prettie,
But sure hee's proude, and yet his pride becomes him;
Hee'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and fafter then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did healte it vp:
He is not very tall: yet for his yeeres hee's tall:
His leg is but fo fo, and yet fhis well;
There was a prettie redneffe in his lip,
A little riper, and more lufie red
Then that mixt in his cheeke: twas the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damask.
There be some women Siluias, had they markt him
In parcells as I did, would have gone neere
To fall in love with him: but for my part
I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet
Have more caule to hate him then to love him,
For what had he to doe to chiefe his heart?
He faid mine eyes were black, and mine haire blacke,
And now I am remembred, scorn'd at me:
I manuell why I answer'd not again,
But that's all one: omittance is no quittance:
Ie write to him a very tainting Letter,
And thou shalt beare it, wilt thou Siluia?
Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phe. Ie write it fralt:
The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be better with him, and paffing short;
Goe with me Siluia.

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia, and Jaques.

Rof. I prethee, pretty youth, let me better acquainted with them.

Rof. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

Rof. I am fo: I doe love it better then laughing.

Rof. Thofe that are in extremity of either, are abhominable followes, and betray themselues to euer moderne cenfure, worfe then drunckards.

Rof. Why, 'tis good to be had and lay nothing.

Rof. Why then 'tis good to be a poete.

Rof. I haue neither the Schollers melancholy, which is emulation: nor the Muftians, which is fantafical:
now the Courties, which is proud: nor the Souludiers, which is ambitious: nor the Lawyers, which is politick:
now the Ladies, which is nice: nor the Louers, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine owne,
com-pounded of many fimples, extrafted from many obiects,
and indeed the fundrie contemplation of my travells, in which by often rumination, wraps me in a most humo-rous fastneffe.

Rof. A Traveller: by my faith you have great rea-ton to be had: I fear you have fold your owne Lands, to fee other mens; then to have feene much, and to have nothing, is to haue rich eyes and poore hands.

Rof. Yes, I haue gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Rof. And your experience makes you had: I had rather have a foolie to make me merrie, then experience to make me fad, and to trauaille for it too.

Ori. Good day, and happineffe, deere Rosalind.

Rof. Nay then God buy you, and you talke in blanke verie.

Ori. Farewell Mounfeur Travellor: looke you life, and weare strange fuites; dilabe all the beneficts of your owne Countrie: be out of love with your natuifiue, and almoft chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will fcarce thinke you have fwan in a Gundello. Why how now Orlando, where have you bin all this while? you a louer? and you ferue me fuch another tricke, nouer come in my fight more.

Ori. My faire Rosalind, I come within an houre of my promise.

Rof. Breake an houres promife in loue? hee that will diuidle a minute into a thousand parts, and breake but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affairs of loue, it may be faid of him that Cufip hath clapt him oth' shouder, but Ie warrant him heart hole.

Ori. Pardon me deere Rosalind.
Rof. Nay, and you be fo tardie, come no more in my fight, I had as liefe be wo'd of a Snaile.

Ori. Of a Snaile?
Rof. I, of a Snaile: for though he memories, hee carries his houfe on his head; a better ioyneure I thinke then you make a woman: besides, he brings his deflinef with him.

Ori. What's that?
Rof. Why hones, 'w such as youare faine to be beholding to your wives for: but he comes arm'd in his fortune, and presents the flander of his wife.

Ori. Vertue
As you like it.

Orl. Virtue is no horne-maker: and my Rosalind is vertuous.

Rof. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It please him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalind of a better leere then you.

Rof. Come, we will make good society. For now I am in a holy-day humor, and like enough to content: What would you fay to me now, and I were your vere, verie Rosalind?

Orl. I would fife before I spake.

Rof. Nay, I was better fpeake first, and when you were grauel'd, for lacke of matter, you might take occa- sion to fife: verie good Orators when they are out, they will fife, and for lowers, lacking (God warne vs) matter, the cleanleff shift is to fife.

Orl. How if the fife be denide?

Rof. Then the fhips you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloned Miftris?

Rof. Marrie that should you if I were your Miftris, or I should thinkin my honeffle ranker then my wit.

Orl. What, of my fuite?

Rof. Not out of your apparell, and yet out of your fuite:

Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to fay you are, because I would be talking of her.

Rof. Well, in her perfon, I fay I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine owne perfon, I die.

Rof. No faith, die by Attorney: the poore world is almoft fix thousand yeeres old, and in all this time there was not anie man died in his owne perfon (widelicer) in a loue caufe: Troilous had his braines dash'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what hee could to die before, and he is one of the patternes of loue. Leander, he would haue liu'd manie a faire yeere though Heros had turn'd Nun; if it had not bin for a hot Midsummer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to washe in the Hel- lepont, and being taken with the cramppe, was dron'd, and the foolish Chronolcers of that age, found it was Heros of Ceftus. But these are all lies, men haue died from time to time, and worms haue eaten them, but not for loue.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for I protest her frowne might kill me.

Rof. By this hand, it will not kill a file: but come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more comming-on dif- position: and fay me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me Rosalind.

Rof. Yes faith will I, friadies and faterdaries, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou haue me?

Rof. I, and twentie fuch.

Orl. What faleft thou?

Rof. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope fo.

Rosalind. Why then, can one defire too much of a good thing: Come fifter, you shall be the Prieff, and marry vs: give me your hand Orlando: What doe you fay fifter?

Orl. Pray the fhee marrie vs.

Cel. I cannot fay the words.

Rof. You muft begin, will you Orlando.

Cel. Goe too: will you Orlando, have to wife this Ros- alind?

Orl. I will.
prate: we must have your doublet and hose pluck'd over your head, and shew the world what the bird hath hath to her owne neath.

Ref. O box, cox, cox: my pretty little cox, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love: but it cannot bee founded: my affection hath an unknowne bottome, like the Bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather bottomleffe, that as fast as you pour your affection in, in runs out.

Ref. No, that fame wicked Baffard of Venus, that was begot of thought, concei'd of spleene, and borne of madness, that blinde rascally boy, that abuseth evry ones eye; because his owne are out, let him bee judge, how deep I am in love: I'll tell thee Alissa, I cannot be out of the fight of Orlando: Ile goe finde a shadow, and fight till he come.

Cel. And Ile sleepe.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Jaques and Lords, Forrefters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the Deare?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Romane Conquerour, and it would doe well to set the Deares horns upon his head, for a branch of victory: have you no fong Forrefter for this purpose?

Lord. Yes Sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it bee in tune, so it make noyse enough.

Musick. Song.

What shall be houe that hild the Deare?

His leather skin, and bornes to shewe:

Then sing him borne, the rest shall bear his burthen;

Take thou no forme to shewe the borne,

It was a craft, ere thou was born;

Thy fathers father wore it,

And thy father bore it,

The borne, the borne, the lusky borne,

Is not a thing to laugh to shewe.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ref. How fay you now, is it not past two a clock? And here much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you, with pure loue, & troubled brain,

Enter Silvius.

He hath tane his bow and arrows, and is gone forth

To sleepe: looke who comes here.

Sif. My errand is to you, faire youth,

My gentle Phebe, did bid me give you this:

I know not the contents, but as I guess

By thecbere bow, and waspish action

Which the did vfe, as she was writing of it,

It beares an angry tenure: pardon me,

I am but as a guillette meffenger.

Ref. Patience her felle would tharte at this letter,

And play the fawggerer, heare this, heare all:

Shee faies I am not faire, that I lacke manners,

She calls me proud, and that she could not loue me

Were man as rare as Phenix 'od's my will,

Her loue is not the Hare that I doe hunt,

Why writes she fo to me? well Shepheard, well,

This is a Letter of your owne deuice.

Sil. No, I proft, I know not the contents,

Phebe did write it.

Ref. Come, come, you are a fool,

And turn'd into the extremity of loue.

I saw her hand, she has a leatherne hand,

A freethone coloured hand I verily did think.

That her old glouses were on, but twas her hands:

She has a hufwises hand, but that's no matter:

I say the newer did inuent this letter,

This is a mans inuention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ref. Why, this a boyterous and a cruelle file,

A file for challengers: why, she defies me,

Like Turke to Christian: vromens gentle braine

Could not drop forth such giant rude inuention,

Such Ethiope vwords, blacker in their effe?

Then in their countenance: v will you heare the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet:

Yet heard too much of Phebes cruelite.

Ref. She Phebes me: markke how the tyrant writes.

Read. Art thou god, to Shepherd turn'd?

That a maiden's heart bathe burn'd.

Can a woman raile thus?

Sil. Call you this railling?

Ref. Read. Why, thy godhead laid a part,

War'ft thou with a woman hart?

Did you ever heare such railling?

Whiles the eye of man did woome me,

That could do no vengeance to me.

Meaning me a beath.

If the forme of your bright eie

Hau'e powre to raise such loue in mine,

Alashe, in me, what strange effect

Would they worke in mine affections?

Whiles you chide me, I did loue,

How then might your prayers move?

He that brings this loue to thee,

Little knowes this Loue in me:

And by him feale up thy minde

Whether that thy youth and kinde

Will the faithful offer take

Of me, and all that I can make,

Or else by him my loue denie,

And then Ile finde bow to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas poore Shepheard.

Ref. Doe you pity him? No, he desures no pitty:

Wilt thou loue such a woman? what to make thee an

Infrument, and play false straines upon thee? not to be endur'd. Well, goe your way to her; (for I see Loue hath made thee a tame fnaile) and say this to her; That if the louve me, I charge her to loue thee: if she will not, I will never haue her, vnlesse thou intret for her: if you bee a true Louer hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

When from the first to last betwixt vs two,
Tears our recounteds had most kindly bath’d,
As how I came into that Defert place.
I briefe, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gae me freth aray, and entertainment,
Committing me vnto my brothers love,
Who led me infantly vnto hisCause,
There tript himselfe, and here upon his arme
The Lyonnesse had torne some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And crile in fainting vpon Rofalinde.
Briefe, I recover’d him, bound vp his wound,
And after some small peace, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promife, and to gieve this napkin
Died in this bloud, vnto the Shepheard youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rofalinde.
Col. Why how now Ganined, sweet Ganined.
Oli. Many will sawon when they do look on bloud.
Col. There is more in it; Cofen Ganined.
Oli. Looke, he recoveres.
Rof. I would I were at home.
Col. We’ll lead you thither:
I pray you will you take him by the arme.
Oli. Be of good cheere youth : you a man?
You lacke a mans heart.
Rof. I doe fo, I confesse it:
Ah, firra, a body would thinke this was well counterfeited,
I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: heigh-ho.
Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a paffion of earneft.
Rof. Counterfeite, I affure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
Rof. So I doe: but you, I should have beene a woman by right.
Col. Come, you looke paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir, goe with vs.
Oli. That will 1: for I must beare anfwere backe
How you excufe my brother, Rofalinde.
Rof. I shall deuide something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him: will you goe?
Exeunt.
my troth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for: we shall be laughing: we cannot hold.

And. God ye good eu'n William.

Will. Good eu'n Audrey.

Clo. Good eu'n gentle friend. Couter thy head, couter thy head: Nay prethee bee eno'rd. How olde are you Friend?

Will. Fieue and twenty Sir.

Clo. A ripe age: Is thy name William?

Will. William, Sir.

Clo. A faire name. Was't borne i'th Forreft heere?

Will. I fir, I thankke God.

Clo. Thankke God: A good anser:

Art rich?

Will. 'Faith fir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good: and yet it is not, it is but so, so:

Art thou wife?

Will. I fir, I have a prettie wit.

Clo. Why, thou faile well.I do now remeber a faying: The Foole doth thinke he is wife, but the wileman knowes himselfe to be a Foole. The Hethen Philofopher, when he had a defer to eate a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eate, and lippes to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do fit.

Clo. Glue me your hand : Art thou Learned?

Will. No fir.

Clo. Then leerne this of me. To haue, is to haue. For it is a figure in Rhetoricke, that drink being pow'r'd out of a cup into a glaffe, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do conuent, that ipse is hee: now you are not ipse, for i am hee.

Will. Which he fir?

Clo. He fir, that muft marrie this woman: Therefore you Clowne, abandon: which is in the vulgar,leave the societie: which in the boorifh, is companie, of this female: which in the common, is woman: which together, is, abandon the societie of this Female, or Clowne thou proffef: or to thy better understanding, dyeft: or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, tranflate thy life in to death, thy libertie into bondage: I will deale in poyn with thee, or in bastinado, or in steele: I will bandy with thee in faction, I will o're-run thee with police: I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways, therefore tremble and depart.

Aud. Do good William.

Will. God rett you merry fir.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlandes & Olivier.

Orl. Is't possible, that on fo little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her?

And loving woo? and wooin, the should graunt? And will you peruefer to enjoy her?

Orl. Neither call the giddineffe of it in question: the pouerietie of her, the small acquaintance, my fodiaine woing, nor fodiaine confenting: but fay with mee, I love Alena: fay with her, that she loves mee; confent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good: for my fathers houfe, and all the reuenew, that was old Sir Rolvbrands will I eftate vpon you, and heere luye and die a Shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my content.

Let your Wedding be to morrow: thisher will I

Invite the Duke, and all's contented followers:

Go you, and prepare Alena; for looke you,

Heere comes my Rosalinde.

Ref. God faue you brother.

Orl. And you faire fitter.

Ref. Oh my deere Orlandos, how it greuues me to fee thee were thine heart in a flare.

Orl. It is my arme.

Ref. I thought thy heart had beene wounded with the claws of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ref. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to found, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I, and greater wonders then that.

Ref. O, I know where you are: nay, tis true: there was never any thing lo fodiaine, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cefars Thraffonicall bragge of I came, law, and overcom. For your brother, and my fither, no fooner met, but they look'd: no fooner look'd, but they lou'd; no fooner lou'd, but they sigh'd: no fooner sigh'd but they ask'd one another the reaon: no fooner knew the reaon, but they fought the remedie: and in these degrees, haue they made a pare of faires to marriage, which they will climebe incontinent, or elfe be incontinent before marriage; they are in the verie wrath of love, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part then.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptiall. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to looke into happynes through another mans eies: by fo much the more I shall to morrow be at the height of heart haueinffe, by how much I shal thinke my brother happie, in hauing what he wishes for.

Ref. Why then to morrow, I cannot serue your turne for Rosalind?

Orl. I can luye no longer by thinking.

Ref. I will wearie you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speake to fome purpoze) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speake not this, that you should beare a good opinion of my knowledige: infomuch (I fay) I know you are myther do I labor for a greater esteeme then may in some little meafure draw a beleefe from you, to do your felfe good, and not to grate me. Beleeue then, if you pleafe, that I can do strange things: I haue since I was three years olde committ with a Magitian, moft profound in his Art, and yet not cmnallable. If you do luse Rosalinde so neere the hart, as your gesture crieth it out: when your brother marries Alena, shall you marrie her. I know into to what straights of Fortune she is driuen, and it is not impossible to me, if it appeare not inconuenient to you, to set her before your eyes to morrow, humane as she is, and without any danger.
Oro. Speak'lt thou in sober meanings?
Ros. By my life I do, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your best array, bid your friends: for if you will be married to morrow, you shall: and to Rosalind if you will.
Enter Silvius & Phebe.
Looke, here comes a Lover of mine, and a lover of hers.
Phe. Youth, you have done me much vngentlenesse, To the letter that I writ to you.
Ros. I care not if I have: it is my studie
To seeme delightful and vngentle to you: you are there followed by a faithfull shepheard, Looke upon him, loue him: he worships you.
Phe. Good shepheard, tell this youth what 'tis to loue
Sil. It is to be all made of fighes and teares,
And so am I for Phebe.
Phe. And I for Ganymed.
Ros. And I for Rosalind.
Ros. And I for no woman.
Sil. It is to be all made of faith and seruice,
And so am I for Phebe.
Phe. And so am I for Ganymed.
Ros. And so am I for Rosalind.
Ros. And I for no woman.
Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?
Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?
Ros. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?
Ros. Why do you speake too, Why blame you mee to loue you?
Ros. To her, that is not heere, nor doth not heare.
Ros. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Iriph Wolves against the Moone: I will help you if I can: I would loue you if I could: To morrow meet me altogether: I will marie you, if ever I marie Woman, and Ile be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if ever I satisfie man, and you shall bee married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to morrow: As you love Rosalind meet, as you loue Phebe meet, and as I loue no woman, Ile meet: fo fare you wel: I haue left you commands.
Sil. Ile not faile, if I live.
Phe. Nor I.
Ros. Nor I.

1.Pa. Shal we clap into't roundly, without hauing, or spitting, or saying we are hoarfe, which are the onlye prologues to a bad voice.
2.Pa. I faith, y'faith, and both in a tune like two gigipes on a horfe.

Song.
It was a Lauer, and his love,
With a boy, and a bo, and a boy name,
That o're the greene cornes field did paffe,
In the spring time, the onlye prettie range.
When Birds do sing, bey ding a ding,ding,
Sweet Louers loue the spring,
And therefore take the present time,
With a boy, & a bo, and a boy name,
For ryle & crowned with the prime.
In spring time, etc.
Between the acres of the Re,
With a boy, and a bo, & a boy name:
Those prettie Country folks would lie.
In spring time, etc.

This Caroll they began that bourse,
With a boy and a bo, & a boy name:
How that a life was but a Flower,
In spring time, etc.

Duc. Sen. Doft thou beleeue Orlando, that the boy Can do all this that he hath promis'd?
Orl. I sometimes do beleeue, and sometimmes do not, As thofe that feare they hope, and know they feare.

Enter Rosalinde, Silvius, & Phebe.
Ros. Patience once more, whiles our cuppe is vrg'd:
You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde,
You will bestow on her Orlando here?
Duc. Sen. That would I, had I kingsdom to give with him.
Ros. And you say you wil have her, when I bring her?
Orl. That would I, were I of all kingsdomes King.
Ros. You say, you'ill marie me, if I be willing.
Phe. That will I, should I die the houre after.
Ros. But if you do refuse to marie me,
You'll give your lcliffe to this most faithfull Shepheard.
Phe. So is the bargain.
Ros. You say that you'ill have Phebe if she will.
Sil. Though to have her and death, were both one thing.
S

As you like it.

Ref. I have promis'd to make all this matter even:
Keep you your word, O Duke, to glue your daughter,
You yours Orlando, to receive his daughter:
Keep you your word, that you'll marrie me,
Or else refusing me to wed this shepheard:
Keep your word Silvia, that you'll marrie her
If she refuse me, and from hence I go
To make these doubts all even. Exit Ref. and Celia.

Du. Sen. I do remember in this shepheard boy,
Some liuely touches of my daughters fauour.
Orl. My Lord, the time that I ever faw him,
I thought he was a brother to your daughter:
But my good Lord, this Boy is Forrester borne,
And hath bin tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his vnkle,
Whom he reports to be a great Magitian.

Enter Closune and Audrey.

Obcurred in the circle of this Forreft.

Iaq. There is fure another flood toward, and thefe
Couples are comming to the Arike. Here comes a payre
Of verie frange beafts, which in all tongues, are called Foolies.

Clos. Salutation and greetyng to you all.

Iaq. Good my Lord, bid him welcome: This is the Motley minded Gentleman, that I have fo often met in the Forreft: he hath bin a Courtier he fwareas.

Clos. If any man doubt that, let him put mee to my purification, I haue trod a meafeure, I haue flatted a Lady,
I haue bin politickke with my friend, smooth with mine enemies, I have vndone three Tailors, I haue had foure quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Iaq. And how was that tan vp?

Clos. Faith we met, and found the quarrel was upon the feuenth caufe.

Iaq. How feuenth caufe? Good my Lord, like this fellow.
Dus. I like him very well.

Clos. God'll you fir, I defign you of the like: I preffe in heere fir, among the rest of the Country caputaries to fwareas, and to forfwears, according as mariage binds and blood beakes: a poore virgin fir, an il-fauor'd thing fir, but mine owne, a poore humour of mine fir, to take that that no man elfe willl: rich honeftie dwells like a mifer fir, in a poore houfe, as your Pearl in your foule oyter.
Dus. By my faith, he is very swift, and fenctuous Clos. According to the foolies bolt fir, and fuch dulcet diflaces.

Iaq. But for the feuenth caufe. How did you finde the quarrel on the feuenth caufe?

Clos. Upon a lye, feuen times removed: (beare your bodie more feeming Audrey) as thus fir: I did dislike the cut of a certaine Courtiers heare: he fent me word, if I faid his heare was not cut weel, hee was in the minde it was: this is call'd the retract courtois. If I fent him word againe, it was not well cut, he wold fende me word he cut it to pleafe himselfe: this is call'd the quip modeft.
If againe, it was not well cut, he fipbled my judgment:
this is called, the reply churlifh.If againe it was not well cut, he wold anfwer I fpake not true: this is call'd the reproofe valiant. If againe, it was not well cut, he wold fay, I lie: this is call'd the counter-checke quarrelisme:
and fo by lye circumfantiall, and the lye direcft.

Iaq. And how oft did you fay his heare was not well cut?

Clos. I durft go no further then the lye circumfantiall:

nor he durft not give me the lye direcft: and fo wee meafur'd fwords, and parted.

Iaq. Can you nominate in order now, the degrees of the lye.

Clos. O fir, we quarrel in print, by the booke: as you haue bookes for good manners: I will name you the degrees.
The firft, the Retort courtois: the feccond, the Quip-modeft: the third, the reply Churlifh: the fourth,
The Reprofe valiant: the fift, the Counterchecke quarrrelisme: the fixt, the Lye with circumfance: the fea-venth, the Lye direcft: all these you may auyod, but the Lye direcft: and you may auide that too, with an If: I knew when feuen Ifufices could not take vp a Quarrel, but when the parties were met themfelves, one of them thought but of an If: as if you faiide fo, then I faiide fo:
and they fhooke hands, and ftrewe brothers. Your If, is the onely peace-maker: much vertue in it.

Iaq. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord? He's as good by any thing, and yet a fole.

Dus. He vles his folly like a ftalking-horfe, and vnder the preffentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Second Brother.

2. Bro. Let me haue audience for a word or two:
I am the second bornne of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this faire assembly.
Duke Frederick hearing how that euerie day
Men of great worth reforted to this forret,
Addreft a mightie power, which were on footes
In his owne conduct, purposely to take
His brother heere, and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wilde Wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old Religious man,
After some question with him, was convertted
Both from his enterprise, and from the world:
His crowne bequeathing to his banish’d Brother,
And all their Lands reftor’d to him againe
That were with him exil’d. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Du. &c. Welcome yong man:
Thou offer’st fairely to thy brothers wedding:
To one his lands with-held, and to the other
A land it selfe at large, a potent Duke-dome.
First, in this Forrest, let vs do those ends
That heere yeate well begun, and wel begot:
And after, every of this happy number
That haue endur’d thew’d daies, and nights with vs,
Shal share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their dates.
Meane time, forget this new-faine dignite,
And fall into our Rufticke Reuelrie:
Play Muficke, and you Brides and Bride-groomes all,
With meafeure heap’d in joy, to’th Meafures fall.

Iag. Sir, by your patience: if I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a Religious life,
And throwne into neglecf the pompous Court.

2. Bro. He hath.

Iag. To him will I: out of these convexitie,
There is much matter to be heard, and learn’d:
you to your former Honer, I bequeath your patience, and your vertue, well deferues it.
you to a loue, that your true faith doth merit:
you to your land, and loue, and great allie:
you to a long, and well-deferued bed:
And you to wrangling, for thy louring voyage.
Is but for two moneths virtuall’d: So to your pleasures,
I am for other, then for dancing meafures.

Du. &c. Stay, Logues, stay.

Iag. To fee no paftime, I: what you would haue,
Iie stay to know, at your abandon’d caue.

Du. &c. Proceed, proceed: we’ll begin these rights,
As we do truft, they’ll end in true delights.

Ref. It is not the fashion to fee the Ladie the Epilogue: but it is no more vnhandfome, then to fee the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bulb, ’tis true, that a good play needes no Epilogue.
Yet to good wine they do vse good bufhes: and good plays praue the better by the helpe of good Epilogues:
What a cafe am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot infinuate with you in the behalfe of a good play? I am not furnisht like a Begger, therefore to begge will not become mee. My way is to conuire you, and Ile begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the loue you bare to men, to like as much of this Play, as pleafe you: And I charge you (O men) for the loue you bare to women (as I perceiue by your fimprine none of you hates them) that betweene you, and the women, the play may pleafe. If I were a Woman, I would kiffe as many of you as had beards that plea’d me, complextions that lik’d me, and breaths that I deif’d not: And I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make curt’lie, bid me farewell.

Host.

Are you baggage, the Sylts are no rogues. Look, in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Comperer: therefore Paul the world slide: Sylts. Host. You will not play for the glasse you have burnst? Bege. Not a deniere: goe to thy cold bed, and warme thee. Host. I know my remedy, I must go fetch the Headborough.

Bege. Third, or fourth, or first Borough, Ile answere him by Law. Ile not budge an inch boy: Let him come, and kindly. Falle asleep.

Winds burnes. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his traine.

Le. Huntsman I charge thee, tender wel my hounds, Brach Meriman, the poore Curre is imboft, and couple Glauder, with the deep-mouth'd brach, Saw't thou not boy how Siluer made it good At the hedge corner, in the coldeft fault, I would not lofte the dogge for twenti pound.

Hunt. Why Belman is as good as my Lord, He cried upon it at the meetest loffe, And twice to day pickt' out the dullet fent, Trust me, I take him for the better dogge.

Lord. Thou art a Foole, if Eccho were as flete, I would eftimate him worth a dozen fuch: But fip them well, and looke vnto them all, To morrow I intend to hunt againe.

Hunt. I will my Lord.

Lord. What's here? One dead, or drunk? See doth he breath?

2. Hunt. He breathes my Lord. Were he not warm'd with Ale, this were a bed but cold to sleep in soundly.

Lord. Oh monftrous beast, how like a swine he lyes. Grim death, how foule and loathfome is thine image: Sirs, I will praiſe on this drunken man. What thinke you, if he were convyed to bed, Wrap'd in sweet cloathers: Rings put upon his fingers: A most delicious banquet by his bed, And brave attendants neere him when he wakes, Would not the begger then forget himself?

2. If. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd Lord. Even as a flatt'ring dreame, or worthies fancies.

Then take him vp, and manage well the left: Carry him gently to my fairest Chamber, And hang it round with all my vanton pictures: Balme his foule head in warme diſſilled waters, And burne sweet Wood to make the Lodging sweete: Procure me Mufick readie when he wakes, To make a dulcet and a heavenly found: And if he chance to speake, be readie straight (And with a lowe submiflion reverence.) Say, what is it your Honor vil command: Let one attend him with a fluer Bafon Full of Rofe-water, and beftrrew'd with Flowers, Another beare the Ewer: the third a Diaper, And fay wilt pleafe your Lordfhippe coole your hands. Some one be readie with a cofly fuite, And ask him what apparel he will ware: Another tell him of his Hounds and Horfe, And that his Ladie mournes at his difease, Perfwade him that he hath bin Lunaticke, And when he fayes he is, fay that he dreams, For he is nothing but a mightie Lord: This do, and do it kindly, gentle firs, It will be pastime paffing excellent, If it be husbanded with modelfte.

1. Hunt. My Lord I warrant you we will play our part As he shall thinke by our true diligence He is no leff than what we fay he is.

Now fellows, you are welcome.

Players. We thanke your Honor.

Lord. Do you intend to fay with me to night?

2. Player. So please your Lordfhippe to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember, Since one he plaide a Farmers eldeft fonne, 'Twas where you woo'd the Gentlewoman fo well: I have forgot your name: but sure that part
The Taming of the Shrew.

Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

Sinnick. I think 'twas Soo that you honor meanes.

Lord. 'Tis verie true, thou didst it excellent:

Well you are come to me in happie time,

The rather for I haue some sport in hand,

Wherein your cunning can affint me much.

There is a Lord will hear you play to night;

But I am doubtfull of your mouldifies,

Least (ouer-eying of his odde behaoulour,

For yet his honor never heard a play)

You break into some merrie pailion,

And so offend him: for I tell you first,

If you should smile, he growes impatient.

Plai. Feare not my Lord, we can contain our selues,

Were he the verie antickie in the world.

Lord. Go sirra, take them to the Bitterie,

And glue them friendly welcome euerie one,

Let them want nothing that my house affords.

Exit one with the Players.

Sirra go you to Bartholomew my Page,

And fee him drest in all Dutes like a Ladie:

That done, conduct him to the drunkards chamber,

And call him Madam, do him obeifance:

Tell him from me (as he will win my love)

He beare himselfe with honourable action,

Such as he hath obeyd' in noble Ladies

Vnto their Lords, by them accomplished,

Such dutie to the drunkard let him do:

With soft lowe tongue, and lowly curtsefe,

And say: What is't your Honor will command,

Wherein your Ladie, and your humble wife,

May shew her dutie, and make knowne her love.

And then with kinde embracements, tempting kiffes,

And with declining head into his bosome

Bid him shed tears, as being ouer-joyed

To fee her noble Lord reftor'd to health,

Who for this feuen yeares hath efeemed him

No better then a poore and loathsome begger:

And if the boy have not a womanes guift

To raine a shower of commanded teares,

An Onion wil do well for such a thift,

Which in a Napkin (being close couen'd)

Shall in despitfull enforte a waterie eie:

See this dispatch'd with all the haft thou canst,

Anon Ile glue thee more instructions.

Exit a seruingman.

I know the boy will wel viurpe the grace,

Voice, gait, and action of a Gentlewoman:

I long to heare him call the drunkard husband,

And how my men will lay themselues from laugher,

When they do homage to this simple pesant,

Ile in to couenell them: haply my preference

May well abate the ouer-merrie spleene,

Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

Enter alfeft the drunkard with attendants, some with apparel,

Bajan and Ever, & other apperances, & Lord.

Beg. For Gods fake a pot of small Ale.

1. Sir. Wilt please your Lord drink a cup of facke?

2. Sir. Wilt please your Honor taste of these Con-ferues?

3. Sir. What raiment wilt your honor weare to day.

Beg. I am Christopher Sly, call not mee Honour nor Lordshipe: I ne're drank facke in my life: and if you give me any Conferues, glue me conferues of Beefe: nere ask me what raiment Ile weare, for I haue no more doub-

lets then backes: no more flockings then legges: nor no more shooes then feet, nay sometime more feete then shoes, nor such shooes as my toes looke through the ou-er-leather.

Lord. Hauean cese this idle humor in your Honor.

Oh that a mightie man of such dicent,

Of such poffessions,and so high esteeeme

Should be infuted with fo foule a spirit.

Beg. What would you make me mad? Am not I Chris-opher Sly, old Sies fonne of Burton-heath, by byth a

Peder, by education a Cardmaker, by tranmutation a

Bears-heard: and now by present proffession a Tinker.

Aske Marriane Hacket the fat Alewife of Winces, if thee know me not: if the Iay I am not xill.i.d. on the score for theere Ale, score me wp for the likingt knaue in Christen done. What I am not betrakted: here's—-

3. Man. Oh this it is that makes your Ladie mourne.

2. Man. Oh this it is that makes your seruants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it, that your kindred thuns your

As beaten hence by your strange Lunacie.

(houfe

Oh Noble Lord, bethinke thee of thy birth,

Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,

And banish hence these abject lowlie dreams:

Looke how thy seruants do attend on thee,

Each in his office redie at thy becke.

Wilt thou haue Muicke? Harke Apollo plapes,

Musick

And twentie caged Nightingales do sing.

Or wilt thou sleepe? Wee'll have thee to a Couch,

Softer and sweeter then the luftfull bed

On purpoe trim'd vp for Semiramis.

Say thou wilt walke: we will betrow the ground,

Or wilt thou ride? Thy horfes shal be trap'd,

Their harnesse fludded all with Gold and Pearle.

Doft thou louse hawking? Thou haft hawkes will forae

Aboue the morning Larke.

Or wilt thou hunt,

Thy hounds shal make the Welkin answer them

And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Man. Say thou wilt couer, thy gray-hounds are as

As breathed Stage: I fleeter then the Roe.

2. Man. Doft thou louse pictures? We will fetch thee frith

Adonis painted by a running brooke,

And Cithera all in fedges hid,

Which sceme to moue and wanton with her breath,

Euen as the wauing fedges play with winde.

Lord. We'll shew thee Jo. as she was a Maid,

And how she was beguiled and surpriz'd,

As liuelle painted, as the deede was done.

3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thornie wood,

Scratching her legs, that one thal sweare the bleeds,

And at that fight thal fas Apollo weepe,

So workmanlie the blood and teares are dawne.

Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:

Thou haft a Ladie farre more Beautifull,

Then any woman in this waining age.

1 Man. And til the teares that he hath shed for thee,

Like enuious fluids ore-run her louely face,

She was the fairest creature in the world,

And yet thee is inferior to none.

Beg. Am I a Lord, and haue I such a Ladie?

Or do I dreame? Or haue I dream'd till now?

I do not sleepe: I fee, I heare, I speake:

I smel sweet favours, and I feel soft things:

Vpon my life I am a Lord indeede,

And not a Tinker, nor Christopher Sly.

Well, bring our Ladie hither to our fight,

And once again a pot o'th smallest Ale.

S 3
tie, a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling tricke?
Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleasaung fflufse.
Beg. What, household fflufse.
Lady. It is a kinde of hitory.
Beg. Well, we'll fect:'
Come Madam wife fit by my fide,
And let the world flip, we fhall nere be yonger.

Flourifh. Enter Luuentio, and his man Triano.
Luc. Triano, fince for the great defire I had
To fee faire Padus, purifier of Arts,
I am arrin'd for fruitfull Lumbardies,
The pleafant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers lone and leave am arm'd
With his good will, and my good company.
My troufle furrant well approv'd in all,
Heere let vs breath, and haply institute
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pife renown'd for grave Citizens
Gave me my being, and my father firft
A Merchant of great Traffickke through the world:
Vincentio's come of the Bentiuility,
Vincentio's fonne, brough vp in Florence,
It fhall become to ferve all hopes conceiv'd
To decke his fortune with his vertuous deedes:
And therefore Triano, for the time I fudie,
Vertue and that part of Philosophie
Will I appile, that treats of happinesse,
By vertue specially to be afch'd in.
Tell me thy minde, for I have Pife left,
And am to Padus come, as he that leaues
A fhallow plath, to plunge him in the deep,
And with faciety feekes to quench his thirt.
Tra. Me Pardomato, gentle matter mine:
I am in all affected as your felfe,
Glad that you thus continue your refolue,
To facke the fweetes of fweete Philosophie.
Oney (good matter) while we do admire
This vertue, and this morall discipline,
Let's be no Stoickes, nor no flockes I pray,
Or fo devohte to Airiftolic checks
As Ouid; be an out-caf charitable abur'd:
Balke Lodgickes with acquaintance that you have,
And praffe Rhetorick in your common talke,
Mufick and Poftee vie, to quicken you,
The Mathematices, and the Metaphyficke
Fall to them as you finde your fmancke ferves you;
No profite groves, where is no pleafure tane:
In breife fir, fudy what you moft affect.
Luc. Gramercies Triano, well doft thou aduife,
If Biandello thou wert come afhore,
We could at once put vs in readineffe,
And take a Lodging fit to entertaine
Such friends (as time) in Padus fhall beget.
But why a while, what company is this?
Tra. Master done fhew to welcome vs to Towne.

Enter Baptiffa with bis two daughteres, Katerina & Bianca, Gretna a Pantelewone, Hortensio fifer to Bianca.
Lucen. Trlano, fand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, important me no farther,
For how I firmly am refolvd you know:
That is, not to beftow my yongeft daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katherina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

_Gre._ To case her rather. She's too tough for me.

_Thoso._ Will you any Wife?

_Kate._ I pray you sir, is it your will
To make a flae of me amongst these mates?

_Hor._ Mates maid, how meane you that?

No mates for you,

_Vnlefe._ You were of gentler milder mould.

_Kate._ I'faith sir, you shall never neede to feare,
I-wis it is not halfe way to your heart:
But if it were, doubt not, her care should be,
To combe your nodule with a three-leg'd ftoole,
And paint your face, and vfe you like a foole.

_Hor._ From all such diuels, good Lord deliever vs.

_Gre._ And me too, good Lord.

_Tra._ Huift mafter, heres some good paffeit toward;
That wench is farke mad, or wonderfull froward.

_Luc._ But in the others silence do I fee,
Maidis milde behaviour and fabrieite.

_Peace._

_Tra._ Well faid Mr, mum, and gare your fill.

_Bap._ Gentleman, that I may moone make good
What I haue faid, Bianca get you in,
And let it not difpleafe thee good Bianca,
For I will loue thee nere the leffe my girle.

_Kate._ A prettie peate, it is beft put finger in the eye,
and the knew why.

_Bian._ Sister content you, in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleare humbly I subscribe:
My bookes and infruments shall be my companie,
On them to looke, and prafie by my felfe.

_Luc._ Harke Tranio, thou maift heare Minerva speake.

_Hor._ Signior Bapifha, will you be fo freage,
Sorrie am I that our good will effect
Bianca's greefe.

_Gre._ Why will you mew her vp (Signior Bapifha) for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue.

_Bap._ Gentleman content ye: I am refould:
Go in Bianca.
And for I know she taketh moft delight
In Mufick, Infrumments, and Poetry,
Schoolmasters will I kepe within my house,
Fit to intruch her youth. If you Hortenfia,
Or signior Gremio you know any fuch,
Preferre them hither: for to cunning men,
I will be very kinde and liberaile,
To mine owne children, in good bringing vp,
And fo farewell: Karberine you may fay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca.

_Exict._

_Kate._ Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What shall I be appointed houres, as though (Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leave? Ha.

_Exict._

_Gre._ You may go to the diuels dam: your giues are so good here's none will hold you: Their loue is not fo great Hortenfia, but we may blow our nails together, and fall it fairely out. Our cakes dough on both fides.
Farewell: yet for the loue I haue my sweet Bianca, if I can by any meanes light on a fitt man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will with him to her father.

_Hor._ So will I signiour Gremio: but a word I pray:
Though the nature of our quarrell yet neuer brook'd parle, know now vpon advice, it toucheth vs both that we may yet again haue acceffe to our faire Miftris, and be happy riuals in Bianca's loue, to labour and effect one thing specially.

_Gre._ What's that I pray?

_Hor._ Marrie sir, to get a husband for her Sifter.

_Gre._ A husband: a diuell.

_Hor._ I fay a husband.

_Gre._ I fay, a diuell: Think't thou Hortenfia, though her father be verie rich, any man is fo verie a foole to be married to hell?

_Hor._ Tuh Gremio: though it paife your patience & mine to endure her lowd alarams, why man there bee good fellows in the world, and a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and mony enough.

_Gre._ I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowrie with this condition: To be whipt at the hie croffe euerie morning.

_Hor._ Faith (as you fay) there's small choife in rotten apes: but come, since this bar in law makes vs friends, it shall be fo farre forth friendly maintaine'd, till by helping Bapifhas cloeft daughter to a husband, wee fet his young free for a husband, and then haue too affre: Sweet Bianca, happy man be his doe: her that runnes fallet, gets the King: How fay you Signior Gremio?

_Grem._ I am agreed, and would I had given him the beft horfe in Padua to begin his woond that would throoughly woe her, wed her, and bed her, and ridde the house of her. Come on.

Exeunt ambo. _Manet Tranio and Lucenio._

_Trao._ I pray sir tel me, is it poiffible
That loue should of a fodeine take fuch hold.

_Luc._ Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it poiffible or likly.
But fe, while idey I flood looking on,
I found the effect of Loue in idleneffe,
And now in plainneffe do confesse to thee
That art to me as secret and as deere
As Anna to the Queene of Carthage was:

_Tranio_ I burne, I pine, I perifh Tranio,
If I achiue not this yong modelfe gyrl:
Counffe me Tranio, for I know thou canft,
Affift me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

_Trao._ Mafter, it is no time to chide you now,
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If loue haue touch'd you, naught remaines but fo,
Redime te capitam quam quam quas minimo.

_Luc._ Gramercies Lad: Go forward, this contents,
The reft will comfort, for thy counsels found.

_Trao._ Mafter, you look'd fo longly on the maide,
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the plaine of all.

_Luc._ Oh yes, I faw sweet beautie in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great loue to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kit the Cretan ftorme.

_Trao._ Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how hir fifter
Began to scold, and raife vp fuch a florme,
That mortal cares might hardly induce the din.

_Luc._ Tranio, I faw her corall lips to moue,
And with her breath she did perfume the ayre,
Sacred and fweet was all I faw in her.

_Trao._ Nay, then 'tis time to firre him frow his trance:
I pray awake fir: if you love the Maide,
Bend thoughts and wits to atcheue her. Thus it ftands:

_Her elder fifer is fo curif and threw'd,
That til the Father rid his hands of her,
Mafter, your Loue muft lieue a maide at home,
And therefore has he clofely men'd her vp,
The Taming of the Shrew.

Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.
Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruel Fathers he:
But art thou not advis'd, he tooke some care,
To get her cunning Schoolmasters to intrick her.
Tran. I marry am I fir, and now 'tis plotted.
Luc. I haue it Tranio.
Tran. Mater, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jumpe in one.
Luc. Tell me thine first.
Tran. You will be schoole-mater,
And vndertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.
Luc. It is: May it be done?
Tran. Not possible: for who shall beare your part,
And be in Padua heare Vincentio's fonne,
Keep e house, and ply his bookes, welcome his friends,
Visit his Countrymen, and banquet them?
Luc. Bofia, content thee: for I haue it full.
We haue not yet bin seene in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,
For man or mater: then it follows thus;
Thou shalt be mater, Tranio in my stead:
Keep e house, and port, my sonne Lucentio, as I should,
I will some other be, some Florentes,
Some Neapolitan, or manner man of Pisa.
'Tis batch'd, and shall be so: Tranio at once
Vncape thee: take my Conlord hat and cloake,
When Biendello comes, he waite on thee,
But I will charme him first to keepe his tongue.
Tran. So had you neede?
In breede Sir, thit it your pleasure is,
And I am tyed to be obedient,
For so your father charg'd me at our parting?
Be seurcuseable to my sonne ( quoth he)
Although I thinke 'twas in another fence,
I am content to bee Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio be so, because Lucentio loves,
And let me be a flauce, 'catchieus that male,
Whole fodaine fight hath thral'd my wounde eye.

Enter Biendello.
Here comes the rogue. Sirra, where have you bin?
Biend. Where have I beene? Nay how now, where are you?
Maiter, ha's my fellow Tranio fizzle your clothes, or fizzle his, or both? Pray what's the newest?
Luc. Sirra come hither, 'tis no time to left,
And therefore frame your manners to the time
Your fellow Tranio heere to faze my life,
Puts my apparell, and my count'nance on,
And I for my escape haue put on his:
For in a quarrel since I came a shore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I was defreated:
Waite you on him, I charge you, as becomes:
While I make way from hence to faze my life:
You understand me?
Biend. I fir, ne're a whit.
Luc. And not a lot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.
Biend. The better for him, would I were so too.
Tran. So could I faith boy, to havee the next with after, that Lucentio indeede had Euphro's yongeit daugther.
But fir, Sirra, for my false, but your malters, I advise you vfe your manners differently in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio: but in all places els, you master Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio let's go:
One thing more refle, that thy selfe execute,
To make one among these woers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty.
Exeunt.

1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not minde the play.
Beg. Yes by Saint Anne do I, a good matter surely:
Comes there any more of it?
Lady. My Lord, 'tis but begun.
Beg. 'Tis a very excellent peece of worke, Madame
Ladie: would 'were done.
They fit and marke.

Enter Petrucke, and bid man Gramio.
Petr. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My beit beloued and approued friend
Hortensio & I: I trow this is his house:
Here sirra Gramio, knocke I say.
Gram. Knocke fir? whom shoulde I knocke? Is there any man ha's rebus'd your worship?
Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me heere foundly.
Gram. Knocke you heere fir? Why fir, what am I fir, that I shoulde knocke you heere fir.
Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me at this gate,
And rap me well, or Ile knocke your knaues pate.
Gram. My M't is grown quarrellome:
I should knocke you first,
And then I know after who comes by the worke.
Petr. Will it not be?
'Faith firrah, and you'll not knocke, Ile ring it,
Ile trie how you can Sol, Fa, and fing it.

He rings him by the ears
Gram. Helpe miftris helpe, my mater is mad.
Petr. Now knocke when I bid you: firrah villain.

Enter Hortensio.
Hor. How now, what's the matter? My olde friend
Gramio, and my good friend Petrucke? How do you all at Verona?
Petr. Signior Hortensio, come you part the fray?
Contenti le core bene tribato, may I say.
Hor. Alla noftra cafa bene venuto molto honora froni or mio Petruckio.
Rife Gramio rife, we will compound this quarrel.
Gram. Nay 'tis no matter fir, what he legs in Latine.
If this be not a lawfull cause for me to leave his seruice, looke you fir: He bid me knocke him, & rap him foundly Fir, Was it for a servant to vfe his mater fo, being perhaps (for ought I fee) two and thirty, a peep out? Whom would to God I had well knockt at firft, then had not Gramio come by the worke.
Petr. A fencleffe villaine: good Hortensio,
I bad the rapcall knocke vpon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
Gram. Knocke at the gate! O heauen: spake you not these words plaine? Sirra, Knocke me heere: rappe me heere: knocke me well, and knocke me foundly? And come you now with knockling at the gate?
Petr. Sirra be gone, or talke not I advisue you.
Hor. Petruckio patience, I am Gramio's pledge:
Why this a heauie chance twixt him and you,
Your ancient truittie pleasanter servant Gramio:
And tell me now (sweet friend) what happie gale
Blows you to Padua heere, from old Verona?
Petr. Such wind as flatters yongmen through y world,

To
To seek their fortunes farther then at home, Where small experience grows but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me, _Antonio_ my father is deceas'd, And I have thrust my selfe into this maze, Happily to wise and thrive, as best I may: Crowes in my purte I have, and goods at home, And fo am come abroad to fee the world.
_Hor._ Petruchio, sall I then come roundly to thee, And with thee to a shrew'd ill-fauour'd wife? Thou'lt thank me but a little for my counsell: And yet Ie promife thee she shall be rich, And verie rich: but th'art too much my friend, And Ie not with thee to her.
_Petr._ Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we, Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife: (As wealth is burthen of my woing dance) Be she as foule as was _Florentius_ Loue, As old as _Sisell_, and as curft and throw'd As _Socrates_ Zeriniti, or a worfe: She mouseth me-not, or not remoues at least Affections edge in me. Were she as rough As are the swelling _Adriaticke_ feas.
I come to wise it wealthily in Padua: If wealthily, then happily in Padua.
_Gru._ Nay looke you fier, hee tells you flatly what his minde is: why glue him Gold enough, and marrie him to a Puppet or an Aglet babe, or an old trot with ne're a tooth in her head, though she have as manie diffaies as two and fifte horfes. Why nothing comes amittio, if monie comes withall.
_Hor._ Petruchio, fince we are ftept thus farre in, I will continue that I broach'd in left, I can Petruchio helpe thee to a wife With wealth enough, and yong and beautious, Brought vp as bent becomes a Gentlewoman. Her onely fault, and that is faults enough, Is, that she is intollerable curst, And throw'd, and froward, fo beyond all meare, That were my fate farre worser then it is, I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.
_Petr._ Hortensio peace: thou knowft not golds effeC, Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough: For I will boord her, though she chide as loud As thunder, when the clouds in Autumn cracke.
_Hor._ Her father is _Baptisfia_ Minola, An affable and courteous Gentleman, Her name is Katberina Minola, Renownd'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.
_Petr._ I know her father, though I know not her, And he knew my deceased father wel: I wil not fleape _Hortensio_ til I fee her, And therefore let me be thus bold with you, To give you ouer at this first encounter, Vnleeffe you wil accompanie me thither.
_Gru._ I pray you Sir let him go while the humor lasts. A my word, and the knew him as well as I do, she would thinke scolding would doe little good vpon him. Shee may perhaps call him halftime a score _Knaues_, or so: Why that's nothing; and he begin once, hee'll raile in his rope tricke. Ile tell you what fier, and the stand him but a little, he wil throw a figure in her face, and fo disfigure hir with it, that shee shall have no more eies to fee withall then a Cat: you know him not fir.
_Hor._ Tarrie Petruchio, I muft go with thee,

For in _Baptisfia_ keepe my tresure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His yong daughter, beautifull _Bianca_, And her with-holds from me. Other more Sutes to her, and riuals in my Loue: Supposing it a thing impossible, For those defectes I haue before rehearft. That ouer _Katherina_ wil be good:
Therefore this order hath _Baptisfia_ tane, That none shal haue acceffe vnto _Bianca_, Til Katharina the Curf, haue got a husband.
_Gru._ Katharina the curf, A title for a malde, of all titles the workt.
_Hor._ Now shal my friend Petruchio do me grace, And offer me disgui'd in fober robes, To old _Baptisfia_ as a schoole-master.
_Well_ feene in Muflccke, to infruct _Bianca_, That fo I may by this deuce at leaft Haue leaue and leasure to make loue to her, And vnsupected court her by her felle.

_Enter_ Gremio and _Lucesio_ diuergd.
_Gru._ Heere's no knauerie. See, to beguile the olde-folkes, how the young folkes lay their heads together. Mafter, mafter, looke about you: _Who_ goes there? ha.
_Petr._ Peace _Gremio_, it is the riuall of my Loue.
_Petruchio_ fland by a while.
_Gremio._ A proper tripling, and an amorous.
_Gremio._ O very well, I haue peru'd the note.
Hearke you Sir, Ie haue them verie fairly bound, All bookes of Loue, fee that at any hand, And fee you reade no other Lectures to her: You vnderftand me. Ouer and befide Signior _Baptisfia_ liberallite, Ie mend it with a Largeffe. Take your paper too, And let me haue them verie well perfumed; For she is sweeter then perfume it felle. To whom they go to: what will you reade to her. _Luc._ What ere I reade to her, Ie pleade for you, As for my patron, Ieand you fof affir'd, As firmely as your felle were fill in place, Yea and perhaps with more succeffull words Then you; vnleeffe you were a scholler fir.
_Gre._ Oh this learning, what a thing it is.
_Gru._ Oh this Woodcocke, what an Affe it is.
_Petr._ Peace firra.
_Hor._ Gremio mou _God_ faue you signior _Gremio_.
_Gre._ And you are wel met, Signior _Hortensio_.
Trow you whither I am going? To _Baptisfia_ Minola, I promitt to enquire carefully About a schoolemaster for the faire _Bianca_, And by good fortune I haue lighted well On this yong man: For learning and behauiour Fit for her turne, well read in Poetrie And other bookes, good ones, I warrant ye.
_Hor._ 'Tis well: and I haue met a Gentleman Hath promitt me to helpe one to another, A fine Muftian to infruct our Milthers, So that I no whit be behinde in dutie To faire _Bianca_, to beloved of me.
_Gre._ Beloved of me, and that my deeds shal proue.
_Gru._ And that his bags shal proue.
_Hor._ _Gremio_ , 'tis now time to vent our loue, Listen to me, and if you speake me fale, Ie tel you newes indifferrnt good for either. Heere is a Gentleman whom by chance I met

Vpon
Vpon agreement from vs to his liking,
Will vndertake to woo curst Katherine,
Yea,and to marrie her, if her dowrie please:

Gre. So said, so done, is well:
Hortensio, haue you told him all her faults?
Petr. I know he is an irkesome brawling scold:
If that be all Matters, I heare no harms.

Gre. No, sayte me so, friend? What Countreyman?
Petr. Borne in Verona, old Butonios fone:
My father dead, my fortune liues for me,
And I do hope, good days and long, to fee,

Gre. Oh sir, such a life with such a wife, were strange:
But if you have a thomacke, too a Gods name,
You shall haue me affifting you in all.
But will you woo this Wilde-cat?
Petr. Will I live?

Gru. Wil he woo her? I or Ile hang her.
Petr. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Thinke you, a little dinne can daunt mine eares?
Haue I not in my time heard Lions rore?
Haue I not heard the sea, puff vp with windes,
Rage like an angry Boare, chafed with sweate?
Haue I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And heaunes Artillerie thunder in the skies?
Haue I not in a pitched battell heard
Loude larums, neeving feedes,& trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womens tongue?
That giues not halfe so great a blow to heare,
As wil a Cheffe-nut in a Farmers fire.
Tulh,tulh, feare boyes with bugs.

Gru. For he fears none.

Grem. Hortensiio heare:
This Gentlemen is happily arriu'd,
My minde prefumes for his owne good, and yours.

Hor. I promit we would be Contributors,
And beare his charge of wooning whatsoeere.

Gremio. And fo we wil, prouided that he win her.

Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brace, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen God fave you. If I may be bold
Tell me I befeeche you, which is the readieast way
To the hous of Signior Baptifha Mimola?

'Bian. He that ha's the two faire daughters: if he you mean?

Tra. Even he Biondello.

Gre. Hearke you sir, you mane not her to———

Tra. Perhaps him and her frit, haue you to do?
Petr. Not her that chides frit,at any hand I pray.

Tra. I loue no chiders frit: Biondello, let's away.
Luc. Well begun Tranio.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a futor to the Maid you talke of, yea or no?

Tra. And if I be frit, is it any offence?

Gremio. No: if without more words you will get you hence.

Tra. Why sir, I pray are not the freers as free
For me, as for you?

Gre. But fo is not he.

Tra. For what reaason I befeech you.

Gre. For this reaason if you'll kno,
That she's the cholie loue of Signior Gremio.

Hor. That she's the choen of signior Hortenio.

Tra. Softly my Matters: If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right: heare me with patience.

Baptifha is a noble Gentleman,

To whom my Father is not all vnknowne,
And were his daughter fairer then she is,
She may more futors haue, and me for one.

Faire Ladias daughter had a thousand woovers,
Then well one more may faire Baptifha haue;
And so the shall: Lucenio that make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talke vs all.
Luc. Sir giue him head, I know he'll proue a lade.
Petr. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,
Did you yet euer fee Baptifhas daughter?

Tra. No sir, but heare I do that he hath two:
The one, as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other, for beauteous modestie.
Petr. Sir, sir, the frights for me, let her go by.

Gre. Yea, leaue that labour to great Hercules,

And let it be more then Alcides twelue.
Petr. Sir vnderhand you this of me (infwoth)
The yongest daughter whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all accefe of futors,
And will not promishe her to any man,
Vntill the elder fitter first be wed.

The yonger then is free, and not before.

Tra. If it be firt, that you are the man
Muit fteed vs all, and me amongt the ref:
And if you breake the ice, and do this feeks,
Atechie the elder: fet the yonger free,
For our accefe, whole hap shall be to haue her,
Will not fo gracelesse be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir you say wel, and wel you do conceuie,
And since you do profese to be a futor,
You must as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all ref generally beholding.

Tra. Sir, I thal not be facke, inigne whereof,

Please ye we may contrie this afternoone,
And quaffe carowlies to our Mistrefle health,
And do as adueraries do in law,
Strive mightily, but este and drinke as friends.

Hor. The motions good indeed, and be it fo,

Petruchio, I thal be your Been wenotes.

Enter Katharina and Bianca.

'Bian. Good fifter wrong me not, nor wrong your self,
To make a bondmaide and a flawe of mee,
That I didainen: but for these other goods,
Vانبide my hands, Ile pull them off my felse,
Yea all my raiment, to my petticoate,
Or what you will commande me, will I do,
So well I know my dutie to my elders.

Kate. Of all thy futors heere I charge tel
Whom thou lou'ft beft: fee thou difemble not.

'Bianca. Beleeue me fister, of all the men alioe,
I never yet beheld that specall face,
Which I could fance, more then any other.

Kate. Minion thou lyet: Is't not Hortenio?

'Bian. If you afferd him fiter, heere I fware
Ile please for you my felse, but you thal haue him.

Kate. Oh then belike you fance riches more,
You will haue Gremio to kepe you faire.

'Bian. Is it for him you do enuie me fo?
Nay then you left, and now I wel perceue
You haue but lefled with me all this while:
I prethee fiter Kate, vntie my hands.

Kz. If that be left, then all the ref was fo. Strikes her

Enter
Enter Baptifta.

_Bap._ Why how now Dame, whence grows this insolence?

_Bianca_ stand aside, poor gyre the weepes:
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her.
For shame thou Hilding of a dissolute spirit,
Why doth thou wrong her, that did nere wrong thee?
When did the croffe thee with a bitter word?
_Kate._ Her flience flouts me, and I be reveng'd.

Flies after Bianca.

_Bap._ What in my sight? Bianca get thee in.

_Exit._

_Kate._ What will you not suffer me: Nay now I fee
She is your treasure, she muft have a husband,
I muft dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your loue to her, lead Apes in hell.
Talke not to me, I will goe fit and weepe,
Till I can finde occasion of reuenge.

_Bap._ Was ever Gentleman thus green'd as I?
But who comes here.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a meane man,

_Petruchio_ with Tranio, with a boy bearing a Lute and Bookes.

_Gre._ Good morrow neighbour Baptifta.

_Bap._ Good morrow neighbour Gremio: God faue you.

_Gre._ Peace and you good sir: pray haue you not a daughter, calld Katerina, faire and vertuous.

_Bap._ I haue a daughter sir, calld Katerina.

_Gre._ You are too blunt, go to it orderly.

_Gre._ You wrong me signior Gremio, giue me leaue.

I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beautie, and her wit,
Her affability and bashfull modestie:
Her wondrous qualitie, and milde behaviour,
Am bold to fliew my felle a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witneffe
Of that report, which I fo ofte haue heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do prefent you with a man of mine
Cunning in Muficke, and the Mathematickes,
To infruct her fully in those fciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant,
Accept of him, or elfe you do me wrong,
His name is Littis, borne in Mantua.

_Bap._ Y'are welcome sir, and he for your good fake.
But for my daughter Katherine, this I know,
She is not for your turne, the more my greefe.

_Gre._ I fee you do not mean to part with her,
Or elfe you like not of my companie.

_Bap._ Mistake me not, I speake but as I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.

_Petruchio_ is my name, _Antonio_'s fonne,
A man well knowne throughout all Italy.

_Bap._ I know him well: you are welcome for his fake.

_Gre._ Suing your tale Petruchio, I pray let vs that are poore petitioners speake too? _Bacaro_, you are meruaylous forward.

_Petr._ Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would faine be doing.

_Gre._ I doubt it not sir. But you will curfe
Your wooing neighbors: this is a guilt
Very grateau, I am fure of it, to exprefs.
The like kindneffe my felle, that have bene
More kindely beholding to you then any:

Freely giue vnto this yong Scholler, that hath Beene long fudyng at _Rome_, as cunning
In Grecke, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Muficke and Mathematickes:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his fervice.

_Bap._ A thousand thankes signior Gremio:

Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinkes you walke like a stranger,
May I be fo bold, to know the cause of your comming?

_Tra._ Pardon me sir, the bokdneffe is mine owne,
That being a stranger in this Cittie heere,
Do make my felle af tutor to your daughter,
Vnto Bianca, faire and vertuous:

_Nor is your firme resolute vnknowne to me,
In the preffernent of the eldeft fitter._

This liberty is all that I requert,
That vpon knowledge of my Parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongft the rest that woo,
And free access and favour at the refi.

And toward the education of your daughters:
I heere bellow a fimple instruement,
And this small packet of Grecke and Latine bookes:
If you accept them, then their worth is great:

_Bap._ Lucentis is your name, of whence I pray.

_Tra._ Of Pifia sir, fonne to _Piccentio_.

_Bap._ A mightie man of Pifia by report,

I know him well: you are vere welcome sir:

Take you the Lute, and you the fet of bookes,
You Hall go fee your Pupils prefently.

_Holla,_ within.

Enter a Servant.

Sireh, leade thfe Gentlemen
To my daughters, and tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them vfe them well,
We will go walke a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner: you are paffing welcome,
And fo I pray you all to thinke your felues.

_Petr._ Signior Baptifta, my buiffene asketh haffe,
And enuerie day I cannot come to woo,
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left folie heire to all his Lands and goods,
Which I haue bettered then decreafe,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters loue,
What dowrie shall I haue with her to wife.

_Bap._ After my death, the one halfe of my Lands,
And in poiffession twentie thoufand Crownes.

_Petr._ And for that dowrie, Ile affure her
Of her widow-hood, be it that the furuiue me
In all my Lands and Leafes whatfoever,
Let specialties be therefore drawne betweene vs,
That covenantes may be kept on either hand.

_Bap._ I, when the speciall thing is well obtain'd,
That is her love: for that is all in all.

_Petr._ Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptorie as the proud minded:

_And where two raging fires meete together,
They do confume the thing that feeds their furie.

Though little fire growes great with little winde,
Yet extreme gufts will blow out fire and all:
So to her, and fo the yeilds to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

_Bap._ Well maift thou woo, and am happy be thy speed:
But be thou arm'd for some vnpleasur'd words.

_Petr._ To the proofes, as Mountaines are for windes,
'That shakkes not, though they blow perpetually.

Enter _Hortensia_ with his brad broke.

_Bpa._
Women are made to beare, and so are you.
Kate. No such lade as you, if me you meane.
Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but yong and light.
Kate. Too light for such a swaine as you to catch,
And yet as heanie as my weight should be.
Pet. Shold be, shold be: buzz.
Kate. Well tane, and like a buzzard.
Pet. Oh flow-wing'd Turtle, hal a buzzard take thee?
Kate. I for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come you Wafpe, y'faith you are too angrie.
Kate. If I be wafphif, beft beware my fling.
Pet. My remedy is then to pluckle it out.
Kate. I, if the fool could finde it where it lies.
Pet. Who knowes not where a Wafpe does ware his fling? In his tale.
Kate. In his tongue?
Pet. Whole tongue.
Kate. Yours if you talke of tales, and fo farewell.
Pet. What with my tongue in your tale.
Nay, come againe, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,
Kate. That Ile trie.
Pet. I fwear I cffe you, if you strike againe.
Kate. So may you loofe your armes,
If you strike me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no Gentleman, why then no armes.
Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy booke.
Kate. What is your Creft, a Coxcombe?
Pet. A comblesse Cocke, fo Kate will be my Hen.
Kate No Cocke of mine, you crow too like a crauen
Pet. Nay come Kate, come : you must not looke fo fowre.
Kate. It is my fashion when I fee a Crab.
Pet. Why heere's no crab, and therefore looke not fowre.
Kate. There is, there is.
Pet. Then thow it me.
Kate. Had I a glaffe, I would.
Pet. What, you meane my face.
Kate. Well aym'd of such a yong one.
Pet. Now by S. George I am too young for you.
Kate. Yet you are witherd.
Pet. 'Tis with cares.
Kate. I care not.
Kate. I chaffe you if I tarrie. Let me go.
Pet. No, not a white, I finde you paffing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and fullen,
And now I finde report a very liar:
For thou art pleafant, gamefome, paffing courteous,
But flow in speech: yet sweet as spring-time flowers.
Thou canst not frowne, thou canst not looke a fonce,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor haft thou plesure to be croffe in talke:
But thou with mildneffe entertain's thy woeeres,
With gentle conference, foft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limpe?
Oh fland'rous world: Kate like the hazle twig
Is ftraight, and fnder, and as browne in hue
As hazle nuts, and fweeter raen the kernels:
Oh let me fee thee walke: thou doft not halt.
Kate. Go foolie, and whom thou keep't command.
Pet. Did ever 'Dian fo become a Groue
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate:
O be thou 'Dian, and let her be Kate,
And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportfull.
Kate. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Pet. It is extempore, from my mother wit.
Kate. A witty mother, witlesse else her sonne.
Pet. Am I not wife?
Kate. Yes, keepe you warme.
Pet. Marry, lo I mean sweet Katherine in thy bed:
And therefore letting all this chat aside,
Thou in plaine terms, thou father hast contented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turne,
For by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me,

Entri Bapstissa, Gremio, Traiano.

For I am he am borne to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wilde Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kate:
Here comes your father, neuer make deniall,
I mut, and will have Katherine to my wife. (daughter)
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my Pet. How but well sir? How but well?
It were impossibell I should speed amisse. (dumps)
Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your Kate. Call you me daughter? now I promis you
You haue shewed a tender fatherly regard,
To with me wed to one halfe Lunaticke,
A mad-cap rufian, and a swearing lacke,
That thinkes with othes to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus, your selle and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amisse of her :
If she be curst, it is for policell,
For shee's not froward, but modest as the Doe,
Shee is not hot, but temperate as the mornce,
For patience shee will prove a second Grifell,
And Romane Lucrece for her charitie:
And to conclude, we haue 'greed so well together,
That vpon fonday is the wedding day.
Kate. Ile fee thee hang'd on fonday first. (firl)
Gre. Hark Petruchio, the styes shee'll fee thee hang'd
Tra. Is this your speaking? may the godnitie our part.
Pet. Be patient gentlemen, I choose her for my selle,
If shee and I be pleasd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd twixt us twaine being alone,
That the shall still be curst in company,
I tell you 'tis incredible to belewe
How much she lovess e; oh the kindest Kate,
Shee hung about my necke, and kiffe on kiffe
Shee vi'd go fast, protefling othe on oath,
That in a twinke the won me to her louse,
Oh you are nooices, 'tis a world to fee
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacoake wretch can make the cursthe flrow:
Glue me thy hand, Kate, I will vnto Venice
To buy apparell 'gainst the wedding day;
Prouide the feast father, and bid the guestes,
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.
Bap. I know not what, to say, but give me your hâds,
God fend you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen say we, we will be winnettes.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, fonday comes space,
We will haue rings, and things, and fine array,
The Taming of the Shrew.

She is your own, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tray. That's but a caull : he is old, you young.
Greg. And may not young men die as well as old?
Bapt. Wall gentlemen, I am thus refolvd,
On tuesday next, you know
My daughters Katherine is to be married:
Now on the sunday following, shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance:
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thanke you both. Exit. Greg. Adieu good neighbour : now I fear thee not.
Syr: yong gamester, your father was a foole
To give thee all, and in his wayning age
Set foot vnder thy table : tut, a toy.
An old Italian foxe is not fo kinde my boy. Exit. Tray. A vengeance on your craftsify withered hide,
Yet I haue faed it with a card of ten:
'Tis in my head to doe my mafter good:
I fee no reaion but fuppo'd Lucentio,
Mufet get a faver, call'd fuppo'd Dinencia,
And that's a wonder : fathers commonly
Doe get their children : but in this cafe of woing,
A childe shall get a fire, if I faile not of my cunning. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.
Luc. Filder forbeare, you grow too forward Sir,
Haue you fo foonne forgot the entertainment
Her fifter Katherine welcom'd you withall.
Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patronnele of heavenly harmony ;
Then glue me leaue to hauve prerogative,
And when in Muifike we hauue spent an houre,
Your Lecture shalt have leaure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous Affe that never read fo furre,
To know the caufe why muifike was ordain'd:
Was it not to refreh the minde of man
After his fuddies, or his fviulall paine?
Then glue me leaue to read Philosophy,
And while I paufe, fere in your harmony.
Hort. Sirra, I will not beare thefe branes of thine.
Bianc. Why gentlemen, you doe me double wrong,
To ftrive for that which refleth in my choice:
I am no breacching scholler in the schooles,
Ie not to be tied to howres, nor pointed times,
But leaerne my Leffons as I pleafe my felfe,
And to cut off all ftrife heere fit we downe,
Take you your inches, play you the whiles,
His Lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.
Hort. You'le leave his Lecture when I am in tune?
Luc. That will be noear, tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we left ?
Luc. Heere Madam : His Ibat Simola, he ef fegia tellus, he fisterat Priami regia Celfa fenti.
Bian. Conferr them.
Luc. His Ibat, as I told you before, Simola, I am Lu-cento, he ef, honne vnto Vincen cio of Pifa, Segeria tel-luus, diligued thus to get your love, he fisterat, and that Lucentio that comes a woong, priami, is my man Tra-nio, regia, bearing my port, celfa fenti that we might beguile the old Pantaloune.

Hort. Madam, my Instrumets in tume.
Bian. Let's hearre, oh fee, the treble iarres.
Luc. Spit in the hole man, and tune againe.
Bian. Now let mee fee if I can confet. He that fimair, I know you not, bie ef fegiera tellus, I truit you not, bie fisterat priami, take heede heere ve not, regia prefume not, Celfa fenti, delaire not.
Hort. Madam, its now in tume.
Luc. All but the base.
Hort. The base is right, 'tis the base knaue that iars.
Luc. How fiery and forward our Pedant is,
Now for my life the knaue doth court my loue,
Pediature, Ile watch you better yet:
In time I may beleeeue, yet I myrftuit.
Bian. Miftruit it not, for sure Ociudes
Was Axay caid fo from his grandfather.
Hort. I must beleue my mafter, elfe I promise you,
I shoule be argument fill upon that doubt ;
But let it reft, now Lito to you :
Good mafter take it not vnkindly pray
That I have beeone thus peflant with you both.
Hort. You may goe walk, and give me leaue a while,
My Leffons make no mufick in three parts.
Luc. Are you fo formall Sir, well I myuft waite
And watch withall, for but I be deceiu'd,
Our fine Mufitian growth amongs.
Hort. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learne the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamoth in a briefer fort,
More pefiant, pity, and effectual,
Then hath beene taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairely drawne.
Bian. Why, I am paft my gamoth long agoe.
Hort. Yet read the gamoth of Lucentio.
Bian. Gamon I am, the ground of all accord :
Are, to pleade Hortenio's paffion:
Bene, Bianca take him for thy Lord
Cfeus, that loues with all affection :
Dole, one Cliffe, two notes have I,
Elami, thou pity or I die.
Call you this gamoth ? tut I like it not,
Old fashions pleafe me bitt, I am not fo nice
To charge true rules for old inuentions.

Enter a Myffengers.
Nicks, MifTreffe, your father prayes you leave your
And helpe to dreffe your fifters chamber vp,
(books,
You know to marrow is the wedding day.
Bian. Farewell sweet maffers both, I mufet be gone.
Luc. Faith MifTreffe then I have no caufe to fay.
Hor. But I have caufe to pry into this pedant,
Methinks he lookeas as though he were in loue :
Yet if thy thoughts Bianca be fo humble
To cut thy wandring eyes on every flake :
Seize thee that Lift, if once I finde thee ranging,
Hortenio will be quit with thee by changing.

Enter Baptifla, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others,attendants.
Bap. Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruckio should be married,
And yet we heare not of our fonne in Law:
What will be faid, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-grome when the Priet attends
To fpake the ceremoniall rites of marriage?
What fain Lucentio to this shame of ours?
No
Kat. No flame but mine, I must forsooth be forfit
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart.
Vnto a mad-braine rudebay, full of spleene,
Who wo'd in haffe, and meanes to wed at leyfure:
I told you I, he was a frantickke foole,
Hiding his bitter lfts in blust behavieur,
And to be noted for a merry man;
He'll woe you thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, and proclaim the banes,
Yet neuer meanes to wed where he hath wo'd:
Now must the world point at poore Katherine,
And say, loe, there is mad Petruchio's wife
If it would please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience good Katherine and Baptistia too,
Vpon my life Petruchio meanes but well,
What euer fortune ftyes him from his word,
Though he be blunte, I know him passing wife,
Though he be merry yet withall he's honeft.

Kate. Would Katherine had neuer seen him though.

Exit waiting.

Bap. Goe girlie, I cannot blame thee now to wepe,
For such an injury would were a very faire,
Much more a shrew of impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Mafter, mafter, newes, and such newes as you neuer heard of,

Bap. Is it new and olde too? how may that be?
Bion. Why, is it not newes to heard of Petruchio's
Bap. Is he come? (comming?)
Bion. Why no fir.
Bap. What then?
Bion. He is comming.
Bap. When will he be heere?
Bion. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.
Tra. But fry, what to thine olde newes?

Bion. Why Petruchio is comming, in a new hat and an olde lerkyn, a pare of olde breeches thrice turn'd; a pare of bootes that haue beene candle-cafes, one buckled, another laced: an olde ruly fword tane out of the Towne Armory, with a broken hilt, and chapellefe: with two broken points: his horfe hipt with an olde mothy faddle, and firropts of no kindred: befides poiffeft with the glanders, and like to mofe in the chine, troubled with the Lampaffe, infected with the fashions, full of Windegalls, fpred with Spawins, raised with the Yellowes, past cure of the Flues, flanke fpyiol'd with the Staggers, begnawne with the Botes, Waid in the backe, and shoulder-shotten, neere leg'd before, and with a half-checkt Bitt, & a headfall of sheepe lether, which being refrain'd to keepe him from flambing, hath been often burft, and now repaired with knobs: one girt fixe times pee'd, and a womans Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairely set down in fluds, and heere and there pee'd with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?
Bion. Oh fir, his Lackey, for all the world Capri-fion'd like the horfe: with a linnen fock on one leg, and a kerfey boot-hoof on the other, garterd with a red and blew lift; an olde hat, & the humor of forty fancies prickt in't for a feather: a monfter, a very monfter in apparell, & not like a Chriftian foot-boy, or a gentlemans Lacky.

Tra. 'Tis some od humor pricks him to this fashion,
Yet oftentimes he goes but meane apparell'd.

Bap. I am glad he's come, howfoere he comes.
Bion. Why fir, he comes not.
Bap. Didst thou not fay hee comes?

Bion. Who, that Petruchio came?
Bap. I, that Petruchio came. (backe)
Bion. No fir, I fay his horfe comes with him on his Bap. Why that's all one.
Bion. Nay by S. Lampe, I hold you a penny, a horfe and a man is more then one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio,

Pet. Come, where be thefe gallants? who's at home?

Bap. You are welcome fir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not to fow apparel'd as I with you were.

Pet. Were it better I should riu in thus:
But where is Katherine? where is my lovely Bride?
How does my father gentiles methinkes you frowne,
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they faw fome wondrous monument.
Some Commet, or vnuiall prodigie?

Bap. Why fir, you know this is your wedding day:
First were we led, fearing you would not come,
Now firder, that you come fo vnprov'd:
Fie, doeft this habit, shame to your eflate,
An eye-fore to our folemne feftiall.

Tra. And tell vs what occasion of import
Hath all fo long detain'd you from your wife,
And lent you hither fo unlike your felfe?

Pet. Tedious It were to tell, and harfh to hear,
Sufficeth I am come to keepe my word,
Though in fome part infur'd to digreffe,
Which at more leyfure I will fo excuse,
As you shall well be fatisfi'd with all.
But where is Katherine? I fay too long from her,
The morning weares, 'tis time we were at Church.

Tra. See not your Bride in thefe vnreuerent robes,
Goe to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, beleeue me, thus Ile vilfit her.

Bap. But thus I truft you will not marry her. (words)

Pet. Good fheet even thus: therefore ha done with
To me the married, not vnto my clothes:
Could I repaire what she will weare in me,
As I can change thefe poore accoutrements,
'Twere well for Katherine, and better for my felfe.
But what a foolle am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my Bride?
And feele the title with a lovely kiffe.

Tra. He hath fome meaning in his mad attire,
We will perfwade him be it poiffible,
To put on better cre he goe to Church.

Bap. Ile after him, and fee the event of this.

Pet. But fir, Loue concerneth vs to adde
Her fathers likings, which to bring to paffe
As before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man what ere he be,
It skils not much, weele ft him to our turne,
And he fhall be Vincentio of Pifia.
And make affurance heere.

Padua. Of greater fumes then I have promifed,
So fhall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with content.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmater
Doth watch Bianca's steps fo narrowly:
'Twere good me-thinkes to fleale our marriage,
Which once perfom'd, let all the world lay no,
Ile keepe mine owne defpite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to looke into,

T2

And
The Taming of the Shrew.

And watch our vantage in this businest,
We'll outer-reach the grey-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Muflian, amorous Lilli,
All for my Masters fake Lucentio.

Enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the Church?
Gre. As willingly as ere I came from schoole.
Tra. And is the Bride & Bridgroom coming home?
Gre. A Bridgroome say you? 'tis a groome indeed,
A grumling groome, and that the girl shall finde.
Tra. Curder then the, why 'tis impossible.
Gre. Why hee's a deuell, a deuell, a very fiend.
Tra. Why she's a deuell, a deuell, the deuils damme.
Gre. Tut, she's a Lambe, a Doue, a foule to him:
Ie tell you sir Lucentio; when the Priest
Should ask if Katherine shoulde be his wife,
I, by gogs woones quoth he, and swore so loud,
That all amas'd the Priest let fall the booke,
And as he frownd againe to take it vp.
This mad-brain'd bridegroome tooke him such a cuffs,
That downe fell Priest and booke, and booke and Priest,
Now take them vp quoth he, if any lift.

Tra. What said the wench when he rofe againe?
Gre. Trembled and shooke: for why, he flurr'd and swore, as if the Vicar meant to cozen him: but after many ceremonies done, hee calls for wine, a health quoth he,
as if he had beene aboord carowing to his Mates after a storme, quaff off the Muflcadell, and threw the fops all in the Sextons face: hauing no other reason, but that his beard grew thinne and hungerly, and feem'd to aske him fops as hee was drinking: This done, hee tooke the Bride about the necke, and kift her lips with such a clamorous smacke, that at the parting all the Church did echos: and I seeing this, came thence for very flame, and after mee I know the root is comming, such a mad marryage neuer was before: harke, harke, I heare the minfrels play.
Mufick players.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortensio, Baptifia.

Petr. Gentlemen & friends, I thank you for your pains,
I know you thynke to dine with me to day,
And haue prepar'd great flore of wedding cheere,
But fo it is, my wife doth call me hence,
And therefore hence I meane to take my leaue.
Bap. Is't possible you will away to night?
Petr. I must away to day before night come,
Make it no wonder: if you knew my businesse,
You would intreat me rather goe then fay:
And honelt company, I thank you all,
That haue beheld me gue away my felde
To this most patient, sweet, and vertuous wife,
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let vs intreat you fay till after dinner.
Petr. It may not be.

Gre. Let me intreat you.
Petr. It cannot be.
Kat. Let me intreat you.
Petr. I am content.
Kat. Are you content to fay?
Petr. I am content you shall entreat me fay,
But yet not fay, entreat me how you can.

Kat. Now if you love me fay.
Petr. Gremio, my horfe.

Gru. I sir, they be ready, the Oates haue eaten the horses.

Kate. Nay then,
Doe what thou canst, I will not goe to day,
No, nor to morrow, not till I pleafe my felde,
The dore is open fir, there lies your way,
You may be logging whiles your bootes are greene:
For me, Ile not be gone till I pleafe my felde,
'Tis like you'll prove a lolly furly groome,
That take it on you at the first fo roundly.

Pet. O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry.
Kat. I will be angry, what haft thou to doe?
Father, be quiet, he shall fay my leifure.
Gre. I marry sir, now it begins to worke.

Kat. Gentlemen, forward to the briddall dinner,
I see a woman may be made a fool
If he had not a spirit to refift.

Pet. They shall goe forward Kate at thy command,
Obey the Bride you that attend on her.
Goe to the feaft, reuell and dominere,
Carowe full meaure to her maiden-head,
Be madde and merry, or goe hang your felues:
But for my bonny Kate, the muff with me:
Nay, lookes not big, nor flarte, nor faire, nor fret,
I will be matter of what is mine owne,
Shoe is my goods, my chattels, she is my houfe,
My houfhold duke, my field, my barren,
My horfe, my ox, my affe, my any thing,
And heere the flands, touch her who euer dare,
Ie bring mine aotion on the proudest he
That fops my way in Padua: Gremio

Draw forth thy weapon, we are beter with theues,
Refuce thy Miftrefse if thou be a man:
Fare not sweet wench, they shall not touch thee Kate,
Ie buckler thee against a Million.

Exeunt. P. Ka.

Bap. Nay, let them goe, a couple of quiet ones.
(ing.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laugh.
Tra. Of all mad matches never was the like.

Luc. Miftrefse, what's your opinion of your fitter?
Bian. That being mad her felde, she's madly mated.

Kat. I warrant him Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though Bride & Bride-
For to supply the places at the table, (groom wants
You know there wants no inkets at the feast:
Lucentio, you shall supply the Bridgroomes place,
And let Bianca take her fitters roome.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca pradice how to bride it?
Bap. She shall Lucentio come gentlemens let goe.

Enter Gremio.

Exeunt.

Gru. Fie, fie on all tired lades, on all mad Masters, & all foule waies: was euer man so beaten? was euer man so raide? was euer man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are comming after to warme them: now were not I a little pot, & foone hot; my very lippes might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roofe of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me, but I with blowing the fire shall warme my felde: for considering the weather, a taller man then I will take cold: Holls, hoa Curitis.

Enter Curitis.

Cart. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou maist slide from my shoulder to my heele, with no greater
The TAMING OF THE SHREW.

greater a run but my head and my necke. A fire good
Cur. Is my master and his wife comming Grumio?
Gru. Oh I Curte I, and therefore fire, fire, caft on no water.
Cur. Is the fo hot a shrew as he's reported.
Gru. She was good Curte before this frost: but thou now'llt winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tham'd my old master, and my new mistresse, and my fels fellow Curte.
Gru. Away you three inch foole, I am no beast.
Gru. Am I but three inches? Why thy horse is a foot and so long am I at the left. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complaine on thee to our mistresse, whose hand (the being now at hand) thou shalt foone feele, to thy cold comfort, for being flow in thy hot office.
Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?
Gru. A cold world Curte in every office but thine, & therefore fire: do thy duty, and have thou dutie, for my Master and mistresse are almoft frozen to death.
Cur. There's fire readie, and therefore good Grumio the newes.
Gru. Why lacke boy, ho boy, and as much newes as wilt thou.
Cur. Come, you are so full of conjatching.
Gru. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the Cooke, is supper ready, the house trim'd, rushes fire'd, colwwebs swept, the servingmen in their new fuflian, the white flockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the lackes faire within, the Gils faire without, the Carpets laide, and euerie thing in order?
Cur. All readie: and therefore I pray thee newes.
Gru. First know my horfe is tired, my master & mistriss faire out. Cur. How?
Gru. Out of their saddles into the durt, and thereby hangs a tale.
Cur. Let's ha't good Grumio.
Gru. Lend thine care.
Cur. Heere.
Gru. There,
Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale, not to heare a tale.
Gru. And therefore 'tis cal'd a tenible tale: and this Cufe was but to knocke at thy ear, and befeech lining: now I begin, Inprimis wee came downe a howe hill, my Master riding behinde my Mistresse.
Cur. Both of one horfe?
Gru. What's that to thee?
Cur. Why a horfe.
Gru. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not croft me, thou should't haue heard how her horfe fel, and the under her horfe: thou shouldt haue heard in how miery a place, how she was bemoll'd, how bee left her with the horfe upon her, how he beat me because her horfe flumbled, how she waded through the durt to plcuck him of me: how he swore, how he praid, that neuer praid before: how I cried, how the horses ranne away, how her bride was burnt: how I loft my crupper, with manie things of worthy memorie, which now shall die in obli-ung, and thou returne vnexperienc'd to thy graue.
Cur. By this reckning he is more shew than she.
Cur. I, and that thou and the proudefl of you all shall finde when he comes home. But what talke I of this?
Call for'd Nathaniel, Ieffep, Nicholas, Phillip, Walter, Sugerjap and the rest: let their heads bee flickely comb'd, their blew coats brudh'd, and their garters of an indifferent knitt, let them currife with their left legs, and not prefume to touch a haire of my Master horfe-taille, till they kiff their hands. Are they all readie?
Cur. They are.
Gru. Call them forth.
Cur. Do you heare ho! you muft meeke my master to countenance my mistresse.
Gru. Why the hath a face of her owne.
Cur. Who knowes not that?
Gru. Thou it femeas, that calls for company to countenance her.
Cur. I call them forth to credit her.
enter foure or five servingmen.
Gru. Why the comes to borrow nothing of them.
Nat. Welcome home Grumio.
Efe. What Grumio.
Nick. Fellow Grumio.
Nat. How now old lad.
Gru. Welcome you : how now you: what you fellow you; and thus much for greeting. Now my spurge companions, is all readie, and all things neate?
Nat. All things is readie, how neere is our master?
Gre. E'ne at hand, alighted by this: and therefore be not——Cockes paftion, filence, I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Pet. Where be thefe knaues? What no man at doore
To hold my fitrop, nor to take my horfe?
Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Phillip.
All fer. Heere, heere fir, heere fir.
You logger-headed and vnpollih'd grooms :
What! no attendance? no regard? no dutie?
Where is the foolish knaue I fent before?
Gru. Heere fir, as foolish as I was before.
Pet. You perzant, Iwain, you horfion malte-horfe drudg
Did I not bid thee meeke me in the Parke,
And bring along thefe rafcal knaues with thee?
Grumio. Nathaniels coate fir was not fully made,
And Gabrel: pumps were all vnpinkt Ith heele :
There was no Linke to colour Peters hat,
And Walters dagger was not come from sheathing :
There were none fine, but Adam, Rafts, and Gregory,
The ref were ragged, old, and begggerly,
Yet as they are, heere are they come to meeue you.
Pet. Go rafcals, go, and fetch my fupper in.
Ex.Ser.
Where is the life that late I led?
Where are thofe? Sit downe Kate,
And welcome. Soud,found,found, found.
Enter fervants with furper.

Why when I say! Nay good sweete Kate be merrie.
Oft with my boots, you rogues: you villaines, when?
It was the Friar of Orders grey,
As be forth washed on blud eye.
Out you rogue, you plucke my foote awrie,
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.
Be merrie Kate: Some water heere: what hoa.
Enter one with water.
Where's my Spaniel Treuit Sirra, get you hence,
And bid my coven Ferdinand come hither:
One Kate that you much kine, and be acquain'ted with.
Where are my Slippers? Shall I have fome water?
Come Kate and wash, & welcome hearty:
you horfion villaines, will you let it fall?
Kate. Patience I pray you, 'twas a fault unwillmg.

Pet. A horion beetle-headed flap-ear'd knave,

Come Kate sit downe, I know you have a fomacke,

Will you glue thankes, sweete Kate, or eile shall I?

What's this, Mutton?

Pet. Who brought it?

Peter. I.

Pet. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meate:

What dogges are theft? Where is the rascal Cooke?

How durst you villaines bring it from the dreefer

And ferue it thus to me that love it not?

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all.

You headless loll-heads, and vanmanner'd flaves.

What, do you grumble? Ile be with you straight.

Kate. I pray you husband be not so diuqiet,

The meate was well, if you were fo contented.

Pet. I tell thee Kate, 'twas burnt and driued away,

And I expressly am forbid to touch it:

For it engenders choller, planteth anger,

And better 'twere that both of vs did di.

Sine of our felves, our felves are chollerick,

Then feeke with fuch ouer-rofted feth:

Be patient, to morrow 'tale mende'd, and

For this night we'll fay for company.

Come I will bring thee to thy Bridall chamber.  Exeunt.

Enter Servants joyfully.

Natb. Peter did it ever feue the like.

Petrie. He kills her in her owne humor.

Grumio. Where is he?

Enter Curtie a Servant.

Cur. In her chamber, making a fermon of continence to her, and railes, and fweares, and rates, that fhee (poore foule) knowes not which way to fhand, to looke, to speake, and fits as one new riven from a dreame.  Awaie, awaie, for he is compung hither.

Enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus haue I policyckely begun my reigne,

And 'tis my hope to end succedually:

My Faulcon now is sharpe, and paffing emptie,

And till the ftoope, the mufet not be full gorg'd,

For then the neuer lookes upon her lure.

Another way I haue to man my Haggard,

To make her come, and know her Keepers call:

That is, to watch her, as we watch thefe Kittes,

That baie, and beate, and will not be obedienc:  She eate no meate to day, nor none thal eate.

Last night the fleep not, nor to night the fleep not:

As with the meate, fome vnderfed fault

Ile finde about the making of the bed,

And heere Ile flinge the pillow, there the boullet,

This way the Courerle, another way the sheeta:

I, and amidst this hurrie I intend,

That all is done in reuerent care of her,

In conclusion, the flal watch all night,

And if the chance to nod, Ile raie and brawle,

And with the clamor keepe her fill awake:

This is a way to kill a Wife with kindneffe,

And thus Ile curbe her mad and headstrong humor:

He that knowes better how to tame a threwe,

Now let him speake, 'tis charity to fwear.

Enter Tranio and Hortensio:

Tran. I'st possible friend Life, that miftris Bianca

Both fanece any other but Lucentio,

I tell you sir, she beares me faire in hand.

Luc. Sir, to fatisfie you in what I have saie,

Stand by, and marke the manner of his teaching.

Enter Bianca.

Hor. Now Miftris, profit you in what you reade?

Bian. What Mafter reade you firft, refolue me that?

Hor. I reade, that I profetie the Art to loue.

Bian. And may you proue fir Mafter of your Art.

Luc. While you feet deere proue Mifitreffe of my heart.

Hor. Quicke proceeders marry, now tel me I pray, you that durft fwear that your miftris Bianca

Lou'd me in the World fo wel as Lucentio.

Tra. Oh delightsfull Loue, vnonfaint womankand,

I tel thee Life this is wonderfull.

Hor. Miflake no more, I am not Life,

Nor a Mufitian as I feeme to be,

But one that fcorne to live in this disguife,

For fuch a one as leaves a Gentleman,

And makes a God of fuch a Cullion;

Know fir, that I am cal'd Hortenfio:

Tra. Signior Hortenfio, I haue often heard

Of your entire affection to Bianca,

And fince mine eyes are witneffe of her lightneffe,

I wil with you, if you be fo contented,

Forfware Bianca, and her loue for euer.

Hor. See how they kiffe and court: Signior Lucentio,

Heree is my hand, and heere I firmy vow

Neuer to woo her more, but do forfware her

As one vnworthie all the former favours

That I have fondly flatter'd them withall.

Tra. And heere I take the like vnfaithful oath,

Neuer to marry with her, though she would intreate,

Fie on her, fie how beaftly the doth court him.

Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn

For me, that I may surely keepe mine oath.

I wil be married to a wealthy Widdow,

Ere three dayes paffe, which hath as long lou'd me,

As I have lou'd this proud disdaiffull Haggard,

And fo farewel signior Lucentio,

Kindneffe in women, not their beauteous lookes

Shal win my loue, and fo I take my leaue,

In refolution, as I fware before.

Tra. Miftris Bianca, bleffe you with fuch grace,

As longeth to a Louers bleffed cafe:

Nay, I haue tane you napping gentle Loue,

And haue forfworne you with Hortenfio.

Bian. Tranio you left, but haue you both forfworne mee?

Tra. Miftris we haue.

Luc. Then we are rid of Life.

Tra. I'faith hee'l haue a lustie Widdow now,

That shalbe woo'd, and wedded in a day.

Bian. God gie him joy.

Tra. I, and hee'l tame her.

Bianca. He lyes to Tranio.

Tra. Faith he is gone vnto the taming schoole.

Bian. The taming schoole: what is there such a place?

Tra. I miftris, and Petruchio is the matter,

That teacheth tricks cleuen and twentie long,

To tame a threwe, and charm her chauffering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Oh Mafter, matter I haue watcht fo long,

That I am dogge-wearie, but at laft I fplied

An ancient Angel comming downe the hill,

Will ferue the turne.

Tra. What is he Biondello?

Bis. Mafter, a Marcantant, or a pedant,
I know not what, but formall in apparrell,
In gate and countenance fully like a Father.

Luc. And what of him Transio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
Ile make him glad to feeme Vincenio,
And give assurance to Baptiſha Minola.
As if he were the right Vincenio.

Par. Take me your loue, and then let me alone.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God saue you fir.

Tra. And you fir, you are welcome,
Trauale you farre on, or are you at the farthest?

Ped. Sir at the farthest for a weeke or two,
But then vp farther, and as farre as Rome,
And fo to Tripolifie, if God lend me life.

Tra. What Countreyman I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua Sir, marry God forbid,
And come to Padua carelesse of your life.

Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the caufe?
Your ships are faiad at Venice, and the Duke
For private quarre 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publisht'd and proclaimed it openly:
'Tis meruaile, but that you are newly come,
you might haue heard it ife proclaimed about.

Ped. Alas fir, it is worfe for me then fo,
For I haue bins for monie by exchange
From Florence, and mufṭ heere deliver them.

Tra. Wel fir, do you courtifie,
Thiswil I do, and this I wil auido you.
First tell me, haue you euer beene at Pifa?

Ped. I fir, in Pifa haue I often bin,
Pifa renowned for graue Citizens.

Tra. Among them know you one Vincenio?

Ped. I know him not, but I haue heard of him:
A Merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father fir, and footh to fay,
In count'nance somewhat doth reemblle you.

Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyter, & all one.

Tra. To sace your life in this extremitie,
This favor wil I do you for his fake,
And thinke it not the worth of all your fortunes,
That you are like to Sir Vincenio,
His name and credite thal you vndertake,
And in my houfe you fal be friendly lodg'd,
Looke that you take vpon you as you fhould,
you vnderland me fir: fo thal you stay
Til you haue done your buinelf in the Citie:
If this be courtfie fir, accept of it.

Ped. Oh fir I do, and wil repute you euer
The patron of my life and libertie.

Tra. Then go with me, to make the matter good,
This by the way I let you vnderland,
My father is heere look'd for euerie day,
To paffe assurance of a dowe in marriage
'Twixt me, and one Baptiſha daughter heere:
In all these circumftances Ile instruct you,
Go with me to cloath you as becomes you.

Exit.

ACTUS QUARTUS. SCENA PRIMA.

Entor Katherina and Grumio.

Gru. No, no forfooth I dare not for my life.

Ka. The more my wrong, the more his fpite appears.

What, did he marry me to famifie me?

Begger that come vnto my fathers doore,
Vpon intreatie have a preuent almes,
If not, elsewhere they meete with charitie:
But I, who never knew how to intreat,
Nor neuer needed that I should intreat,
Am flaru'd for meate, giddle for lacke of sleep:
With othes kept waking, and with brawling fed,
And that which spiftes me more then all these wants,
He does it vnder name of perfect loue:
As who should fay, if I should sleepe or eate
'Twere deadly fickneffe, or elfe preuent death.

I prethee go, and get me some repaft,
I care not what, so it be holome foode.

Gru. What fay you to a Neats foote?

Kat. 'Tis passing good, I prethee let me haue it.

Gru. I feare it is too chollerick a meate.

How fay you to a fat Tripe finely broy'd?

Kat. I like it well, good Grumio fetch it me.

Gru. I cannot tell, I feare 'tis chollerick.

What fay you to a peace of Beefe and Muffard?

Kat. A difh that I do loue to feede vpon.

Gru. I, but the Muffard is too hot a little.

Kat. Why then the Beefe, and let the Muffard reft.

Gru. Nay then I wil not, you shal have the Muffard
Or elfe you get no beefe of Grumio.

Kat. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Gru. Why then the Muffard without the beefe.

Kat. Go get thee gone, thou falfe deluding flau,

Beats bim.

That feed'ft me with the verie name of meate.
Sorrow on thee, and all the packe of you
That triumph thus vpon my mifery:
Go get thee gone, I fay.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortensio with meate.

Petr. How fares my Kate, what fweeting all a-mort?

Hor. Miftiſ, what cheere?

Kate. Faith as cold as can be.

Petr. Plucke vp thy fpirites, looke cheerfully vpon me.

Heere Loue, thou feeffe how diligent I am,
To drefle thy meate my felfe, and bring it thee.

I am fure fwee Kate, this kindneffe merites thankes.

What, not a word! Nay then, thou lou'ft it not:

And all my paines is fortd to no prooffe.

Heere take away this difh.

Kate. I pray you let it fland.

Petr. The poore ferver is repaide with thanks,
And fo shall mine before you touch the meate.

Kate. I thanke you fir.

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie you are too blame:
Come Miftiſ Kate, I lea your companie.

Petr. Eat it vp all Hortenſio, if thou loueft mee:

Much good do I vnto thy gentle heart:

Kate eat apace; and now my honie Loue,
Will we returne vnto thy Fathers houfe,
And reuell it as brauely as the beft,
With filk'en coats and caps, and golden Rings,
With Ruffes and Cuffes, and Fardinges, and things:
With Scarves, and Fannes, & double change of brau'y,
With Amber Bracelets, Beades, and all this kno'ny.

What haft thou din'd? The Tailor flaves thy leasure,
To decke thy bodie with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come
Come Tailor, let vs see thesee ornaments. Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gowne. What newes with you sir? Fel. Here is the cap your Worship did bespeak. Pet. Why this was moulded on a porrenger, a Velvet duff: Fire, fire, 'tis lewd and filthy, War. A cockle or a walnut-heel, A knacke, a toy, a tricke, a babies cap: Away with it, come let me haue a bigger. Kate. Ile haue no bigger, this doth fit the time, And Gentlewomen ware such caps as thefe. Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too, And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haft. Kate. Why sir I trust I may have leaue to speake, And speake I will. I am no child, no babe, Your betters haue indur'd me fay my minde, And if you cannot, beft you ftop your ears, My tongue will tell the anger of my heart, Or els my heart concealing it will breake, And rather then it fhal, I will be free.

Even to the vndermoft as I pleafe in words. Pet. Why thou fayst true, it is paltire cap, A cuffard cofen, a babble, a filken pie, I love thee well in that thou like it not. Kate. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap, And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gowne, why I: come Tailor let vs fee't. Oh mercie God, what masking fuffle is heere? What's this a fuffle? 'tis like demi cannon, What, wp and downe can't like an apple Tart? Heers flip, and nip, and cut, and fliff and flash, Like to a Cenfor in a barbers choppe: Why what a deuils name Tailor call'ft thou this? Hor. I fee fches like to have neither cap nor gowne. Tai. You bid me make it orderlie and well, According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marrie and did : but if you be remembered, I did not bid you marre it to the time. Go hop me ouer euer kennel home, For you fhall hop without my cuftome firs: Ile none of it; hence, make your beft of it. Kate. I never faw a better fashion'd gowne,

More queint, more pleafing, nor more commendable: Belike you meane to make a puppet of me. Pet. Why true, he meanes to make a puppet of thee. Tail. She fakes your Worship meanes to make a puppet of her.

Pet. Oh monstrous arrogence: Thou lyeft, thou thred, thou thimble, Thou yard three quarters, halfe yard, quarter, naile, Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter cricket thou: Brau'd in mine owne house with a skeine of thred: Away thou Ragge, thou quantitie, thou remnant, Or I thall fo be-mete thee with thy yard, As thou fhal think of pratong what thou liu'ft: I thall thee I, that thou haft mar't her gowne.

Tail. Your worship is deceu'd, the gowne is made lutf as my master had direcion:

Grumie gaue order how it should be done. Gr. I gaue him no order, I gaue him the fuffle. Tail. But how did you deffire it should be made? Gr. Marrie fir with needle and thred. Wat. But did you not request to have it cut? Gr. Thou haft fac'd many things. Tail. I haue.
The Taming of the Shrew.

You are still crossing it, first let's alone, I will not goe to day, and ere I doe, It shall be what a clock I say it is. Hor. Why so this gallant will command the funne.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant drest like Vincentio. Tran. Sirs, this is the house, please you it that I call. Ped. I what else, and but I be deceived, Signior Baptista may remember me. Neere twenty yeares a goe in Genoa. Tran. Where we were lodgers, at the Pegafus, Tis well, and hold your owne in any case, With such afferitie as longeth to a father.

Enter Biondello. Ped. I warrant you: but sir here comes your boy, 'T were good he were school'd. Tran. Peare you no him: sirra Biondello, Now doe your dutie throughlie I advise you: Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio. Bion. Tut, fear not me. Tran. But haft thou done thy errand to Baptista. Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice, And that you look't for him this day in Padua. Tran. Th'art a tall fellow, hold thee that to drink, Here comes Baptista: yet your countenance fir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio: Pedant bested and bare headed. Tran. Signior Baptista you are happilie met: Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of, I pray you stand good father to me now, Give me Bianca for my patrimony. Ped. Soft fon: fir by your leauce, hauing com to Padua To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio Made me acquainted with a weighty caufe Of loue betweene your daughter and himselfe: And for the good report I heare of you, And for the loue he beareth to your daughter, And the to him: to stay him not long, I am content in a good fathers care To haue him matcht, and if you please to like No worfe then I, vpon some agreement Me shall you finde readie and willing With one content to haue her fo befowled: For curious I cannot be with you Signior Baptista, of whom I heare so well. Bapt. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say, Your plainnesse and your shortnesse please me well: Right true it is your fonne Lucentio here Doth loue my daughter, and the loueth him, Or both diffemble deeply their affections: And therefore if you fay no more then this, That like a Father you will deal with him, And paffe my daughter a sufficient dower, The match is made, and all is done, Your fonne shall haue my daughter with content. Tran. I thanke you fir, where then doe you know best We be affed and such affurance tane, As shall with either parts agreement stand. Bapt. Not in my house Lucentio, for you know Pitchers haue care, and I haue manie feruants, Befides old Gremio is harkning still, And happlie we might be interrupted. Tran. Then at my lodgings, and it like you, There doth my father lie: and there this night Weele passe the businesse privately and well: Send for your daughter by your feruant here, My Boy shall fetch the Scriuener prettily, The worst is this that at fo flender warning, You are like to haue a thin and flender pittance. Bapt. It likes me well: Cambio he you home, and bid Bianca make her readie fraught: And if you will tell what hath hapned, Lucentio Father is arriv'd in Padua, And how she's like to be Lucentio wife. Biond. I praie the gods the she may withall my heart. Exit. Tran. Dallie not with the gods, but get thee gone. Enter Peter. Signior Baptista, shall I leade the way, Welcome, one meele is like to be your cheere, Come fir, we will better it in Pisa. Bapt. I follow you.

Enter Lucentio and Biondello. Bion. Cambio. Luc. What saith thou Biondello. Biond. You saw my Mafter winke and laugh vpon you? Luc. Biondello, what of that? Biond. Faith nothing: but has left mee here behinde to expound the meaning or morrall of hit fignes and tokens. Luc. I praie thee moralize them. Biond. Then thus: Baptista is safe talking with the deceu'ing Father of a deceitfull fonne. Luc. And what of him? Biond. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper. Luc. And then. Bio. The old Prieff at Saint Lakes Church is at your command at all hours. Luc. And what of all this. Bio. I cannot tell, expe'ct they are busied about a counterfeit affurance: take you affurance of her, Cam presilegio ad Impremendum solem, to th' Church take the Prieff, Clarke, and some fufficient honest witnesse: If this be not that you looke for, I haue no more to say, But bid Bianca farewell for euer and a day. Luc. Hear'th thou Biondello. Biond. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoono as shee went to the Garden for Parciele to suffe a Rabit, and fo may you fir: and so adew fir, my Mafter hath appointed me to goe to Saint Lakes to bid the Prieff be readie to come again you come with your appendix. Exit. Luc. I may and will, if she be so contented: She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt: Happ what hap may, lye roundly goe about her: It shall goe hard if Cambio goe without her. Exit. Enter Petruechio, Kate, Hortentio Petr. Come on a Gods name, once more toward our fathers: Good Lord how bright and goodly shines the Moone. Kate. The Moone, the Sunne: it is not Moonelight now. Petr. I say it is the Moone that shines so bright. Kate. I know it is the Sunne that shines so bright. Petr. Now by my mothers fonne, and that's my selfe, It

Enter Pedant with servants, Baptista, Tranio.

Tr. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant?

Vinc. What am I of mine what are you sir: oh immortal Goddes: oh fine villain, a filken doublet, a veluet hoffe, a scarlet cloake, and a copatane hat : oh I am vndone, I am vndone: while I plaje the good husband at home, my fonne and my ferman spend all at the vnuerlite.

Tr. How now, what's the matter?

Bapt. What is the man lunaticke?

Tr. Sir, you feeme a sober ancient Gentleman by your habit: but your dews fliew you a mad man: why sir, what cernes it you, if I weary Pearle and gold? I thank my good Father, I am able to maintaine it.

Vinc. Thy father: oh villain, he is a Saille-maker in Bergamo.

Bapt. You mistake sir, you mistake sir, praije what do you thinke is his name?

Vinc. His name, as if I knew not his name: I have brought him vp ever since he was three yeere old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Awaie, awaie madaffe, his name is Lucentio, and he is mine onelie fonne and heire to the Lands of me fignior Vincentio.

Ven. Lucentio: oh he hath murdered his Mafter : laie hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name: oh my fonne, my fonne: tell me thou villain, where is my fon Lucentio?

Tr. Call forth an officer: Carrie this mad knaue to the Laiel: father Baptista, I charge you fee that hee be forth comming.

Vinc. Carrie me to the Laiel?

Gre. Staie officer, he shall not go to prifon.

Bapt. Talkle not fignior Greatme: I fale he shall goe to prifon.

Gre. Take heede fignior Baptista, leaft you be conicatcht in this bufineffe: I dare fware this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Sware if thou dar'ft.

Gre. Naie, I dare not fware it.

Tran. Then thou wert beft faire that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be fignior Lucentio.

Bapt. Awaie with the dotard, to the laile with him.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca.

Vinc. Thus strangers may be hald and abusd : oh monstrous villain.

Bian. Oh we are spoill'd, and yonder he is, denie him, forfilewe him, or else we are all vndone.

Exit Biondello, Tranio and Pedant as if as may be.

Luc. Pardon fweete father.

Kneele.

Vinc. Lues my fweete fonne?

Bian. Pardon deere father.

Bapt. How haft thou offended, where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right fonne to the right Vincentio,

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,

While counterfeit supposeth bleare'd thine eie.

Gre. Here's packing with a wittneffe to deceiue vs all.

Vinc. Where is that damned villain Tranio,

That fac'd and braued me in this matter?

Bapt. Why, tell me is not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Loue wrought thefe miracles. Bianca loue

Made me exchange my flate with Tranio,

While he did beare my countenance in the towne,

And happilie I have arrived at the laf:

Vnto the wilde hauen of my bliffe:

What Tranio did, my felfe enforfe him to;

Then pardon him fweete Father for my fake.

Vinc. Ille fit the villains nofe that would have fent me to the laile.

Bapt. But doe you heare sir, haue you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vinc. Peare not Baptista, we will content you, goe to: but I will in to be reueng'd for this villain.

Exit. Bapt. And I to found the depth of this knaecrie. Exit. Luc. Looke not pale Bianca, thy father will not frown.

Exeunt.

Gre. My cake is doug,hbut Ilie in among the ref,
Out of hope of all, but my fhare of the feas.

Kate. Husband let's follow, to fee the end of this adoe.

Petr. First flie me Kate, and we will.

Kate. What in the midd' of the fircete?

Petr. What are thou afham'd of me?

Kate. Mo fir, God forbid, but afham'd to fiffe.

Petr. Why then let's home againe: Come Sirra let's awaie.

Kate. Nay, I will glue thee a fiffe, now praije thee Loue faine.

Petr. Is not this well? come my fweete Kate.

Better once then uuer, for uuer to late.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gregorio, the Pedant, Lucentio, and Bianca. Tranio, Biondello Grumio, and Widowou: The Seruymen with Tranio bringing in a Banquet.

Luc. At laft, though long, our larrer notes agree,
And time it is when raging warre is come,
To smile at scapes and peils ouerblowne:
My faire Bianca bid my father welcome,
While I with felfefame kindneffe welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, fitter Katerina,
And thou Hortento with thy loving Widow:
Feast with the biff', and welcome to my house,
My Banket is to clofe our flamakes vp
After our great good cheere: praije you fit downe,
For now we fit to chat as well as eate.

Petr. Nothing but fit and fitt, and eate and eate.

Bapt. Padua affords this kindneffe, fonne Petruchio.

Petr. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde.

Hor. For both our fakes I would that word were true.

Petr. Now for my life Hortento fear's his Widow.

Wid. Then neuer truft me if I be affearde.

Petr. You are very fencible, and yet you miffe my fenfe:

I meane Hortento is afraid of you.

Wid. He
The Taming of the Shrew.

Wid. He that is giddie thinks the world turns round.
Petr. Roundlie replied.
Kat. Miftris, how meane you that?
Wid. Thus I conceive by him.
Petr. Conceives by me, how likes Hortensio that?
Hor. My Widdow fayes, thus she conceives her tale.
Petr. Verie well mended: kiffe him for that good Widdow.
Kat. He that is giddie thinks the world turns round, I praiye you tell me what you meant by that.
Wid. Your housband being troubled with a shrew,
Meaures my husbands forrow by his wo:
And now you know my meaning.
Kate. A verry meane meaning.
Wid. Right, I mean you.
Kat. And I am meane indeede, respecting you.
Petr. To her Kate.
Hor. To her Widdow.
Petr. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.
Hor. That's my office.
Petr. Spoke like an Officer: ha to the lad.

Drink to Hortensio.
Bap. How likes Gremio these quicke witted folks?
Gre. Beleeue me sir, they But together well.
Bian. Head, and but an haffie witted bodie,
Would Fay your Head and But were head and horne.
Vin. I Miftris Bride, hath that awakened you?
Bian. I, but not frightened me, therefore Ile sleepe a-gain.
Petr. Nay that you shall not since you have begun:
Have at you for a better left or too.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I mean to shift my buh,
And then purue me as you draw your Bow.
You are welcome all.
Exit Bianca.
Petr. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio,
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,
Therefore a health to all that shot and mift.
Tri. Oh sir, Lucentio flipt me like his Gray-hound,
Which runs himselfe, and catches for his Master.
Petr. A good swift fime, but some currifie.

Try. 'Tis well sir that you hunted for your felle:
'Tis thought your Deere does hold you at a bale.
Bap. Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thanke thee for that gild good Tranio.
Hor. Confesse,confesse, hath he not hit you here?
Petr. A has a little gild me I confesse:
And as the left did glaunce awaye from me,
'Tis ten to one it malin'd you too out right.

Bap. Now in good faidnesse fonne Petruchio,
I thinke thou haft the verie threw of all.
Petr. Well, I say no : and therefore sir assurance,
Let's each one fend vnto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth fend for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propo.
Hor. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twentie crownes.
Petr. Twentie crownes,
Ile venture so much of my Hawke or Hound,
But twentie times so much upon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Petr. A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will I.

Goe Biendello, bid your Miftris come to me.

Bap. Ioge.
Bap. Sir, my Miftris fends you word
That she is buif, and she cannot come.
Petr. How? she's buife, and she cannot come : is that an anwere?
Gre. 1, and a kinde one too:
Praiye God sir your wife fend you not a worfe.
Petr. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biendello, goe and intreate my wife to come to me forthwith.

Exit. Bion.
Petr. Oh ho, intreate her, nay then shee must needs come.
Hor. I am afraid sir, doe what you can

Enter Biendello.
Bap. Now by my holliAM here comes Katerinka.
Kat. What is your will firt, that you fend for me?
Petr. Where is your fitter, and Hortenfios wife?
Kat. They fit conferring by the Parler fire.
Petr. Goe fetch them hither, if they denie to come,
Swinge me them roundly forth vnto their husbands:
Away I fay, and bring them hither ftraight.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talke of a wonder.
Hor. And fo it is : I wonder what it boads.
Petr. Marrie peace it boads, and louse, and quiet life,
An awful rule, and right supremicie:
And to be short, what not, that's sweete and happie.

Bap. Now faire befall thee good Petruchio;
The wager thau haft won, and I will adde
Vnto their loffes twentie thousand crownes,
Another downe to another daughter,
For she is chang'd as she had neuer bin.
Petr. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more rigne of her obedience,
Her new built vertue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.

See where she comes, and brings your froward Wius
As prisoners to her womanlie perfowation:
Katerno, that Cap of yours becomes you not,
Off with that bable, throw it vnnderfoot.

Wid. Lord let me never have a caufe to figh,
Till I be brought to such a fillie paffe.

Bian. Fie what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your dutie were as foolish too:
The widome of your dutie faire Bianca,
Hath coft me five hundred crownes since supper time.
Bian. The more foole you for laying on my dutie.
Petr. Kerterina I charge thee tell these head-strong
Women, what dutie they doe owe their Lords and husbands.

Wid. Come,
Wid. Come, come, your mocking: we will have no telling.
Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.
Wid. She shall not.
Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.
Kate. Fie, fie, vnknit that threatening vnkinde brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy Gouernour.
It blots thy beautie, as frosts doe bite the Meads,
Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake faire buds,
And in no fence is meete or amiable.
A woman mou'd, is like a fountaine troubled,
Muddie, ill seeming, thicke, bereft of beautie,
And while it is fo, none fo dry or thristie
Will daigne to fip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy foueraigne: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land:
To watch the night in fторmes, the day in cold,
Whil't thou ly'ft warme at home, secure and safe,
And cruase no other tribute at thy hands,
But loue, faire lookses, and true obedience;
Too little payment for fo great a debt.
Such dutie as the subject owes the Prince,
Euen such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peevish, fullen, fowre,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And gracelefTe Traitor to her louing Lord?
I am asham'd that women are fo simple,
To offer warre, where they should kneele for peace:
Or feeke for rule, supremacie, and fway,
When they are bound to ferue, loue, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weake, and smooth,
Vnapt to toyle and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our harts,
Should well agree with our externall parts?
Come, come, you froward and vnable worms,
My minde hath bin as bigge as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reacon haplie more,
To handle word for word, and frowne for frowne;
But now I fee our Launces are but frawes:
Our strength as weake, our weakeenefte paft compare,
That feeming to be moft, which we indeed leaff are.
Then vale your stomackes, for it is no boote,
And place your hands below your husbands footes:
In token of which dutie, if he pleafe,
My hand is readie, may it do him eafe.
Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kiss mee.
Kate.
Luc. Well go thy waies olde Lad for thou shalt ha't.
Pet. Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.
Luc. But a hard hearing, when women are froward.
Pet. Come Kate, wee're to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I wonne the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God giue you good night.
Exit Petruchio.
Horten. Now goe thy wayes, thou haft tam'd a curst Shrow.
Luc. Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

FINIS.

Well, that Ends Well.

ACTUS primus. Scena Prima.

Enter young Bertram Count of Rossillion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in black.

Mother.

N delivering my fonne from me, I burie a second husband.

Ref. And I in going Madam, weep oer my fathers death anew: but I must attend his mailes command, to whom I am now in Ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband Madame, you for a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necelitie hold his vertue to you, whose worthie felle would ftrife it vp where it wanted rather then lack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Maleficies amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Phisitions Madam, under whose prefcriptions he hath perfecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the proccexe, but onely the looking of hope by time.

Mo. This yong Gentlewoman had a father, O that had, how sad a paffage tis, whose skill was almoft as great as his honefle, it had fretch't fo far, would have made nature immortal, and death ould have play for lacke of worke. Would for the Kings fake were liuing, I think it would be the death of the Kings diftrefe.

Laf. How call'd you the man you fpake of Madam?

Mo. He was famous fir in his proffition, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed Madam, the King very late hee fpoke of him admiringly, and mourningly: he was skillfull enough to have liu'd still, if knowledge could be fet vp againft mortallitie.

Ref. What is it (my good Lord) the King languifhes of?

Laf. A Fufula my Lord.

Ref. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His ifte childe my Lord, and bequeathed to my over looking. I haue thofe hopes of her good, that her education promifes her diaphragms free inherits, which makes faire gifts ftras: for where an vnconceale mind carres vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pitty, they are vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for thier fimplesenefle; she derives her honefle, and atcheues her goodneffe.

Lafew. Your commendations Madam get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the beft brine a Maiden can feafon her prafce in. The remembrance of her father neuer approaches her heart, but the tirany of her forrowes takes all liuelihood from her cheeckes. No more of this Helena, go too, no more leaft it be rather thought you affect a forrow, then to have——

Hell. I doe affect a forrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, exceffive griefe the enemie to the liuing.

Mo. If the liuing be enemie to the greefe, the exceffe makes it foone mortall.

Ref. Madam I defire your holi winhes.

Laf. How vnderftand we that?

Mo. Be thou bleffed Bertrams, and succed thy father in manners as in shape: thy blood and vertue Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodneffe Share with thy birth-right. Loe all, truft a few, Doe wrong to none: be able for thine enemie Rather in power then vfe: and keepe thy friend Vnder thy owne lifes key. Be checkt for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What heauen more wil, That thee may furnish, and my prayers plucke downe, Fall on thy head. Farewell my Lord, 'Tis an vnfeafon'd Courier, good my Lord Adulfe him.

Laf. He cannot want the beft That shall attend his loue.

Mo. Heauen bleffe him: Farewell Bertram.

Roo. The beft winhes that can be forg'd in thy thoughts be fervants to you: be comfortable to my mother, your Milthris, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell prettie Lady, you must hold the credit of your father.

Hell. O were that all, I thinke not on my father, And these great teares grace his remembrance more Then thofe I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgott him. My imagination Carries no favour in't but Bertrams.

If am vndone, there is no liuing, none, If Bertram be away. 'Twer all one, That I should loue a bright particular fharre, And think to wed it, he is fo aboue me In his bright radience and colaterall light,
Muft I be comforted, not in his sphere;
Th' ambition in my love thus plagues it selfe:
The hind that would be mated by the Lion
Muft die for love. 'Twas prettie, though a plague
To fee him euerie houre to fit and draw
His arched browes, his hawking eie, his curles
In our hearts table: heart too capabole
Of euerie line and tricke of his sweet favoure.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancie
Muft fancifie his Reliques. Who comes heere?

Enter Parrotles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his fake,
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way foole, allie a coward,
Yet these fiee euils fit to fit in him,
That they take place, when Veruces fteely bones
Lookes bleake: 'thold cold wind: withall, full oft we fee
Cold wisdome weighing on superfuous folie.

Par. Saue you faire Queene,
Hel. And you Monarch.
Par. No.
Hel. And no.
Par. Are you meditating on virginitie?
Hel. Is it have fome fhame of fouldier in you: Let mee anfver you a queation. Man is enemie to virginitie, how may we barracado it againft him?
Par. Keep him out.
Hel. But he affails, and our virginitie though valiant,in the defence yet is weak: vnfold to vs fome war-like refistance.

Par. There is none: Man fetting downe before you, will vndervmine you, and blow you vp.

Hel. Bleffe our poore Virginitie from vnderminers and blowers vp. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow vp men?

Par. Virginitie being blowne downe, Man will quicker be blowne vp: marry in blowing him downe againe, with the breach your fefues made, you lofe your City. It is not politicke, in the common-wealth of Nature, to preferve virginitie. Loffe of Virginitie, is rationall encreafe, and there was neuer Virgin goe, till Virginitie was firft loft. That you were made of, is mettall to make Virgins. Virginitie, by beeing once loft, may be ten times found: by being euer kept, it is euer loft: 'tis too cold a companion: Away with't.

Hel. I will famd for a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can bee faide in't, 'tis againft the rule of Nature. To speake on the part of virginitie, is to accufe your Mothers; which is moft infallable difobedience. He that hangs himselfe is a Virgin: Virginitie murther it felfe, and should be buried in highways out of all fancified limit, as a desperate Offencreffe againft Nature. Virginitie breeds mites, much like a Cheefe, confumes it felfe to the very payng, and fo dies with feeding his owne domace. Besides, Virginitie is pueuith, proud, yde, made of felle-loue, which is the moft inhibited finne in the Cannon. Keepe it not, you cannot chooje but loofe by't. Out with' it: within ten yeare it will make it felfe two, which is a goodly increafe, and the principall it felfe not much the worfe.

Away with't.

Hel. How might one do fir, to looie it to her owne liking?

Par. Let mee fee. Marry ill, to like him that ne're it likers: 'Tis a commoditie will lofe the glotte with lying: The longer kept, the leffe worth: Off with't while 'tis vendible. Anfwer the time of request, Virginitie like an olde Courtie, weares her cap out of fashion, richly futed, but vnfauteable,uft like the brooch & the tooth-pick, which were not now: your Date is better in your Pye and your Porridge, then in your cheekee: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French witherd peares, it lookes ill, it eates dryly, marry 'tis a wither'd peare: it was formerly better, marry yet 'tis a wither'd peare: Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginitie yet:
There shall your Mafter have a thousand loues, A Mother, and a Miftrreff, and a friend, A Phenix, Captaine, and an enemy,
A guide, a Goddeffe, and a Soueraigne,
A Councellor, a Traitoreffe, and a Deare:
His humble ambition, proud humility:
His iarring, concord: and his dfford, dulce:
His faith, his sweet deflacer: with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious chriftendomes
That blinking Cupid goffips. Now fhall he:
I know not what he shall, God fend him well,
The Courts a learning place, and he is one.

Par. What one iffaith?
Hel. That I with well, 'tis pity.
Par. What's pity?
Hel. That wifhing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we the poorer borne,
Whofe bater fllares do thout vs vp in wythes,
Might vwith effects of them follow our friends,
And flew what we alone mutt think, which never Returns vs thankes.

Pag. Monsieur Parrotles,
My Lord cal's for you.

Par. Little Helen farewel, if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at Court.

Hel. Monsieur Parrotles, you were borne vnder a charitable flare.

Par. Vnder Mars I.

Hel. I especially think, vnder Mars.

Par. Why vnder Mars?

Hel. The warres hath fo kept you vnder, that you must needs be borne vnder Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde I think rather.

Par. Why thinke you fo?

Hel. You go fo much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for aduantage.

Hel. So is running away,
When feare proptes the faferie:
But the composition that your valour and feare makes in you, is a vertue of a good wing, and I like the weare well.

Paroll. I am fo full of businesse, I cannot anfwere thee acutely: I will returne perfect Courtie, in the which my inftuction fhall ferue to naturalize thee, fo thou wilt be capabell of a Courties councill, and verftand what aduice fhall threfh vppon thee, elfe thou dieft in thine withthankfulnes, and thine ignorance makes thee away, farewell: When thou haft leyfure, fay thy praier: when thou haft none, remember thy Friends:

V 2

Get
Get thee a good husband, and vfe him as he vfe thee:
So farewell.

Hol. Our remedies oft in our selves do lye,
Which we atribute to heauen: the fated skye
Gives vs free scope, onely doth backward pull
Our flow designes, when we our selves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my loue so hye,
That makes me fee, and cannot feede mine eye?
The mightieft space in fortune, Nature brings
To loyne like, likes, and iffe like native things.
Imposibl e strange attempts to thole
That weigh their pains in fence, and do suppose
What hath beene, cannot be. Who euer frowe
To fhow her merit, that did diffe her loue?
(The Kings difcase) my projecl may deceu me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leave me.

FLOURISH CEREMTS.

Enter the King of France with Letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florensines and Sengs are by th'eares, Haufe fought with equall fortune, and continue
A brauing warre.

1. Lo. G. So tis reported Sir.

King. Nay tis moft credible, we heere receive it,
A certantie vouch'd from our Cofin Affuria,
With caution, that the Florensine will moue vs
For speedie ayde: wherein our decreft friend
Prejudicates the bufinefs, and would feme
To haue vs make denial.

1. Lo. G. His loue and widowed
Approu'd do to your Maielfy, may pleade,
For ambleft credence.

King. He hath am'd our answer,
And Florence is den'd before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that meane to fee
The Tuscan feruice, freely haue they leave
To fland on either part.

2. Lo. E. It well may ferve
A nurferie to our Gentric, who are fickle
For breathing, and exploit.

King. What's he comes heere.

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

1. Lor. G. It is the Count Rofignoll my good Lord, Yong Bertram.

King. Youth, thou beart thy Fathers face,
Franke Nature rather curius then in haft
Hath well compos'd thee: Thy Fathers morall parts
Mall thou inherit too: Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duties are your Maieflies.

Kin. I would I had that corporall foundneffe now,
As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendship
First trude our fouldierie: he did looke farre
Into the fercue of the time, and was Difciplfed of the bruault. He lafted long,
But on vs both did haggio Age feale on,
And wore vs out of act: It much repaires me
To talke of your good fathers; in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well obferue
To day in our yong Lords: but they may left
Till their owne corno returne to them vnoted
Ere they can hide their leuite in honour:
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitterneffe

Were in his pride, or sharpneffe; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them, and his honour
Clocke to it felle, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speake: and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He vs'd as creatures of another place.
And bow'd his eminent top to their low rankes,
Making them proud of his humilitie,
In their poore prafe he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copie to thife younge times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.

Ber. His good remembrance Sir
Lies richer in your thoughts, then on his tombe:
So in approoue lies not his Epitaph,
As in your royall speech.

King. Would I were with him he would alwayes fay,
(Me thinkes I heare him now) his plauffue words
He fatter'd not in eares, but graffed them
To grow there and to beare: Let me not liue,
This his good melancholy oft begin
On the Cataftrophe and heele of paftime
When it was out: Let me not liue (quoth hee)
After my fame lackes oyle, to be the fruffe
Of younge fpirits, whose apprehenfue fentes
All but new things difdaine: whose judgements are Meere fathers of their garments: whose conftancies
Expire before their fashions: this he wifh'd.
I after him, do after him with too:
Since I nor wax nor honie can bring home,
I quickly were difsolved from my hyue
To give fome Labourers roome.

L. 2.E. You're looud Sir,
They that leaff lend it you, shall lacke you firft.

Kin. I fill a place I know't: how long in Count
Since the Phyftian at your fathers died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some fix moneths since my Lord.

Kin. If he were living, I would try him yet.

Lend me an arme: the refte haue wore me out
With feuerall applications: Nature and fickneffe Debate it at their leifure. Welcome Count,
My fomme's no deerer.

Ber. Thank ye your Maielfty.

FLOURISH.

Enter Counteffe, Seward, and Clouene.

Coun. I will now heare, what lay you of this gentlewoman.

Sir. Maddam the care I have had to euen your content,
I wish might be found in the Kalender of my paft endevours, for then we wound our Modellie, and make foule the clearneffe of our deferings, whenof our felves we publik them.

Coun. What doe's this knaue heere? Get you gone firra: the complaints I have heard of you I do not all beleeue, 'tis my fowneffe that I doe not: For I know you lacke not folly to commit them, & haue abilitie enough to make fuch knaueries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not vnknown to you Maddam, I am a poore fellow:

Coun. Well fir.

Clo. No maddam,
'Tis not so well that I am poore, though manie of the rich are damn’d, but if I may have your Ladyship's good will to goe to the world, Isbell the woman and w will doe as we may.

Coun. Wilt thou neede be a beggar?

Clo. I doe beg your good will in this case.

Coun. In what case?

Isbell cafe and mine owne: servisce is no heritage, and I thinke I shall never have the blesford of God, till I have issue a my bole: for they say barnes are blesfings.

Coun. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marrie?

Coun. My poore bodie Madam requires it, I am druen onby the flesh, and hee must needes goe that the diuell driues.

Coun. Is this all your worshipps reason?

Coun. Faith Madam I have other holie reasons, such as they are.

Coun. May the world know them?

Coun. I have beene Madam a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are, and in deed I doe marrie that I may repent.

Coun. Thy marriage sooner than thy wickedneffe.

Coun. I am out a friends Madam, and I hope to have friends for my wifes fake.

Coun. Such friends are thine enemies knawe.

Clo. Y’are shallow Madam in great friends, for the knawe com to doe that for me which I am a weary of:
he that eres my Land, spare my teame, and glues mee leave to Iane the crop: if I be his cuckold hee's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; hee that cherishe my flesh and blood, louses my flesh and blood; he that louses my flesh and blood is my frenders, he that kiffes my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no feare in marriage, for yong Charbon the Puritan, and old Powlam the Papift, how fomere their hearts are feuer'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may loule horns together like any Deare P'th Herd.

Coun. Wilt thou ever be a foule mouth'd and calumnious knawe?

Clo. A Prophet I Madam, and I speake the truth the next waie, for I the Ballad will repete, which men full true shall finde, your marriage comes by definicie, your Cuckow fings by kinde.

Coun. Get you gone sir, Ile talke with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you Madam, that hee bid Helen come to you, of her I am to speake.

Coun. Sirs tell my gentlewoman I would speake with her, Helen I meane.

Clo. Was this faire face the caufe, quoth she,
Why the Grecians facked Troy,
Fond done,done, fond was this King Priams toy,
With that the fighed as the flood, is
And gaue this sentence then, among nine bad if one be good, among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Coun. What, one good in tenne? you corrupt the song
Sirs.

Clo. One good woman in ten Madam,which is a purifying ath'affong: would God would ferue the world so all the yeere, weed finde no fault with the tithe woman if I were the Parfon,one in ten quoat a? and wee might haue a good woman borne but ore euerie blazing firre, or at an earthquake, 'would mend the Lotteriewell, a man may draw his heart out ere a plucke one.

Coun. You eoule begne fir knawe, and doe as I command
you?

Clo. That man should be at womans command, and yet no hurt done, though honefe be no Puritan, yet it will doe no hurt, it will weare the Surplis of humilitie over the blace-Gowne of a bigge heart: I am going fortothe, the businesse is for Helen to come hither.

Exit.

Coun. Well now.

Stew. I know Madam you loove your Gentiewoman intirely.

Clo. Faith I doe: her Father bequeath'd her to mee and the she felie without other advantage, may lawful-lie make title to as much loue as shee findes, there is more owne her then is paid, and more shal be paid her then sheelee demand.

Stew. Madam, I was verie late more neere her then
I thinke shee wifht mee, alone shee was, and did communicate to her felie her owne words to her owne eares, shee thought, I dare vowe for her, they toucht not anie franger fence, her matter was, shee loved your Sonne; Fortune flee, fadi was no goddefe, that had put fuch difference betwixt their two efates : Loue no god, that would not extend his might onlie, where qualities were leuell, Queene of Vir-gins, that would suffer her poore Knight surpris’d without refuce in the first affault or ranome afterward: This fhee deliuer'd in the molt bittter touch of forrow that ere I heard Virgin exclaine in, which I held my dutie speedily to acquaint you withall, firthence in the loffe that may happen, it concerns you someting to know it.

Clo. You have dicharg'd this honeftke, keepe it to your felie, manie likelihoods inform'd mee of this before, which hung fo trotting in the ballance, that I could neither beleue nor mildoubt: praise you leave mee, fall this in your bofome, and I thanke you for your honeft care: I will speake with you further anon.

Exit Steward.

Enter Hellen.

Old.Cou. Even so it vs was vvithe me when I was yong:
If euer vve are nature,nthese are ours, this thorne
Doth to our Rofe of youth riglie belong
Our bloud to vs, this to our blood is borne,
It is the flow, and feale of natures truth,
Where loues strong passion is impref in youth,
By our remembrance of dales forgon,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none,
Her eie is ficke on't, I obferue her now.

Hellen. What is your pleasure Madam?

Old.Cou. You know Hellen I am a mother to you.

Hellen. Mine honorable Miftris.

Old.Cou. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I Fed a mother.

Me thought you faw a ferpent, what's in mother,
That you start at it? I say I am your mother,
And put you in the Catalogue of thofe
That were enwombed mine, 'tis often feene
Adoption ftriues vvith nature, and choife breedes
A natie flip to vs from foraine feedes :
You were oppreff me with a mothers groane,
Yet I exprefse to you a mothers care,
(Gods mercy maiden) do it curd thy blood
To fay I am thy mother? what's the matter,
That this diftempered messenger of wet ?

V 3
The manie colour'd Iris rounds thine eye?

Why, that you are my daughter?

Hell. That I am not.

Old Cou. Say I am your Mother.

Hell. Pardon Madam.

The Count Repetition cannot be my brother:

I am from humble, he from honored name:

No note upon my Parents, his all noble,

My Master, my deere Lord he is, and I

His servaunt live, and will his vaffall die:

He murst not be my brother.

Old Cou. Nor is your Mother.

Hell. You are my mother Madam, would you were

So that my Lord your sonne were not my brother,

Indeed my mother, or were you both our mothers,

I care no more for, then I doe for heauen,

So I were not his fater, cant no other,

But I your daughter, he must be my brother.

Old Cou. Yes Hell, you might be my daughter in law,

God shied you meane it not, daughter and mother

So frive upon your pulse; what pale agen?

My feare hath catcht your fondneffe! now I see

The mistrie of your louelinesse, and finde

Your falte tears head, now to all fence 'tis groffe:

You loue my sonne, invention is aham'd

Against the proclamation of thy passion

To say thou doost not: therefore tell me true,

But tell me then 'tis fo, for looke, thy cheekes

Confesse it 'ton tooth to th'other, and thine eies

See it fo groffely shone in thy behouers,

That in their kinde they speake it, onely finne

And hellish obfuscacie thy tongue

That truth shoulde be sulpeed, speake, if fo?

If it be fo, you have wound a goodly clewe:

If it be not, forwarne't how ere I charge thee,

As heauen shall worke in me for thine assure

To tell me truell.

Hell. Good Madam pardon me.

Cou. Do you loue my Sonne?

Hell. Your pardon noble Miftris.

Cou. Loue you my Sonne?

Hell. Doe not you loue him Madam?

Cou. Goe not aboutmy loue hath in't a bond

Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, diclofe:

The date of your affection, for your passions

Haue to the full approach'd.

Hell. Then I confesse

Here on my knee, before high heauen and you,

That before you, and next vnto high heauen, I loue your

Sonne:

My friends were poore but honett, so's my loue:

Be not offendeéd, for it hurts not him

That he is lou'd of me; I follow him not

By any token of preumpitious sue;

Nor would I have him, till I doe defere him,

Yet neuer know how that defert shoule be:

I know I loue in vaine, friue against hope:

Yet in this captious, and intemible Sue.

I fill poure in the waters of my loue

And lacke not to loue still; thus Indian like

Religious in mine error, I adore

The Sunne that lookes upon his worshipper,

But knowes of him no more. My deere Madam,

Let not your hate encounter with my loue,

For louing where you doe; but if your selfe,

Whose aged honor cites a vertuous youth,

Did ever, in so true a flame of likings,

With chaftly, and loue dearely, that your Dian

Was both her selfe and loue, O then giue pitie

To her whole flate is fuch, that cannot choose

But lend and guede where she is sure to looke;

That feakes not to finde that, her search implies,

But riddle like, loyes sweetely where she dies.

Cou. Had you not lately an intent, speake truly,

To goe to Paris?

Hell. Madam I had.

Cou. Wherefore tell true.

Hell. I will tell truth, by grace it selfe I sweare:

You know my Father left me some prescriptions

Of rare and prou'd effecta, such as his reading

And manifeet experience, had collected

For generall soueraignty: and that he wil'd me

In heefeful! refertation to beftow them,

As notes, whose faculties incluie were,

More then they were in note: Amongst the rest,

There is a remedie, approvd, set downe,

To cure the desperate languishing whereof

The King is render'd loft.

Cou. This was your motieue for Paris, was it, speake?

Hell. My Lord, your sonne, made me to think of this;

Else Paris and the medicine, and the King,

Had from the concuferation of my thoughts,

Happily beene absent then.

Cou. But thinke you Hellen,

If you should tender your suppos'd aide,

He would receive it? He and his Philosophs

Are of a minde, he, that they cannot helpe him:

They, that they cannot helpe, how shall they credit

A poore vnlearned Virgin, when the Schooles

The danger to it selfe.

Hell. There's something in't

More then my Fathers skill, which was the great'st

Of his profession, that his good receipt,

Shall for my legacie be sanctified

Byth'luckieft stars in heauen, and would your honor

But giue me leaue to trie successe, I'de venture

The well loft life of mine, on his Graces cure,

By such a day, an houre.

Cou. Doo'lt thou belicue't?

Hell. I Madam knowingly.

Cou. Why Heller thou shalt haue my leaue and loue,

Meanses and attendants, and my louing greetings

To those of mine in Court, Ile haue at home

And prate Gods blessing into thy attempt:

Began to morrow, and be fure of this,

What I can helpe thee to, thou shalt not misse.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the King with dierers young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine waare: Count, Raffe, and Parrelles. Florishe Cornets.

King. Farewell young Lords thse watlike principles

Do not throw from you, and you my Lords farewell:

Share the aduice betwixt you, if both gaine, all

The guift doth stretch it selfe as 'tis receiued,

And is enoather both.

Lord G. 'Tis our hope fir,
After well entred fouldiers, to returne
And finde your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confesse he owes the malady
That doth my life befiege: farwell yong Lords,
Whether I live or die, be you the fonnes
Of worthy French men; let higher Italy
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the lost Monarchy) fee that you come
Not to woe honour, but to wed it, when
The bratent quefant thinkes: finde what you feeke,
That fame may cry you loud: I say farewell.

L.G. Health at your bidding ferue your Maiestie.

King. Thooff girles of Italy, take heed of them,
They lay our French, lacke language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captives
Before you ferue.

Bo. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell, come hether to me.

1. Lo.G. Oh my sweet Lord y ou will flay behind vs.

Parr. 'Tis not his fault the farke:

2. Lo.E. Oh 'tis braue warres.

Parr. Most admirable, I have seene thofe warres.

Roffill. I am commanded here, and kept a coyle with,
Too young, and the next yeere, and 'tis too early.

Parr. And thy minde ftand not too boy,
Seale away brauly.

Roffill. I fhal flay here the for-horse to a smocke,
Creeking my fothes on the plaine Mofonry,
Till honour be bought vp, and no fword worne
But one to dance with: by heauen, Ile ftele away.

1. Lo.G. There's honour in the theft.

Parr. Commit it Count.

2. Lo.E. I am your accelfary, and fo farewell.

Ref. I grow to you, & our parting is a tortur'd body.

1. Lo.G. Farewell Captaine.

2. Lo.E. Sweet Moufier Paroles.

Parr. Noble Heroes; my fword and yours are kinne, good fparkes and lufrous, a word good mettals. You fhall finde in the Regiment of the Spinij, one Captaine, Sparko his ficatric, with an Embleme of warre here on his finerfe cheeke; it was this very fword entrench'd it:
Jay to him I lue, and obfervs his reports for me.

Lo.G. We fhall noble Captaine.

Parr. Mars doate on you for his nouces, what will ye doe?

Roff. Stay the King.

Parr. Vie a more fpacious ceremonie to the Noble Lords, you haue refrain'd your felfe within the Lift of too cold an adieu: be more expreffive to them; for they wear themfelves in the cap of the time, there do mufter ture gate; eat, fpake, and move vnder the influence of the moft recueld flare, and though the deuill leade the meaure, fuch are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Roff. And I will doe fo.

Parr. Worthy fellows, and like to prooue mot finewie fword-men.

Enter Lafew.

L.Laf. Pardon my Lord for mee and for my tidings.

King. Ile fee thee to ftand vp. (pardon,

L.Laf. Then heres a man ftands that has brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to aske me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could fo ftand vp.

King. I would I had, fo I had broke thy pate

And askt thee mercy for't.

Laf. Good faith, a croffe, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be curd of your infrimite?

King. No.

Laf. O will you eat no grapes my royll foxe?
Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royll foxe could reach them: I have feeen a medicine
That's able to breath life into a stone,
Quicken a rocke, and make you dance Canari
With frighted fire and motion, whom fimple touch
Is powerfull to arayle King Pippes, ray
To give great Charlotaine a pen in's hand
And write to her a loue-lin.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why doCtor the : my Lord, there's one arriu'd,
If you will fee her: now by my faith and honour,
If ferviously I may conuay my thoughts
In this my light delierance, I haue spoke
With one, that in her fexe, her yeeres, profeffion, Wifedome and confiancy, hath amaz'd mee more
Then I dare blame my weakeffe: will you fee her?
For that is her demand, and know her buffonne?
That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now good Lafew,
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May fpend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wondering how thou tookit it.

Laf. Nay, Ile fit you,
And not be all day neither.

King. Thus be his fpeciall nothing ever prologues.

Laf. Nay, come your waies.

Enter Helien.

King. This haffe hath wins indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your waies,
This is his Maiestie, fay your minde to him,
A Traitor you doe looke like, but fuch traitors
His Maiesty feldome feares, I am Grefis Vnle,
That dare leaue two together, fat you well.

Exit.

King. Now faire one, do's your bafines follow vs

Hel. I my good Lord,

Gerard de Nelsun was my father,
In what he did profeffe, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praiifes towards him,
Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death,
Many receiues he gave me, chieflie one,
Which as the deareft rifse of his practive
And of his olde experience, th'only darling,
He had me flore vp, as a triple eye,
Safer then mine owne two: more deare I haue fo,
And hearing your high Maiestie is toucht
With that malignant caufe, wherein the honour
Of my deare fathers gift, flands cheefe in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.

King. We thanke you maiden,
But may not be fo credulous of cure,
When our moft learned Doctors leave vs, and
The congregated Colledge haue concluded,
That labouring Art can never ranomfe nature
From her inadible effate: I fay we muft not
So ftaine our judgement, or corrupt our hope,
To profitute our paft-cure malladie
To empericks, or to diffeuer so
Our great felle and our credit, to effeme
A fencelaffe helpe, when helps paft fence we deeeme.

Hel. My
Lady. Come on fir, I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clov. I will show my selfe highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my buffe is but to the Court.

Lady. To the Court, why what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt, but to the Court?

Clov. Truly Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, hee may easilie put it off at Court: hee that cannot make a legge, put off his cap, kiffe his hand, and lay nothing, has neither legge, hands, lippe, nor cap: and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the Court, but for me, I have an anfwere will ferue all men.

Lady. Marry that’s a bountifull anfwere that fits all questions.

Clov. It is like a Barbers chaire that fits all buttockes, the pin buttocke, the quach-buttocke, the brawn buttocke, or any buttocke.

Lady. Will your anfwere ferue fit to all questions?

Clov. As fit as ten groats is the hand of an Attur-ney, as your French Crowne for your taffety punce, as Thib ruft for Tomes fore-finger, as a pancake for Shroue-tuesday, a Morris for May-day, as the naile to his hole, the Cuckold to his horne, as a foulding queue to a wrangling knawe, as the Nuns lip to the Friers mouth, nay as the pudding to his skin.

Lady. Have you, I say, an anfwere of such fitnesse for all questions?

Clov. From below your Duke, to beneath your Con-fiable, it will fit any question.

Lady. It must be an anfwere of most monarchic faze, that must fit all demands.

Clov. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned should speake truth of it: heere it is, and all that belongs to’t. Aske mee if I am a Courtier, it shall doe you no harme to learne.

Lady. To be young againe if we could: I will bee a fool in question, hoping to bee the wifer by your an-fwer.

Lady.
La. I pray you sir, are you a Courtier?
Clo. O Lord sir thers a simple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.
La. Sir I am a poor freind of yours, that loves you.
Clo. O Lord sir, thicke, thicke, spare not me.
La. I thinkke sir, you can eate none of this homely meate.
Clo. O Lord sir; nay put me too't, I warrant you.
La. You were lately whipt sir as I thinkke.
Clo. O Lord sir, spare not me.
La. Doe you crue O Lord sir at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed your O Lord sir, is very fequent to your whipping: you would an'were very well to a whipping if you were but bound too't.
Clo. I here had worse lucke in my life in my O Lord sir: I fee things may ferue long, but not ferue ever.
La. I play the noble hufwife with the time, to entertein it feemerry with a foole.
Clo. O Lord sir, why there's ferues well agen.
La. And end fir to your businesse: glue Hellen this, and vrgie her to a preffent anfver backe, Commend me to your kinmen, and my fonne,
This is not much.
La. Not much commendation to them.
La. Not much improvement for you, you vnderstand me.
Clo. Most fruitfully, I am there, before my legegs,
La. Haft you agen.

Enter Count, Lafen, and Paroles.

O.Laf. They say miracles are paft, and we have our Philosophical persons, to make moderne and familiar things supernatural and casuaffle. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrours, enfoncing our felues into seeinge knowledge, when we fhould submit our felues to an unknowne fear.
Par. Why'tis the raresft argument of wonder, that hath shut out in our latter times.
Ref. And fo'tis.
O.Laf. To be relinquisht of the Artifts.
Par. So I fay both of Galen and Paracelius.
O.Laf. Of all the learned and authenticke fellows.
Par. Right fo I fay.
O.Laf. That gave him out incurable.
Par. Why there 'tis, fo fay too.
O.Laf. Not to be helped.
Par. Right, as 'twere a man aflur'd of a—
Par. luft, you fay well: fo would I have faid.
O.Laf. I may truly fay, it is a noveltie to the world.
Par. It is indeefe if you will have it faying, you fhall reade it in what ye call there.
Par. That's it, I would have faid, the verie fame.
O.Laf. Why your Dolphin is not luflier: fore mee
I fpeake in refpeet.
Par. Nay 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is the breife and the tedious of it, and he's of a moft fadniferious spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the—
O.Laf. Very hand of heauen.
Par. I, fo I fay.
O.Laf. In a moft weake——
Par. And debile minifter great power, great transcendence, which fhould indeeche glue vs a further vie to be made, then alone the recou'ry of the king, as to be Old Laf. Generally thankful.

Enter King, Hellen, and attendants.
Par. I would have faid it, you fay well: heere comes the King.
O.Laf. Luffique, as the Dutchman fables: I le like a maide the better whil'st I have a tooth in my head: why he's able to leade her a Carranto.
Par. Mor va vinager, is not this Helen?
O.Laf. Fore God I thinkke fo.
King. Goe call before mee all the Lords in Court,
Sit my prefcruer by thy patients fide,
And with this healthfull hand whole banifht fence
Thou haft repel'd, a fcond time receyue
The confirmation of my promis'd guilt,
Which but attendes thy naming.*

Enter 3 or 4 Lords.
Faire Malde fend forth thine eye, this youthfull parcel
Of Noble Batchellors, fland at my beftowing,
Ore we are both Soueraigne power, and fathers voice
I haue to vfe thy franke elecion makes,
Thou haft power to chofe, and they none to forfake.
Hel. To each of you, one faire and vertuous Milfris,
Fall when lowe pleafe, marry to each but one.
Old Laf. I'de give bay cartull, and his furniture
My mouth no more were broken then these boyes,
And writ as little beadr.
King. Perufe them well:
Not one of thofe, but had a Noble father.
Ske addreffe her to a Lord.
Hel. Gentlemens, heauen hath through me, reftor'd the king to health.
All. We vnderstand it, and thanke heauen for you.
Hel. I am a fimpdle Malde, and therein wealtedefh
That I proteft, I fimply am a Malde:
Pleafe it your Majefte, I have done already:
The blushes in my cheekes thus whifper mee,
We blufh that thou fhouldft chofe, but be refufed;
Let the white death fit on thy cheekes for ever,
We'll never come there again.
King. Make chofe and fte,
Who fhuns thy love, fhuns all his love in mee.
Hel. Now 'Dian from thy Altar do I fly,
And to imperall love, that God moff high
Do my fighes freame: Sir, will you heare my fuite?
1. La. And grant it.
Hel. Thanks for, all the reft is mute.
O.Laf. I had rather be in this chofe, then throw
Amef-ace for my life.
Hel. The honor fir that flames in your faire eyes,
Before I fpeake too threateningly replies:
Louve make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that do vfihes, and her humble loue.
2. La. No better if you pleafe.
Hel. My with receipt,
Which great loue grant, and fo I take my leau.
O.Laf. Do all they deny her? And they were sons of mine, I'de have them whip'd, or I would fend them to'th Turke to make Enuches of.
Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand should take,
Ile neuer do you wrong for your owne fake:
Bleffing vpon your voyes, and in your bed
Finde faireer fortune, if you ever wed.
Old Laf. These boyes are boyes of Ice, they'le none
All's Well that ends Well.

have here: sure they are bailards to the English, the French here got em.

La. You are too young, too happy, and too good
To make your felw a fonne out of my blood.

4. Lord. Faire one, I think not so.

Old Lord. There's one grape yet, I am sure thy father drunkne wine. But if thou beft not an affe, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. I dare not say I take you, but I give Me and my seruice, euer whilft I live
Into your guiding power: This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take thee thine thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Leige? I shall befeech your highnes
In such a busines, give me leave to vie
The helpe of mine owne eies.

King. Know'ft thou not Bertram what thee ha's done for me?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but neuer hope to know why I should marrie her.

King. Thou know'ft shee ha's rais'd me from my fick-ly bed.

Ber. But followes it my Lord, to bring me downe
Much answer for your railing? I knowe her well:
Shee had her breeding at my fathers charges
A poore Phifdians daughter my wife? Difdain
Rather corrupt me euer.

King. Tis one title thou difdainst in her, the which I can build vp: strange is it that our bloods
Of colour, weight, and heat, poore'd all together,
Would quite confound diffincion: yet standes off
In differences fo mightie. If the bee
All that is vertuous (faue what thou dislik'ft)
A poore Phifdians daughter, thou dislik'ft
Of vertue for the name: but doe not fo:
From loweft place, whence vertuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doers deede.

Where great additions I'llew's, and vertue none,
It is a dropped honour.Good a lone,
Is good without a name? Vileneffe is fo:
Th' property be what is, shou'd go,
Not by the title. Shee is young, wife, faire,
In thfe, to Nature shee's immediate heire:
And thefe breed honour: that is honours scorne,
Which challenges it felwe as honours borne,
And is not like the fire: Honours thrie,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Then our fore-goers: the meere words, a flawe.

Debof'd on euerie tombe, on euerie grave:
A lying Trophees, and as oft is dumbe,
Where duft, and damn'd oblivion is the Tombe.
Of honour'd bones indeed, what shou'd be faide?
If thou canst like this creature, as a maide,
I can create the reft: Vertue, and shee
Is her owne dower: Honour and wealth, from mee.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to doot.

King. Thou wrong'ft thy felwe, if thou shoul'dt strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well reserv'd my Lord, I'm glad:
Let the reft go.

King. My Honour's at the stake, which to defeat
I must produce my power. Herea, take her hand,
Proud scornfull boy, vnworthye this good gift,
That doth in vile misplifion slackle vp
My love, and her deftreth: that canst not dreame, We poizing vs in her defective state,

Shall weigh thee to the beame: That wilt not know,
It is in Vs to want thine Honour, where
We plesse to haue it grow. Checke thy contempt:
Obey Our will, which travailes in thy good:
Believe not thy difdain, but prefentlie
Do thine owne fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy dutie owes, and Our power claimes,
Or I will throw thee from my care for euer
Into the flaggers, and the careflee laple
Of youth and ignorance: both my reuenge and hate
Loosing vp thee, in the name of Juflice,
Without all terms of pitty. Speake, thine anwer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord: for I submit
My fance to your eies, when I confider
What great creation, and what doe of honour
Flies where you bid it: I finde that which late
Was in my Nobler thoughts, moft safe: is now
The prailed of the King, who fo ennobled,
Is as 'twere borne fo.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her fie is thine: to whom I promife
A counterpoize: If not to thy eftate,
A ballance more repleat.

Ber. I take her hand.

Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile vp'n this Contraft: whom Ceremonie
Shall feme expedient on the now borne briefe,
And be perform'd to night: the Solemnne Featt
Shall more attend vp'n the coming space,
Expecting a benefent friends. As thou lou'ft her,
Thy lou'e's to me Religious: eile, doa erre.

Exeunt

Paroles and Lefus fay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you hear Monsieur? A word with you.

Par. Your pleaure fir.

Laf. Your Lord and Mafter did well to make his re-cantation.

Par. Recantation? My Lord? my Mafter?

Laf. I: Is it not a Language I speake?

Par. A moft harsh one, and not to bee vnderftooode without bloudie succeding My Mafter?

Laf. Are you Companion to the Count Refilion?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts: to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man: Counts maitfer is of another flie.

Par. You are too old fir: Let it satifie you, you are too old.

Laf. I muft tell thee firrah, I write Man: to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did thinke thee for two ordinaries: to bee a pretty wife fellow, thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travell, it might paffe: yet the sacres and the ban-ereta about thee, did manifoldlie diuide me from beleeuing thee a vefell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I looke thee againe, I care not yet art thou good for nothing but taking vp, and that th' out scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the pruiedge of Antiquity vp-on thee.

Laf. Do not plunide thy felwe to farre in anger, leat thou haften thy triall: which if, Lord haue mercie on thee for a hen, fo my good window of Lettice fare thee well, thy cament I neede not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you glue me most egregious indignity.

Laf.
All's Well, that Ends Well.

239

Laf. I with all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.
Par. I have not my Lord derer'd it.
Laf. Yes good faith, eu'ry dramme of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.
Par. Well, I shall be wiser.
Laf: Eu'n as done as thou can't, for thou haft to pull at a smacke a' th' contrarie. If ever thou bee't bound in thy skarfe and beaten, thou shalt finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage, I have a desire to holde my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.
Par. My Lord you do me most insupportable vexation.
Laf. I would it were hell paines for thy sake, and my poor doing eternally; for doing I am paft, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave.
Exit.
Par. Well, thou haft a sonne shall take this disgrace off me; secrue, old, filthy, secrue Lord: Well, I muft be patient, there is no fettering of authority. Ile beate him (by my life) if I can meeke him with any convenice, and he were double and double a Lord. Ile have no more pittie of his age then I would haue of——— Ile beate him, and if I could but meet him agen.
Enter Laffew.
Laf. Sirra, your Lord and masters married, there's newes for you: you have a new Milfris.
Par. I moft vnfriendly befeech your Lordshippe to make some refutation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I ferue aboue is my matter.
Laf. Who'g God.
Par. I fir.
Laf. The deuill it is, that's thy matter. Why doest thou garter vp thy armses a this fashion? Doft make hofe of thy sleeues? Do other scrants fo? Thou wert best fet thy lower part where thy nose flandes. By mine Honor, if I were but two houres younger, I'de beate thee: methink'ft thou art a generall offence, and every man thol beate thee: I thinkke thou wert created for men to breach themselfes vpvn thee.
Par. This is hard and vndeferued measure my Lord.
Laf. Go too fir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomegranate, you are a vagabond, and no true truller: you are more favelie with Lordies and honourable perfonages, then the Composition of your birth and vertue givues you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knaue. I leave you.
Exit.
Enter Count Roskillion.
Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd awhile.
Ros. Vndone, and forfeited to cares for euer.
Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?
Roskill. Although before the solemne Priet I haue, sworne, I will not bed her.
Par. What? what sweet heart?
Ros. O my Parroles, they haue married me:
Ile to the Tufcan warres, and never bed her.
Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits,
The tread of a mans foot: too' th warres.
Ros. There's letters from my mother: What th'implies, I know not yet.
Par. I that would be knowne: too' th warres my bo-too' th warres:

He weares his honor in a boxe vnseene,
That hugges his kickie wickie heare at home,
Spending his manlie arrow in her armes
Which should fufaine the bound and high curset
Of Marfis ferie steed : to other Regions,
France is a flabe, wee that dwell in't ladys,
Therefore too' th warre.
Ros. If it shall be fo, Ile send her to my houfe,
Acqaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durft not speake. His present gift
Shall furnishe me to thofe Italian fields
Where noble fellows strike: Warres is no strife
To the darke houfe, and the detected wife.
Par. Will this Caprichlo hold in thee, art fure?
Ros. Go with me to my chamber, and advice me.
Ile send her knight away: To morrow,
Ile to the warres. the to her finge forrow.
Par. Why thefe bal boud, ther's noife in it. Tas hard
A yong man maried, is a man tht mard:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely: go,
The King ha's done you wrong: but huff 'ts fo.
Exit.
Enter Helena and Clouve.
Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is the weel?
Clo. She is not weel, but yet she has her health, she's very merrie, but yet she is not weel: but thankses be given she's very weel, and wants nothing i' th world: but yet she is not weel.
Hel. If she be verie weel, what do's the ayle, that she's not verie weel?
Clo. Truly she's very weel indeed, but for two things
Hel. What two things?
Clo. One, that she's not in heauen, whether God fend her quickly: the other, that she's in earth, from whence God fend her quickly.
Enter Parroles.
Par. Bleffe you my fortunate Ladie.
Hel. I hope fir I haue your good will to haue mine owne good fortune.
Par. You had my prayers to leade them on, and to keepe them on, haue them fill. O my knawe, how do's my old Ladie?
Clo. So that you had her wrinkes, and I her money,
I would the did as you say.
Par. Why I say nothing.
Clo. Marry you are the wifer man: for many a mans tounge shakkes out his masters vndoining: to lay nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to haue nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a verie little of nothing.
Par. Away, th'art a knaue.
Clo. You shoule haue said fir before a knaue, th'art a knave, that's before me th'art a knave: this had beene truth fir.
Par. Go too, th art a wittie foolle, I haue found thee.
Clo. Did you finde me in your felfe fir, or were you taught to finde me?
Clo. The search fir was profitable, and much Foose may you find in you, even to the worlds pleasure, and the encreafe of laughter.
Par. A good knaue ifaith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go awaie to night,
All's Well that ends Well.

A verie ferious businesse call's on him:

The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claims, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off to a commend'rd refraining:
Whose want, and whose delay, is threw'd with sweets
Which they distill now in the curbed time,
To make the comming houre oreflow with joy,
And pleaure drowne the brim.

Hel. What's his will elfe?
Par. That you will take your infant leave a'th king,
And make this haft as your own good proceeding,
Strengthen'd with what Apologie you thinke
May make it probable neede.

Hel. What more commands hee?
Par. That having this obtain'd, you pretentlie
Attend his further pleaure.

Hel. In every thing I waite upon his will.
Par. I shall report it fo. Exit Par.

Hell. I pray you come firrth. Exit

Enter Laftep and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordshippe thinkes not him a fooldeier.
Ber. Yes my Lord and of verie valiant approoves.
Laf. You have it from his owne deliverance.
Ber. And by other warrantd testimonie.

Laf. Then my Diall goes not true, I tooke this Larke for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you my Lord he is very great in knowlledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then fin'd against his experience, and transgrefst against his valour, and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent:
Here he comes, I pray you make vs frendes, I will pursume the amitie.

Enter Parallels.

Par. These things shall be done fir.

Laf. Pray you sir whofe his Tailor?
Par. Sir?

Laf. O I know him well, I fir, hee sir a good worke-man, a verie good Tailor.
Ber. Is hee gone to the king?
Par. Sirke is.
Ber. Will hee away to night?
Par. As you haue her.

Ber. I haue writ my letters, casketted my treasur,
Gien order for our horfes, and to night,
When I should take posseffion of the Bride,
And ere I doe begin.

Laf. A good Traueller is something at the latter end of a dinner, but on that lies three thirde, and ves a known truth to passe a thousand nothings with, shoul bee once hard, and thrice beaten. God faue you Captaine.

Ber. Is there any vnkindnesse betwene my Lord and you Monfieur?
Par. I know not how I haue deferred to run into my Lord's displeaure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into't, bootes and spurrees and all like him: that leapt into the Cuffard, and out of it you'le runne againe, rather then suffer queftion for your refudance.

Ber. It may bee you haue miftaken him my Lord.

Laf. And shal doe so ever, though I tooke him at's prayers. Fare you weel my Lord, and beleue this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut: the soule of this man is his cloathes: Truft him not in matter of heauie confequence: I haue kept of them tame, & know their natures. Farewell Monfieur, I haue spoken better of you, then you haue or will to deferue at my hand, but we must do good against euill.

Par. An idle Lord, I swere.
Ber. I thinke fo.
Par. Why do you not know him?
Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and common speech
Gives him a worthy paffe. Heere comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I haue sir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and haue procur'd his leave
For prentent parting, onely he defires
Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.
You must not meruaile Helen at my courfe,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For such a businesse, therefore am I found
So much vnneted: This drives me to intreate you,
That prefently you take you way for home,
And rather mufe then ask why I intreate you,
For my respects are better then they seeme,
And my appointments have in them a neede
Greater then shewes it felte at the firft view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Twill be two daies ere I shall fee you, fo
I leaue you to your widelome.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
But that I am your most obedient fervant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall

With true obseruance seek to ecke out that Wherein toward me my homely ftares haue faid
To ecall my great fortune.

Ber. Let that goe: my haft is verie great. Farwell:

Hie home.

Hel. Pray sir your pardon.
Ber. Well, what would you fay?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I fay 'is mine : and yet it is,
But like a timorous theefe, moft faine would steal
What law does vouche mion owne.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something, and fcarfe fo much : nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord : Faith yes,
Strangers and foes doe funder, and not kiffe.

Ber. I pray you fay not, but in haft to horfe.

Hel. I shall not breake your biddings, good my Lord:
Where are my other men? Monfieur, farwell.

Exit Ber.

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I wil never come,
Whileth I can shake my fword, or hear the drumme:
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Brauely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troop of Soldiars.

Duke. So that from point to point, now haue you heard

The
The fundamentall reasons of this warre,
Whole great decision hath much blood let forth
And more thirth after.

1. Lord. Holy feemes the quarrell
Vpon your Graces part : blakke and fearsfull
On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we meruiall much our Cofin France
Would in fo just a buineffe, flhit his boforme
Against our borrowing prayers.

French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our flate I cannot yeddle,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Cousaine framed,
By felle vnable motion, therefore dare not Say what I thinke of it, since I have found
My selfe in my incertaine grounds to faile
As often as I guette.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

Fren.G. But I am fure the yonger of our nature,
That furfet on their cafe, will day by day
Come heere for Phyficke.

Duke. Welcome shal they bee.
And all the honors that can flie from vs,
Shall on them settle : you know your places well,
When better fall, for your auailles they fell,
To morrow to' th field.

Flourifh.

Enter Countiffe and Clowone.

Count. It hath happen'd all, as I would have ha it, faue that he comes not along with her.

Clow. By my troth I take my young Lord to be a ve-rue melancholly man.

Count. By what oberuance I pray you.

Clow. Why he will looke vppon his boote, and finge mend the Ruffe and fing, aske questions and fing, picke his teeth, and fing: I know a man that had this tricke of melancholy hold a goodly Mannor for a fong.

Lad. Let me fee what he writes, and when he meanes to come.

Clow. I have no minde to Isbell fince I was at Court.
Our old Lings, and our Isbels a're Country, are nothing like your old Ling and your Isbels a're Courtsche brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I beginne to loue, as an old man loues money, with no stomacke.

Lad. What haue we heere?

Clow. In that you have there.

A Letter.

I have fent you a daughter in Love, her hath recouered the King, and vndone me: I have wedded her, not bedded her, and vnshe risen the not eternall. You shall heare I am rann away, know it before the report come. If there bee breath enough in the world, I will bold a long distance.
My duty to you.

Your unfortunate fonne,
Bertram.

This is not well rash and vnbridled boy,
To flye the favours of fo good a King,
To plucke his indignation on thy head,
By the miſprifing of a Maide too vertuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clowone.

Clow. O Madam, yonder is heasie newes within betweene two fouldiers, and my yong Ladie.

La. What is the matter.

Clow. Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your fonne will not be kild fo soonne as I thought he would.

La. Why should he be kild?

Clow. So fay I Madam, if he runne away, as I heare he does, the danger is in flanding too, that's the loffe of money, though it be the getting of children. Heere they come will tell you more. For my part I onely heare your fonne was run away.

Enter Hellen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Saue you good Madam.

Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for ever gone.

French G. Do not fay fo.

La. Think he vpon patience, pray you Gentlemen,
I have fent fo many quirkes of ioy and greefe,
That the first face of neither on the flart
Can woman me vtnot'? Where is my fonne I pray you?

Fren.G. Madam he's gone to ferue the Duke of Florence,

We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after fome difpatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his Letter Madam, here's my Pasfport.

When thou canft get the Ring upon my fnger, which never shall come off, and thou mee a child begett of thy bodie, that I am father too, then call me husband: but in fuch a(ken)
I write a Neuer.

This is a dreadfull sentence.

La. Brought you this Letter Gentlemen?
1.G. I Madam, and for the Contenues fake are forrie for our nation.
Old La. I prethee Ladie have a better cheere,
If thou engrofleft, all the greefe are thine,
Thou robbt me of a moity: He was my fonne,
But I do wath his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he?

Fren.G.I Madam.

La. And to be a fouldier.

Fren.G. Such is his noble purpofe, and beleu't
The Duke will lay vpon him all the honor
That good conuenenance confirms.

La. Returne you thither.

Fren.E. I Madam, with the swiftefte wing of fpeed.

Hel. Till I have no wifes, I have nothing in France,
'Tis bitter.

La. Finde you that there?

Hel. I Madam.

Fren.E. 'Tis but the boldneffe of his hand haply, which his heart was not confequint too.

Lad. Nothing in France, vntill he haue no wife:
There's nothing heere that is too good for him
But onely she, and she deferves a Lord
That twenty fuch rude boyes might tend vpon,
And call her hourly Misfris. Who was with him?

Fren.E. A fervant onely, and a Gentleman: which I haue sometime knowne.

La. Paroles was it not?

Fren.E. I my good Ladie, hee.

La. A vere tainted fellow, and full of wickedneffe,
My fonne corrupts a well derived nature
With his inducement.

Fren.E. Indeed good Ladie the fellow has a deale of that, too much, which holds him much to haue.

La. Y'are welcome Gentlemen, I will intreate you when you fee my fonne, to tell him that his (word can ever winne the honor that he loothes: more he intreate

X

you
you written to bearealong.

Frem. We fervu you Madam in that and all your worthie affaires.

Le. Not so, but as we change our courteisies,

Will you draw neere?

Hel. Till I haue no wife I haue nothing in France.

Nothing in France vntill he has no wife:

Thou shalt haue none Raffillion, none in France,

Then haft thou all againe: poor Lord, is't I

That chafe thee from thy Country, and expofe

Thofe tender limbs of thine, to the event

Of the none-sparing warre? And is it I,

That drue thee from the fortuite Court, where thou

Was't shot at with faire eyes, to be the marque

Of smakie Muskets? O you leade messengers,

That ride vpon the violent spede of fire,

Fly with faire asyme, mowe the full-peeiring aire

That rings with piercing, do not touch my Lord:

Who euer shoots at him, I fet him there.

Who euer charges on his forward breff

I am the Califire that do hold him toot,

And though I kill him not, I am the caufe

His death was fo effected: Better 'twere

I met the ruaine Lyon when he roared

With sharpe constraint of hunger: better 'twere,

That all the miseries which nature owes

Were mine at once. No come thou home Raffilion,

Whence honor but of danger winnes a fcare,

As oft it loothes all. I will be gone:

My being here it is, that holds thee hence,

Shall I flay heere to doo't? No, no, although

The ayre of Paradife did fan the houfe,

And Angles off'd all: I will be gone,

That pitiful rumour may report my flight

To confolate thine eare. Come night, end day,

For with the darke (poore theeke) Ie flanke away.

Exit.

Fleurs. Enter the Duke of Florence, Raffillion, drum and trumpets, foldiers, Parrelles.

Duke. The Generall of our horfe thou art,and we

Great in our hope, lay our beft love and credence

Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is

A charge too heauy for my strenght, but yet

Wee'riue to bearn it for thy worthy sake,

To th'extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth,

And fortune play vpon thy properous helme

As thy aupicious misiris.

Ber. This very day

Great Mars I put my felle into thy file,

Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall proue

A louver of thy drumme, hater of louse.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Counsells & Steward.

Le. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:

Might you not know she would do, as she has done,

By sending me a Letter. Read it ajen.

Letter.

I am S. Lagues Pilgrim, thither gone:

Ambitious love both fo in me offended,

That bare-foot plaid I the cold ground upon

Withainted view my faults to bane amended.

Write, write, that from the bloody course of warre,

My dearest Mafter your deare fame, may be,

Bleff him at home in peace. While I from farre,

His name with sealeau farewor fanlifhe:

His taken labours bid me forgive:

I bid delightfull Iuns fent him forth,

From Courtly friends, with Campings foce to live,

Where death and danger dogges the beales of warre.

He is too good and faire for deaths, and mee,

Whom I my fifts embrace, to fet him free.

Ah what sharpe flings are in her mild fret words?

Rynaldo, you did neuer lacke aduice fo much,

As letting her paffe fo: had I spoke with her,

I could have well diuersted her intents,

Which thus the hath preuent.

Ste. Pardon me Madam,

If I had gien you this at ouer-night,

She might haue seene ore-tane: and yet the writes

Purpurte would be but vaine.

Le. What Angel shall

Bleffe this vnworthy husband, he cannot thrise,

Vnfeele her prayers, whom heauen delights to heare

And loues to grant, repreeue him from the wrath

Of greatest Iustice. Write, write Rynaldo,

To this vnworthy husband of his wife,

Letuerie word weighe heauie of her worr,

That he does weighe too light: my greatest greefe,

Though little he do feele it, fet downe sharpe.

Dispatch the most conuenient meffenger,

When haply he shall heare that she is gone,

He will returne, and hope I may that thee

Hearing so much, will speedee her foote againe,

Led hither by pure loue : which of them both

Is deereft to me, I haue no skill in fence

To make definition: prouide this Meffenger:

My heart is heauie, and mine age is weake,

Greefe would haue teares, and forrow bids me speake.

Exeunt.

A Tucket aforre off.

Enter old Widow of Florence, her daughter, Violanta and Sianiana, with other Citizens.

Widow. Nay come,

For if they do approach the City,

We shall looke all the fight.

Diana. They gay, the French Count has done

Most honourable servise.

Wid. It is reported,

That he has taken their grown' Commander,

And that with his owne hand he flew

The Dukes brother: we haue lost our labour,

They are gone a contrarie way: harke,

you may know by their Trumpets.

Sianiana. Come lets returne againe,

And fuffice our felves with the report of it.

Well Diana, take heed of this French Earle,

The honor of a Maide is her name,

And no Legacie is so rich

As honeftie.

Widow. I haue told my neighbour

How you haue beene solicited by a Gentleman

His Companion.

Maria
Maria. I know that knaue, hang him, one Parolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earls, beware of them Diana; their promises, enti- ments, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of luft, are not the things they go vnder: many a maide hath beene seduced by them, and the miserie is example, that fo terrible shewes in the wracke of maiden-hood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twiggis that threatens them. I hope I neede not to aduise you further, but I hope your owne grace will keepe you where you are, though there were no further danger knonwne, but the moderate which is so loft.

Dias. You shall not neede to scarce me.

Enter Heifer.

Wid. I hope so: looke here comes a pilgrim, I know she will lye at my house, thither they send one another, Ie queffion her. God saue you pilgrim, whether are bound?

Her. To S. Jaques la grand. Where do the Palmers lodge, I do befeech you? Wid. At the S. Francis heere befide the Port. Hel. Is this the way? A march afarre.

Wid. I marry it. Harke you, they come this way: If you will terrie holy Pilgrime But till the troopes come by, I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd, The rather for I thinke I know your hostesse As ample as my selfe.

Hel. Is it your selfe? Wid. If you shall passe fo Pilgrime. Hel. I thank you, and will lay upon your leisure. Wid. you came I thinke from France? Hel. I did fo.

Wid. Heere you shall see a Countriman of yours That has done worthy seruice. Hel. His name I pray you? Dias. The Count Reffilion: know you such a one? Hel. But by the care that heares most nobly of him: His face I know not.

Dias. What somere he is He's brauely taken heere. He ftole from France As 'tis reported: for the King had married him Against his liking. Thinke you it is so? Hel. I fully meere the truth, I know his Lady, Dias. There is a Gentleman that ferves the Count, Reports but courtefly of her. Hel. What's his name? Dias. Monsieur Parolles. Hel. Oh I beleue with him,

In argument of praffe, or to the worth Of the great Count himselfe, he is too meane To have her name repeated, all her defuring Is a referued honneste, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dian. Alas poore Ladie, 'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife Of a detecting Lord.

Wid. I write good creature, wherefore the is, Her hart waies Lady: this yong maid might do her A thredew turne if the pleas'd.

Hel. How do you meane? May be the amorous Count follicites her In the vnlawfull purpofe.

Wid. He does indeede, And breaks with all that can in such a suite

All's Well that ends Well.

Corrupt the tender honour of a Maide: But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard In honestest defence.

Drumme and Colours.

Enter Count Reffillon, Parolles, and the whole Armie.

EMar. The goddess forbid elfe.

Wid. So, now they come: That is Antonio the Dukes elfe fonne, That Ecalus. Hel. Which is the Frenchman? Dias. Hee, That with the plume, 'tis a most gallant fellow, I would he lou'd his wife: if he were honefte He were much goodler. Isn't a handfom Gentleman Hel. I like him well.

Di.'Tis pitty he is not honeffytonds that fame knaue That leads him to thefe places: were I his Ladie, I would poifon that vile Rafcall.

Hel. Which is he? Dias. That lacke an-apes with scarres. Why is hee melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battale. Par. Loofe our drum? Well. Mar. He's threfedly vext at something. Looke he has fpyed vs.

Wid. Marrie hang you.

Mar. And your curtefe, for a ring-carrier. Exit. Wid. The troope is pait: Come pilgrim, I will bring you, Where you shall holte: Of injoynd penitents There's foure or fuye, to great S. Jaques bound, Alreadie at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you: Pleafe it this Matron, and this gentle Maide To eate wiche vs to night, the charge and thanking Shall be for me. and to requite you further, I will beftow some precepts of this Virgin, Worthy the note.

Botz. We'll take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Enter Count Reffillon and the Frenchmen, as at firft.

Cap.E. Nay good my Lord put him too't: let him haue his way.

Cap.G. If your Lordshippe finde him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your refpeēt.

Cap.E. On my life my Lord, a bubble. Ber. Do you thinke I am fo farre Deceived in him.

Cap.E. Beleeue it my Lord, in mine owne direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speake of him as my kinman, hee's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endless Lyar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good qualitie,worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap.G. It were fit you knew him, least repofing too farre in his vertue which he hath not, he might at some great and trutifie businesse, in a mane daunger, fayle you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better then to let him fetch of his drumme, which you heare him so confidently unnder-take to do.

C.E. I with a troop of Florentines wil fiodainly fur-

prize him; such I will have whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemie: wee will bind and hoowinke him so, that he shall toppifie no other but that he is caried into the List of the adueraries, when we bring him to our owne tents: be but your Lordship present at his examination, if he do not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of safe feare, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the diuine forfète of his soule vpon oath, never tru't my judgement in anie thing.

Cap.G. O for the loue of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he syzes he has a stratagem for't: when your Lordship sees the bottome of this successe in't, and to what mettle this counterftery lump of ours will be melt't if you give him not John drummes entertainment, your inelinc cannot be removed. Heere he comes.

Enter Parrelles.

Cap.E. O for the loue of laughter hinder not the ho-nor of his degn,e, let himfetch off his drumme in any hand.

Ber. How now Monsieur? This drumme flicks fore ly in your disposition.

Cap.G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.

Par. But a drumme: flit but a drumme? A drum so loyt. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horfe vpon our owne wings, and to rend our owne soldiers.

Cap.G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the seruice: it was a disafter of warre that Cezar him selfe could not haue prevented, if he had beene there to command.

Ber. Well, wee cannot greatly condemne our succeede; some difhonor wee had in the losses of that drum, but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might haue beene recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered, but that the merit of ser uice is sildome attributed to the true and exact performer, I should haue that drumme or another, or bis la cet.

Ber. Why if you have a stoneacke, too't Monsieur: if you thinke your mysterie in firstagem, can bring this instrument of honour againe into his natue quarter, be magannious in the enterprize and go on, I wil grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speede well in it, the Duke shall both speake of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatneffe, even to the vtmote fyllable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a fouldier I wil vndertake it.

Ber. But you must not now flummer in it.

Par. Ile about it this evening, and I will prefently pen downe my dilemna's, encourage my fyle in my certaintie, put my fyle into my mortall preparation: and by midnight lookte to hearre further from me.

Ber. May I bee bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe will be my Lord, but the attempt I vnto.

Ber. I know that't art valiant, And to the posibillity of thy fouldship, Will fubscrib for thee: Farewell.

Par. I loue not many words. Exit

Cap.E. No more then a fift loues water. Is not this a strange fellow my Lord, that so confidentely feme's to vndertake this buffonzie, which he knowes not to be done, damnes himselfe to do, & dares better be damnd then to do't.

Cap.G. You do not know him my Lord as we do, certaine it is that he will feele himselfe into a mans fa-vour, and for a wecke escape a great deale of discoueries, but when you finde him out, you haue him ever afer.

Ber. Why do you thinke he will make no deede at all of this that so ferialous he does address his himelfe vnto?

Cap.E. None in the world, but returne with an in vention, and clap vpon you two or three probable lies: but we have almoft imbott him, you shall fee his fall to night; for indeede he is not for your Lordshippes refpeckt.

Cap.G. Weele make you some sport with the Foxe wee cafe him. He was frist smock'd by the old Lord Leforos, when his disguife and he is parted, tell me what a i prat you shall finde him, which you shall see this ve rio night.

Cap.E. I must go looke my twiggis, He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap.G. As't it pleaseth your Lordship, I lie leave you.

Ber. Now wil I leade you to the houre, and shew you the Laffe I spoke of.

Cap.E. But you say he's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with hir but once, And found her wondrous cold, but I lent to her By this fame Coxcombe that we haue i'th winde Tokens and Letters, which the did refend, And this is all I haue done: She's a faire creature, Will you go fee her?

Cap.E. With all my heart my Lord.

Enter Helissen, and Widdow.

Hel. If you misloubt me that I am not thee, I know not how I shall affure you further, But I shall loofe the grounds I worke vpon.

Wid. Though my eftate be faine, I was well borne, Nothing acquainted with thefse buffonines, And would not put my reputation now In any halting age.

Hel. Nor would I wish you. Firft give me truth, the Count he is my husband, And what to your fworne counfaile I haue spoken, Is fo from word to word: and then you cannot By the good aye that I of you shall borrow, Erre in befowing it.

Wid. I should beleue you, For you haue fher'd me that which well approves Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purfe of Gold, And let me buy your friendly helpe thus farre, Which I will ouer-pay, and pay againe When I haue found it. The Count he woes your daughter, Layes downe his wanton fledge before her beautie, Refolue to carrie her : let her in fine confent As we'l direct her how 'tis beft to beare it: Now his important blood will naught denie, That the'll demand: a ring the Countie weares, That downward hath succeeded in his houre.
Enter one of the Frenchmen, with two or three other soldiers in ambush.

1. Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: when you fall in upon him, speak what terrible Language you will: though you understand it not your feloves, no matter: for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among vs, whom we must produce for an Interpreter.

1. Sol. Good Captaine, let me be th' Interpreter.

Lord E. Art not acquainted with him? knowes he not thy voice?

Lord E. But what linefe wofly hath thou to speake to vs againe.

1. Sol. E'n such as you speake to me.

Lord E. He must thinke vs some band of strangers, it's adueriaries entertainement. Now he hath a smake of all neighbouring Languages: therefore we must every one be a man of his owne fancies, not to know what we speake one to another: so we feeme to know, is to know strang't our purpose: Choughs language, gabblo enough, and good enough. As for you interpreter, you must seeme very politick: But couch ha, heere hee comes, to begule two hours in a sleepe, and then to returne & swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parrolles.

Par. Ten a clocke: Within these three hours 'twill be time enough to goe home. What shall I say I have done? It must bee a very plauid invention that carries it. They beginne to smoke mee, and disgrace haue of late, knock'd too often at my doore: I finde my tongue is too foole-hardie, but my heart hath the feare of Mars before-it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lord E. This is the first truth that ere thine own tongue was guiltie of.

Par. What do you make mee to understand of the courserie of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must giue my felie some hurts, and say I got them in expoit: yet flight ones will not carry it. They will say, came you off with so little? and great ones I dare not giue, wherefore what's the insistance. Tongue, I must put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my felie another of Bairelts Mule, if you prattice mee into these perilles.

Lord E. Is it possible he should know what hee is, and be that he is.

Par. I would the cutting of my garments wold ferue the turne, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lord E. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Lord E. 'Twould not do.

Par. Or to drowne my cloathes, and say I was stript.

Lord E. Hardly ferue.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the window of the Citadell.

Lord E. How deepe?

Par. Thirty fadome.

Lord E. Three great oathes would scarce make that be beleued.

Par. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would sweare I recover'd it.

Lord E. You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

>Allarum within.

Lord E. Throca movajus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, willianda par corbe, cargo.

Par. O ranfome, ranfome, Do not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Boskos thronomulde boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muktos Regiment, And I shall loose my life for want of language. If there be heere German or Dane, Low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speake to me.

Ile discouer that, which shall viado the Florentine.

Inter. Boskos vauvavade, I vnderstand thee, & can speake thy tonguie: Kerselybono sir, betake thee thy faith, for fourteen pounyards are at thy bosome.

Par. Oh.

Inter. Oh pray, pray, pray, Manka reunius dulcie.

Lord E. Oforbidulchos vellincro.

Int. The Generall is content to spare thee yet, And hoodwinkt as thou art, will lead thee on 'To gather from thee. Haply thou mayft Informe Something to ease thy life.

Par. O let me live, And all the secrets of our campe Ile shew, Their force, their purposis: Nay, Ile speake that, Which you will wonder at.

Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damne me.

Inter. Acorde lima.

Come on, thou are granted space.

About Allarum within.

Exit 3 Lord E.
L.E. Go tell the Count Raffilion and my brother,
We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him
Till we do hear from them. (muffled
Sil. Captain I will.
L.E. A will betray vs all vnto our felues, Informe on that,
Sil. So I will fir.
L.E. Till then Ile keepe him darke and safely lockt.

Enter Bertram, and the Maide called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontybell.
Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.
Ber. Titled Goddesse,
And worth it with addition; but faire soule,
In your fine frame hath loove no quality;
If the quicke fire of youth light not your minde,
You are no Maiden but a monument
When you are dead you should be such a one
As you are now: for you are cold and serene,
And now you should be as your mother was
When your sweet felse was got.
Dia. She then was honest.
Ber. So should you be.
Dia. No:
My mother did but dutie, Such(my Lord)
As you owe to your wife,
Ber. No more a'that:
I prethee do not striue against my vowes:
I was compell'd to her, but I loue thee
By loues owne sweet constraint, and will for euer
Do thee all rights of servuce.
Dia. I fo you serue vs
Till we serue you: But when you have our Roses,
You barely leave our thornes to pricke our felues,
And mocke vs with our barrenesse.
Ber. How haue I worne.
Dia. Tis not the many othes that makes the truth,
But the plaine single vow, that is vow'd true:
What is not holie, that we swearne not by,
But take the high'ft to witnesse; then pray you tell me,
If I should swear by loues great attributes,
I lou'd you deeuely, would you beleue my othes,
When I did love you ill? This ha's no holding
To swerane by him whom I protest to loue
That I will workes against him. Therefore your othes
Are words and poore conditions, but vnfeald
At leaft in my opinion.
Ber. Change it, change it:
Be not so holy cruel: Loue is holie,
And my integritie ne're knew the crafts
That you do charge men with:stand no more off,
But glue thy felse vnto my sicke defires,
Who then recouer. Say thou art mine, and euere
My loue as it beginseth, shall fo perfeuer.
Dia. I fee that men make ropes in such a carre,
That weel forlike our felues. Give me that Ring.
Ber. Ile lend it thee my deare; but have no power
To give it from me.
Dia. Will you not my Lord?
Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed downe from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloque i'th world,
In mee to loue. Thus your owne proper wifedome
Brings in the Champion honor on my part,
Against your vaine assault.
Ber. Heere, take my Ring,
My houfe, mine honor, yea my life be thine,
And Ile be bid by thee.
Dia. When midnight comes, knocke at my cham-er window:
Ile order take, my mother shall not heare.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remaine there but an houre, nor speake to mee:
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them,
When bucke againe this Ring shall be deliuer'd:
And on your finger in the night, Ile put Another Ring, that what in time proceeds,
May taken to the future, our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then faile not: you have wonne
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Ber. A heauen on earth I haue won by wooing thee.
"Di:For which, liue long to thank both heauen & me,
You may fo in the end.
My mother told me luft how he would woos,
As if the fate in's heart. She fayes, all men
Have the like othes: He ha'd worne to marrie me
When his wife's dead: therefore Ile lye with him
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are fo braidie, Marry that will, I liue and die a Maid:
Onely in this diguife, I think' no finne,
To cofen him that would vnfiullie winne.

Enter the two French Captaines, and some two or three Souldiers.

Cap.G. You haue not given him his mothers letter.
Cap.E. I haue deliuer'd it an houre since, there is som thing in't that things his nature: for on the reading it, he chang'd almost into another man.
Cap.G. He has much worthy blam laid vpon him, for shaking off fo good a wife, and so sweet a Lady.
Cap.E. Eskipally, hee hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the King, who had eu'n tund his bounty to king happinelle to him. I will teell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
Cap.G. When you have spoken it 'tis dead, and I am the graue of it.
Cap.E. Hee hath peruersted a young Gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown, & this night he fitness his will in the splaye of her honour: hee hath given her his monumentall Ring, and thinks himselfe made in the vnschifte compositon.
Cap.G. Now God delay our rebellion as we are our felues, what things are we.
Cap.E. Mercely our owne traitours. And as in the common course of all treasons, we will feem them recreale themselfes, till they attaine to their abhor'd ends: so he in this action contrives against his owne Nobilicity in his proper streme, ore-flowes himselfe.
Cap.G. Is it not meant damnable in vs, to be Trum-peters of our vnslawfull intent? We shall not then have his company to night?
Cap.E. Not till after midnight: for hee is dilet to his houre.
Cap.G. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him fee his company anathomizes'd, that hee might take a measure of his owne judgements, wherein so curiously he had fet this counterfeit.

Cap. E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

Cap. G. In the meanes, what heardest thou of these Warres?

Cap. E. I hear there is an outbrake of peace.

Cap. G. Nay, I affure you a peace concluded.

Cap. E. What will Count Raffilion do then? Will he trauaille higher, or returne againe into France?

Cap. G. I perceive by this demand, you are not altogether of his councell.

Cap. E. Let it be forbid fir, so should I bee a great deale of his saft.

Cap. G. Sir, his wife some two months since fledde from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint La-ques le grand; which holy vnertaking, with most au- fiere fanctimonie the accompli]; and there refuding, the tenderesse of her Nature, became as a prey to her greffe: in fine, made a groane of her last brath, & now she fings in heaven.

Cap. E. How is this iustified?

Cap. G. The stronger part of it by her owne Letters, which makes her florie true, even to the point of her death: her death it selfe, which could not be her office to say, is come: was faithfully confirm'd by the Rector of the place.

Cap. E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

Cap. G. I, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the veritie.

Cap. E. I am heartily forrie that hee'll bee gladde of this.

Cap. G. How mightily sometimes we make vs comforts of our losses.

Cap. E. And how mightily some other times, wee drowne our gaine in tears, the great dignitie that his valour hath here acquir'd for him, shall at home be eu- countered with a flame as ample.

Cap. G. The webbe of our life, is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our vertues would bee proud, if our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would di- spaire if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your matter?

Ser. He met the Duke in the street, of whom hee hath taken a solemn leave: his Lordhip will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.

Cap. E. They shall bee no more then needfull there, if they were more then they can commend.

Enter Count Raffilion.

Ber. They cannot be too sweete for the Kings tart- nesse, here's his Lordship now. How now my Lord, I'th not after midnight?

Ber. I have to night dispatch'd sixeene businesse, a moneth length a peece, by an abstrackc of successe: I have congied with the Duke, done my adieu with his neereft; buried a wife, mourn'd for her, writ to my La- die mother, I am returning, entertain'd my Conoysi, & betweene these maine parcels of dispatch, affected ma- ny nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Cap. E. If the businesse bee of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your Lordship.

Ber. I mean the businesse is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: but shall we have this dialogue betweene the Foole and the Soldiour. Come, bring forth this counterfeit module, has decei'd mee, like a double-meaning Profeplier.

Cap. E. Bring him forth, he's late i'th flockes all night poore gallant knaue.

Ber. No matter, his heeleas haue deferu'd it, in vfur- ping his ipurses fo long. How does he carry himselfe?

Cap. E. I have told your Lordship alreadie: The flockes carrie him. But to anwer you as you would be vsrderfood, hee weeps like a wench that had shed her milke, he hath confeft himselfe to Morgan, whom hee supposse to be a Friar, for the time of his remembrance to this very iniant difafter of his setting i'th flockes: and what thinke you he hath confeft?

Ber. Nothing of me, he's a?

Cap. E. His confession is taken, and it shall bee read to his face, if your Lordship list not, as I beleue you are, you must haue the patience to heare it.

Enter Parvolles with his Interpreter.

Ber. A plaguе upon him, mufflef; he can say nothing of me: huh, huh.

Inter. He calleth for the tortures, what will you say without em.

Par. I will confesse what I know without contraint,

If yee pinch me like a Paffy, I can say no more.

Inter. Basso chimurco.

Cap. Bobbindo chanimurco.

Inter. You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall bids you anwer to what I shall ask you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to liue.

Inter. First demand of him, how many horse the Duke is strong.

What say you to that?

Par. Five or fixe thousand, but very weake and unserviceable: the troops are all scatter'd, and the Com- manders verie poore rogues, vpon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to liue.

Inter. Shall I fet downe your anwer so?

Par. Do, Ile take the Sacrament on'thow & which way you will: all's one to him.

Ber. What a paff-fauing flae is this?

Cap. G. Y'are decei'd my Lord, this is Mounfieur Parvolles the gallant militanter, that was his owne phrase that had the whole theoricke of warre in the knot of his scarfes, and the prafite in the chape of his dagger.

Cap. E. I will neuer trauaile a man againe, for keeping his fword cleane, nor beleue he can haue euerie thing in him, by wearing his apporraine neatly.

Inter. Well, that's fet downe.

Par. Five or fixe thousand horse I fed, I will say true, or thereabouts fet downe, for I trauaile not.

Cap. G. He's very neere the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thankes for't in the nature he deliuers it.

Par. Poore rogues, I pray you fay.

Inter. Well, that's fet downe.

Par. I humbly thank you fir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marauilous poore.

Interp. Demand of him of what ftregthe they are a foot.

Par. What fay you to that?

Par. By my troth fir, if I were to liue this prefent houre, I will tell true. Let me fee, Spurio a hundred & fifte,

All's Well that ends Well.

fiftie, Sebastian so many, Corambs so many, Iagues so many : Guisilan, Coffins, Lodericks, and Gratys, two hundred fiftie each : Mine owne Company, Chilopher, Vaumand, Berge, two hundred fiftie each : to the murther file, rotten and found, vppon my life amounts not to fiftie, thousand pole, halfe of the which, dare not shake the snow from off their Caflockes, leaff they thake themselves to peccees.

Ber. What shall be done to him ?

Int. Well is it set downe : you shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumaine bee 1'th Campe, a Frenchman : what his reputation is with the Duke, what his valour, honeflie, and expertness in warres: or whether he thinkes what he was not possible with well-weighing summes of gold to corrupt him to a reuolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it ?

Par. I befothe you let me answer to the particular of the Intrigators. Demand them fingly.

Int. Do you know this Captain Dumaine ?

Par. I know him, was a Botchers Prentise in Paris, from whence he was whipt for getting the Shrives fooe with childie, a dumbe innocent that could not say him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leave hold your hands, though I know his braines are forfeitie to the next tile that falls.

Int. Well, is this Captain in the Duke of Florence's camp ?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lowifie.

Cay. G. Nay, thet is not so upon me : we shall hear of your Lord anone.

Int. What is his reputation with the Duke ?

Par. The Duke knowes him for no other, but a poore Officer of mine, and witt to mee this other day, to turne him out a' th band. I thinke I haue his Letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good fainfie I do not know, eitier it is there, or it is upon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Heere 'tis, heere's a paper,shall I reade it to you? Par. I do not know if it be or no. Ber. Our Interpreter doth it well.

Cap. G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Counts a fool, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letters fir : that is an advertisement to a proper maidie in Florence, one Diano, to take heede of the allurement of one Count Raffilien, a foolish idle boy : but for all that very rutthie, I pray you fir put it vp again.

Int. Nay, I lie reade it firft by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't I protest was very honifie in the behalfe of the maid : for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and laciauious boy, who is a whale to Virginity, and desouer vp all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable both-fides rogue.

Int. Let. When be fouares oakes, bid him drop gold, and take it.

After he sours, he neuer payes the scores :
Half soon un match well made, match and well make it, He were payes after debts, take it before, And jay a souder (Dian) told thee this : Men are to well with, loyes are not to his.
tion of that lascivious young boy the Count, have I run into this danger: yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Int. There is no remedy sir, but you must dye: the Generall fayes, you that have so traitorously discouer'd the secrets of your army, and made such pettiforous reports of men very nobly held, can ferue the world for no honest vfe: therefore you must dye. Come head- man, off with his head.

Par. O Lord sir let me live, or let me fee my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends:

So, looke about you, know you any heere?

Count. Good morrow noble Captaine,
Le. E. God bleffe you Captaine Perolles.
Cap. G. God faue you noble Captaine.
Le. E. Captaine, what greeting will you to my Lord" Laffin? I am for France.

Cap. G. Good Captaine will you give me a Copy of the fonnet you wrot to Diana in behalfe of the Count Rofflien, and I were not a verie Coward, I'de compell it of you, but far you well. Exeunt.

Int. You are vndone Captaine all but your feature, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be cruell'd with a plot?

Inter. If you could finde out a Countrie where but women were that had receiv'd so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare yee well sir, I am for France too, we shall speake of you there. Exit

Par. Yet am I thankfull: if my heart were great
'Twould burn at this: Captaine Ile be no more,
But I will eate, and drinke, and sleepe as soft
As Captaine shall. Simply the thing I am
Shall make me lye: who knowes himselfe a bragart
Let him feare this: for it will come to paffe,
That euer bragart shall be found an Affe.
Ruff fword, coole blufhes, and Parrelles lye
Safest in shame: being fool'd, by fool'tie thrive;
There's place and means for every man aliue.
Ile after them. Exit.

Enter Helen, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceiue I haue not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my forte: for whole throne 'tis needfull
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele.
Time was, I did him a desired office
Deere almoft as his life, which gratitude
Through flintie Tartars bofome would peepe forth,
And anfwer thankes. I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marcellis, to which place
We have convenient conuoy: you must know
I am suppos'd dead, the Army breaking,
My husband hires him home, where heauen ayding,
And by the leaue of my good Lord the King,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You neuer had a fervant to whom truft
Your buines was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Miftris
Euer a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompenze your burial: Doubt not but heauen
Hath brought mee vp to be your daughters dower,
As it hath fated her to be my modue

And helper to a husband. But O strange men,
That can fuch sweet vfe make of what they hate,
When fawcie trufting of the coyn'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night, fo luft doth play
With what it leathes, for that which is away,
But more of this beareafter: you Diana,
Vnder my poore inftructions yet must fuffer
Something in my behalfe.

Diz. Let death and honeftie
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Vpon your will to fuffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on summer,
When Briars shall have laues as well as thornes,
And be as sweet as harpe: we muft away,
Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time reuies vs,
All's well that ends well, All the fines the Crowne;
What ere the course, the end is the renowne. Exeunt

Enter Cloeome, old Lady, and Laffin.

Laf. No, no, no, your fonne was miliad with a snipt taftata fellow there, whole villainous farron wold haue made all the vnba'k'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had beeene aliue at this houre, and your fonne heere at home, more advanc'd by the King, then by that red-tall'd humble Bee I speak of.

La. I would I had not knowne him, it was the death of the most vertuous gentlewoman, that euer Nature had praife for creating. If she had pertaken of my flesh and coft mee the deereft groanes of a mother, I could not haue owed her a more rooted loue.

Laf. Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. Wee may picke a thouand fallets ere wee light on souch another heare.

to. Indeed fir she was the sweete Margerom of the fallet, or rather the heare of grace.

Laf. They are not hearees you knaue, they are noble hearees.

Cloeome. I am no great Nabuchodonosor fir, I haue not much skill in grace.

Laf. Whether doeth thou professe thy felfe, a knaue or a foole?

Cleo. A foole fir at a womenes service, and a knaue at a mans.

Laf. Your distinction.

Cleo. I would couen the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knaue at his service indeed.

Cleo. And I would glue his wife my bauble fir to doe her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knaue and foole.

Cleo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Cleo. Why fir, if I cannot ferue you, I can ferue as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Whose that, a Frenchman?

Cleo. Faith fir a has an English maine, but his fino mio is more hotter in France then there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Cleo. The blacke prince fir, alias the prince of darke nes, alias the diuell.

Laf. Hold thee there's my purfe, I giue thee not this to fuggeft thee from thy mafter thou talke't off, ferue him still.

Clow
Cl. I am a woodland fellow sir, that alwaies loued a great fire, and the masters I speake of ever keeps a good fire, but sure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobility remaine in's Court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter; some that humble themselues may, but the manie will be too chill and tender, and theye bee for the flowrie way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy waies, I begin to bee a waree of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy waies, let my horses be wel look'd too, without any trickeys.

Cl. If I put any trickeys vpon em sir, they shall bee lades trickeys, which are their owne right by the law of Nature.

Laf. A thredrow knaue and an vnhappie.

Lady. So a is. My Lord that's gone made himselfe much iprou'd, but of him, by his authoritie bee remaines here, which he thinkes is a pattent for his fawciness, and indeede he has no pace, but runnes where he will.

Laf. Ilike him well, 'tis not amiss; I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your fonne was vpon his returne home. I moud the King my mater to expeske in the behalfe of my daughter, which in the minoritie of them both, his Majestie out of a felfe-gracious remembrance did first propode, his Highness hath promis'd me to doe it, and to flappe vp the displeasure he hath conceiued against your fonne, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladyship like it?

La. With verie much content my Lord, and I wish it happily effecte.

Laf. His Highness comes post from Marcellus, of as able bodie as when he number'd thirty, a will be here to morrow, or I am deuill'd, by him that in such intelligeance hath feldome fail'd.

La. Ir reioyces me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I haue letters that my fonne will be here to night: I shall beeseach your Lordship to remane with mee, till they meete together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

La. You neede but pleade your honourable privilidge.

Laf. Ladie, of that I haue made a bold charter, but I thanke my God, it holds yet.

Enter Clowne.

Cl. O Madam, yonders my Lord your fonne with a patch of veluet on's face, whether there bee a scar vnder't or no, the Veluet knowes, but 'tis a goodly patch of Veluet, his left cheeke is a checke of two pile and a halfe, but his right cheeke is wore bare.

Laf. A scarre nobly got, Or a noble scarre, is a good liu're of honor, So belike is that.

Cl. But it is your carbinado'd face.

Laf. Let us goe fee your fonne I pray you, I long to talke With the yong nobles foorler.

Clowne. Faith there's a dozen of em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at euerie man.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Hellen, Widdow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding poffing day and night, Must wear your spirits low, we cannot helpe it: But since you have made the daies and nights as one, To weare your gentle limbes in my affayres, Be bold you do io grow in my requital, As nothing can vnroote you. In happie time, Enter a gentle Afferinger.

This man may helpe me to his Mailesties care,
If he would spend his power. God faue you sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seene you in the Court of France.

Gent. I have beene sometimes there.

Hel. I do preume sir, that you are not faine From the report that goes vpon your goodnesse, And therefore goaded with most sharpes occasions, Which lay nice manners by, I put you to

The vfe of your owne vertues, for the which I shall continue thankfull.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will pleaze you
To give this poore petition to the King,
And ayde me with that flore of power you have
To come into his preence.

Gen. The Kings not here.

Hel. Not heere sir?

Gen. Not indeed,

He hence remou'd last night, and with more haft Then is his vfe.

Wid. Lord how we losse our painses.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,

Though time seeme so aduerse, and meanes vnfit:
I do befeech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marrie as I take it to Refilijion,

Whither I am going.

Hel. I do befeech you sir,

Since you are like to fee the King before me,

Comtend the paper to his gracious band,

Which I preume shall render you no blame, But rather make you thanke your painses for it,

I will come after you with what good speeche Our meanes will make vs meanes.

Gent. This Ie do for you.

Hel. And you shall finde your selfe to be well thank'd what e're fallles more. We must to horfe againe, Go, go, prouide.

Enter Clownes and Parrodelles.

Par. Good Mr. Launcel give my Lord Lafew this letter, I haue ere now fir beene better knowne to you, when I haue held famillaritie with frether clothes: but I am now fir muddied in fortunes mood, and smell somewhat strong of her firong displeasure.

Cl. Truely, Fortunes displeasure is but fluttifh if it smell fo strongly as thou speake't of: I will henceforth eate no Fithe of Fortunes but'tring. Pre thee allow the winde.

Par. Nay you neede not to stop your nofe sir: I speake but by a Metaphor.

Cl. Indeed sir, if your Metaphor finke, I will stop my nofe, or against any mans Metaphor.Pretie get thee further.

Per.
Par. Pray you sir deliver me this paper.
Cle. Foh, prithee fland away: a paper from fortunes close-stoole, to glue to a Nobleman. Looke here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeuw.

Cle. Heere is a pure of Fortunes fir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Mufcat, that ha's falne into the vnclene fift-pond of her diplifure, and as he fayes is muddled withall. Pray you fir, vfe the Carpe as you maie, for he lookes like a poore decayed, ingenious, foolifh, raically knaue. I doe pity his diftreffe in my fmites of comfort, and leave him to your Lordfhip.

Par. My Lord I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly fcratch'd.
Lafeuw. And what would you have me to doe? 'Tis too late to paire her nailes now. Wherein haue you played the knaue with fortune that he should fcratch you, who of her felfe is a good Lady, and would not haue knaues thrive long vnder? There's a Cardecue for you: Let the Juftices make you and fortune friends; I am for other buifineffe.

Par. I befeech your honour to heare me one fingle word, Lafeuw. You begge a fingle peney more: Come you shall ha't, faue your word.
Par. My name my good Lord is Parrotles.
Lafeuw. You begge more then word then. Cox my paffion, give me your hand: How does your drumme?
Par. O my good Lord, you were the firft that found mee.
Lafeuw. Was I infooth? And I was the firft that loft thee.
Par. It lies in you my Lord to bring me in some grace for you did bring me out.
Lafeuw. Out vpon thee knaue, doeff thou put vpon mee at once both the office of God and the diuell: one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The Kings comming I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me, I had talke of you lat night, though you are a foole and a knaue, you hall eate, go too, follow.
Par. I praiie God for you.

Flourifb. Enter King, old Lady, Lafeuw, the two French Lords, with attendants.

Kin. We loft a Jewell of her, and our effeeme Was made much poorer by it: but your fonne, As mad in folly, lack'd the fende to know Her efimation home.

Old La. 'Tis paft my Liege, And I befeech your Maieftie to make it Naturall reolution, done i'th blade of youth, When oyle and fire, too strong for reafons force, Ore-bearres it, and burnes on.

Kin. My honour'd Lady, I haue forguen and forgotten all, Though my reuenues were high bent vpon him, And watch'd the time to floote.

Lafeuw. This I muft fay, But firft I begge my pardon: the yong Lord Did to his Maiefty, his Mother, and his Ladie, Offence of mighty note; but to himfelfe The greffeft wrong of all. He loft a wife, Whole beauty did afonifie the furuey Of richett els: whole words all eares tooke captuie, Whole deere perfeccion, hearts that fcom'd to ferue, Humbly call'd Mistri's.
Kin. Praifing what is loft, Makes the remembrance deep. Well, call him hither, We are reconcil'd, and the firft view shall kill All repetition: Let him not aske our pardon, The nature of his great offence is dead, And deeper then oblivion, we do burie Th'incenfing reliques of it. Let him approach A stranger, no offender; and informe him So 'tis our will he fhou'd.

Gen. I fhall my Liege.
Kin. What fayes he to your daughter, Have you spoke?
Lafeuw. All that he is, hath reference to your Highnes.
Kin. Then fhall we have a match. I haue letters fent me, that fets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.

Lafeuw. He looks well on't.
Kin. I am not a day of feafon, For thou maft fite a fun-shine, and a haile In me at once: But to the beafeft beams Diftraffed clouds give way, fo fhand thou forth, The time is faire againe.

Ber. My high repented blames Deere Soueraigne pardon to me.

Kin. All is whole, Not one word more of the confumed time, Let's take the infant by the forward top: For we are old, and on our quick'f decrees Th'noufable, and noifile foot of time Steales, ere we can effect them. You remember The daughter of this Lord?

Ber. Admiringly my Liege, at firft I flucke my choice vpon her, ere my heart Durft make too bold a herald of my tongue: Where the impreffion of mine eye enfixing, Contempt his fcomfull Periephrie did lend me, Which warpt the line, of euerie other favour, Woman'd a faire colour, or expriff it fhone, Extended or contracfted all proportions To a moft hideous obiect. Thence it came, That the whom all men prais'd, and whom my felfe, Since I haue loft, haue lou'd; was in mine eye The duft that did offend it.

Kin. Well excuf'd:
That thou didft love her, strifes fome fcores away From the great compt: but love that comes too late, Like a remorfefull pardon flowly carried To the great fender, turns a fowre offence, Crying, that's good that's gone: Our raff failte, Make triuiall price of ferious things we haue, Not knowing them, vntill we know their graue. Oft our dilpfures to our felues vnuift, Defroyr our friends, and after wepe their duft: Our owne loue waking, cries to fee what's done, While famefull hathe deepes out the afburnee. Be this sweet Helens knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for faire Maudlin, The maine confefts are had, and heere wee'l flay To fee our widowers fecond marriage day: Which better then the firft, O deere heaven bleffe, Or, ere they meete in me, O Nature ceffe.

Lafeuw. Come on my fonne, in whom my houfes name_Mult be digefted: give a fauour from you To sparkle in the spiritts of my daughter,
That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And eu'ry hair that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The left that ere I took her leave at Court,
I faw vp on her finger.
Ber. Her it was not.
King. Now pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fatten'd too!
This Ring was mine, and when I gaued it Helen,
I bad her if her fortunes ever flood
Necessitated to helpe, that by this token
I would releue her. Had you that craft to reaue her
Of what should read her molt?
Ber. My gracious Souersaigne,
How ere it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was seuer hers.
Old La. Sonne, on my life
I haue seene her weare it, and the reckon'd it
At her lyes rate.
Laf. I am sure I faw her weare it.
Ber. You ar deceit'd my Lord, the seuer faw it:
In Florence was it from a clement throwne mee,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I faw ingag'd. but when I had subscrib'd
To mine owne fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answere in that courfe of Honour
As she had made the ouerture, the cæft
In heauie faffonion, and would neuer
Receive the Ring againe.
Kin. Puts on himselfe,
That knowes the tinct and multiplying med'cine,
Hath not in natures mysterie more science,
Then I haue in this Ring. "Twas mine, 'twas Helen,
Whoeuer gaued it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your felse,
Confelle 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to firetie,
That she would neuer put it from her finger,
Vnsele she gaued it to your felse in bed,
Where you haue seuer come: or fent it vs
Vpon her great diffaier.
Ber. She seuer faw it.
Kin. Thou speak'st it falsely: as I love mine Honor,
And mak'it connecurall feares to come into me,
Which I would faine shat out, if it shou'd prove
That rouh ar to inhumane, 'twill not prove fo:
And yet I know not, thou di'dst hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to clofe
Her eyes my felse, could win me to beleue,
More then to see this Ring. Take him away,
My fore-paft proofes, how ere the matter fall
Shall taze my fears of little vanitie,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him,
We'll fhip this matter futher.
Ber. If you shall prove
This Ring was euerr hers, you shall as eafe
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet the seuer was.

Enter a Gentleman.
King. I am wrap'd in diffmall thinkings.
Gen. Gracious Souersaigne.
Whether I have beene too blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath for foure or flue remoues come short,
To tender it her felse. I vndertooke it,
Vanguih'd thereto by the faire grace and speech
Of the poore fupplicant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her businesse lookes in her
With an importing vigafe, and the told me
In a sweet verbal breefe, it did concern
Your Hignefse with her felse.

A Letter.
"Upon hia many protestations to marrie mee when his wife was dead, I bade to fay it, he wasne me. Now is the Count Roffillion a Widdower, his woues are forfitted to mee, and my heres poyed to him. Her fule from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his Country for Juftice: Grant me it, O King, in you it bef't lies, otherwife a feducer flavries, and a poore Maid is undone."

Diana Capilet.
Laf. I will buy me a fonne in Law in a faire, and toule for this. Ie none of him.
Kin. The heauens haue thought well on thee Lafew,
To bring forth this difcou'rie, fecke thefe futors:
Go speedily, and bring againe the Count.

Enter Bertram.
I am a-feard the life of Helen (Ladie)
Was fowly fhnatch.
Old La. Now juftice on the doers.
King. I wonder fir, fir, wares are monftrous to you,
And that you flye them as you fware them Lordship,
Yet you defire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdow, Diana, and Parrollet.
Dia. I am my Lord a wretched Florentine,
Deryued from the ancient Capilet,
My fuite as I do vnderfand you know,
And therefore know how farre I may be pittied.
Wid. I am her Mother fir, whole age and honour
Both fuffer vnder this complaint we bring,
And both hall ceafe, without your remedie.
King. Come hecber Count, do you knew these Wom-

Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will deny,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you looke fo ftrange vpon your wife?
Ber. She's none of mine my Lord.
Dia. If you hall marrie
You gue away this hand, and that is mine,
You gue away heauens vowes, and thoefe are mine:
You gue away my felse, which is knowne mine:
For I by vow am fo embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marrie me,
Either both or none.
Laf. your reputation comes too fhort for my daughter, you are no husband for her.
Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and defp'rate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: Let your highnes
Lay a more noble thought vpon mine honour,
Then for to thinke that I would finke it here.
Kin. Sir for my thoughts, you have them il to friend,
Till your deeds gain thee fairer: proue your honor,
Then in my thought it lies.
Dian. Good my Lord,
Aske him vpon his oath, if hee do's thinke
He had not my virginity.
Kin. What fault thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent my Lord,
And was a common gameletter to the Campe.
Dia. He do's me wrong my Lord: If I were fo,
He might haue bought me at a common price.

Do
Do not believe him. O behold this Ring, Whose high respect and rich validity Did lack a Parallel: yet for all that He gave it to a Commoner a' th' Campe If I be one.

Coun. He bluses, and 'tis hit:
Of fixe preceding Ancefor's, that Iemme Confer'd by testament to'th frequent issue Hath it beene owde and worsne. This is his wife, That Ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Me thought you faide
You saw one heere in Court could witnesse it.

Dia. I did my Lord, but loath am to produce So bad an infrument, his names Parolles.

Laf. I faw the man to day, if man he bee.

Kin. Finde him, and bring him hether.

Ref. What of him:
He's quoted for a mofte pefidious flave
With all the spots a' th world, tact and debohd',
Whose nature fickens: but to speake a truth,
Am I, or that or this for what he'l vter,
That will speake any thing.

Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.

Ref. I think he has; certaine it is I lyk'd her, And boorded her i' th wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle for mee,
Madding my eagnerness with her refrainment, As all impediments inancies courte
Are motmies of more fancie, and in fine,
Her infinit comming with her moderne grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate, the got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferiour might At Market price haue bought.

Dia. I mufte be patient:
You that hauue turn'd off a frift fo noble wife,
May lufly dyet me. I prays you yet,
(Since you lacke vertue, I will loofe a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will returne it home,
And glue me mine againe.

Ref. I haue it not.

Kin. What Ring was yours I prays you pr?
Dia. Sir much like the fame vpon your finger.

Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was I gaue him being a bed.

Kin. The flory then goes falfe,you throw it him Out of a Cafement.

Dia. I have speake the truth. Enter Parolles.

Ref. My Lord, I do confesse the ring was hers.

Kin. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you:

Is this the man you speake of?

Dia. I, my Lord.

Kin. Tell me firrah, but tell me true I charge you, Not fearing the difpleasure of your master:
Which on your lust proceeding, Ile keepe off,
By him and by this woman heere, what know you?

Par. So pleafe your Maiestye, my matter hath bin an honourable Gentleman. Trickes hee hath had in him, which Gentlemen haue.

Kin. Come, come, to th'purpose: Did hee love this woman?

Par. Faith sir he did love her, but how.

Kin. How I prays you?

Par. He did love her fir, as a Gent. loues a Woman.

Kin. How is that?

Par. He lou'd her fir, and lou'd her not.

Kin. As thou art a knaue and no knaue, what an equall Companion is this?

Par. I am a poore man, and at your Maiefties command.

Laf. Hee's a good drumme my Lord, but a naughty Orator.

Dia. Do you know he prompt me marriage?

Par. Faith I know more then Ile speake.

Kin. But wilt thou not speake all thou know'ft?

Par. Yes so pleafe your Maiestye: I did goe betweene them as I did, but more then that he joued her, for in-deede he was madde for her, and talkt of Sathan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as proming her marriage, and things which would defiere mee ill will to speake of, therefore I will not speake what I know.

Kin. Thou haft spoken all already, vnleffe thou canst say they are marreid, but thou art too fine in thy euidence, therefore fland aside. This Ring you fay was yours.

Dia. I my good Lord.

Kin. Where did you buy it? Or who gaue it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

Kin. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

Kin. Where did you finde it then?

Dia. I found it not.

Kin. If it were yours by none of all these ways, How could you giue it him?

Dia. I neuer gaue it him.

Laf. This womans an eafe gloue my Lord, he goes off and on at pleasfure.

Kin. This Ring was mine, I gaue it his firft wife.

Dia. It might be yours or hers for ought I know.

Kin. Take her away, I do not like her now,
To prifon with her: and away with him,
Vnleffe thou teifl me where thou hadhit this Ring,
Thou dieth within this houre.

Dia. Ile neuer tell you.

Kin. Take her away.

Dia. Ile put in baile my lide.

Kin. I think hee nowe some common Customer.

Dia. By loffe if ever I knew man 'twas you.

King. Wherefore haft thou accuse him al this while.

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty: He knowes I am no Maid, and he'll swear too: Ile swear I am a Maid, and he knowes not.

Great King I am no trumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or elfe this old mans wife.

Kin. She does abuse our cares, to prifon with her.

Dia. Good mother fetch my bayle. Stay Rovall sir, The Jeweller that owes the Ring is fent for, And he shall surety me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himselfe,
Though yet he neuer harm'd me, heere I quit him. He knowes himselfe my bed he hath defi'd,
And at that time he got his wife with childe:
Dead though she be, she feele she young one kicke:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick,
And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hilfen and Widdow.

Kin. Is there no exercit
Beguiles the truer Office of mine eyes?

It's real that I fee?

Hel. No my good Lord,
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

_Ref._ Both, both, O pardon.

_Hel._ Oh my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kind, there is your Ring,
And looke you, here's your letter: this it fayes,
When from my fnger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with childe, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine now you are doubly wonne?

_Ref._ If the my Liege can make me know this clearly,
Ile love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

_Hel._ If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce betwenee me and you.
O my deere mother do I fee you living?

_Laf._ Mine eyes smell Onions, I shall wepe anon:
Good Tom Drumme lend me a handkercher.
So I thanke thee, waite on me home, Ile make sport with thee:
Let thy curfies alone, they are scurvy ones.

_King._ Let vs from point to point this ftorie know,
To make the even truth in pleafure flow:
If thou beeft yet a fresh uncropped flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and Ile pay thy dower.
For I can gufle, that by thy honeft aide,
Thou keeptft a wife her felfe, thy felfe a Maide.
Of that and all the progresse more and leffe,
Refolduely more leffe fhall exprefse:
All yet seemes well, and if it end fo meete,
The bitter paft, more welcome is the fweet.

_Flouribs._

_The Kings a Begger, now the Play is done,
All is well ended, if this fuit be wonne,
That you exprefs Content: which we will pay,
With firsft to pleafe you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. Exeunt omn.

FINIS.
Twelfth Night, Or what you will.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter Orsino. Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.

F Musick be the food of Loue, play on,
Glue me excelle of it: that surfeiting,
The appetite may ficken, and fo dye.
That braine agen, it had a dying fall:
O, it came ore my eare, like the sweet found
That breathes vpon a banke of Violets;
Stealing, and giuing Odour. Enough, no more,
'Tis not fo sweet now, as it was before.
O spirit of Loue, how quickke and freth art thou,
That notwithstanding thy capacite,
Receiueth of the Sea. Nought enters there,
Of what validity, and pitch fo ere,
But fallles into abatement, and low price
Even in a minute; fo full of shapes is fancie,
That it alone, is high fantastical.

Cu. Will you go hunt my Lord?

'Du. What Curie?

Cu. The Hart.

'Du. Why fo I do, the Nobleft that I haue:
O when mine eyes did see Oliua first,
Me thought the purg'd the ayre of peffilence;
That instant was I turn'd into a Hart,
And my defires like fell and cruell hounds,
Ere since pursue me. How now what newes from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So pleafe my Lord, I might not be admet,
But from her handmaid do returne this anfwer:
The Element it felle, till feuen yeares heate,
Shall not behold her face at ample view:
But like a Choythreffe she will vailed Walke,
And water once a day her Chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this to feafon
A brothers dead loue, which she would keepe freth
And latex, in her fad remembrance.

'Du. O fhe that hath a heart of that fine frame
To pay this debt of loue but to a brother,
How will the loue, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flocke of all affections elfe
That liue in her. When Luier, Braine, and Heart,
Thefe foueraigne thrones, are allupply'd and fill'd
Her sweetes perfection with one felle king:
Away before me, to sweet beds of Flowres,
Loue-thoughts lye rich, when canopy'd with bowres.

Exect

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola, a Captaine, and Saylers.

Vio. What Country (Friends) is this?

Cap. This is Illyria Ladie.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Elizium,
Perchance he is not drown'd: What thinke you Saylers?

Cap. It is perchance that you your felfe were faued.

Vio. O my poore brother, and fo perchance may he be.

Cap. True Madam, and to comfort you with chance,
Affure your felfe, after our ship did split,
When you, and thofe poore number faued with you,
Hung on our driving boate: I faw your brother
Moft prouident in perill, binde himfelfe,
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practife)
To a fitong Mafe, that liu'd vpon the fea:
Where like Orion on the Dolphines backe,
I faw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
So long as I could fee.

Vio. For faying fo, there's Gold:
Mine owne escape vnfoldeth to my hope,
Whereeto thy speech ferues for authoritie
The like of him. Know'th thou this Countrey?

Cap. I Madam well, for I was bred and borne
Not three hours traualle from this very place:

Fis. Who gouernes heere?

Cap. A noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

He was a Batchellor then.

Cap. And fo is now, or was fo very late:
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas freth in murmure (as you know
What great ones do, the leffe will prattle of,) That he did feake the loue of faire Oliua.

Vio. What's fhee?

Cap. A vertuous maid, the daughter of a Count
That dide some twelvemonth since, then leaving her
In the protection of his fonne, her brother,
Who shortly afto dide: for whole deren loue
(They lay) he hath abfur'd the fight
And company of men.

Vio. O that I eru'd that Lady,
And might not be delievered to the world

Y 2
Till I had made mine owne occasion mellow
What my estate is.
Caps. That were hard to compasse,
Because she will admit no kinde of suite,
No, not the Dukes.
Vts. There is a faire behavioir in thee Captaine,
And though that nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft clofe in pollution : yet of thee
I will beleue thou haft a minde that suites
With this thy faire and outward charafter.
I prethee (and Ie pay thee bounteouly)
Conceale me what I am, and be my aye,
For such difguife as haply shall become
The forme of my intent. I cleane this Duke,
Thou haft present me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can fing,
And speake to him in many forts of Musick,
That will allow me very worth his fenice.
What elie may hap, to time I will commit,
Onely flape thou thy finence to my wit.
Caps. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute Ie bee,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not fee.
Vio. I thanke thee : Lead me on. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.
Sir To. What a plague meannes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.
Mar. By my troth sir Toby, you must come in earlyer a nights : your Cofin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.
To. Why let her except, before excepted.
Mar. I, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.
To. Confine! Ie confine my selfe no finer then I am: these cloathes are good enough to drink in, and so bee these boots too : and they be not, let them hang them-selues in their owne fraps.
Mar. That quaffing and drinking will vndoe you : I heard my Lady talke of it yester-day : and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be hir woer
To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-checkes?
Mar. I he.
To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.
Mar. What's that to th'purpofe?
To. Why he ha's three thoufland duicates a yeare.
Mar. I, but he'll haue but a yeare in all thefe duicates : He's a very foole, and a prodigall.
To. Fox, that you'l say fo : he playes o' the Viol-de-gam-boy, and speakes three or four languages word for word without booke, & hath all the good gifts of nature.
Mar. He hath indeed, almoft naturall : for besides that he's a foole, he's a great quarreler : and but that hee hath the gift of a Coward, to alay the guft he hath in quarrelling, 'ts thought among the prudent, he would quicke ly haue the gift of a great.
To. By this hand they are froundrels and subfra-ctors that say fo of him. Who are they?
Mar. They that add moreouer, hee's drunken nightly in your company.
To. With drinking healths to my Neece : Ie drinke to her as long as there is a paffage in my throat, & drinke in Illyria : he's a Coward and a Cofy-trill that will not drinke to my Neece. till his branres turne o'th toe, like a parifh top. What wench? Capitlane vellvue for here coms Sir Andrew Ague-checkes not to be feene.

And. Enter Sir Andreu.
And. Sir Toby Belch. How now sir Toby Belch?
To. Sweet sir Andreu.
And. Bleffe you faire Shrew.
Mar. And you too fir.
Tob. Accoft Sir Andreu,accoft.
And. What's that?
To. My Neece Chamber-maid.
Mar. Good Milites Accoft, I defire better acquaintance.
And. My name is Mary fir.
And. Good milites Mary, accoxt.
To. You mistake knight : Accoxt, is front her, boord her, woe her, affayle her.
And. By my troth I would not vndertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of Accoxt?
Mar. Far you well Gentlemen.
To. And thou let part fo Sir Andreu, would thou mightheuer draw sword aget.
And. And you part fo milites, I would I might ever neuer draw sword aget : Faire Lady, doe you thinke you haue fooles in hand?
Mar. Sir, I have not you by'th hand.
An. Marry but you shall have, and heeres my hand.
Mar. Now fir, thought is free : I pray you bring your hand to'th Buttry barre, and let it drinke.
An. Wherefore (sweet-heart?) What's your Metaphor?
Mar. It's dry fir.
And. Why I thinke fo : I am not such an affe, but I can kepe my hand dry. But what's your left?
Mar. A dry left Sir.
And. Are you full of them?
Mar. Sir, I haue them at my fengers ends: marry now I let go your hand, I am barren. Exit Maria.
To. O knight, thou lack'lt a cup of Canearie:when did I fee thee fo put downe?
An. Neuer in your life I thinke, vallcfe you see Canearie put me downe : mee theke sometimes I haue no more wit then a Chrifllian, or an ordinary man ha's: but I am a great eater of beefe, and I beleue that does harme to my wit.
To. No question.
An. And I thought that, I'de forfreweare it. Ie ride home to morrow sir Andreu.
To. Pur-gay you deere knight?
An. What is purgay? Do, or not do? I would I had beftowed that time in the tongues, that I haue in fencing dancing, and bearre-bayting : O had I but followed the Arts.
To. Then hadft thou an excellent head of haire.
An. Why, would that haue mended my haire?
To. Paft queftion, for thou feest it will not coole my An.But it becoms we wel enough,doe not? (nature to. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a diftaffe: & I hope to fee a hufwife take thee between her legs, & flip it off. Exit. An.Faith Ie home to morrow sir Toby, your niece will neuer be feme, or if sh' be it's four to one, the'I none of me : the Comt himfelfe here hard by, vooes her.
To. She'e none o'th Count, he'll not match aboue his degree, neither in estate,yeares, nor wit : I haue heard her sweare t. Tutt there's life in't man.

And.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

And. Ile say a moneth longer. I am a fellow o’th strangest minde I’th world: I delight in Maskes and Revels sometimes altogether.

To. Art thou good at these kicke-chawjes Knight? And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters, & yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight? And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

To. And I can cut the Mutton too’t.

And. And I thinkke I haue the backe-tricke, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

To. Wherefore are these things hid? Wherefore haue these gifts a Curtaine before ‘em? Are they like to take duf, like miftris Male picture? Why doth thou not goe to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Caranto? My verie walke should be a ligge: I would not so much as make water but in a Sinke—a-pace: What doeft thou meane? Is it a world to hide vertues in? I did thinkke by the excellent conftitution of thy legge, it was form’d under the farr of a Galliard.

And. I’th strong, and it does indifferent well in a dam’d colour’d flocke. Shall we fit about some Reuels?

To. What shall we do else: were we not borne vnder Taurus?

And. Taurus? That fides and heart.

To. No fir, it is legs and thighs: let me fee thee ca-per. Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in mans attire.

Val. If the Duke continue thefe favours towards you Cesario, you are like to be much aduanc’d, he hath known you but three dayes, and already you are no stranger.

Vi. You either feare his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the conftancie of his loue. Is he inconstant fir, in his favours. Val. No beleev me. Enter Duke, Carson, and Attendants.

Vi. I thanke you: heere comes the Count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario hoa?

Vi. On your attendance my Lord heere.

Du. Stand you a-while aloofe. Cesario, Thou knowft no leffe, but all: I haue unclasp’d To thee the booke eu’n of my secret soule. Therefore good youth, addresse thy gate vnto her, Be not dem’d for acceffe, stand at her doores, And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow Till thou haue audience.

Vi. Sure my Noble Lord,

If he be fo abandon’d to her forrow As it is, fpoke, the newer will adimt me.

Du. Be clamorous, and leape all coull bounds, Rather then make unprofited returne,

Vi. Say I do speake with her (my Lord) what then?

Du. O then, vnfold the paflion of my loue, Surprize her with discourse of my deere faith; It shall become thee well to ac my woes: She will attend it better in thy youth,

Then in a Nunto’s of more graue apect.

Vi. I thinkne not fo, my Lord.

Du. Deere Lad, beleev me it;

For they shall yet belye thy happy yeres,
That fay thou art a man: Diana lip
Is not more smooth, and roublous: thy small pipe
Is as the maidens organ; thrill, and found,
And all is feemblatie a woman’s part.
I know thy conftellation is right apt
For this affayre: some foeure or flue attend him,
All if you will: for I my felfe am beft
When leaft in compaine: proper well in this,
And thou shalt live as freely as thy Lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

Vi. Ile do my beft
To voe your Lady: yet a barrefull strife
Who ere I woe, my felfe would be his wife. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Maria, and Cleone.

Ma. Nay, either tell me where thou haft bin, or I will not open my lippee as wide as a brifle may enter, in way of thy excluf: my Lady will hang thee for thy abfence.

Clo. Let her hang me: hee that is well hang’d in this world, needs to feare no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He fhall fee none to feare.

Ma. A good lenten answer: I can tell thee where y’faying was borne, of I feare no colours.

Clo. Where good mistress Mary?

Ma. In the warra, & that may you be bolde to fay in your foolerie.

Clo. Well, God glue them wifdomfe that haue it: & thofe that are foolees, let them vfe their talents.

Ma. Yet you will be hang’d for being fo long abfent, or to be turn’d away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging, preuents a bad marriage: and for turning away, let fummer beare it out.

Ma. You are refolute then?

Clo. Not fo neyther, but I am refolu’d on two points

Ma. That if one breake, the other will hold: or if both breake, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Aft in good faith, very apt: well go thy way, if fir Toby would leaue drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eues fillfh, as any in Illyria.

Ma. Peace you rogue, no more o’ that: here comes my Lady: make your excufe wifely, you were beft.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Clo. Wit, and be thy will, put me into good fooleing: thofe wits that thinke they haue thee, doe very oft prove foolees: and I that am sure I lacke thee, may paffe for a wife man. For what fifies Qui napalus, Better a witty foole, then a foolifh wit. God bleffe thee Lady.

Ol. Take the foole away.

Clo. Do you not hear fellowes, take away the Ladie.

Ol. Go too, vpon a dry foole: Ie no more of your fides you grow difhonneft.

Clo. Two faults Madona, that drinkke & good counsell wil amend: for giue the drye foole drink, then is the foole not dry: bid the dihoneft man mend himfelf, if he mend, he is no longer dihoneft; if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that’s mended, is but patch’d: vertu that tranqfigues, is but patch with finne, and fin that a-mends, is but patch with vertue. If that this fimple Sillogifme will ferve, fo: if it will not, whaat remedy?

Y 3 A s
Twelfth Night, or, What you will.

As there is no true Cuckold but calamiy, so beauties a flower; The Lady bad take away the foole, therefore I say againe, take her away.

To. Sir, I bad them take away you.

O. Misprision in the highest degree. Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much to say, as I were not mortley in my braine: good Madona, give mee leave to prove you a foole.

O. Can you do it?

C. Dexteriouly, good Madona.

O. Make your profe.

C. I must catechise you for it Madona, Good my Moufe of verufe anfwer mee.

O. Well sir, for want of other idleneffe, Ile bide your profe.

C. Good Madona, why mornrft thou?

O. Good foole, for my brothers death.

C. I thinke his foole is in hell, Madona.

O. I know his foole is in heauen, foole.

C. The more foole (Madona) to mourn for your Brothers foole, being in heauen. Take away the Foole, Gentlemen.

O. What thinke you of this foole Maluolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity that decays the wife, doth euer make the better foole.

Clew. God fend you fir, a speecled Infirmity, for the better increasing your folly: Sir Toby will be fwear that I am no Fox, but he will not paffe his word for two pence that you are no Foole.

O. How fay you to that Maluoli?

Mal. I maruell your Ladyship takes delight in such a barren raffall: I faw him put down the other day, with an ordinary foole, that has no more braine then a flone. Looke you now, he's out of his gard already; vnes you laugh and minifer occafion to him, he is gag'd. I protest I take thefe Wifemen, that crow fo at thefe fet kinde of foole, no better then the foole Zanies.

O. You are fick of felfe-loue Maluoli, and tafe with a difterted' appetite. To be generous, guiteffe, and of free disposition, is to take those things for Bird-bolts, that you deeme Cannon bullets: There is no flander in an allow foole, though he do nothing but rayle; nor no rayling, in a knowne difcrete man, though hee do nothing but reproue.

C. Now Mercury induc thee with leafling, for thou speake't well of foole.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much defires to speake with you.

O. From the Count Orfins, is it?

M. I know not (Madam) 'tis a faire young man, and well attented.

O. Who of my people hold him in delay?

M. Sir Toby Madam, your kinfman.

O. Fetch him off I pray you, he speakes nothing but madman: Fie on him. Go you Maluoli; If it be a fuit from the Count, I am ficke, or not at home. What you will, to difmis it. Exit Maluol.

Now you fee fir, how your fooling growes old, & people dilike it.

C. Thou haft spoke for vs (Madona) as if thy eldest fonne should be a foole: whose foill, loue cramme with braines, for heere he comes. Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a moft weake Pin-mater.

O. By mine honor halfe drunke. What is he at the gate Cofin?

To. A Gentleman.

O. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman here. A plague o'these pikel herring: How now Sot.

G. Good Sir Toby.

O. Cofin, Cofin, how have you come so early by this Lethargie?

To. Letcherie, I defie Letchery: there's one at the gate.

O. I marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the diuell and he will, I care not: give me faith say I. Well, it's all one. Exit.

O. What's a drunken man like, foole?

C. Like a drown'd man, a foole, and a madde man: One draught aboue heate, makes him a foole, the fecond maddes him, and a third drownes him.

O. Go thou and feeke the Crownerr, and let him fitte o'my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drinke: hee's drown'd: go looke after him.

C. He is but mad yet Madona, and the foole shall looke to the madman.

Enter Maluolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow sweares hee will speake with you. I told him you were ficke, he takes on him to vnderstand so much, and therefore comes to speake with you. I told him you were severe, he seems to have a fore knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speake with you. What is to be faid to him Lady, hee's forfitted again any deniall.

O. Tell him, he shall not speake with me.

Mal. Ha's beene told fo: and hee fayes hee'll fland at your door like a Sherifles poit, and be the supporter to a bench, but hee'll speake with you.

O. What kinde o'man is he?

Mal. Why of mankind.

O. What manner of man?

Mal. Of verie ill manner: hee'll speake with you, will you, or no.

O. Of what perfonage, and yeeres is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor yong enough for a boy: as a squall is before tis a pecfod, or a Cooling when tis almost an Apple: Tis with him in flanding wafer, betwene boy and man. He is verie well fauour'd, and he speakes verie frowndilly: One would think his mothers milke were Scarie out of him.

O. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewan.

Mal. Gentlewan, my Lady calle.

Exit.

Enter Maria.

O. Giue me my vale: come through it ore my face, We'll once more heare Orfins Embaffie.

Enter Violanta.

Vio. The honorable Ladie of the house, which is the?

O. Speake to me, I shall answere for her: you will.

Vio. Most radiant, exquitifie, and unmatchable beauti. I pray you tell me if this bee the Lady of the house, for i neuer faw her. I would bee loath to caft away my speche: for besides that it is excellently well pend, I have taken great paines to con it. Good Beauties, let mee faulline no scorne; I am very compitible, euen to the leaft finifter vlage.

O. Whence came you sir?

Vio. I can favell more then I have fluorid, & that queftion's out of my part. Good gentle one, giue mee modest affurance, if you be the Ladie of the house, that may proceede in my speech. 01. Are you a Comedian? Vio. No, my profound heart: and yet (by the very phangs of malice, I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the Ladie of the house? 01. If I do not vforpe my selfe, I am. Vio. Most certaine, if you are she, you do vforpe your selfe: for what is yours to behowe, is, not yours to refuse. But this is from my Commission: I will on with my speech in your praife, and then shew you the heart of my mesage.

258
Twelfth Night, or, What you will. 259

01. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praife. Vio. Alas, I tooke great pains to studie it, and 'tis Poetical.

01. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were favoy at my gates, & allow your approach rather to wonder at you, than to heare you. If you be not mad, be gone: if you have reas' on, be breefe: 'tis not that time of Moone with me, to make one in fo skipping a dialogue.

Vio. Will you hoynt feyle fir, here lies your way. Vio. No good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, sweete Ladie; tell me your minde, I am a mesienger.

01. Sure you have some hiddeous matter to deliuer, when the curtsefe of it is so fearefull. Speake your office. Vio. It alone concerns your care: I bring no outerure of warre, no taxation of hommage; I hold the Oylife in my hand: my words are as full of peace, as matter. 01. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you? Vio. The rudeness that hath appear'd in mee, haue I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maiden-head: to your ears, Di- unity; to any others, prophanation. 01. Glie vs the place alone, We will heare this diunite. Now fir, what is your text? Vio. Most sweet Ladie. 01. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be fide of it. Where lies your Text? Vio. In Orfanes bosome.

01. In his bosome? In what chapter of his bosome? Vio. To answer by the method, in the firft of his hart. 01. O, I haue read it: it is hereffe. Haue you no more to fay? Vio. Good Madam, let me fee your face.

01. Haue you any Commifion from your Lord, to negotiate with my face: you are now out of your Text: but we will draw the Curtaine, and fhow you the picture. Looke you fir, fuch a one I was this prefent: Ift not well done? 01. Excellently done, if God did all.

01. 'Tis in graine fir, 'twill endure winde and wea- ther. Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white, Natures owne sweet, and cunning hand laid on: Lady, you are the cruell'ft thee alioe, If you will leade thefe graces to the grave, And leave the world no copie.

01. Or fir, I will not be fo hard-hearted: I will give out divers scedules of my beautie. It shalbe Inventoried and every particle and vtenfle label'd to my will: As, Item two lippes indiffernt redde, Item two grey eyes, with liis to them, Item, one necke, one chin, & fo forth. Were you fent hither to praife me? 01. I fee you what you are, you are too proud: But if you were the diuell, you are faire:

My Lord, and matter lowe you: O fuch loue Could be but recompence'd, though you were crown'd The non-par'eel of beautie. 01. How does he loue me? Vio. With adorations, fertill teares, With groanes that thunder loue, with fighes of fire. 01. Your Lord does know my mind, I cannot loue him Yet I fuppofe him vertuous, know him noble, Of great eflate, of frech and fainfleffe youth; In voyces well divulgd, free, learn'd and valiant, And in dimenfion, and the shape of nature, A graciouf perfon: But yet I cannot loue him: He might haue tooke his anfwer long ago.

Vio. If I did loue you in my masters flame, With fuch a fuffring, fuch a deadly life: In your deniell, I would finde no fence, I would not vnderfit and it. 01. Why, what would you? Vio. Make me a willow Cabin at your gate, And call upon my foule within the house, Write loyall Cantons of contemned loue, And fing them lowd even in the dead of night: Hallow your name to the reuererabe hilles, And make the babling Gofip of the aire, Cry out Oliue: O you should not reft Betweene the elements of ayre, and earth, But you should pleade me.

01. Get you to your Lord: I cannot loue him: let him fende no more, Vnfeife(perchance) you come to me againe, To tell me how he takes it: Fare you well: I thank you for your paines: spend this for meee. Vio. I am no feeke poft, Lady; keepe your purfe, My Mafter, not my felfe, lackes recompence. Loue make his heart of flint, that you fhal loue, And let your fervour like my masters be, Plac'd in contempit: Farwell fayre crueltie. 01. What is your Parentage? Aboue my fortunes, yet my frate is well; I am a Gentleman. Ile be frowne thou art, Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and fpirit. Do you thee flue-fold blazon: not too falt: loft, loft, Vnfeife the Mafter were the man. How now? Even fo quickly may one catch the plague? Me thinkes I feeke this youth's perfection With an infinuible, and fubtle heath. To creepe in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.

What hoa, Malvolio.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Heere Madam, at your fervice.

01. Run after that fame peevish Mefienger The Counts man: he left this Ringe behind him Would I, or not: tell him, Ile none of it. Defire him not to flatter with his Lord, Nor hold him vp with hopes, I am not for him: If that the youth will come this way to morrow, Ile give him reafons fort: he thee Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will.

01. I do know not what, and feare to finde Mine eye too great a flatterer for my minde: Fate
Twelfth Night, or, What you will.

Enter Antonio & Sebastian.

Ant. Will you flay no longer: nor will you that I go with you.

Seb. By your patience, no: my fharres shine darkly over me: the malignanie of my fate, might perhaps disfemper yours: therefore I shall craue of you your leave, that I may bear my euils alone. It were a bad recompaence for your loue, to lay any of them on you.

Ann. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No ftoth fir: my determinate voyage is meerre extrauagancie. But I perceive in you fo excellent a touch of modestie, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keepe in: therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to exprefs my felfe: you must know mee then Antonio, my name is Sebastian (which I call'd Rodrigo) my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom you know you have heard of. He left behind him, my felfe, and a fatter, both borne in an houre: if the Heavens had beene pleas'd, would we had fo ended. But you fir, after'd that, for some houre before you tooke me from the breach of the fea, was my fitter drown'd.

Ant. Alas the day.

Seb. A Lady fir, though it was faid mee much resembled me, was yet of many accouted beautifull: but though I could not with fuch eftimable wonder over-farre beleue that, yet thus farre I will boldly publifie her, thee bore a minde that enuy could not but call faire: Shee is drown'd already fir with falt water, though I feme to drown her remembrance againe with more.

Ant. Pardon me fir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murther me for my loue, let me be your fennent.

Seb. If you will not vndo what you have done, that is kill him, whom you haue recover'd, define it not. Fare ye well at once, my bolome is full of kindneffe, and I am yet fo neere the manners of my mother, that vpon the leaft occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orfino's Court, farewells.

Exit.

Ant. The gentlenesse of all the gods goe with thee: I have many enemies in Orfino's Court, Effe would I very shortly fee thee there: But come what may, I do adore thee fo, That danger fhall feme fport, and I will go.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola and Malvolio, at feuall doors.

Mal. Were not you eu'n now, with the Counteffe Oliuia?

Vio. Even now fir, on a moderate pace, I haue since ar-rived b't hither.

Mal. She returns this Ring to you (fir) you might have faue me my paines, to haue taken it away your felfe. She adds moreover, that you should put your Lord into a deperate affurance, the will none of him. And one thing more, that you be neuer fo hardie to come againe in his affaires, vndelee it bee to report your Lords taking of this: receiue it fo.

Vio. She tooke the Ring of me, Ile none of it.

Mal. Come fir, you peufly threw it to her: and her will is, it shou'd be fo return'd: If it bee worth floo- ping for, there it lies, in your eye: if not, be ftis his that findes it.

Exit.

Vio. I left no Ring with her: what meanes this Lady? Fortune forbid my out-side haue not charm'd her: She made good view of me, indeed fo much, That me thought her eyes had loft her tongue, For she did speake in farts diuiftefly. She loues me fure, the cunning of her paflion Inuites me in this curflih meffenger: None of my Lords Ring? Why he fent her none; I am the man, if it be fo, as tis.

Poore Lady, the were better loue a dreamer: Disguife, I fee thou art a wickedneffe, Wherein the pregnant enemie doe much. How easie is it, for the proper falfe In womens waxen hearts to fet their formes: Alas, O frailtie is the caufe, not wee, For fuch as we are made, if fuch we bee: How will this fadge? My mother loues her deereely,

And I (poore monfter) fond afmuch on him: And the (miftaken) femees to date on me:

What will become of this? As I am man, My fiate is defperate for my maiters loue; As I am woman (now alas the day) What thrifteffe fighes shall poore Oliuia breath? O time, thou muft vntangle this, not I, It is too hard a knot for me t'vnty.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

To. Approach Sir Andrew: not to bee a bedde after midnight, is to bee vp betimes, and Delicudo jurgere, thou know'lt.

And. Nay by my troth I know not: but I know, to be vp late, is to be vp late.

To. A fals conclusion. I hate it as an vnfull'd Canne. To be vp after midnight, and to goe to bed then is early: so that to goe to bed after midnight, is to goe to bed betimes. Does not our liues confist of the four Elements?

And. Faith fo they fay, but I think it rather confists of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a scoller; let vs therefore eate and drinke, Marian I fay, a floope of wine.

Enter Closure.

And. Heere comes the foole yfaith.

Clav. How now my harts? Did you never fee the Picture of we three?

To. Welcome affe, now let's haue a catch.

And. By my troth the foole has an excellent breat. I had rather then forty hillings I had fuch a legge, and fo sweet a breath to finge, as the foole has. Infooth thou waft in very gracious fooling late night, when thou spok'lt of Pigregomitus, of the Caplans paffing the Equinoctial of Lecucbus 'twas very good yfaith: I lent thee fixe pence for for thy Lemon, hadst it?

Clo. I did impetico thy gratitity: for Malvolio nose is no Whip-frocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Mermidon's are no bottle-ale houses.

An. Excellent: Why this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

To. Come on, there is fine pence for you. Let’s have a song.

An. There’s a teftroll of me too: if one knight give a Clo. Would you have a lous-song, or a song of good life?

To. A lous song, a lous song.

An. I, I. I care not for good life.

Clo. O Myris mine where are you reming?
O fryy and bear, your true loues coming.
That can fing both high and low.
Trip no further preee fanning:
Journeys end in feuers meeting.
Every wifhe mans sume doth know.

An. Excellent good, ifaith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love, is not beerasiter,
Prefent mirbth, hath prefent laughter:
What’s to come, is full unsure.
In delay there lies no peficet,
Then come hiffe me feweet and fweteet:
Throths a fflife will not endure.

An. A mellifulous voyage, as I am true knight.

To. A contagious breath.

An. Very sweet, and contagious ifaith.

To. To heare by the nofe, it is dulce in contagion.
But shall we make the Welkin dance indeed? Shali wee rowze the night-Owle in a Catch, that will drawe three foules out of one Weaver? Shali we do that?

And. And you love me, let’s do’t. I am dogge at a Catch.

Clo. Bylady fir, and some dogs will catch well.

An. Moft certaine: Let our Catch be, Thow Knowe.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knowe knight. I shall be constrain’d in’t, to call thee Knowe, Knight.

An. ’Tis not the firft time I have constrained one to call me Knowe. Begin foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. I shall neuer begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good ifaith: Come begin.

Catch song.

Mar. What a catterwallow doe you keere heere? If my Ladie have not call’d wp her Stewart Malvolio, and bid him turne you out of doores, neuer truft me.

To. My Lady’s a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio a Peg-a-rumfie, and Three merry men be wee. Am not I confanguinious? Am I not of her blood: silly vally.
Ladie, There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Befrew me, the knights in admirable frolling.

An. I, he do’s well enough if he be difpo’d, and do it too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

To. Of the twelfe day of December.

Mar. For the loute o’God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My matters are you mad? Or what are you?
Have you no wit, manners, nor honeftie, but to gabbage like Tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an Ale-house of my Ladie houfe, that ye fqueak out your Contivers Catches without any mitigation or remore of voice?
Is there no refeect of place, perfons, nor time in you?

To. We did keeppe time fir in our Catches. Snecke vp.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that though the harbors you as her kind-man, she’s nothing ally’d to your diforders. If you can separate your felfe and your middemenors, you are welcome to the houte: if not, and it would pleafe you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

To. Farewell deere heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do thow his dayes are almost done.

Mal. It’s evan to?

To. But I will never dye.

Clo. Sir Toby there you lye.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

To. Shall I bid him go.

Clo. What and if you do?

To. Shall I bid him go, and Ipare not?

Clo. O, no, no, no, you dare not.

To. Out of mine fir, ye lye: Art any more then a Stew-dard? Doft thou thinke because thou art vertuous, there shall be no more Cakes and Ale?

Clo. Yes by S.Anne, and Ginger shall bee hotte y’uth mouth too.

To. Thart i’tch right. Goe fir, rub your Chaine with crums. A ftope of Wine Maria.

Mal. Myris Mary, if you priz’d my Ladies favour at any thing more then contempt, you would not give means for this vnicull rule: the shall know of it by this hand.

Exit

Mar. Go shake your cares.

An. ’Twere as good a decede as to drink when a mans a hungrie, to challenge him the field, and then to breake promife with him, and make a foole of him.

To. Don’t knight, Ile write thee a Challenge: or Ile deluier thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby be patient for to night: Since the youth of the Counts was to day with my Lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monfieur Malvolio,let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not thinke I have wifte enough to lye ftraight in my bed: I know I can do it.

To. Poffeffe vs, poffeffe vs, tell vs something of him.

Mar. Marrie fir, sometimes he is a kinde of Puritane.

An. O, if I thought that, Ile beate him like a dogge.

To. What for being a Puritan, thy exquifite reason, deere knight.

An. I have no exquifite reason for’t, but I have reaon good enough.

Mar. The diu’ll a Puritane that hee is, or any thing confantly but a time-pleafer, an affeclion’d Affe, that cans State without booke, and vters it by great swarths.
The beft perfuaded of himfelfe: fo cram’d (as he thinke) with excellences, that it is his grounds of faith, that all that looke on him, love him: and on that vice in him, will my reuenge finde notable caufe to worke.

To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obfcur Epiftles of loue, wherein by the colour of his beard, the shape of his legge, the manner of his gate, the expreffure of his eye, foheread, and complection, he shall finde himfelfe molt feelingly perforated. I can write very like my Ladie your Neece, on a forgotten matter wee can hardly make diflimination of our hands.

To. Excellent, I smell a deuice.

An. I haunt in my nofe too.

To. He shall thinke by the Letters that thou wilt drop
that that they come from my Neece, and that she's in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horfe of that colour.

An. And your horfe now would make him an Affe.

Mar. Affe, I doubt not.

An. O twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royall I warrant you: I know my Phy-ficke will worke with him, I will plant you two, and let the Poole make a third, where he shall finde the Letter: infure his contrufion of it: For this night to bed, and dreame on the even: Farewell.

Exit.

To. Good night Pente lhses.

An. Before me she's a good wench.

To. She's a beagle true bred, and one that adores me: what o'that?

An. I was ad'oe once too.

To. Let to bed knight: Thou hadst neede fend for more money.

An. If I cannot recover your Neece, I am a foule way out.

To. Send for money knight, if thou haft her not i'th end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, neuer truft me, take it how you will.

To. Come, come, Ile go burne some Sacke, tis too late to go to bed now: Come knight,come knight. Exeunt.

---

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Du. Give me some Mufick:Now good morrow frends. Now good Cefario, but that peec of song, That old and Anticke fong we heard laft night; Me thought it did releue my passion much, More then light ayres, and recollected terms Of these most briskes and giddy-paced times.

Come, but on e verfe.

Cur. He is not here (to pleafe your Lordshippe) that should finge it?

Du. Who was it?

Cur. Fefte the letter my Lord, a fool that the Ladie Oliuia, Father tooke much delight in. He is about thehoufe.

Du. Seeke him out, and play the tune the while. Mufickes playes.

Come hither Boy, if enuer thou shalt loure In the sweet pangs of it, remember me:
For such as I am, all true Louers are, Unfaiid and skritith in all motions elf, Saeue in the confant image of the creature That is belou'd. How doft thou like this tune?

Vio. It gies a veire echco to the feste

Where loure is thron'd.

Du. Thou doit fpeake matterly, My life vpon't, yong though thou art, thin eye Hath faiid vpon fome fauer that it loues: Harf it not boy?

Vio. A little, by your fauer.

Du. What kinde of woman if?

Vio. Of your complection.

Du. She is not worth thee then. What yeares ifaith?

Vio. About your yeares my Lord.

Du. Too old by heauen: Let fill the woman take

An elder then her felife, fo weares fit to him; So sways the leuell in her husbands heart:
For boy, however we do praffe our felues, Our fancies are more giddie and vnfrme,
More longing, wauering, fooner loft and worne,
Then women are.

Vio. I thinke it well my Lord.

Du. Then let thy Loue be yonger then thy felfe, Or thy affeftion cannot hold the bent:
For women are as Rofes, whose faire flowre
Being once dippaid, doth fall that are fmall fowre.

Vio. And fo they are: alas, that they are fo:
To die, even when they to perfeflion grow.

Enter Curio & Cloume.

Du. O fellow come, the fong we had laft night: Marke it Cefario, it is old and plaine;
The Spinners and the Knitters in the Sun, And the free maides that weaue their thred with bones, Do vfe to chaunt it: it is filly fowth, And dailies with the innocence of loue, Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready Sir?

Du. Duke, I prethee finge. Mufick.

The Song.

Come away, come away death,
And in sad cypriffe let me be laide.
Eye aways, fee away breath,
I am flaine by a faire cruel maid:
My flowre of vubite, fluck all with Ewo, O prepare it.
My part of death no one so true did share it.

Du. There's for thy paines.

Clo. No paines Sir, I take pleafe in finging fir.

Du. Ile pay thy pleafeure then.

Clo. Truely Sir, and pleafeure will be paide one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leave thee.

Clo. Now the melancholly God proteft thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffata, for thy minde is a very Opall. I would have men of fuch confantie put to Sea, that their busines might be every thing, and their intent euerie where, for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit.

Du. Let all the reft glue place: Once more Cefario,

Get thee to yond fame loueraigne crueltie :
Tell her my love, more noble then the world
Prizes not quantite of durtie lands,
The parts that fortune hath belou'd vpon her:
Tell her I hold as giddily as Fortune:
But 'tis that miracle, and Queene of Iems
That nature pranke her in, atracts my Soule.

Vio. But if she cannot loue you fir.

Du. It cannot be fo anfwer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you mutt.

Say that some Lady, as perhappes there is,
Hath for your loue as great a pang of heart
As you have for Oliuia; you cannot loue her:
You tel he for: Muft the not then be anfwer'd?

Du. There is no womens sides

262
Can hide the beating of so strong a passion,
As loue doth give my heart : no womans heart
So bigge, to hold so much, they lacke retention.
Alas, their loue may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the Liuer, but the Pallat;
That suffer surfer, clyement, and reuolt,
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digge as much, make no compare
Betweene that loue a woman can beare me,
And that I owe Olivia.
Us. I but I know.
Du. What doft thou knowe?
Us. Too well what loue women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My Father had a daughter lou'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship?
Du. And what's her history?
Us. A blanke my Lord : she never told her loue,
But let concealment like a worme i'th buddle
Feede on her damaske cheeke : she pin'd in thought,
And with a greene and yellow melancholly,
She fate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at griefe. Was not this loue indeede?
We men may say more, sweare more, but indeed
Our shews are more then will : for all we prove
Much in our vowe, but little in our loue.
Du. But did ye thy fitter of her loue my Boy?
Us. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And all the brothers too : and yet I know not.
Sir, shal I to this Lady?
Du. I that's the Theame,
To her in hafe : glue her this Jewell : say,
My loue can giue no place, bide no denay.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy wayes Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay Ile come : if I looke a scruple of this sport, let me be boy'd to death with Melancholly.

To. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardy
Rafically sheepe-biter, come by some notable shame?

Fa. I would exult man : you know he brought me out ofavour with your Lady, about a Bearre-baiting here.

To. To anger him we'll have the Bearre againe, and we will foole him blace and blew, shall we not sir An-

An. And we do not, it is pittie of our liues.

Enter Maria.

To. Heere comes the little vaine : How now my Mettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box tree: Malvolio's coming downe this walke, he has beene yonder i'the Sunne praefiding behauing to his own shadow this halfe houre : obserue him for the loue of Mockerie : for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Ideot of him.Clofe in the name of leaffing, ley thou there : for heere comes the Trott, that must be caught with tickling. Exit

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but Fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me, and I have heard her self come thus neere, that should thee fancie, it should bee one of my compellion. Besides the vses me with a more exalted respect, then any one else that follows her. What should I thinkke on't?

To. Heere's an ouer-weening rogue.

Fa. Oh peace : Contemplation makes a rare Turkey
Cooke of him, how he is vnder his aduanc'd plumes.

And. Slight I could so beate the Rogue.

To. Peace I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio.

Ta. Ah Rogue.

An. Pittoll him, pittoll him.

To. Peace, peace.

Mal. There is example for't: The Lady of the Stracely, married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

An. Fie on him Iezabel.

Fa. O peace, now he's deeply in : looke how imagination blows him.

Mal. Hauling beene three moneths married to her, fitting in my state.

To. O for a blone-bow to hit him in the eye.

Mal. Calling my Officers about me, in my branch'd Violet gowne : having come from a day bedde, where I have left Olivia sleeping.

To. Fire and Brimstone.

Fa. O peace, peace.

Mal. And then to have the humor of late : and after a demure trauaille of regard : telling them I knowe my place, as I would they should doe theirs : to aske for my kinfman Toby.

To. Boltes and thickles.

Fa. O peace, peace, peace, now, now.

Mal. Seauen of my people with an obedient start, make out for him : I frowne the while, and perchance wind vp my watch, or play with my some rich Jewell :
Toby approaches; curtesy there to me.

To. Shall this fellow live?

Fa. Though our silence be drawne from vs with cars, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus : quenching my familiar smyle with an auferie regard of controll,

To. And do'st not Toby take you a blow o'the lippes,
then?

Mal. Saying, Cofine Toby, my Fortunes hauing call me on your Neece, give me this prerogative of speech.

To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkenesse.

To. Out feabs.

Fab. Nay patience, or we breake the nanes of our plot?

Mal. Befides you wafte the treasure of your time, with a foolish knight.

And. That's mee I warrant you.

Mal. One sir Andrew.

And. I knew 'twas I, for many do call mee foole.

Mal. What employment haue we here?

Fa. Now is the Woodcocke neere the gin.

To. Oh peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.

Mal. By my life this is my Ladies hand: thef be bee her very C's, her U's, and her T's, and thus makes shee het great P's. It is in contempt of queftion her hand.

An. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: why that ?

Mal. To the unknowne beka'd, this, and my good Wifes:
Her very Pirraifes: By your licence wax. Salt, and the impreffures her Lucereus, with which she v'es to feale: tis my Lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This winnes him, Liuer and all.

Mal.
Twelue Night, or, What you will.

Mal. Ioe knownes I love, but vebe, Lipa do not moue, no man myf is knowne. No man myf knowne. What followes?

The numbers alter d: No man myf knowne, If this be should be thee Mowtole, It. To Marie hang thee brocke.

Mal. I may command were I adore, but silente like a Lu-cresse knif: With bloodie froke my heart detb gote, M. O. A. I. detb fwaye my life.

Fa. A fuitian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, say I.

Mal. M. O. A. I. dont fwaye my life. Nay but first let me fee, let me fee, let me fee.

Fab. What difh a poyfon has the drefh him? To. And with what the ftallion checkes at it?

Mal. I may command, were I adore: Why thec may command me: I ferue her, thec is my Ladie. Why this is euident to any fomall capacite. There is no obftruction in this, and the end: What fhould that Alphabetical po-fition pordure, if I could make that refeble something in mee? Softly, M. O. A. I.

To. O I, make vp that, he is now at a cold fent.

Fab. Sower will cry vpnot for all this, though it bee as ranke as a Fox.

Mal. M. Mowtole, W. why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I fay he would work it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no conofnacy in the fequall that suffers vnder probation: A should follow, but O. does.

Fa. And O shall end, I hope.

To. I, or Ie cudgell him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then J. comes behind.

Fa. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might fee more deftracion at your heelees, then fortunes before you.

Mal. M. O. A. I. This fimulation is not as the former: and yet to cruft this a little, it would bow to mee, for e-every one of thefe Letters are in my name. Soft, here fol-lowes profe: If this fall into thy hand, recte. In my fars I am aboe thee, but be not afraid of greatneffe: Some are become great, fome attecheues greatne, and fome have greatneffe thrut ypnon em. Th fates open they handes, let thy blood and fpirit embrace them, and to in-vre thy felle to what thou art like to be: caft thy humble flough, and appear fhere. Be oppofite with a kinman, furely with fervantes: Let thy tongue tang arguments of fata; put thy felle into the tricke of fangularitee. Shee thus aduies thee, that fighes for thee. Remember who commendeth thy yellow focking, and wish't to fee thee euer crofe Garter'd: I fay remember, goe too, thou art made if thou defir't to be fo: If not, let me fee thee a fe-ward ftrill, the fellow of fervantes, and not woorthie to touch Fortunes fingers Farewell, Shee that would alter fervices with thee, that fortunate vnhappy daylight and champion difficoures no more: This is open, I will bee proud, I will reade pollicte Authours, I will baffe Sir Toby, I will waft off groffe acquaintance, I will be point deuife, the very man. I do not now foole my felle, to let imagination lade mee; for every reafon excites to this, that my Lady loves me. She did commend my yellow focking, then did prife my legge being crofe-garter'd, and in this she manifesteth her felle to my love, & with a kind of inuention driues mee to thefe habits of her liking. I thanke my flares, I am happy: I will bee strange, flour, in yellow focking, and crofe Garter'd, even with the fwitneffe of putting on. Ioue, and my flares be praifed. Heree is yet a poftcript. Thou canft not choofe but know who I am. If thou entertaines my leue, let it appeare in thy fmitting, thy fmites become thee well. Therefore in my prefence still fmites, deers my fweete, I prethee. Ioue I thanke thee, I will fmite, I will doe every thing that thou wilt have mee.

Exit Fab. I will not glue my part of this fport for a penfion of thoufands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this deuice.

Am. So could I too.

To. And ask no other dowry with her, but fuch anoth-er left.

Enter Maria.

Am. Nor I neither.

Fab. Heere comes my noble gull catcher.

To. Wilt thou fet thy foote o'my necke,

Am. Or o'mine either?

To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and becom thy bondfaue?

Am. Ifaith, or I eithor?

Tab. Why, thou haft put him in fuch a dreame, that when the image of it leuues him, he muft run mad.

Ma. Nay but fay true, do's it worke vpon him?

To. Like Aqua vite with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then fee the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my Lady: hee will come to her in yellow focking, and 'tis a colour the abhorres, and crofe garter'd, a fadion fhee detefes: and hee will fmite vpon her, which will now be fo vnuftable to her difpo-fition, being addicted to a melancholly, as thee is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will fee it follow me.

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou moft excellent diuell of wit.

And. Ile make one too.

Exeunt.

Finis Actus secundus

Actus Tertius, Scena prima.

Enter Viola and Clerame.

Via. Saue thee Friend and thy Mufick: doft thou liue by thy Tabor?

Clo. No fir, I liue by the Church.

Via. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No fuch matter fir, I do liue by the Church: For, I do liue at my houfe, and my houfe dooth stand by the Church.

Via. So thou maift fay the Kings liyes by a beggar, if a beggar dwell neer him? or the Church stands by thy Ta-bor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You have faid fir; To fee this age: A fentence is but a cheuerrell gloue to a good witte, how quickly the wrong fide may be turn'd outward.

Via. Nay that's certaine: they that daily nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my fiffer had had no name Sir.

Via. Why man?

Clo. Why fir, her names a word, and to dallee with that word, might make my fiffer wanton: But indeede, words are very Rascals, since bonds difgrac'd them.

Via. Thy reafon man?

Clo.
Twelfth Night, or, What you will.

Cl. Troth sir, I can yeeld you none without worde, and worde are growne to falses, I am loath to proove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and car'st for nothing.

Cl. Not so, sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, I would it would make you insensible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Oliouis's fool? Cl. No indeed, sir, the Lady Oliouis has no folly, thee will keep no fool in, till she be married, and fools are as like husbands, as Pluckers are to Herrings, the Husband the bigger, I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsno's.

Cl. Foolery, sir, does walk about the Orbe like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be marry, but the Fool should be as oft with your Master, as with my Miftris: I think I saw your Kizzie there before.

Vio. Nay, and thou paide vpon me, Ile no more with thee: Hold there's expences for thee.

Cl. Now Iowe in his next commodity of hayre, fend thee a bead.

Vio. By my troth Ile tell thee, I am atmoick for one, though I would not haue it grow on my chinne. Is thy Lady within?

Cl. Would not a pair of these have bred sir?

Vio. Yes being kept together, and put to use, I shall play Lord Pandurne of Phrygia sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troylus.

Vio. I understand you sir, tis well begg'd.

Cl. The matter I hope is not great sir; begging, but a begger: Cressida was a begger. My Lady is within sir. I will confer to them, where you come, who you are, and what you would be out of my welkin, I might say Element, but the word is ouer-worne. exit

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool, and to do that well, craves a kind of wit: He must obserue their mood on whom he lefts, The quality of persons, and the time: And like the Haggard, checke at every Feather That comes before his eye. This is practise, As full of labour as a Wife-mans Art: For folly that he wisely fhews, is fit; But wilemen folly finale, quite taint their wit. Enter Sir Toby and Andrew.

To. Save you Gentleman.

Vio. And you sir.

And. Dieu vouy guard Monfieur.

To. Et vous ouije escoire furniture.

An. I hope fir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the houfe, my Neece is defirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece fir, I mean the lift of my voyage.

To. Taste your legges sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legges do better understand me fir, then I understand what you meane by bidding me taste my leggs.

To. I mean to go fir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are prevented.

Enter Olivia, and Gentlemewan.

Most excellent accomplisht Lady, the heavens raine Ondours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, raine odours, well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice Lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafe his care.

And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsaied: Ile get em all three already.

Ol. Let the Garden doore be shut, and leave mee to my hearing. Give me your hand fir.

Vio. My dutie Madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cefario is your servantes name, faire Prince.elle.

Ol. My servante sir? Twas never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd complemet: you're servant to the Count Orsno youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: your servantes servant, is your servant Madam.

Ol. For him, I thinke not on him: for his thoughts, Would they were blankes, rather then fill'd with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts on his behalfe.

Ol. O by your leave I pray you.

I had you neuer speake againe of him; But would you vndertake another suit.

I had rather heare you, to follicit that,

Then Muficke from the sphearing.

Vio. Deere Lady.

Ol. Glie me leaue, beseech you: I did fend,

After the laft enchantment you did heare,

A King in chace of you: So did I abufe My felie, my feruant, and I fear me you: Vnder your hard construcution mutt I fir,

To force that on you in a shamefull cunning Which you knew none of yours. What might you think?

Have you not yet mine Honor at the stake,

And bailed it with all th'vnamzulued thoughts That tyrannous heart can think?To one of your receiving Enough is shewe, a Cipref, not a bosome,

Hides my heart: fo let me heare you speake.

Vio. I pittie you.

Ol. That's a degree to loue.

Vio. No not a graze: for tis a vulgar proofe That verie oft we pitty enemies.

Ol. Why then me thinke 'tis time to smile agen:

O world, how apt the poore are to be proud?

If one shoulde be a prey, how much the better To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?

Clocke frikes. The clocke vphrades me with the waite of time: Be not afraid good youth, I will not haue you, And yet when wit and youth is come to harrefst, your wife is like to recea a proper man: There lies your way, due Weft.

Vio. Then Westward hoe:

Grace and good disposition attend your Ladyship:

you nothing Madam to my Lord, by me:

Ol. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou thinkst of me?

Vio. That you do thinke you are not what you are.

Ol. If I thinke fo, I thinke the fame of you.

Vio. Then thinke you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would have you be,

Vio. Would it be better Madam, then I am? I wish it might, for now I am your fool.

Ol. O what a deale of orkome, lookses beautiful?

In the contempt and anger of his lip,

A murdrous guilt shews not it fell so more soone,

Then loove that would demean him: Loves night, is noone.

Cefario, by the Relias of the Spring,

By maid-hood, honor, truth, and every thing,

I loue thee fo, that maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide:
Do not extort thy reasons from this clausie,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:
But rather reason thus, with reasonetter;
Love fought, is good: but gien vnfought, is better.
Vio. By innocence Ieware, and by my youth,
I haue one heart, one bosome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor neuer none
Shall miftris be of it, saue I alone.
And so adies good Madam, neuer more,
Will I my Masters tears to you deplore.
Ol. Yet come againe: for thou perhaps mayst moue
That heart which now abhorres, to like his loue.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

And. No faith, Ile not play a lot longer:
To. Thy reason doore venom, glue thy reason.
Fab. You must needs yecele your reason, Sir Andrew:
And. Marry I law your Neece do more favours to
The Counts Serving-man, then ever the beftow'd ypon mee:
I fawe'th Orchard.
To. Did she fee the while, old boy, tell me that.
And. As plaine as I fee you now.
Fab. This was a great argument of loue in her toward you.
And. S'light; will you make an Affe o'me.
Fab. I will prove it legitimate fit, ypon the Oathes of Judgement, and reason.
To. And they have beene grand lurie men, fine before
Neab was a Saylor.
Fab. Shee did dwee favour to the youth in your fight, oney to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liuser:
you should then haue accealed her, and with some excellent itels, fire-newe from the mint, you should haue bang the youth into dumbersome: this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baultk: the double gift of this opportu-nite you let time wafh off, and you are now fayld into
The North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an yfickle on a Dutchmans beard, vnleffe you do re-dee it, by some laudable attempt, either of valour or pollice.
And. And't be any way, it must be with Valour, for pollice I hate: I had as liefe be a Brownift, as a Politician.
To. Why then build me thy fortunes vpone the basfs of valour,Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him hurt him in eleuen places, my Neece shall take note of it, and affure thy selfe, there is no loue-Broker in the world, can more preualle in mans commendation with woman,
than report of valour.
Fab. There is no way but this fit Andrew.
An. Will either of you beare me a challege to him?
To. Go, write it in a martial hand, be curf and briefe:
it is no matter how wittie, fo it bee eloquent, and full of inuention: taunt him with the license of Inke: if thou though him some thrice, it shall not amisse, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy sheete of paper, although the shete be bigge enough for the bedde of Ware in England, set 'em downe, go about it. Let there bee gauile enough in thy inke, though thou write with a Goole-pee, nno matter: about it.
And. Where shal I finde you?
To. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo: Go.
Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a deere Manakin to you Sir Toby.
To. I haue beene deere to him lad, some two thousand strong, or fo.
Fab. We shall have a rare Letter from him; but you're not deliuer't.
To. Neuer trueth me then, and by all meane of firre on the youth to an answer. I thinke Oxen and waine-ropes cannot hale them together,For Andrew, if he were open'd and you finde so much blood in his Liuser, as will clog the foote of a flea, Ile eater the rest of thanatomy.
Fab. And his oppost the youth bears in his vifage no great preface of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

To. Looke where the youngest Wren of mine comes.
Mar. If you defire the spenee, and will laugh your selues into flitches, follow me; yond gull Mallisio is turnew Heathen, a verie Renegatho; for there is no christian that means to be faue by beleueing rightly, can euer beleue such impoffible paffages of grossenaffe. Hee's in yellow fockinges.
To. And croffe garter'd?
Mar. Mofl villanously: like a Pedant that keeps a Schoole i'th Church: I haue dog'd him like his murtho-
re. He does obey every point of the Letter that I dropt, to betray him: He does smile his face into more lynes, then is in the new Mappe, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not seene fuch a thing as tis: I can hardly forbear hurling things at him, I know my Lalie will srike him: if thee doe, hee'll smile, and take't for a great fauour.
To. Come bring vs, bring vs where he is.

Exeunt Omnés.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.
Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire
(More sharpe then filede flele) did spurre me forth,
And not all loue to see you(though so much
As might haue drawne one to a longer voyage)
But ieloufie, what might befall your rauell,
Being skilleff in these parts: which to a stranger,
Vnguided, and vnfriended, often prone
Rough, and vnhopitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of faere
Set forth in your pursuite.
Seb. My kinde Antonio,
I can no other anwer make, but thankes,
And thankes: and euer oft good turns,
Are shuffel'd off with such vncurrant pay :
But were my worth, as is my confience firme,
You should finde better dealing: what's to do?
Shall we go see the relics of this Towne?

Ant. To morrow sir, beft fir here go ye your Lodging?

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night
I pray you let vs satisfi our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That do renowne this City.

Ant. Would you'd pardon me:
I do not without danger walke these streets.
Once in a fea-fight 'gainft the Count his gillies,
I did fome feruice, of fuch note indeede,
That were I tane heere, it would scarce be anfw'r'd.

Seb. Beside you flew great number of his people.

Ant. Th' offence is not of fuch a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrell
Might well haue gien vs bloody argument:
It might haue finsed bene anfw'r'd in repaying
What we tooke from them, which for Traffiques fake
Most of our City did. Onely my felie ftood out,
For which if I be laped in this place
I fhall pay deere.

Seb. Do not then walke too open.

Ant. Doth not fit me: hold fir, here's my purfe,
In the South Suburbs at the Elephant
Is bef to lodge: I will befooke our dyet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Towne, there fhall you haue me.

Seb. Why your purfe?

Ant. Happy your eye fhall light vp on some toy
You haue defire to purchafe: and your flore
I think is not for idle Markets, fir.

Seb. Ile be your purfe-bearer, and leave you
For an hour.

Ant. To th'Elephant.
Seb. I do remember.

Exeunt.

---

Scena Quarta.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Ol. I haue fent after him, he fayes hee'll come:
How fhall I refef him? What befowm of him?
For youth is bought more oft, then begg'd, or borrow'd.
I fpeak too loud: Where's Malvolio, he is fad, and ciuill,
And fuites well for a fervant with my fortunes,
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's comming Madame:
But in very strange manner. He is furie poftef Madam.

Ol. Why what is the matter, does he raue?

Mar. No Madam, he does nothing but smile your Ladyfhip were bef to hafe fome guard about you, if hee come, for fure the man is taint in's wits.

Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as madde as hee,
If fad and metry madness equall bee.

How now Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet Lady, ho, ho.

Ol. Smit'f thou? I fent for thee vpon a fad occasion.

Mal. Sad Lady, I could be fad:
This does make fome obtruction in the blood:
This croffe-gartering, but what of that?

If it pleafe the eye of one, it is with me as the very true
Sonnet is: Pleafce one, and pleafce all.

Mal. Why how doeft thou man?
What is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not blanke in my minde, though yellow in my legges:
It do come to his hands, and Commaunds fhall be executed. I thinke we doe know the sweet Romane hand.

Ol. Wilt thou go to bed Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? I fweet heart, and Ile come to thee.

Ol. God comfort thee: Why doft thou fmile, and Kiffe thy hand fo oft?

Mar. How do you Malvolio?

Malvo. At your requift:
Yes Nightingales anfwere Dawes.

Mar. Why appeare you with this ridiculous bold-neefe before my Lady.

Mal. Be not afraid of greatneffe: 'twas well writ.

Ol. What meant thou by that Malvolio?

Mal. Some are borne great.

Ol. He?

Mal. Some itheceue greatneffe.

Ol. What fayt thou?

Mal. And fome have greatneffe thrust vpon them.

Ol. Heauen reftore thee.

Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings.

Ol. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. And with'd to fee this croffe garder'd.

Ol. Croffe garder'd?

Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou defir'ft to be fo.

Ol. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me fee thee a fervant afl.

Ol. Why this is verie Midfommer madneffe.

---

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madame, the young Gentleman of the Count Orfino's is return'd. I could hardly entreat him backe: he attends your Ladythips pleafure.

Ol. I le come to him.

Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd too. Where's my Cofine Toby, let fome of my people have a speciall care of him, I would not have him mimicarrie for the halfe of my Dawry.

Mal. Oh ho, do you come neere me now: no worfe man then fir Toby to looke to me. This concurs directly with the Letter, she fends him on purpofe, that I may appeare fubborne to him: for the incites me to that in the Letter. Cafy thy humble foule fayes she: be opposite with a Kinfman, furlly with fervants, let thy tongue langer with arguments of flate, put thy felfe into the trickes of singulari: and confequently fets downe the manner how: as a sad face, a reuerend carriage, a fowl tongue, in the habite of some Sir of note, and fo forth.
I haue lymed her, but it is loues doing, and loue make me thankfull. And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd too: Fellow? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres together, that no dramme of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredible or vnifafe circumftance: What can be faide? Nothing that can be, can come betweene me, and the full profeft of my hopes. Well loue, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

---

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.
To. Which way is hee in the name of sanctity. If all the diuels of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himselfe posseth him, yet Ile speake to him.

Fab. Heere he is, heere he is: how if with you sir?

How if with you man?

Mal. Go off, I dircard you: let me enjoy my priuate: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speakes within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does he fo?

To. Go too, go too: peace, peace, wee must deale gently with him: Let me alone. How do you Malvolio?

How if with you? What man, defie the diuell: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you fay?

Mar. La you, and you speake ill of the diuell, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th'wife woman.

Mar. Marry and it shall be done to morrow morning if I lice. My Lady would not looke for him more then Ile say.

Mal. How now misfria?

Mar. Oh Lord.

To. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the way: Doe you not see you mowe him? Let me alone with him.

Fa. No way but gentlelief, gently, gently: the diuell is rough, and will not be roughly y'd.

To. Why how now my bawcock:how doft ye chuck?

Mal. Sir.

To. I biddy,come with me. What man, tis not for gravity to play at cherrie-pit with fathan. Hang him fowl Colliar.

Mar. Get him to fay his prayers, good fir Toby gette him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minx.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not heare of godly-riefa.

Mal. Go hang your felues all : you are yde flallowe things, I am not of your element, you fhall knowe more hereafter.

Exit

To. Ift poftible?

Fu. If this were plaied vpon a fage now, I could con- demne it as an imposible fiction.

To His very genius hath taken the infection of the devie man.

Mar. Nay pursue him now,leaff the devie take aery, and taint.

Fu. Why we fhall make him mad indeede.

Mar. The houfe will be the quieter.

To. Come, we'll him in a darke room & bound. My Neece is already in the beleefe that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleafure, and his penance, til our very paftime tyred out of breath, prompt vs to haue mercy on him: at which time, we wil bring the deuice to the bar and crowne thee for a finder of madmen: but fee, but fee.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fu. More matter for a May morning.

An. Heere's the Challenge, reade it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Ift to fawcy?

And. I, ift I warrant him: do but read.

To. Give me.

Youth,whafsauor thou art, thou art but a fawry fellow.

Fu. Good, and valiant.

To. Wander not, nor admire not in thy minde vaby I doe call thee so, for I will shew thee no reafon for't. (Law)

Fu. A good note,that keeps you from the blow of

To. Thou comf to the Lady Oliviua, and in my fight she vues thee kindly: but thou lyef in thy threat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Pa. Very brieve, and to exceeding good fence-leffe.

To. I will wyll-fay thee going home, vberfe if it be thy chance to kill me.

Pa. Good.

To. Thou kill me like a rogue and a villain.

Fa. Still you keepe o' th windie fide of the Lawgood.

To. Forthevelwel, and God haue mercie vpon one of our foules. He may haue mercie vpon mine, but my hope is better, and fo looke to thy felf. Thy friend as thou vifft him, & thy fouverne enimie, Andrew Ague-cheekee.

To. If this Letter moue him not, his legges cannot: Ile giu't him.

Mar. You may haue verie fit occation fot' : he is now in fome commerce with my Ladie, and will by and by depart.

To. Go fir Andrew: fcout mee for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Baylie: fo foone as euer thou feeff him, draw, and as thou draw'ft, fware horrid: for t' comes to paffe off, that a terrible oath, with a fwagge-ring accent Sharpely twang'd off, gives manhood more approbation, then euer prove it felfe would have earn'd him.

Away.

And. Nay let me alone for swearing.

Exit

To. Now will not I deluer his Letter: for the behau-our of the yong Gentleman, gives him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment betweene his Lord and my Neece, confirmes no leffe. Therefore, this Letter being fo excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the yough: he will finde it comes from a Clodde-pole.

But fir, I will deluer his Challenge by word of mouth ; fet vpon Ague-cheekee a notable report of valor, and drive the Gentleman (as I know his yough will aptly receive it) into a moft hideous opinion of his rage, skill, firue, and impetuodi. This will ffo fright them both, that they will kill one another by the looke, like Cockatrices.

Enter Oliviua and Viola.

Fab.Heere he comes with your Neece, giue them way till he take leauve, and prefently after him.

To. I will meditate the while vpon some horrid meffage for a Challenge.

Oli. I have faid too much vnto a hart of stone, And had mine honour too vncheary on't:

There's something in me that reproues my fault:

But fuch a head-frong potent fault it is,

That it but mockes reproofe.

Vio. With the fame hauour that your passion beares, Goes on my Mafters greefes.

Oli. Heere, weare this Jewell for me, tis my picture:

Refuse it not, it hath no tongue, to vex you:

And I befeech you come againe to morrow.

What shall you aske of me that Ile deny,

That honour (faud) may vpon asking giue.

Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my master.

Oli. Of how with mine honor may I giue him that,

Which I have giuen to you.

Vio. I will acquit you.

Oli. Well,come againe to morrow: far-thee-well,

A Fiend like thee might beare my foule to hell.

Enter Toby and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God fave thee.

Vio.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

Vio. And you fir.
To. That defense thou haft, betake the too't: of what nature the trouble thou haft done him, I know not: but thy intercupper full of delphight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the orchard end: dismount thy tucke, be yare in thy preparation, for thy affaylant is quick, skilfull, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake sir I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me: my remembrance is very free and cleere from any image of offence done to any man.
To. You'll find it otherwise I affure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your gard: for your opposit hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you fir what is he?
To. He is knight dubb'd with vnbatch'd Rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a duell in private brall, foules and bodies hath he duorc'd three, and his incenfement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pans of death and fepulcher: Hob, nob, is his word: gue't or take't.

Vio. I will returne againe into the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I haue heard of some kinde of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirk.

To. Sir, no: his indignation deriues it selfe out of a very comntious injurie, therefore get you on, and glue him his desire. Backe you shall not to the house, vnlesse you vndertake that with me, which with as much fasetie you might answer him: therefore on, or flippe your sword stark naked: for meddle you must't that certain, or forswarre to weare iron about you.

Vio. This is as vncliuell as estrange. I befseech you doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: it is somthing of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.
To. I will doe fo. Signior Fabian, I lay you this Gentleman, till my returne.

Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you sir, do you now know of this matter?
Fab. I know the knight is incenf against you, even to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you what manner of man is he?
Fab. Nothing of that wonderfull promis to enjoy him by his forme, as you are like to finde him in the prooffe of his valour. He is indeede sir, the mott skilfull, bloody, & fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in anie part of Illyria: will you walke towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall bee much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir Prieft, then sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle.

Exeunt.

Enter Toby and Andrew.

To. Why man hee a verie duell, I haue not seen such a frago: I had a passe with him, rapier, fcabberd, and all: and he gives me the fucke in with such a mortall motion that it is inequitable: and on the answere, he pays you as surely, as your feet hits the ground they flie on. They fay, he has bin Fencer to the Sohpy.

And. Pox on't, Ile not meddle with him.
To. I but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can scarfe hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, I thought he had bee valiant, and so cunning in Fence, I'de haue feene him dam'd ere I'de haue challeng'd him. Let him let the matter flipp, and Ile give him my horfe, gray Caplet.

To. Ile make the motion: stand heere, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of foules, marry lie hide your horfe as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian and Viola.

I haue his horfe to take vp the quarrell, I haue perfwaded him the youths a duell.

Fa. He is as horribly conceited of him: and pants, & looks pale, as if a Beare were at his heelles.
To. There's no remedie sir, he will fight with you for your oath sake: marrie hee hath better bethought him of his quarrell, and hee finds that now scarce to bee worth talking of: therefore draw for the supputation of his vowe, he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me: a little thing would make me tell them how much I lacke of a man.

Fab. Glue ground if you see him furious.
To. Come sir Andrew, there's no remedie, the Gentleman will for his honors fake haue one bowt with you: he cannot by the Duello auoid it: but hee has promised me, as he is a Gentleman and a Soldiour, he will not hurt you. Come on, too't.

And. Pray God he keeps his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I do affure you tis against my will.
Ant. Put vp your sword: if this yong Gentleman have done offence, I take the fault on me:
If you offend him, I for him dese you.
To. You sir? Why, what are you?
Ant. One fir, that for his loue darres yet do more
Then you have heard him brag to you he will,
To. Nay, if you be a vndertaker, I am for you.

Enter Officiers.

Fab. O good sir Toby hold: heere come the Officers.
To. Ile be with you anon.

Vio. Pray fir, put your sword vp if you pleace,
And. Marry will I sir: and for that I promis'd you Ile be as good as my word. Hee will beare you easly, and raines well.

1. Off. This is the man, do thy Office.
2 Off. Antonio, I arret thee at the Suitoft Count Orsino.
An. You do mistake me fir.

1. Off. No fir, no lot: I know your favour well:
Though now you have no fea-caps on your head:
Take him away, he knowes I know him well.
Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you:
But there's no remedie, I shall answere it:
What will you do: now my necessarie
Makes me to aske you for my purfe. It greeues mee
Much more, for what I cannot do for you,
Then what befals my selfe: you fland amaz'd,
But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come fir away.
Ant. I must entreat you of some of that money.
Vio. What money fir?

For the fayre kindnesse you haue shew'd me heere,
And part being promised by your present trouble,
Out of my leane and low ability
I lea you something: my hauing is not much,
Ile make division of my present with you:
Hold, there's halfe my Coffer.
Ant. Will you deny me now,
If'p possible that my defects to you
Can leake perfwation. Do not tempt my milery,
Leaff that it make me so vnfound a man
As to vpbraild you with those kindnesse.
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

That I have done for you.

Vio. I know none, of,
Nor know I you by your, or any feature:
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Then lying, vaine-face, bbling drunkenesse,
Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption
Inhabit our frails blood.

Ant. Oh heavens themselves.

2 Off. Come sir, I pray you go.

Ant. Let me speake a little. This youth that you see
I fpatch'd one halfe out of the lawes of death; (heere,
Releeu'd him with fuch fancitie of love;
And to his image, which me thought did promise
Mofl venerable worth, did I devotion.

1 Off. What's that to vs, the time goes by: Away.

Ant. But oh, how vilde an idoll proues this God!
Thou haft Sebastian done good feature, shame.
In Nature, there's no blemish but the minde:
None can be call'd deform'd, but the vnkinde:
Vertue is beauty, but the beauteous euiil
Are empty trunke, ore-flourish'd by the deuill.

1 Off. The man grows mad, away with him:

Come, come sir.

Ant. Leade me on.

Vio. Me thinkes his words do from fuch passion flye
That he beleues himselfe, fo do not I:
Prove true imagination, oh prove true,
That I decre brother, be now tane for you.

To. Come hither Knight, come hither Fabian: Weel whipper oore a couplet or two of moft sage sawen.
Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know
Yet liuing in my glasse: even fuch, and fo
In fauour was my Brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate: Oh if it prove,
Tempelts are kinde, and faile waues freth in loue.

To. A very refonne paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare, his difhonesty appears, in leaving his frend here in necessiuty, and denying him: and for his coward-ship aske Fabian.

Fab. A Coward, a most deouat Coward, religiouis in it.

And. Sli'd Ile after him againe, and beat him.

To. Do, cuffe him fouldly, but never draw thy sword
And. And I do not.

Fab. Come, let's fee the event.

To. I dare lay any money, twill be nothing yet.

Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scana prima.

Enter Sebastian and Cleone.

Cle. Will you make me beleue, that I am not fent for you?

Seb. Go too, go too, thou art a foolish fellow,
Let me be cleere of thee.

Cle. Well held out yfaith: No, I do not know you, or I am not fent to you by my Lady, to bid you come speake with her: nor your name is Master Gefario, or this is not my noeite neyther: Nothing that is fo, is fo.

Seb. I prethee vntill thy folly some-where elfe, thou know't not me.

Cle. Vent my folly: He has heard that word of fome great man, and now applyes it to a foole. Vent my folly: I am afraid this great lubber the World will proue a Cockney: I prethee now vngird thy stranges, and tell me what I shall vnto my Lady? Shall I vnto hir that thou art comming?

Seb. I prethee foolifh greeke depart from me, there's money for thee, if you tarry longer, I shall give worne palment.

Cle. By my trott thou haft an open handsthese Wit-men that gue foole money, get themtheselves a good report, after foureteene yeares purchafe.

Enter Andrew, Toby, and Fabian.

And. Now fir, haue I met you again: ther's for you.

Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there,
Are all the people mad?

To. Hold fir, or Ie throw your dagger ore the house.

Cle. This will I tell my Lady fraught, I would not be in some of your coats for two pence.

To. Come on fir, hold.

An. Nay let him alone, He go another way to worke with him: He haue an action of Battery againft him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I stroke him firft, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

To. Come fir, I will not let you go. Come my yng fouldier put vp your yron: you are well fleath'd: Come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now? If darst'ft tempt me further, draw thy fword.

To. What, what? Nay then I muft have an Ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Olimia.

Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.

To. Madam.

Ol. Will it be euer thus? Vngracious wretch,
Fit for the Mountains, and the barbarous Causes,
Where manners were preache'd out of my fighgt.
Be not offended, deepe Cefario:
Rudebeby be gone. I prethee gentle friend,
Let thy fayre wifedome, not thy paifen fway
In this vncivil, and vnufit extent
Against thy peace. Go with me to my houfe,
And hear thou there how many fruitlefe pranks
This Ruffian hath botch'd vp, that thou thereby
Mayft smile at this: Thou shalt not choo fe but goe:
Do not denie, befhew his foole for mee,
He started one poore heart of mine, in thee.

Seb. What relifhes is this in? How runs the dreame?

Or I am mad, or elfe this is a dreame:
Let fancie fill my fenfe in Lethe fleep,
If it be thus to dreame, fill let me fleepe.

Ol. Nay come I prethee, would thou'dt be rul'd by me
Seb. Madam, I will.

Ol. O fay fo, and fo be.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Maria and Cleone.

Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this gown, & this beard, make him beleue thou art fir Topas the Curate, doe it quickly. He call fir Toby the whift.

Cle. Well, he put it on, and I will dissemble my felfe in't, and I would I were the firft that euer disembleed in fuch.

in such a gowne. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to bee thought a good Student: but to be said an honest man and a good housekeeper goes as fairly, as to say, a careful man, & a great scholar. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Ioue bleepe thee M. Parson.

Clo. Bonnes diez fir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prage that never bow pen and inke, very wittily sayd to a Neice of King Gorbodacke, that that is, is: so I being M. Parson, am M. Parson; for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

To. To Him fir Topas.

Clo. What hoo, I say, Peace in this prison.

To. The knaue counterfeitet well: a good knaue.

Mal. Who cais there?

Clo. Sir Topas the Curate, who comes to visit Maluo- lio the Lunaticke.

Mal. Sir Topas, fir Topas, good fir Topas goe to my Ladie.

Clo. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexet thou this man? Talket thou nothing but of Ladies?

Tab. Well faid M. Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, neuer was man thus wronged, good fir Topas do not thinke I am mad: they have layde mee heere in hideous darkneffe.

Clo. Eyes, thou dithomeft fathan: I call thee by the most modest termes, for I am one of those gentle ones, that will vfe the diuell himselfe with courtefe: sayeft thou that house is darke?

Mal. As hell fir Topas.

Clo. Why it hath bay Windows tranperant as bari- cadoes, and the cleere fowers toward the South north, are as luitrous as Ebyoni: and yet complainest thou of ob- struction?

Mal. I am not mad fir Topas, I faie to you this house is darke.

Clo. Madam thou erreft: I faie there is no darkeffe but ignorance, in which thou art more puzell'd then the Aegyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I say this houfe is as darke as Ignorance, though Ignorance were as darke as hell; and I say there was neuer man thus abus'd, I am no more madde then you are, make the triall of it in any conftant quellion.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Widle-fowe? Mal. That the foule of our grandam, might happily inhabite a bird.

Clo. What thinkft thou of his opinion?

Mal. I thinke nobly of the foule, and no waye approue his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remaine thou still in darkneffe, thou shalt hold th'opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and feare to kill a Woodcooke, left thou dif- poiffe the foule of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, fir Topas.

Tab. My moft-exquisit fir Topas.

Clo. Nay I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou mightst have done this without thy berd and gowne, he fees thee not.

To. To him in thine owne voyce, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would we were well riddle of this knaunere. If he may bee conueniently delier'd, I would we were, for I am now fo farre in offence with my Niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport the vpp- shut. Come by and by to my Chamber.

Exit

Clo. Hey Robin, illary Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Foole.

Clo. My Lady is vnkind, perdie.

Mal. Foole.

Clo. Alas why is she fo?

Mal. Foole, I say.

Clo. She loues another, Who calles, ha?

Mal. Good foole, as ever thou wilt derive well at my hand, help me to a Candle, and pen, inke, and paper: as I am a Gentleman, I will liue to bee thankefull to thee for't.

Mal. M. Maluoio?

Mal. I goode Foole.

Clo. Alas fir, how fell you besides your fiue witts?

Mal. Foole, there was neuer man so notorioullie a bus'-d: I am as well in my wits (foole) as thou art.

Mal. But as well: then you are madindeede, if you be no better in your wits then a foole.

Mal. They have heere propirted me: keep mee in darkneffe, fend Minifiers to me, Asses, and doe all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Adulfe you what you faie: the Minifter is heere.

Maluoio. Maluoio, thy wittes the heavens refroute: en- deavour thy selfe to sleepe, and leave thy vaine bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas.

Mal. Maintain no words with him good fellow.

Who I fir, not I fir. God buy you good fir Topas: Mar- ry Amen. I will fir, I will.

Mal. Foole, foole, foole I faie.

Clo. Alas fir be patient. What faie you fir, I am thent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good foole, helpe me to some light, and some paper, I tell thee I am as well in my wittes, as any man in Ilyria.

Mal. Well-a-day, that you were fir.

Mal. By this hand I am: I good foole, some inke, paper, and light: and conuey what I will set downe to my Lady: it shall adventage thee more, then euer the bear- ing of Letter did.

Clo. I will help you too'. But tel me true, are you not mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit.

Mal. Beleeue me I am not, I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, Ile more beleeue a madman till I fee his brains I will fetch you light, and paper, and inke.

Mal. Foole, Ile requite it in the highest degree: I prethee be goue.

Clo. I am gone fir, and anon fir, Ile be with you againe:

In a trice, like to the old vice, your neede to fultaine.

Who with dagger of lath, in his rage and his wrath, cries ah ha, to the diuell: Like a mad lad, paiere thy nayles dad, Adieu good man diuell.

Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Schafian.

This is the ayre, that is the glorious Sunne,
This pearle the gave me, I do feel't, and fee't,
And though tis wonder that envaups me thus,
Enter Olilia, and Prisi.
Ol. Blame not this haste of mine: if you meane well
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by: there before him,
And vnderneath that consecrated roofe,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most jealous, and too doubfull soule
May lie at peace. He shall conteyne it,
While you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keepe
According to my birth, what do you say?
Seé. Ile follow this good man, and go with you,
And having frowne truth, eter will be true.
Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heaven so shone,
That they may fairely note this acte of mine. Exit.
Finis Actus Quartus.

Auctus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clouame and Fabian.
Fab. Now as thou loue me, let me see his Letter.
Clo. Good M. Fabian, grant me another requeu.
Fab. Any thing.
Clo. Do not desire to see this Letter.
Fab. This is to give a dogge, and in rempnce desire my dogge againe.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.
Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olilia, friends?
Clo. I fr, we are some of her trappings.
Duke. I know thee well: how doest thou my good Fellow?
Clo. Truely fr, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.
Du. Ift the contrary: the better for thy friends.
Clo. No fr, the worse.
Du. How can that be?
Clo. Marry fr, they praise me, and make an assay of me, now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Aife: so that by my faces fr, I profit in the knowledge of my felfe, and by my friends I am abused: so that conclusions to be as kissefs, if your foure negatives make your two affirmatives, why then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.
Clo. By my troth fr, no: thou pleaste you to be one of my friends.
Du. Thou shalt not be the worfe for me, there's gold.
Clo. But that it would be double dealing fr, I would you could make it another.
Du. O you give me ill counsell.
Clo. Put your grace in your pocket fr, for this once, and let your fleath and blood obey it.
Du. Well, I will be so much a finner to be a double dealer: there's another.
Clo. Primo, secunde, tertio, is a good play, and the old waying is, the third payes for all: the triplex fr, is a good tripping meafe, or the belles of S. Benet fr, may put you in minde, one, two, three.
Du. You can foolle no more money out of mee at this throwe: if you will let your Lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.
Clo. Marry fr, lullaby to your bountie till I come a-
gen. I go fr, but I would not haue you to thinke, that my desire of hauing is the finne of couetousnesse: but as you say fr, let your bounty take a nappe, I will awake it anon.

Enter Antonio and Officers.
Vio. Here comes the man fr, that did rescue mee.
Du. That face of his I do remember well, yet when I saw it laft, it was bmseard
as blace as Vulcan, in the fmoake of warre:
A bawbling Veffell was he Captaine of,
For shallow draught and bulke vnprizable,
With which fuch featsfull grapple did he make,
With the most noble bottome of our Fleeete,
That very enuy, and the tongue of loftie
Cride fame and honor on him: What's the matter?
1 Off. Orfino, this is that Antonio
That tooke the Phoenix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger boord,
When your yong Nephew Titus loft his legge:
Heere in the streets, desparate of shame and flate,
In priuate brabble did we apprehend him.
Ubo. He did me kindnesse fr, drew on my side,
But in conclusion put thrang eaph speech vpon me,
I know not what twas, but diffraction.
Du. Notable Pyrate, thou salt-water Theefe,
What foolish boldnesse brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in termes so bloudie, and so decre
Haft made thine enemies?
Ant. Orfino: Noble fr,
Be pleas'd that I shake off thefe names you give mee:
Antonio neuer yet was Theefe, or Pyrate,
Though I confesse, on bafe and ground enough
Orfino's enemie. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That moft ingratefull boy there by your side,
From the rude feas enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeeme: a wracke paft hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My loue without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication. For his fake,
Did I expose my selfe (pure for his loue)
Into the danger of this aduerse Towne,
Drew to defend him, when he was beft:
Where being apprehended, his selfe cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
Twelve Night, or, What you will.

And grew a twentie yeares removed thing
While one would wink & denide mine owne purfe,
Which I had recommended to his vfe,
Not halfe an houre before.

Vis. How can this be?

Du. When came he to this Towne?

Ant. To day my Lord : and for three months before,
No intern, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keepe companie.

Enter Oliuia and attendants.

Du. Here comes the Countesse, now heauen walkes on earth:
But for thee fellow, fellow thy words are madneffe,
Three months this youth hath tended vpon mee,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.

Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Oliuia may seeme feruceable?

Cesario, you do not keepe promife with me.

Vis. Madam:

Du. Gracious Oliuia.

Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.

Vis. My Lord would speake, my dutie hushes me.

Ol. If it be ought to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fullome to mine eare
As howling after Mufick.

Du. Still so cruel?

Ol. Still so constant Lord.

Du. What to peruerfeneffe? you vnviuill Ladie
To whole ingrate, and vnfaupicious Altar.

My soule the faithfull fault offering have breath'd out
That ere deuotion tender'd. What shall I do?

Ol. Even what it pleafe my Lord, that halfe become him
Du. Why shoul I not, (had I the heart to do it)
Like to th'Egyptian theeue, at point of death
Kill what I love: (a sauege leaoulie,
That sometime faueily noil but heare me this:
Since you to non-regardance call my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That ccrcles me from my true place in your favour:
Liue you the Marble-bred Tiran full.
But this your Minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heauen I sweare, I tender dearly,
Him will I teare out of that cruel eye,
Where he fits crowned in his masters spight.
Come boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in milchfield:
Ile sacrifie the Lamb that I do loue,
To fplight a Rauens heart within a Doue.

Ob. And I most inocund, apt, and willinglie,
To do you ref, a thoufand deaths would dye.

Ol. Where goes Cesario?

Vis. After him I love,

More then I love thefe eyes, more then my life,
More by all morees, then ere I shal loue wife.
If I do feigne, you witneffes aboue
Punnish my life, for tainting of my loue.

Ol. Aye me defteled, how am I beguil'd?

Un. Who does beguil? who does do wrong?

Ol. Haft thou forgot thy felfe? Is it fo long?

Call forth the holy Father.

Du. Come, away.

Du. Husband?

Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?

Du. Her husband, firrah?

Vis. No my Lord, not I.

Ol. Als, it is the barrenffe of thy feare,

That makes thee strange thy propriety:
Fear not Cesario, take thy fortunes vp,
Be that thou know'ft thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear't.

Enter Prieft.

O welcome Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Heere to vnfold, though lately we intended
To keepe in darkeneffe, what occasion now
Remeales before 'tis ripe: what thou doft know
Hath newly pafs, betweene this youth, and me.

Prieft. A Contrad of eternall bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutuall ioynder of your hands,
Attedfed by the holy clofe of lippes,
Strengthned by enterrangement of your rings,
And all the Ceremonie of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my graue
I have trauall'd but two hours.

Du. O thou difsembling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath low'd a grizzle on thy cafe?
Or will not elle thy craft fo quickly grow,
That thine owne trip shall be thine ouerthrow:
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feete,
Where thou, and I (henceforth) may never meet.

Vis. My Lord, I do protest.

Ol. O do not sweare,
Hold little faith, though thou haft too much feare.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. For the loue of God a Surgeon, send one prently to ftr Toby.

Ol. What's the matter?

And. H'as broke my head a-croffe, and has giuen Sir Toby a bloody Coxcombe too; for the loue of God your helpe, I had rather then forty pound I were at home?

Ol. Who has done this ftr Andrew?

And. The Counts Gentleman, one Cesario: we tooke him for a Coward, but he's the verie diuell incurradate.

Du. My Gentleman Cesario?

And. Odd's lifelings heere is he: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was fet on to do't by Sir Toby.

Vis. Why do you speake to me, I never hurt you:
you drew your fword vpon me without caufe,
But I befpake you faire, and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Cleone.

And. If a bloody coxcombe be a hurt, you haue hurt me: I thinkie you fet nothing by a bloody Coxecombe.

Heere comes Sir Toby halting, you shall heare more: but if he had not beene in drinke, hee would haue tickeld you other gates then he did.

Du. How now Gentleman? how lift with you?

Tb. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's th'end on't.

Sot, didn't fee Dicke Surgeon, fet?

Ob. He's drunke Sir Toby an houre agoe: his eyes were fet at eight i'th morning.

Tb. Then he's a Rogue, and a paffy measures panyne: I hate a drunken rogue.

Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this hauocke with them?

And. Ile helpe you Sir Toby, because we'll be dreeft together.

Tb. Will you helpe an Afe-head, and a coxcombe, & a knaue: a thin fac'd knaue, a gull?
Twelfe Night, or, What you will.

Ol. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd too.
   Enter Schaffian.

Sch. I am sorry Madam I have hurt your kinsman:
    But had it beene the brother of my blood,
    I much have done no leffe with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceiue it hath offended you:
Pardon me (sweet one) even for the vows
We made each other, but so late ago.
Du. One face, one voice, one habit, and two perfons,
    A naturall Perspective, that is, and is not.
Sch. Antonios: O my deere Antonios,
How haue the hours rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I haue loft thee?
Ant. Schaffian are you?
Sch. Fear't thou that Antonios?
Ant. How haue you made disiusion of your selfe,
An apple clef in two, is not more twin.
Then these two creatures. Which is Schaffian?
Ol. Moft wonderfull.
Sch. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be that Deily in my nature
Of heere, and every where. I had a fitter,
Whom the blindes waues and furges haue deuour'd:
Of charity, what kinne are you to me?
What Countryman? What name? What Parentage?
Un. Of Myfaffine: Schaffian was my Father,
Such a Schaffian was my brother too:
So went he futed to his watery tombe:
If spirits can affume both forme and suite,
You come to fright vs.
Sch. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimenston gruesely clad,
Which from the wombe I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the reft goes even,
I shoule my teares let fall vpou your cheeke,
And fay, thrice welcome crowned Viola.
Vio. My father had a moile vpou his brow.
Sch. And fo had mine.
Vio. And did that day when Viola from her birth
    Had numbred thirteene yeares.
Sch. O that record is luisly in my foule,
He finished indeed his mortall ade
That day that made my fiter thirteene yeares.
Vio. If nothing lets to make vs happie both,
But this my malefle vilup'd attyre:
Do not embraze me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do co here and lume
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
Ile bring you to a Captaine in this Towne,
Where
Vio. And dame that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteene yeares.
Sch. O that record is luisly in my foule,
He finished indeed his mortall ade
That day that made my fiter thirteene yeares.
Vio. If nothing lets to make vs happie both,
But this my malefle vilup'd attyre:
Do not embraze me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do co here and lume
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
Iel bring you to a Captaine in this Towne,
Where
Vio. And dame that day when Viola from her birth
    Had numbred thirteene yeares.
Sch. So comes it Ladi,you have beene mistooke:
But Nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have bin contract'd to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) decei'd,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.
Du. Be not amaz'd, right noble is his blood:
If this be so, as yet the glasse leemes treu,
I shall haue share in this moost happy wracke,
Boy, thou haft faide to me a thousand times,
Thou never shoule'tt louse woman like to me.
Vio. And all those sayings, will I ever swears,
And all those sayings keep as true in foule,
As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That feuers day from night.
Du. Giue me thy hand,
And let me fee thee in thy womans weedes.
Un. The Captaine that did bring me first on shore
Hath my Maids garments: he vpone some Action
Is now in durance, at Malvolio's fuite,
A Gentleman, and follower of my Ladies.
Ol. He shall inlarge him: fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They fay poore Gentleman, he's much distract.
Enter Clemen with a Letter, and Fabian.
A moft extrafting frenchie of mine owne
From my remembrance, clearly banlifh his.
How does he fie?
Cl. Truely Madam, he holds Belzebub at the flues end as well as a man in his cafe may do: he here writ a letter to you, I should giue'nt you to day morning. But as a madmans Epitcles are no Gospels, so it skilles not much when they are deliuer'd.
Ol. Open't, and read it.
Cle. Looke then to be well edified, when the Foose deliuers the Madman.
By the Lord Madam.
Ol. How now, art thou mad?
Cl. No Madam, I do but reade madneffe: and your Ladyship will haue it as it ought to bee, you must allow Vox.
Ol. Prethee reade i'thy right wits.
Cle. So I do Madona: but to reade his right wits, is to reade thus: therefore, perpend your Princesse, and glue caire.
Ol. Read it you, sirrah.
Fab. Read. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you have put mee into darkenesse, and giuen your drunken Cofne rule over me, yet haue I the benefit of my fenes as well as your Ladieship.
I haue your owne letter, that induced mee to the fembalme I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my felle much right, or you much shame: thinke of you, and speake out of my injury.
Mally mad your Malvolio.
Ol. Did he write this?
Cle. I Madame.
Du. This favours not much of distractioun.
Ol. See him deliuer'd Fabian, bring him hither:
My Lord, fo please you, these things further thought on,
To thinke me as well a fitter, as a wife,
One day shall crowne thalliance on't, fo please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper coft.
Du. Madam, I am moft apt to embrase your offer:
Your Mafter quits you: and for your fervice done him,
So much again'tt the meatte of your fex,
So farre beneath your foft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me Malfier, fo long:
Here is my hand, you shall from this time bee your Mafier's Mitrit.
Ol. A fitter, you are the.
Enter Malvolio.
Du. Is this the Madman?
Ol. I my Lord, this fame: How now Malvolio?
Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.
Ol. Have I Malvolio No.
Mal. Lady you have, pray you perufe that Letter.
You muft not now denie it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand, or phrafe,
Twelte Night, or, What you will.

Or say, tis not your seale, not your invention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modestie of honor,
Why you have given me such cleare lights of fav'our,
Bad me come smiling, and croffe-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow flockings, and to frowne
Vpon sir Toby, and the lighter people:
And acting this in an obdient hope,
Why haue you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a darke house, visit'd by the Priest,
And made the moft notorious gekke and gull,
That ere invention plaide on? Tell me why?
Ol. Alas Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confesse much like the Character:
But out of question, tis Marias hand.
And now I do bethinke me, it was thinck
First told me thou waft mad; then can't it smiling,
And in such formes, which heere were prefuppus'd
Vpon thee in the Letter; prethee be content,
This practice hath moft shrewdly past vpon thee:
But when we know the grounds, and authours of it,
Thou shalt be both the Plaintiff and the Judge
Of thine owne caufe.
Fab. Good Madam heare me speake,
And let no quarrell, nor no braule to come,
Taint the condition of this present houre,
Which I have wondred at. In hope it shall not,
Moft freely I confesse my selfe, and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio heere,
Vpon some hubborne and vnconterte parts
We had conceu'd against him. Maria writ
The Letter, at fir Toby's great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her:
How with a sportfull malice it was follow'd,
May rather bunk on laughter then reuenge,
If that the injuries be lightly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.
Ol. Alas poore Foole, how haue they baffle'd thee?
Clo. Why some are borne great, some attaince greatneffe, and some haue greatneffe throwne vpon them. I was one fir, in this Enterlude, one fir Topas fir, but that's all one: By the Lord Foole, I am not mad: but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal, and you smile not he's gag'd: and thus the whirigigge time, brings in his reuenges.
Mal. Ile be reueng'd on the whole packe of you?
Ol. He hath bene moft notoriously abus'd.
Du. Pursue him, and entreate him to a peace:
He hath not told vs of the Captaine yet,
When that is knowne, and golden time conuents
A solemne Combination shall be made
Of our deere foules. Meane time sweet fifter,
We will not part from hence. Cefario come
(For so you shall be while you are a man)
But when in other habites you are seen,
Orfano's Misfit, and his fancies Queene,
Exeunt

Clowone sings,
When that I was and a little time beyn,
With beyn, by, the winde and the raine:
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the raine it raineth every day.

But when I came to mans sfiate,
With beyn by, &c.
Gainst Knaues and Theues men fliote their gate,
For the raine, &c.

But when I came alas to wiuie,
With beyn by, &c.
By swaggering could I neuer thrive,
For the raine, &c.

But when I came unto my beds,
With beyn by, &c.
With reftes still had drunken beastes,
For the raine, &c.

A great while agoe the world begun,
By, by, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.

FINIS.
Enter Camillo and Archibadus.

Arch. If you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my feruices are now on-foot, you shall fee (as I have faid) great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Camillo. I thinke, this comming Summer, the King of Sicilia meanses to pay Bohemia the Vtilitation, which hee fully owes him.

Arch. Wherein our Entertainment shall flame vs: we will be sufficiant in our Loues: for indeed--

Camillo. 'Befeech you--

Arch. Verely I speake it in the freedome of my knowledge: we cannot with fuch magnificence--- in fo rare--
I know not what to fay---- Wee will give you fitte Drinks, that your Sences (vn-intelligent of our insuffi-ciencie) may, though they cannot prafye vs, as little ac-cufe vs.

Camillo. You pay a great deale to dese, for what's guen freely.

Arch. 'Beleeue me, I speake as my vnderstanding infruickes me, and as mine honeste puts it to vterance.

Camillo. Sicilia cannot fhew himfelfe over-kind to Bohemia: They were traynd together in their Child-hoods;
and there rooted betwixt them then fuch an affection, which cannot chufe but branch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royall Necessitie, made seperation of their Societie, their Encounters (though not Perfonall) hath been Royally attorned with enter-change of Gifts, Letters, loving Embaffies, that they have feem'd to be together, though afsent fhooke hands, as over a Vaft;
and embrac'd as it were from the ends of oppofed Winds.
The Heauens continue their Loues.

Arch. I thinke there is not in the World, either Malice or Matter, to alter it. You have an vnfeepable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a Gentleman of the greateft Promife, that ever came into my Note.

Camillo. I very well agree with you, in the hopes of him:
it is a gallant Child; one, that (indeed) Physick's the Subdiect, makes old hearts ftreth: they that went on Crutches ere he was borne, defire yet their life, to fee him a Man.

Arch. Would they elfe be content to die?

Camillo. Yes if there were no other excuse, why they shoule defire to live.

Arch. If the King had no Sonne, they would defire to live on Crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo.

Leontes. Nine Changes of the Wasty-Starre hath been

The Shepheard's Note, since we have left our Throne
Without a Burthen: Time as long again
Would be fill'd vp (my Brother) with our Thanks,
And yet we shoule, for perpetuite,
Goe hence in debt: And therefore, like a Cypher
(Yet flanding in rich place) I multiply
With one we thank ye, many thoundads moe,
That goe before it.

Leontes. Stay your Thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow:
I am question'd by my feares, of what may chance,
Or breed upon our abfence, that may blow
No fnaping Winds at home, to make vs fay,
This is put forth too truly befides, I haue fay'd
To tyre your Royaltie.

Leontes. We are tougher (Brother)
Then you can put vs to't.

Pol. No longer fay,
Leontes. One Seeneight longer.
Pol. Very footh, to morrow.

Leontes. Wee'le part the time betweene's then and that Ile no gaine-faying.

Pol. Preffe me not ('befeech you) fo:
There is no Tongue that move's none, none i'th World
So foone as yours, could win mer: fo it shoule now,
Were there necelitie in your requet, although
'Twere needfull I deny'd it. My Affaires
Doe even drag me home-ward: which to hinder,
Were (in your Loue) a Whip to me; my fay,
To you a Charge, and Trouble: to faue both,
Farewell (our Brother).

Leontes. Tongue-ty'd our Queene? fpeak ye you.
Hermione. I had thought (Sir) to have held my peace, vntill
You had drawne Oathes from him, not to fayi you(Sir)
Charge him too coldly. 'Tell him, you are fure
All in Bohemia's well: this fatisfaclion,
The by-gone-day proclaym'd, fay this to him,
He's beat from his beft ward.

Leontes. Well fayd, Hermione.
Hermione. To tell, he longs to fee his Sonne, were ftrong:
But let him fay fo then, and let him goe;
But let him fwear fo, and he fhall not fay,
We'll thwack him hence with Diffaftes.
Yet of your Royall prefence, Ile adventure
The borrow of a Weeke. When at Bohemia
You take my Lord, Ile give him my Commiffion,
To let him there a Moneth, behind the Geit
Prefix'd for's parting: yet (good-deed) Leontes,
I loue thee not a Jarre o'th Clock, behind

The Winters Tale.

What Lady she her Lord.  You're day ?
Pol.  No, Madame.
Her.  Nay, but you will ?
Pol.  I may not verely.
Her.  Verely?
You put me off with limber Vowes: but I,
Though you would feek t'vnfihere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet say, Sir, no going : Verely
You shall not goe ; a Ladies Verely" is
As potent as a Lords.  Will you goe yet?
Force me to keere you as a Prisoner,
Not like a Guest : io you shall pay your Fees
When you depart, and faue your Thanks. How say you?
My Prisoner? or my Guest? by your dread Verely,
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your Guest then, Madame :
To be your Prisoner, should import offending ;
Which is for me, leffe safe to commit,
Then you to punish.
Her. Not your Gaoler then,
But your kind Hostelee, Come, Ile queeion you
Of my Lords Tricks, and yours, when you were Boyes :
You were pretty Lordings then ?
Pol. We were (faire Queene)
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be Boy eternall.
Her. Was not my Lord
The verry Wag o'th' two?
Pol. We were as twyn'd Lambs, that did frisk i'th'Sun,
And bleat the one at th'other: what we chang'd,
Was Innocence, for Innocence : we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did : Had we purfu'd that life,
And our weake Spirits ne're been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should haue anfwer'd Heauen
Boldly, not guilty; the Impoſition clear'd, Hereidarie ours.
Her. By this we gather
You haue tript finde.
Pol. O my moft sacred Lady,
Temptations haue finde then been borne to's : for
In thoef vnfedd' days, was my Wife a Girle ;
Your precious felle had then not crofs'd the eyes
Of my young Play-fellow.
Her. Grace to hoot :
Of this make no conclufion, leaf it you fay
Your Queene and I are Deulls : yet goe on,
Th'o'offences we haue made you doe, we'll anfwere,
If you firft fenn'd with vs: and that with vs
You did continue fault; and that you flipt not
With any, but with vs.
Leo. Is he woon yet?
Her. He'll fay (my Lord.)
Leo. At my requete, he would not :
Hermione (my deareft) thou neuer fpoke'th
To better purpofe.
Her. Neuer?
Leo. Neuer, but once.
Her. What? haue I twice faid well? when was't before?
I prethee tell me : cram's with praye, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueelee, Slaughters a thousand, wayting on that
Our pray'res are our Wages. You may ride's
With one soft Kiffe a thousand Furlongs, ere
With Spur we heat an Acre. But to th' Goalie :
My laft good deed, was to entreat his fay.
What was my firft? it ha's an elder Sifier,
Or I mistake you: O, would her Name were Grace.
But once before I spoke to th' purpoze? when?
Nay, let me haue't : I long.
Leo. Why, that was when
Three crab'd Moneths had fower'd themfelves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white Hand:
A clap thy felle my Loue; then didft thou vtter,
I am yours for euer.
Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.
Why lo-you now! I haue fpoke to th' purpoze twice:
The one, for euer earn'd a Royall Husband;
Th'other, for some while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot :
To mingle参展ship fattery, is mingling bloods,
I haue 'Tremor Cordis' on me: my heart daunces,
But not for joy; not joy. This Entertainment
May a free face put on : deriu a Libertie
From Heartineffe, from Bountie, fertile Bofome,
And well become the Agent: 't may; I grant:
But to be pacling Palmes, and pinching Fingers,
As now they are, and making praftis'd Smiles
As in a Looking-Glaffe; and then to figi, as 'twere
The Mort o'th'Deere : oh, that is entertainment
My Bofome likes not, nor my Browes. Mamillius, Art thou my Boy?
Mam. I, my good Lord.
Leo. I'feeks:
Why that's my Bawcock what's ha't smutch'd thy Nofe?
They fay it is a Copy out of mine. Come Captain,
We muft be near: not near, but cleanly, Captain:
And yet the Steere, the Heycfer, and the Calfe,
Are all cal'd Neer. Still Virginalling
Vpon his Palme! How now (you wanton Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe ?
Mam. Yes, if you will (my Lord.)
Leo. Thou want't a rough path, & the shoots that I have To be full, like me: yet they fay we are Almoft as like as Eggs; Women fay fo,  (That will fay any thing.) But were they falle
As o're-d'y Blacks, as Wind, as Waters;faile
As Dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No borne 'twixt his and mine ; yet were It true;
To fay this Boy were like me. Come(Sir Page)
Louke on me with your Welkin eye:weet Villaine, Moft deareft, my Collop: Can thy Dam,may't be Affection? thy Intention flabs the Center.
Thou don't make possible things not to hold,
Communicat'th with Dreams(how can this be?)
With what's vnaile: thou coaftiue art,
And fellow't nothing. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou may't co-loyne with something, and thou do'ft,
(And that beyond Commifion) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Braines,
And hardning of my Browes.)
Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something feemes vnfeyled.
Pol. How? my Lord?
Leo. What cheere? how is't with you, best Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a Brow of much diftraction:
Are you mo'ud (my Lord?)
Leo. No, in good earneft.
How sometimes Nature will betray it's folly?
It's tenderneffe? and make it felte a Paffime
To harder boomes? Looking on the Lynes
Of 278
Of my Boyes face,me thoughts I did requoyde
Twentie three yeeres, and law my selfe vn-breech'd,
In my greene Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzel'd,
Leaf it should bite it's Matter, and fo prooue
(As Ornaments oft do's) too dangerous:
How like me thought I then was to this Kernels,
This Squaw, this Gentleman. Mine honest Friend,
Will you take Egges for Money?

Leo. You will: why happy man be's dole. My Brother
Are you so fond of your young Prince, as we Doe feeme to be of ours?

Pol. If at home (Sir)
He's all my Exercice, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my fwearne Friend, and then mine Enemy;
My Parfite, my Soul'dier Statef-man; all: he Makes a huyes day, short as December,
And with his varying child-nffe, cures in me
Thoughts, that would thick my blood.

Leo. So flands this Squire
Offic'd with me: We two will walke (my Lord)
And leave you to your grauer rep's. Hermione,
How thou lou't vs, shew in our Brothers welcome;
Let what is deare in Sicily, be cheape:
Next to thy felfe, and my young Rouer, he's Apparant to my heart.

Her. If you would feek vs,
We are yours P'th'Garden: shall's attend you there?

Leo. To your owne bents difpose you: you'll be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am angling now,
(Though you perceive me not how I giue Lyne)
Goe too, goe too.

How she holds vp the Neb? the Byll to him?
And armes her with the boldneffe of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Ynch-thick, knee-deep, ore head and eares a fork'd one.
Goe play (Boy) play: thy Mother plays, and I
Play too, but fo digrac'd a part, whose ifue
Will hiffe me to my Graue:Contempt and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Goe play (Boy) play, there have been (Or I am much decue'd) Cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this preffent,
Now, while I speake this) holds his Wife by th'Arme,
That little thinks she's has been fluye'd in'd abience,
And his Pond fifh'd by his next Neighbor (by Sir Smite, his Neighbor) nay, there's comfort in't,
While others men have Gates, and tho' Gates open'd
(As mine) against their will. Should all defpize,
That have resolted Wiuses, the tenet of Mankind
Would hang themselues. Phyllick for'ts, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet, that will strike
Where 'ts predominat, and 'ts powrfulle: thinke it:
From Eaft, West, North, and South, be it concluded,
No Barricado for a Belly. Know't,
It will let in and out the Enemy,
With bag and baggage: many thousand on's
Have the Difear, and feel't not. How now Boy?

Mam. I am like you say.

Leo. Why, that's some comfort.

What? Camillo there?

Cam. I, my good Lord.

Leo. Goe play (Mamillius) thou'rt an honest man:
Camillo, this great Sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much aido to make his Anchor hold,
When you caft out, it fell came home.

Leo. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your Petitions, made
His Busynesse more materials.

Leo. Didst perceive it?

They're here with me already, whip'ring, rounding:
Sicilia is a fo-forth: 'tis farre gone,
When I shall guft it laft. How can't (Camillo)
That he did stay?

Cam. At the good Queens entreatie.

Leo. At the Queens be': Good should be pertinent,
But so it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any vnderstanding Pate but thine?
For thy Conceit is foaking, will draw in
More then the common blocks. Not noted, is't,
But of the finer Natures? by some Seuerauls
Of Head-piece extraordinary! Lower Melfies
Perchance are to this Busineffe purblind? say.

Cam. Busineffe, my Lord? I thinke moft vnderstand
Behemis flays here longer.

Leo. Ha? Is

Cam. Stays here longer.

Leo. I, but why?

Cam. To satisfie your Highness, and the Entreaties
Of our most gracious Miftreffe.

Leo. Satisfie?

Th'entreaties of your Miftreffe? Satisfie?
Let that suficie. I have trueth thee (Camillo)
With all the neereft things to my heart, as well
My Chamber-Councels, wherein (priest-like) thou
Haft cleans'd my Bofome; I, from thee departed Thy Penitent reform'd: but we have been Decue'd in thy Inrigetie, decue'd
In that which feemes fo.

Cam. Be it forbid (my Lord.)

Leo. To bide vpon't thou art not honest: or
If thou inclin'lt that way, thou art a Coward,
Which boxes honeste behind, refrayning
From Courfe requir'd: or else thou must be counted
A Seruant, graffed in my ferial Truth,
And therein negligent: or else a Foole,
That feeth a Game play'd home, the rich Stake drawer,
And tak't it all for leaft.

Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearefull,
In every one of these, no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, feare,
Among the infinite doings of the World,
Sometimes puts forth in your aires (my Lord.)
If euer I were wilfull-neglectful,
It was my folly: if industriously
I play'd the Foole, it was my negligence,
Not weiging well the end: if euer fearefull
To doe a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, twist a feare
Which oft infects the wifeft: thefe(my Lord)
Are fuch allow'd Infirmities, that honeste
Is never free of. But befooth your Grace
Be plainer with me, let me know my Trefpas
By it's owne viage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leo. Ha! not you feene Camillo?

(Cam. But that's past doubt: you have, or your eye-gaffe
Is thicker then a Cuckolds Hone) or heard?
(For too the Vision to apper, I thought
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cogitation Refudes not in that man, that do's not thine)
The Winters Tale.

My Wife is slipperie: If thou wilt confede,
Or else be impudently negligent,
To have nor Eye, nor Ear, nor Thought, then say
My Wife's a Holy-Horse, deferves a Name
As ranke as any Flux-Wench, that puts to Before her troth-plight: say't, and instantly.
Cam. I would not be a wander-by, to heare
My Soueraigne Miftrfere clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'twas my heart,
You never spoke what did become you leffe
Then this; which to retreate, were fin
As depe as that, though true.
Leo. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning Checke to Checke: is morten Nofes?
Killing in-inde Lip? topping the Cariere
Of Laughter, with a fight: (a Note inffallible
Of breaking Honfite) horfing foot on foot?
Skulling in corners? wishing Clocks more twifit?
Houres, hinfurt? Noone, Mid-night? and all Eyes
Blind with the Pin and Web, but theirs; theirs onely,
That was vnfeene to be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the World, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The couring Skie is nothing: Bobemia nothing,
My Wife is nothing, nor Nothing have thee Nothing,
If this be nothing.
Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd
Of this difeaf'd Opinion, and betimes,
For 'tis most dangerous.
Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my Lord.
Leo. It is: you leye, you leye:
I say thou lyef Camillo,and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a groffe Lowt, a mindleffe Slawe,
Or elfe a houering Temporizer, that Can't with thine eyes at once fee good and euill,
Inclining to them both: were my Wifes Luer
Infected (as her life) she would not lieue
The running of one Glasfe.
Cam. Who do's infect her?
Leo. Why he that weares her like her Medull, hanging
About his neck (Bobemia) who, if f
Had Servants true about me, that bare eyes
To fee alike mine Honor, as their Profits,
(Their owne particular Thift) they would doe that
Which should vnwre more doeing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meaner forme
Haue Bench'd, and rear'd to Worship, who may't fee
Plainely, as Haueen fees Earth, and Earth fees Haueen,
How I am gall'd, might't be-spice a Cup,
To give mine Enemy a lafting Winke:
Which Draught to me, were cordial.
Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could doe this, and that with no rash Potion,
But with a lingring Dram, that should not worke Maliciously, like Poyfon: But I cannot Beleeue this Crack to be in my dread Miftrfere
(So foveraignely being Honorable.)
I have lou'd thee,
Leo Make that thy quefion, and goe rot:
Do't think I am so muddy, so vnnetted,
To spoile my felfe in this vexation?
Sully one partite and whitteneffe of my Sheets (Which to preferre, is Sleepe; which being spotted, is Godes, Thornes. Nettes, Tayles of Wafpes)
Gue scandall to the blood o'th'Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I doe thinke is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe mouing to't? Would I doe this?
Could man fo bench?
Cam. I mufte beleeue you (Sir)
I doe, and will fetch off Bobemia for't:
Prouided, that when hee's remou'd, your Highneffe
Will take againe your Queene, as yours at firft,
Euen for your Sonnes fake, and thereby for healing
The Injurie of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdomes
Knowne, and aluid'y to yours.
Leo. Thou do'ft admire me,
Euen so as I mine owne courfe have fet downe:
He gie no blemifh to her Honor, none.
Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenance as cleare
As Friendship weares at Feaths, keepe with Bobemia,
And with your Queene; I am his Cup-bearer,
If from me he haue whomfome Beueridge,
Account me not your Servant.
Leo. This is all:
Do'ta, and thou haue the one halfe of my heart;
Do'n't, thou uplift'th owne.
Cam. I do't, my Lord.
Leo. I wil feeke friendly, as thou haft aduis'd me.
Exit Cam. O milifable Lord.
But for me,
What cafe fhould I in? I mufte be the payfoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Mafter; one,
Who in Rebellion with himfelle, will haue
All that are his, so too.
To doe this deed,
Promotion followes: If I could find example
Of thoufand's that had ftruck anoynted Kings,
And fourifh'd after, I'll do not': But fince
Nor Braffe, nor Stone, nor Parchment beares not one,
Let Villanie it felle forwearne, I mufte
Forfike the Court: to do't, or no, is certaine
To me a bracke-neke. Happy Starre raigne now, Here comes Bobemia. Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange: Me thinke's
My favor here begins to warpe.
Not speaker.
Good day Camilo.
Cam. Hayle moft Royall Sir.
Pol. What is the Newes i'th'Court?
Cam. None rare (my Lord.)
Pol. The King hath on him fuch a countenance,
As he had left fome Prouince, and a Region
Lou'd, as he loues himfelfe: even now I met him
With cufomarie complements, when hee
Wafting his eyes to th' contrary, and falling
A Lippe of much contemp, speedes from me, and
So leaues me, to confider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.
Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)
Pol. How, dare not? do not? do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligenet to me, 'tis thereabouts:
For to your felle, what you doe know, you mufte,
And cannot fay, you dare not, Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which fhewes me mine chang'd too:for I mufte be
A partie in this alteration, finding
My felle thus alter'd with't.
Cam. There is a fickneffe
Which puts fome of vs in diftemper, but I cannot name the Diseafe, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.
Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not fighed like the Baliſfique.
The Winters Tale.

I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none fo: Camillo,
As you are certainly a Gentleman, thereto
Clerke-like experience'd, which no lefe adorns
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose face you are gentle: I beleech you,
If you know why I do acquaint you with knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd; impfiton't not
In ignorant concealement.

Cam. I may not anfwere.

Pol. A Sickenfe caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be anfwere'd. Do'lt thou heare Camillo,
I coniure thee, by all the parts of man,
Which Honor do's acknowledge, whereof the laft
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidencie thou do'lt give of harme
Is creeping toward me; how farre off, how neere,
Which way to be prevented, if to be:
If no't, how beft to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honor, and by him
That I think Honorablc: therefore marke my countenaunce,
Which must be eu'n as swiftly follow'd, as
I meane to vter it; or both your selfe, and me,
Cry loft, and fo good night.

Pol. In, good Camillo.

Cam. I am appointed him to murther you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the King.

Pol. For what?

Cam. He thinke'st, nay with all confidence he sweares,
As he had seen't, or beene an Instrument
To vice you to't, that you have toucht his Queene Forbiddenly.

Pol. Oh then, my best blood turne
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yoak'd with him, that do betray the Beft:
Turne then my freshet Reputation to
A favour, that may strike the dullest Nothrift.
Where I arraife, and my approe be shun'd,
Nay hated too, wore then the great Infidion
That ere was heard, or read.

Cam. Sweare his thought ouer
By each particular Starre in Heauen, and
By all their Influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moone,
As (or by Oath) remove, or Countenaunce
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is y'lt upon his Faith, and will continue
The flanding of his Body.

Pol. How would this grow?

Cam. I know not: but I am fure 'tis fafer to Avoid what's growne, then queftion how 'tis borne.
If therefore you dare trut my honteft
That lyes enclosed in this Trunke, which you Shall bear along impawnd, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whifper to the Businffe,
And will by twoe, and threes, at feveral Poffernes, Cleare them o'th Cite: For my felfe, Ile put My fortunes to your service (which are here
By this difcoverie loft.) Be not vncertaine,
For by the honor of my Parents, I inconvenience to my felfe: If you feeke to prove,
I dare not fland by; nor shall you be fafer,
Then one condern'd by the Kings owne mouth:
Thereon his Execution fwoerne.

Pol. I do beleue thee:
I saw his heart in's face. Give me thy hand,
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and My people did expect my hence departure
Two days agoe. This Iealoufie
Is for a precious Creature: as thee's rare,
Muff it be great; and, as his Perfons mightie,
Muff it be violent: and, as he do's conclude,
He is dihonor'd by a man, which ever
Profeft'd to him: why his Reuenges muft
In that be made more bitter. Fear ore-shades me:
Good Expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queene, part of his Theame but nothing
Of his ill-tane fupition. Come Camillo,
I will refpect thee as a Father, if Thou bear'ft my life off, hence: Let vs avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authoritie to command
The Keyses of all the Poffernes: Pleafce you Highneffe
To take the vrent houre. Come Sir, away. Execunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: Leonatus, Antigonus, Lords.

Her. Take the Boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.

Lady. Come (my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, Ile none of you.

Lady. Why (my sweet Lord?)

Mam. You'll kiffe me hard, and speake to me, as if I were a Baby fill. I loue you better.

2. Lady. And why so (my Lord?)

Mam. Not for becaufe
Your Brows are blacker (yet black-brows they fay Become some Women beft, so that there be not Too much hairre there, but in a Cemicircle,
Or a halfe-Moone, made with a Pen.)

2. Lady. Who taught this?

Mam. I learn'd it out of Womenes faces; pray now,
What colour are your eye-browes?

Lady. Blew (my Lord.)

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seene a Ladies Nofe
That he's beene blew, but not her eye-browes.

Lady. Harke ye,
The Queene (your Mother)rounds apaceway shall Preferent our lercusics to a fine new Prince
One of thefe days, and then you'd wanton with vs,
If we would haue you.

2. Lady. She is (preared of late
Into a goodly Bulke (good time encounter her.)

Her. What wifdome flirs amongst you? Come Sir, now
I am for you againe: Pray you fit by vs,
And tell's a Tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, that's be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad Tale's beft for Winter:
I haue one of Sprights, and Goblins.

Her. Let's haue that (good Sir.)

Come-on, sit downe, come-on, and do ye beft,
To fright me with your Sprights; you're powerfull at it.

A 3

Mam. There
There was a man.

A Church-yard; I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not hear it.

There is no life in the Cup
A Spider fleape'd, and one may drinke; depart,
And yet partake no venom (for his knowledge
Is not infected) but if one present
Th'honour'd Ingrediente to his eye, make knowne
How he hath drinke, he cracks his gorge, his fides
With violent Hefts: I have drunke, and fee the Spider.

Camillo was his helpes in this, his Pandar:
There is a Plot against my Life, my Crowne;
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He ha's discover'd my Defigne, and I
Remaine a pinch'd Thing; yes, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Polternes
So easily open'd?

By his great authority,
Which often hath no lesse preval'd, then so,
On your command,

Know't well too.

Give me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurfe him:
Though he do's bear some fignes of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

What is this? Sport?

Beare the Boy hence, he shall not come near her,
Away with him, and let her sport her felfe
With that thee's big with, for 'tis Polixenes Ha's made thee fwell thus.

But I'd faie he had not;

And Ile be sworn ye would beleue my faying,
How e're you leane to th'Nay-ward.

Look on her, marke her well: be but about
To fay th' is a goodly Lady,

The iudicke of your hearts will thereto adde
'Tis pity she's not honett: Honorable;
Prayle her but for this her without-dore-Forme,
(Which on my fault defereues high speech) and straight
The Shrug, the Hum, or Ha, (thefe Petty-brands
That Calumnie dothe vfe; Oh, I am out,
That Mercy do's, for Calumnie will feare
Vertue it felfe) thefe Shruge, thefe Hum's, and Ha's,
When you have faied thee's goodly, come betwenee,
Ere you can fay thee's honett: But be't knowne
(From him that ha's moft caufe to grieve it shoulde be) She's an Adultere.

Should a like Language vfe to all degrees,
And mannerly diffingulment leave out,
Betwixt the (prince and Beggar) I have faid She's an Adultere, I have faid with whom:
More; she's a Trayer, and Camillo is
A Federate with her, and one that knowes
What she should fame to know her felfe,
But with her moft vld Principall: that shee's
A Bed-flower, even as bad as tho.
That Vulgars glue bold'ft Titles; I, and priuy
To this their late effcape.

No (by my life)

Priuy to none of this: how will this grieve you,
When you shal come to clearer knowleage, that
You thus have publi'd me? Gentle my Lord;
You scarce can right me thoroughly, then, to fay
You did miftake.

No: if I miftake
In tho Foundations which I build vpon,
The Centre is not bigge enough to bear
A Schoole-Boyes Top. Away with her, to Prifon:
He who shall speake for her, is a farre-off guilte,
But that he speaks.

There! There's some ill Planet raiges:
I must be patient, till the Heauens looke
With an acpet more fauourable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex Commonly are) the want of which vaine dew
Perchance shall dry your pitties: but I haue
That honorable Griefe lodg'd here, which burnes
Worfe then Teares drown'd: befeeche you all (my Lords)
With thoughts fo qualified, as your Charities
Shall ben inftruct you, meafeure me, and fo
The Kings will be perform'd.

Shall I be heard?

Who is't that goes with me? befeeche your Highnes
My Women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Doe not weep(fgood Fooles)
There is no caufe:When you shall know your Miftris
Ha's deferv'd Prifon, then abound in Teares,
As I come out; this Action I now goe on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)
I neuer wifh'd to fee you forry, now
I trufl I shall my Women come, you haue leave.

Goe, doe our bidding: hence.

Befeeche your Highness call the Queene again.

Be certain what you do(Sir) leaft your iustice
Prove violence, in the which three great onesuffer, Your Selfe, your Queene, your Sonne.

May I dare my life lay downe, and will do't (Sir)
Please you faccept it, that the Queene is spotlesse
I'll the eyes of Heauen, and to you (I meane
In this, in which you accuse her.)

If it be priue.

Shee's other wife, Ile keepe my Stables where
I lodge my Wife, Ile goe in couples with her:
Then when I feele, and fee her, no farther truft her:
For euery ync of Woman in the World,
I, euery drame of Womans flesh is falle,
If she be.

Hold your peace.

Good my Lord.

It is for you we speake, not for our felues
You are abus'd, and by some puter on,
That will be dam'd for't: would I knew the Villaine,
I would
The Winters Tale.

I would Land-damne him : be the honor-flaw'd,
I have three daughters : the eldest is eleueen;
The second, and the third, nine : and some sixe :
If this prove true, they'll pay for't. By mine Honor
Ile gell'd em all : fourteene they shall not see
To bring false generations : they are co-heyes,
And I had rather gibb my felle, then they Should not produce faire issue.

Leo. Cesfe, no more :
You smell this busnifee with a fence as cold
As is a dead-mans nose : but I do fee't, and feel't,
As you feele doing thus : and see withall
The Instruments that feele.

Antig. If it be fo,
We neede no grace to burie honestly,
There's not a graine of it, the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth,
Leo. What? lacke I credit?

Lord. I had rather you did lacke then I (my Lord)
Vpon this ground : and more it would content me
To have her Honor true, then your fupfition
Be blam'd for't how you might.
Leo. Why what neede we Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forcefull inflagion? Our prerogative
Calls not your Countfailes, but our natural goodneffe
Imparts this : which, if you, or fuppofed,
Or feemind fo, in skill, cannot, or will not
Rellish a truth, like vs: informe your felues,
We neede no more of your advice : the matter,
The loffe, the gaine, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly:

Antig. And I wish (my Liege)
You had onely in your filent judgement tride it,
Without more ouerture,
Leo. How could that be?
Either thou art moft ignorant by age,
Or thou wert borne a foole : Camillo's flight
Added to their Familiarity
(Which was as groffe, as euer touch'd coniecture,
That lack'd fight onely, nought for approbation
But onely feeing, all other circumfances
Made vp to th' deed) doth push-on this proceeding.
Yet, for a greater confirmation
(For in an Acte of this importance, 'were Most pittious to be wilde) I have difpatch'd in poft,
To facred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Cleomines and Dion, whom you know
Of stuf'd-sufficiency : Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whose spiritual counfaile had Shall flop, or spurre me. Haue I done well ?

Lord. Well done (my Lord.)
Leo. Though I am fatisfie, and neede no more
Then what I know, yet shall the Oracle
Give reft to th'mindes of others : fuch as he Whose ignorant credulitie, will not Come vp to th'real. So haue we thought it good
From our free perfon, shee should be confinde,
Leaff that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to performe. Come follow vs,
We are to speake in publique : for this busnifee
Will raife vs all.

Antig. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were knowne.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Gaoier, Emilia.
Paual. The Keeper of the prifon, call to him :
Let him have knowledge who I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What doft thou then in prifon? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not?
Gao. For a worthy Lady,
And one, who much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Condu(ude) me to the Queene.
Gao. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I have exprefse commandement.

Paul. Here's a do, to locke vp honestly & honour from Th'acceffe of gentle visitors. Is't lawfull pray you
To fee her Women? Any of them? Emilia?
Gao. So pleafe you (Madam)
To put a part thele your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now call her :
With draw your felues.
Gao. And Madam,
I must be prefent at your Conference.

Paul. Well : be't fo : prethee.
Heere's fuch a doe, to make no flaine, a flaine,
As paffes colouring. Deare Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady?

Emil. As well as one fo great, and fo forlorne
May hold together : On her ffrings, and greesers
(Which never tender Lady hath borne greater)
She is, fomething before her time, deliuer'd.

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lufty, and like to live : the Queene receiues
Much comfort in't : Sayes, my poor prifoner,
I am innocent as you,

Paul. I dare be sworne:
These dangerous, vnfaile Lunes i'th'King, befheir them:
He muft be told on't, and he shall not the office
Becomes a woman bef't. Ile take't vpon me,
If I proye hony-mouth'd, let my tongue bliffer.
And neuer to my red-look'd Anger bee
The Trumpet any more : pray you (Emilia)
Commend my beft obedience to the Queene,
If he dares trufe me with her little babe,
I'le shew't the King, and vnfaire to bee
Her Adovate to th'lowd'ft. We do not know
How he may frethen at the fight o'th'Childe :
The fience often of pure innocence
Periwades, when speaking faiues.

Emil. Moft worthy Madam, your honor, and your goodneffe is fo euident,
That your free vnfaire to cannot miffe
A thriuing yffe: there is no Lady Juinge
So mette for this great errand ; pleafe your Ladifhip
To visit the next roome, Ile prefently
Acquaint the Queene of your moft noble offer,
Who, but to day hammer'd of this defigne,
But durft not tempt a minifter of honour
Leafe the should be deny'd.
Scena Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Servants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Lea. Nor night, nor day, no rest: It is but weakness
To bear the matter thus: meere weakness, if
The carewa were not in being: part o' th'caufe,
She, th' Adultrefle: for the harlot-King
Is quite beyond mine Arme, out of the blanke
And leuell of my braine: plot-proofes: but thee,
I can hooke to me: say that she was gone,
Given to the fire, a moty of my rest
Might come to me againe. Whose there?
Ser. My Lord.
Lea. How do's the boy?
Ser. He tooke good rest to night: 'tis hop'd
His ficknesse is diischarg'd.
Lea. To fee his Noblenesse,
Conceyuing the diishonour of his Mother.
He straighte declin'd, droop'd, tooke it deepely,
Fallen, and fa'd the blame on't in himselfe:
Threw-off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleepe,
And down-right languish'd. Leave me solely: goe,
See how he fares: Fie, fie, no thought of him,
The very thought of my Renenges that way
Recouyle upon me: in himselfe too mightie,
And in his partes, his Alliance: Let him be,
Vntill a time may serue. For present vengeane
Take it on her: Camille, and Polixene
Laugh at me: make their paytime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall fhe, within my powre.

Enter Paulina.

LorD. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be secon to me:
Fear ye his tyrannous passion more (alas)
Then the Queenses life? A gracious innocent sole,
More free, then he is jealous.
Antig. That's enough.
Ser. Madam; he hath not slept to night, commanded
None should come at him.
Paul. Not so hot (good Sir)
I come to bring him sleepe. 'Tis such as you

That creep like shadowes by him, and do fighe
At each his needlesse heauings: such as you
Nourish the care of his awaking. I
Do come with words, as medicinall, as true;
(Honest, as either,) to purge him of that humor,
That pesifes him from sleepe.

LorD. Who noyle there, hoe?
Paul. No noyle (my Lord) but needful conference,
About some Gosips for your Highness.

Lea. How?
Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would.
Ant. I told her so (my Lord)
On your displeasures peril, and on mine,
She should not vift you.
Lea. What? canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonifie he can: in this (Vnleffe he take the courfe that you have done)
Commit me, for committing honor, trust it,
He shall not rule me:
Ant. La-you now, you heare,
When she will take the raine, I let her run,
But thee'nt shalumble.
Paul. Good my Liege, I come:
And I beesehen you heare me, who professe
My felse your loyall Servant, your Phyistian,
Your moft obedient Counseller: yet that dare
Leffe appear fo, in comforting your Euilles,
Then such as moft feeme yours. I say, I come
From your good Queenne.

Lea. Good Queenne?
Paul. Good Queenne (my Lord) good Queenne,
I say good Queenne,
And would by combe, make her good fo, were I
A man, the worst about you.
Lea. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine owne accord, Ile off,
But firt, Ile do my errand. 'The good Queenne
(For she is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Heere 'tis: Commends it to your Blessing.

Lea. Out.

A Mankinde Witch? Hence with her, out o'dore:
A moft intelligencing bawd.

Paul. Not fo:
I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In fo entiting me: and no leffe honest
Then you are mad: which is enough, Ile warrant
(As this world goes) to passe for honest:

Lea. Traitors;
Will you not push her out? Give her the Baffard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-yr'd: vnroofed
By thy dame Parlet here. Take vp the Baffard, Take't vp, I say: giue't to thy Crone.

Paul. For euer
Vnvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak't vp the Princeffe, by that forced basenefe
Which he ha's put vp'nt.
Lea. He dreads his Wife.
Paul. So I would you did: then 'twerre past all doubt
You'd call your children, yours.

Lea. A neit of Traitors.
Ant. I am none, by this good light.
Paul. Nor I: nor any
But one that's heere: and that's himselfe: for he,
The Winters Tale.

The faced Honor of himselfe, his Queenses,
His hopefull Sonnes, his Babes, betrays to Slander,
Whose sting is sharper then the Swords; and will not
(For as the cane now stands, it is a Curfe
He cannot be compell'd too't) once remove
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As ever Oake, or Stone was found.

Leo. A Callat
Of boundlesse tongue, who late hath beat her Husband,
And now bays me: This Brat is none of mine,
It is the Issue of Polixenes.

Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours:
And might we lay th'old Prouerbe to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worfe. Behold (my Lords)
Although the Print be little, the whole Matter
And Copy of the Father: (Eye, Nofe, Lippe,
The trick of's Frown, his Fore-head, nay, the Valley,
The pretty dimples of his Chin, and Cheeke; his Smiles:
The very Mold, and frame of Hand, Nailye, Finger.)
And thou good Godiffe Nature, which haft made it
So like to him that got it, if thou haft
The ordering of the Mind too, mongst all Colours
No Yellow in't, leaft the fufept, as he do's,
Her Children, not her Husbands.

Leo. A groffe Hagg:
And Lozell, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not flay thy Tongue.

Antig. Hang all the Husbands
That cannot doe that Feat, you leave your felle Hardly one Subiect.

Leo. Once more take her hence.

Paul. A moft vnworthy, and vnnatural Lord
Can doe no more.

Leo. Ille ha' thee burnt.

Paul. I care not:
It is an Heretique that makes the fire,
Not the which burns in't. Ile not call you Tyrant:
But this moft cruell viage of your Queene
(Not able to produce more accuation
Then your owne weake-hindg'd Fancy) somthing favors
Of Tyrannie, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, fcamalous to the World.

Leo. On your Allegiance,
Out of the Chamber with her, Were I a Tyrant,
Where were her life? she durft not call me fo,
If the did know me one, Away with her.

Paul. I pray you do not punn me, Ile be gone.
Looke to your Babe (my Lord) 'tis yours: love fend her
A better guiding Spirit. What needs these hands?
You that are thus fo tender o're his Follies,
Will never doe him good, not one of you.

So, I fo: Farewell, we are gone.

Leo. Thou (Traytor) haft fet on thy Wife to this.
My Child? away with't? even thou, that haft
A heart to tender o're it, take it hence,
And see it instantly conflagr'd with fire.
Euen thou, and none but thou. Take it vp straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimonie) or Ile feize thy life,
With what thou els call'lt thine: if thou refufe,
And wilt encounter with my Wrath, fay fo;
The Baffard-braynes with thefe my proper hands
Shall I daft out. Goe, take it to the fire,
For thou fett'lt on thy Wife.

Antig. I did not, Sir:
These Lords, my Noble Fellowes, if they pleafe,
Can cleare me in't.

Lords. We can: my Royall Liege,
He is not guiltie of her comming hither.

Leo. You're lyers all.

Lords. Beweeth your Highneffe, glue vs better credit:
We haue always truly fere'd you, and befeech'
So to efferme of vs: and on our knees we begge,
(As remembrance of our deare fervices
Past, and to come) that you doe change this purpofe,
Which being fo horrible, fo bloody, muft
Lead on to some foule Iffue. We all kneele.

Leo. I am a Feather for each Wind that blows: I shall live on, to fee this Baffard kneele,
And call me Father? better burne it now,
Then curse it then. But be it: let it live.
It shall not neyther. You Sir, come you hither:
You that haue beene fo tenderly officious
With Lady Margetye, your Mid. wife there,
To faue this Baffards life; for 'tis a Baffard,
So sure as this Beard's gray. What will you adeventure,
To faue this Brats life?

Antig. Any thing (my Lord)
That my ablittie may vndergoe,
And Noblenesse impoje: at least thus much;
Ile pawn the little blood which I have left,
To faue the Innocent; any thing poiffible.

Leo. It shall be poiffible: Sware by this Sword Thou wilt performe my bidding.

Antig. I will (my Lord.)

Leo. Marke, and performe it: feeth thou if for the faile
Of any point in't, shall not onely be Death to thy felle, but to thy lewed-tongu'd Wife, (Whom for this time we pardon) We enjoyne thee,
As thou art Liege-man to vs, that thou carry
This female Baffard hence, and that thou bear it
To some remote and defart place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leave it (Without more mercy) to it owne protection,
And favour of the Climate: as by strange fortune
It came to vs, I doe in Juficie charge thee,
On thy Soules perill, and thy Bodies torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where Chance may nurfe, or end it: take it vp.

Antig. I sware to doe this though a present defent
Had bene more mercurie. Come on (poore Babe)
Some powerfull Spirit instruct the Kytes and Rauens
To be thy Nurfes. Wolues and Beares, they fay, (Cafting their fauagenesse aside) have done
Like offices of Pitty. Sir, be prosperous
In more then this deed doo's require; and Blesfing
Against this Crueltie, ftrong on thy fide
(Poore Thing, condemn'd to loft.)

Leo. No: Ile not reare
Another Ifue.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Pleafe 'you Highneffe, Poifs
From those you bent to th'Oracle, are come
An houre since: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriu'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hafting to th' Court.

Lords. So pleafe you (Sir) their speed
Hath bene beyond acceomp.

Leo. Twentie or three dayes
They have bene abfent: 'tis good speed: fore-tells
The great Apollo fuddently will haue

The
The Winters Tale.

The truth of this appear'd: Prepare you Lords, Summon a Seffion, that we may arraigne
Our most dilloyall Lady: for as she hath
 Been publickly accus'd, so shall the haue
A just and open Triall. While she liues,
My heart will be a burthen to me. Leave me,
And thinke upon my bidding.

Exeunt.

Aactus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cleo. The Clymat's delicate, the Ayre most sweet,
Fertile the Isle, the Temple much surpassing
The common pray'r ye heare.

Dio. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the Celestiall Habits,
(Me thinkes I fo should terme them) and the reuerence
Of the graue Wearsers. O, the Sacrifice,
How ceremonious, solemnne, and vn-earthly
It was I'th'Offering.

Cleo. But of all the burn't
And the care-deaff' ning Voyce o'th'Oracle,
Kin to Ioses Thunder, so surpriz'd my Sence,
That I was nothing.

Dio. If th'euent o'th'journey
Prose asinceesful to the Queene(O be'st so)
As it hath beene to vs,rare,pleasant, speedie,
The time is worth the vfe on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turne all to th'best: thefe Proclamations,
So forcing faults vpon Hermione,
I little like.

Dio. The violent carriage of it
Will cleare, or end the Buinene, when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Divine seal'd vp )
Shall the Contents discouer: something rare
Euen then will ruth to knowledge. Go to: fresh Horses,
And gracious be the issue.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers: Hermione (as to her Trial) Ladies: Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Seffions(to our great griefe we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart. The partie try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of vs too much belou'd. Let vs be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, forse we fo openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the Guilt, or the Purgation:
Produce the Prisoner.

Officer. It is his Buinene pleasure, that the Queene Appeare in perfon, here in Court.

Silence.

Leo. Readie the Indictment.

Officer. Hermione, Queene to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accus'd and arraigned of High Treas-fon, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Souraigne Lord the King, thy Royall Husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou(Hermione) contrary to the Faith and Alleviance of a true Subject, didst counsaille and oyle them, for their better safestie, to flye away by Night.

Her. Since what I am to say,must be but that Which contradic't my Accusation, and
The testimonie on my part, no other
But what comes from my selfe, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guiltie: mine Integritie
Being counted Pallehood, shall (as I expresse it) be fo receiued.
But thus, if Powres Divine
Behold our humane Actions (as they doe)
I doubt not then, but innocence shall make False Accusation blufh, and Tyrannie
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord) best know (Whom least will seeme to doe so) my past life
Hath beene as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now vnhappy; which is more
Then Historie can pattern, though deuis'd,
And play'd, to take Speculators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royall Bed, which owe
A Moitie of the Throne: a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopefull Prince, here standing
To prate and talke for Life, and Honor, fore
Who plesse to come, and heare.
For Life, I prize it
As I receiue Griefe (which I would spaire)
For Honor, 'Tis a deriuatue from me to mine,
And onely that I stand for. I appeale
To your owne Consciencie (Sir) before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter fo vncurrant, I
Have hardy'ed your pruence thus; if one ito beyt
The bound of Honor, or in act, or will
That way enclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that hearre me, and my near'f of Kin
Cry fie vpon my Graue.

Leo. I ne're heard yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Leiffe Impudence to gaine-fay what they did,
Then to performe it firke.

Her. That's true enough,
Though tis a faying(Sir) not due to me.

Leo. You will not owne it.

Her. More then Mitrefte of Which comes to me in name of Fault; I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I doe confesse
I lou'd him, as in Honor he requir'd:
With such a kind of Loue, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Loue, eu'n fuch,
So, and no other, as your selfe commanded :
Which, not to have done, I thinke had been in me
Both Disobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and toward your Friend, whose Loue had spoke,
Euen fince it could speake, from an Infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracie,
I know not how it taffes, though it be diff'd
For me to trye how: All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your Court, the Gods themselves
(Wotting no more then I) are ignorant.

Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have vndersta'ne to doe in's abstinence.

Her. Sir,
The Winters Tale.
The sweet'rt. deer'rt creature's dead:& vengeance for't
Not drop'd downe yet.
Lord. The higher powres forbid.
Pass. I say she's dead : Ile fwear't. If word, nor oath
Preusie not, go and see : if you can bring Tinneure, or lustre in her lip, her eye
Heate outwardsly, or breath within, Ile serue you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Do not repent these things, for they are heauier
Then all thy woes can hire : therefore betake thee
To nothing but dispaire. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand yeares together, naked, falling,
Vpon a barren Mountain, and fill Winter
In forme perpetuall, could not move the Gods
To looke that way thou wert.'n
Leo. Go on, go on :
Thou canst not speake too much, I haue defuerd
All tongues to talke their bittreft.
Lord. Say no more ;
How ere the businesse goes, you haue made fault
I' th foulneffe of your speech.
Pass. I am sorry for't ;
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent : Alas, I haue thew'd too much
The rathneffe of a woman : he is toucht
To th'Noble heart. What's gone, and what's past helpe
Should be past greefe : Do not receive affliction
At my petition ; I befeech you, rather
Let me be puni'h'd, that haue minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royall Sir, forgive a foolish woman :
The loose I bore your Queene (Lo, foole agaie)
Ile speake of her no more, nor of your Children :
Ile not remember you of my owne Lord,
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And Ile say nothing.
Leo. Thou didst speake but well,
When moft the truth : which I receyue much better,
Then to be pittied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queene, and Sonne,
One graue shall be for both : Vpon them shall
The caufes of their death appear (unto
Our shame perpetuall) once a day, Ile vifit
The Chappell where they lye, and teares shed there Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
Will beare vp with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to vfe it. Come, and leade me
To these forrowes.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Marriner, Babe, Sheepebard, and Glove.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath toucht vpon
The Dearts of Bohemia.
Mar. I (my Lord) and fear
We have Landed in ill time : the skies looke grimly,
And threaten preuent blutters. In my conscience
The heauens with that we haue in hand, are angry,
And frowne vpon's.

Ant. Their laced will's be done : go get a-boaord,
Looke to thy barke, Ile not be long before
I call vpon thee.
Mar. Make your beeft haffe, and go not Too-farre i'th Land : 'tis like to be lowd weather,
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keepe vpon't.
Antig. Go thou away,
Ile follow infantly.
Mar. I am glad at heart
To be fo ridde o'th businesse.
Ant. Come, poor babe;
I haue heard (but not beleu'd) the Spirits o'th dead
May walke againe : if fuch thing be, thy Mother
Appeard to me last night : for ne're was dreame
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one fide, some another,
I neuer faw a vefell of like forrow
So fill'd, and fo becoming : in pure white Robes
Like very fanCty she did approach
My Cabine where I lay : thrice bow'd before me,
And (gaeping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two fpouts; the furie fpent, anon
Did this breakse from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy perfon for the Thower-out
Of my poore babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying : and for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prethee call'rt: For this vngente businesse
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shall fee
Thy Wife Paulina more : and fo, with thriekes
She melted into Ayre. Aftirring much,
I did in time collect my selfe, and thought
This was fo, and no flumber: Dreams, are toys,
Yet for this once, yen superfliouly,
I will be quarr'd by this. I do beleue Hermione hath fuffer'd death, and that Apollo would (this being indeede the isue
Of King Polixenes) it should heere be laide
(Either for life, or death) vpon the earth
Of it's right Father. Blofome, speed thee well,
There lye, and there thy charactrer : there thiefe,
Which may if Fortune pleafe, both breed thee (pretty)
And still rett thine. The ftrume begins, poore wretch,
That for thy mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To loife, and what may follow. Weep I cannot,
But my heart bleedes : and moifl accurst am I
To be by oath eniyn'd to this. Farewell,
The day frownes more and more : thou'r like to have
A lullable too rough : I neuer faw
The heauens so dim, by day. A flauage clamor?
Well may I get a-boaord : This is the Chace,
I am gone for ever.

Exit pursed by a Beare.

Sleen. I would there were no age betwenee ten and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the reft :
for there is nothing (in the betwenee) but getting wenchs with childe, wronging the Auncletry, healeing, fighting, hearde you now : would any but these boyldebraines of nineteen, and two and twenty hunt this weathe-ren ? They have fcar'd away two of my beeft Sheepe, which I care the Wolfe will fooner finde then the Mafter ; if any where I haue them, 'tis by the sea-fide, brou-zing of Iuy. Good-lucke (and'be thy will) what haue we heere ? Mercy on's, a Barne ? A very pretty barne ;
A boy, or a Childe I wonder ? (A pretty one, a verie prettie one) fure some Scape ; Though I am not bookish, yet I can red. Waiting-Gentlewoman in the fcape: this has beene some faire-werke, some Trunk-e-werke, some be-hide-doore worke: they were warmer that got this, then the poore Thing is heere. Ile take it vp for pity, yet

Ile tarry till my fonne come: he hallow'd but euen now.
Whoa-ho-hoa.

Enter Clouane.

Clo. Hilloa, loa.
Slep. What? art fo neere? If thou'lt fee a thing to take on, when thou art dead and rotten, come hither: what sayl't thou, man?

Clo. I haue fene two fuch flights, by Sea & by Land: but I am not to fay it is a Sea, for it is now the skie, be-twixt the Firmeament and it, you cannot thraulf a bodkins point.

Slep. Why boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but fee how it chaffes, how it rages, how it take vp the shore, but that's not to the point:

Oh, the moft pittous cry of the poore foules, sometimes to fee 'em, and not to fee 'em: Now the Shippe boaring the Moone with her maine Maft, and anon swallowed with yeft and froth, as you'd thraulf a Corke into a hog-head. And then for the Land-ferue, to fee how the Beare tore out his shoulder-bone, how he cride to mee for helpe, and faid his name was Antigonus, a Nobleman:
But to make an end of the Ship, to fee how the Sea flap-dragon'd it: but firft, how the poore foules roared, and the Sea mock'd themand how the poore Gentleman roared, and the Beare mock'd him, both roaring lowder than the sea, or weather.

Slep. Name of mercy, when was this boy?

Clo. Now, now: I haue not wink'd foince I faw these fights: the men are not yet cold vnder water, nor the Beare halfe din'd on the Gentleman: he's at it now.

Slep. Would I had bin by, to haue help'd the olde man.

Clo. I would you had beene by the ship fide, to haue help'd her; there your charityould have lack'd footing.

Slep. Heaue matters, heaue matters: but looke thee heere boy. Now bleffe thy felfe: thou met'ft with things dying, I with things new borne. Here's a fight for thee:
Looke thee, a bearing-clofh for a Squires childe: looke thee heere, take vp, take vp (Boy:) open' t: fo, let's fee, it was told me I fhould be rich by the Fairies. This is some Changeling: open' t: what's within, boy?

Clo. You're a mad olde man: If the finnes of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to liue. Golde, all Gold.

Slep. This is Faiery Gold boy, and 'twill proue fo: vp with't, keepe it clofe: home, home, the next way. We are luckie (boy) and to bee fofill requires nothing but ferceifie. Let my theepe go: Come (good boy)the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your Findings, Ile go fee if the Beare bee gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are neuer curft but whe-then there hungry: if there be any of him left, Ile bury it.

Slep. That's a good deed: if thou mayeft difcern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th'fight of him.

Clouane. 'Marry will I: and you fhall helpe to put him i'th ground.

Slep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and wee'll do good deeds on't

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pelizzene, and Camillo.

Pel. I pray thee (good Camillo) be no more importune: 'tis a fickneffe denying thee any thing: a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fiftye yeeres since I faw my Countrey: though I haue (for the moft part) bin ayred abroad, I defer to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent King (my Mafter) hath fent for me, to whose forrowes I might be fome allay, or I erroewene to thinke fo)which is another fhppe to my departure.

Pel. As thou lou'ft me (Camillo) wipe not out the refl th of thy feruices, by leauing me now: the neede I haue of thine owne goodneffe hath made: better not to have haue thine, then thus to want thee, thou hauing made me Buineffes, (which none (without thee) can fufficently manage) muft either fay to execute them thy felle, or take away with thee the very feruices thou haft done:
which if I haue not enough confidered (as too much I cannot) to bee more thankefull to thee, thall bee my frudie, and my profite therein, the heaping ffriendhips.

Of that fatal Countrey Sicilia, prethee fpake no more,
whoe very naming, punifhes me with the remembrance of that penitent (as thou callest him) and reconciled King my brother, whole lofe of his most precious Queene & Children, are even now to be a-fresh lamented. Say to me, when sawst thou the Prince Florizell my son? Kings are no leefe vnhappy, their iffue, not being gracious, then they are in looing them, when they have approvd their Vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three dayes since I saw the Prince: what his happier affayres may be, are to me unknowne: but I have (mislyingly) noted, he is of late much retire from Court, and is leefe frequent to his Princely exercizes then formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much (Camille) and with some care, to farre, that I have eyes vnder my seruice, which looke upon his removedness: from whom I haue this Intelligence, that he is feldome from the house of euer homely shepheard: a man (they say) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbors, is grown to an unpeakeable estate.

Cam. I haue heard (Sir) of such a man, who hath a daughter of moft rare note: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my Intelligence: but (I fear) the Angle that plucks our ifonne thither. Thou shalt accompany vs to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) haue some question with the shepheard: from whose simplectic, I thinke it not vnsafe to get the cause of my ifrones retort therewith. "Prethe be my present partner in this busines, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My selfe Camille, we must disguise our felues. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Autolicus singing.

When Daffodils begin to peere,
With bigh the Doxy ouer the dale,
Why then comes in the sweet o'the yeere,
For the red blood raigns in 'o winters pale.

The white foete bleaching on the budge,
With bey the sweete birds, O bow thy fying:
Dob fyt my pugging tooth an edge,
For a quart of Ale is a dish for a King.

The Larke, that tirra-Lyra chaunts,
With bigh, the Thrush and the Lay:
Are Summer songs for me and my Aunts
While we yue tumbling in the bay.

I haue leru'd Prince Florizell, and in my time wore three pile, but now I am out of seruice.

But shal I go mourne for that (my deere)
The pale Moone fmites by night:
And when I wander here, and there
I then do moft go right.

If Tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the Straw-skin Bouquet,
Then my account I well may give,
And in the Stockes awash-it.

My Traffickes is sheetes: when the Kite builds, looke to letier Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolicus, who being (as I am) ytter'd vnder Mercurie, was likewise a snapper-up of vnconsidered trifles: With Dye and drab, I purchas'd this Caparison, and my Reuennew is the filly Cheate. Gallower, and Knocke, are too powerfull on the Highway. Beating and hanging are terrors to mee: For the life to come, I flepe out the thought of it. A prize, a prize.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. Let me see, every Leauen-weather tuddes, every tod yeeldes pound and oddle fillings: fifteen hundred shorne, what comes the wooll too?

Aut. If the springde hold, the Cocke's mine. Clo. I cannot do't without Compters. Let mee see, what am I to buy for our Sheepe-hearing-Feast? Three pound of Sugar, fiue pound of Currence, Rice: What will this fifter of mine do with Rice? But my father hath made her Mitris of the Feast, and she lays it on. Shee hath made me four and twenty Nofe-gayes for the theares (three-man fong-men, all, and very good ones) but they are moft of them Meanes and Baffes; but one Puritan amongst them, and he fings Palmes to horne-pipes. I muft haue Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace: Dates, none: that's out of my note: Nutmegges, feuen ; a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may begge: Fioure pound of Prewyns, and as many of Reynons o'th Sun.

Aut. Oh, that euer I was borne.

Clo. Ith name of me.

Aut. Oh helpe me, helpe mee: plucke but off these raggys: and then, death, death.

Clo. Alacke poore foule, thou haft need of more rags to lay on thee, rather then haue thefe off.

Aut. Oh fir, the loathfommes of them offend mee, more then the stripes I haue receiued, which are mightie ones and millions.

Clo. Alas poore man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd fir, and beaten: my money, and apperrell tane from me, and thefe derechole things put vp on me.

Clo. What, by a horfe-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A footman (sweet fir) a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee: If this bee a horfemen Coate, it hath scene very hot fervice. Lend me thy hand, Ile helpe thee. Come, lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good fir, tenderly, oh.

Clo. Alas poore foule.

Aut. Oh good fir, softly, good fir: I fear (fir) my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? Canst fland?

Aut. Softly, deere fir: good fir, softly: you ha done me a charitable office.

Aut. No, good sweet fir: no, I beseech you fir: I have a Kinman not paft three quarters of a mile hence, vnto whom I was going: I shall there haue mony, or anie thing I want: Offer me no mony I pray you, that killes my heart.

Clo. What manner of Fellow was hee that robb'd you?

Aut. A fellow (fir) that I haue knowne to goe about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a feruant of the Prince: I cannot tell good fir, for which of his Vertues it was, but hee was certainly Whipt out of the Court.

Clo.
Cl. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court; they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir,) I know this man well, he hath bene since an Ape-bearer, then a Prodigall sonne, and married a Tinkers wife, within a Mile where my Land and Liuing lyes; and (hauing flowne ouer many knauff proffessions) he setled onely in Rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Aut. Very true sir: he set hee: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparrrell.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Babelonia; if you had but look'd bigge, and spit at him, hee'ld have runne.

Aut. I must confesse to you (Sir) I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, & that he knew I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better then I was: I can stand, and walke: I will even take my leave of you, & pace softly towards my Kinman.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good fac'd sir, no sweet sir.

Clo. Then fartherwell, I must go by Spices for our sheepe-hearing.

Exit. Not forry you sweet sir. Your purfe is not hot e-nough to purchase your Spice: Ile be with you at your sheepe-hearing too: If I make not this Cheat bring out another, and the sheerers prove sheepe, let me be vnrold, and my name put in the booke of Vertue.

Song. Jeg-on, jeg-on, the foot-path-way, And merrily bent the Stile-a: A merry heart goes all the day, Your sad tyres in a Mile-a. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Florinelli, Perdita, Shepherd, Cloane, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopha, Dorcas, Seruants, Autolycus.

Flo. Thesfe your vvnfull weeds, to each part of you Do's give a life: no Shepherdesse, but Flora Peering in Aprils front. This your sheepe-hearing, Is as a meeting of the petty Gods, And you the Queene on't.

Perd. Sir: my gracious Lord, To chide at your extremeats, it not becomes me: (Oh pardon, that I name them:) your high selfe The gracious marke o'th'Land, you haue obser'd With a Swaines wearing: and me (poore lowly Maid) Most Goddefe-like prank'd vp: But that our Feasts In every Meffe, haue folly: and the Feeders Digefit with a Cuftome, I shou'd blufh To fee you so attyr'd: sworne I thinke, To shew my felfe a glaffe.

Flo. I bleffe the time When my good Falcon, made her flight a-croffe Thy Fathers ground.

Perd. Now I owe affoord you cause: To me the difference forges dread (your Greatnesse Hath not beene vs'd to feare:) euen now I tremble To thinke your Father, by some accident Should pufhe this way, as you did: Oh the Fates, How would he looke, to fee his worke, fo noble, Vildely bound vp? What would he say? Or how Should I (in thefe my borrowed Flaults) behold The sternnesse of his preffence?

Flo. Apprehend Nothing but iollity: the Gods themselfes (Humbling their Deities to loue) have taken The shapes of Beasts upon them. Jupiter, Became a Bull, and bellow'd: the greene Neptune A Ram, and bleasted: and the Fire-roa'ld-God Golden Apollo, a poore humble Swaine, As I feeme now. Their transformations, Were never for a piece of beauty, rarer, Nor in a way fo chaft: since my defires Run not before mine honor: nor my Lufts Burne hotter then my Faith, Perd. O but Sir, Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis Oppor'd (as it must be) by th'powre of the King: One of these two must be neccessities, Which then will speake, that you must change this pur- Or I my life.

Flo. Thou deerr Perdita, With thefe forc'd thoughts, I prethee darken not The Mirth o'th' Feast: Or I he be thine (my Faire) Or not my Fathers. For I cannot be Mine owne, nor any thing to any, if I be not thine. To this I am most confant, Though defhiny lay no. Be merry (Gentle) Strange fuch thoughts as thefe, with any thing That you behold the while. Your guets are comming: Lift vp your countenance, as it were the day Of celebration of that nuptiall, which We two haue sworne shall come.

Perd. O Lady Fortune, Stand you auspicious.

Flo. See, your Guests approach, Addrefse your felfe to entertaine them fprightly, And let's be red with mirth.

Skep. Fy (daughter) when my old wife liu'd: upon This day, she was both Pantler, Butler, Cooke, Both Dame and Seruant: Welcom'd all: feru'd all, Would fing her fong, and dance her tyme: now here At vpper end o'th Table; now, i'th middle:
On his fhoulder, and his: her face o'fire With labour, and the thing the tooke to quench it She would to each one fip. You are retreyd, As if you were a fealed one: and not The Hoofeiffe of the meeting: Pray you bid Thesfe unkowne friends to welcomme, for it is A way to make vs better Friends, more knowne. Come, quench your blushes, and prefent your feld Chevy that which you are, Miffis o'th'Feast. Come on, And bid vs welcome to your sheepe-hearing, As your good flocke shall prosper.

Perd. Sir, welcome: It is my Fathers will, I should take on mee The Hoofeiffehip o'th day: you're wecome sir, Give me thawe Flowers there (Dorcas.) Reuereend Sirs, For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, thefe keepe Seeming, and favour all the Winter long: Grace, and Remembrance be to you both, And welcome to our Shearing.

B b 2
The Winters Tale.

Pol. Shepheardes,
(A faire one are you:) well you fit our ages
With flowres of Winter.

Perd. Sir, the yeare growing ancient,
Not yet on summers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flowres o'th season
Are our Carnations, and freak'd Gilly-vors,
(Which some call Natures bankards) of that kind
Our rutticke Gardens barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore (gentle Maiden)
Do you neglect them.

Perd. For I haue heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their pilenesse shares
With great creating-Nature.

Pol. Say there be:
Yet Nature is made better by no meane,
But Nature makes that Meanes: fo ouer that Art,
(Which you say addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you see (sweet Maid) we marry
A gentler Sien, to the wildest Stocke,
And make conceyue a barke of bafer kinde
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
Which do's mend Nature: change it rather; but
The Art it selfe, is Nature.

Perd. So it is.

Pol. Then make you Garden rich in Gilly'vors,
And do not call them bankards.

Perd. Hee not put
The Dible in earth, to fet one flip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 'twr well: and onely therefore Defire to breed by me. Here's flowres for you:
Hot Lauender, Mints, Sauory, Mariorum
The Mary-gold, that goes to bed with Sun,
And with him rifes, weeping: These are flowres
Of middle summer, and I thinke they are gien
To men of middle age. Y'are very welcome.

Cam. He should leave grafting, were I of your flocke,
And onely live by gazing.

Perd. Out alas:
You'll be so lean, that blads of January (Friend,
Would blow you through and through:now (my fairest
I would I had some Flowres o'th Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours,
That weare upon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden heads growing: O Proserpina,
For the Flowres now, that (frighted thou) let't fall
From Daffs Waggon: Daffadils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The windes of March with beauty: Violets (dim,
But sweeter then the lids of Iune's eyes,
Or Cymbres' breath) pale Prime-roes,
That dye unmarrried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strengh (a Madalie Most incident to Maidis:) bold Oxlys, and
The Crowne Imperiall: Lillies of all kinds,
(The Flowre-de-Luce being one.) O, these I lacke,
To make you Gardans off) and my sweet friend,
To strew him o're, and ore.

Fls. What like a Coraie?

Perd. No, like a banke, for Loue to lye, and play on:
Not like a Coraie: or if: not to be buried.
But quicke, and in mine armes. Come, take your flower,
Me thinkes I play as I haue seene them do
In Whitfon-Pastorals: Sure this Robe of mine

Do's change my disposition:
Fls. What you do,
Still better what is done. When you speake (Sweet)
I'd haue you do it euer: When you sing,
I'd haue you buy, and sell fo: so shew Almes,
Pray fo: and for the ord'ring your Affayres,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wawe o'th Sea, that you might euer do
Nothing but that: move still, still fo:
And owne no other Function. Each your doing,
(No singular, in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing, in the present deeds,
That all your Actes, are Queenes.

Perd. O Daricles,
Your prattes are too large: but that your youth
And the true blood which peepes fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unflain'd Shepheard
With wifedome, I might feare (my Daricles)
You woold me the falsie way.

Flo. I thynke you haue
As little skill to feare, as I haue purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdita:) fo Turtles paire
That neuer meane to part.

Perd. Iie sweare for em.

Pr. This is the prettiest Low-borne Laffte, that euer
Ran on the greene-foord: Nothing the do's, or feemes
But smackes of something greater then her selfe,
Too Noble for this place.

Cam. He tels her something
That makes her blood looke on't: Good sooth she is The Queene of Curds and Creame.

Clp. Come on; strike vp.

Dorcas, Mopja must be your Mi'tris: marry Garlick
To mend her killing with.

Mop. Now in good time.

Clp. Not a word, a word, we stand upon our manners,
Come, strike vp.

Here a Daunce of Shykeards and Shepheardes.

Pol. Pray good Shepheard, what faire Swaine is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Scep. They call him Daricles, and boasts himselfe
To haue a worthy Feeding; but I haue it
Vpon his owne report, and I beleue it:
He lookes like footh: he fayes he loues my daughter,
I thynke fo too; for neuer gas'd the Moore
Vpon the water, as hee'll stand and reade
As twere my daughters eyes: and to be plaine,
I thynke there is not halfe a knife to choife
Who loues another bett.

Pol. She dances fealty.

Scep. So she do's any thing, though I report it
That shoule be flent: If yong Daricles
Do light vpon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter Servant.

Srp. O Mafter: if you did but heare the Pedler at the door, you would never dance againe after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not move you: hee finges feueral Tunes, faffer then you'll tell money: hee vters them as hee had eaten ballads, and all mens eares grew to his Tunes.

Clp. He could never come better: hee shall come in:
I loue a ballad but euen too well, if it be dolefull matter merily set downe: or a very pleasant thing indeede, and sung lamentably.

Srp.
Ch. What hast heare? Ballads?
Mop. Pray now buy some: I loue a ballet in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.
Aut. Here's one, to a very dolefull tune, how a Viuners wife was brought to bed of twenty money baggs at a burthen, and how she long'd to eate Adders heads, and Toads carbonado'd.
Mop. Is it true, thinke you?
Aut. Very true, and but a moneth old.
Dor. Bleffe me from marrying a Wifer.
Aut. Here's the Midwifes name to't: one Mift. Tale-
Porter,and fie or fix honest Wives, that were pretfent.
Why should I carry eyes abroad?
Mop. 'Pray you now buy it.
Ch. Come-on, lay it by: and let's first see moe Ballads: We'll buy the other things anon.
Aut. Here's another ballad of a Fifth, that appeared upon the coast, on wen'day the fourscore of April, forti thousand fadom above water, & fung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fihn, for she wold not exchange flesh with one that lou'd her: The Ballad is very pittifull, and as true.
Dor. Is it true too, thinke you.
Autol. Finre Juflices hands at it, and witnefse more then my packe will hold.
Ch. Lay it by too; another.
Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.
Mop. Let's have some merry ones.
Aut. Why this is a paffing merry one, and goes to the tune of two maids wooming a man: there's scarce a Maide weftward but the fings it: 'tis in requifit, I can tell you.
Mop. We can both fing it: if thou'l beare a part, thou fault heare, 'tis in three parts.
Dor. We had the tune on't, a month agoe.
Aut. I can beare my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Haue at it with you.
Song. Get you hence, for I must goe
Aut. Where it fits not you to know.
Dor. Wether?
Mop O wether?
Dor. Wether?
Mop. It becomes thy oath full weall
Thou to me thy fecrets tell.
Dor: Me too: Le me go theret:
Mop Or thou goeff to the Granges, or Mill,
Dor: If to either thou doft ill,
Aut. Neither.
Aut. What neither;
Aut: Neither:
Dor: Thou haft juorne my Love to be,
Mop Thou haft juorne it more to mee.
Then wether goeff? Say wether ?
Ch. We'll have this song out anon by our felves: My Father, and the Gent. are in fad tale, & we'll not trouble them: Come bring away thy pack after me, Wenchies lie buy for you both: Pedler let's have the first choices folow me girls.
Aut: And you shall pay well for 'em
Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Crepe?
My dainty Duckes, my deere-a?
Any Silke, any Vored, any Voys for your head
Of the fews-, and fons, fins' weare-a
Come to the Pedler, 'Mony's a meddler,
That doth witen all men weare-a.
Exit.
Servant. Mayfter, there is three Carters, three Shelp herds, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds y haue made
B 3 them.
The Winters Tale.

themselfes all men of haire, they call themselfes Saltiers, and they have a Dance, which the Wenchese say is a galy-mauntry of Gambols, because they are not in't: but they themselfes are o'th'min'de if it bee not too rough for some, that know little but bowling it will please plentifully.

Slep. Away: We'll none on't; here hee beene has too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) wee wearie you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh vs : pray let's see these foure-threes of Heardsmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their owne report (Sir,) hath danc'd before the King : and not the work of the three, but jumps twelve foote and a halfe by th'figure.

Slep. Leave your prating, since these good men are pleast'd, let them come in: but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they stay at doore Sir. Here a Dance of twelve Satyres.

Pol. O Father, you'll know more of that hereafter:
Is it not too farre gone? 'Tis time to part them,
He's simple, and tells much. How now (aire theheard) Your heart is full of something, that do's take Your minde from feafting. Sooth, when I was yong,
And handed loue, as you do ; I was wont
To load my Shee with knackses : I would haue ranfackt
The Pediers filken Trefury, and have pow'r'd it
To her acceptance : you haue let him go,
And nothing marred with him. If your Lasse
Interpretation shoul'd abuse, and call this
Your lacke of loue, or bounty, you were striated
For a reply at leaft, if you make a care
Of happie holding her.

Flo. Old Sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are :
The gifts she lookes from me, are packt and lockt
Vp in my heart, which I haue given already,
But not deliver'd. O hearre me breath my life
Before this ancient Sir, (whom it shoul'd seeme)
Hath sometime loud : I take thy hand, this hand,
As soft as Doues-downe, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian tooth, or the fan'd snow, that's bolted
By th'Northerne blasts, twice ore.

Pol. What follows this?

How prettily th'yong Swaine feemes to waft
The hand, was faire before? I haue put youout,
But to your protestation : Let me heare
What you professe.

Flo. Do, and be witneffe too't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more : but quickly now.

Then he, and men : the earth, the heauen, and all ;
That were I crown'd the most Imperial Monarch
Thereof most worthy : were I the payreft youth
That euer made eyre swerue, had force and knowledge
More then was euer mans, I would not prize them
Without her Loue; for her, employ them all,
Commend them, and condemne them to her feruice,
Or to their owne perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Cam. This newes a found affection.

Slep. But my daughter,
Say you the like to him.

Per. I cannot speake
So well, (nothing so well) no, nor meane better
By th'paterns of mine owne thoughts, I cut out
The puritie of his.

Slep. Take hands, a bargain;
And friends vnakowne, you shall beare witneffe to't: I gue my daughter to him, and will make Her Portion, equall his.

Flo. O, that muft bee
I' th Vertue of your daughter : One being dead,
I shall have more then you can dreame of yet,
Enough then for your wonder : but come-on,
Contract vs fore thefe Witnefses.

Slep. Come, your hand:
And daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft Swaine a-while, befeech you,
Haue you a Father?

Flo. I haue : but what of him?

Pol. Knowes he of this?

Flo. He neither do's, nor shal.

Pol. Me-thinkes a Father,
Is at the Nuptiall of his fonne, a guest
That best becomes the Table : Pray you once more
Is not your Father growne incapable
Of reafonable affaires? Is he not a labt
With Age, and altring Rheumes? Can he speake? heare?
Know man, from man? Dispute his owne estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? And againe, do's nothing
But what he did, being childifh?

Flo. No good Sir:
He has his health, and ampler strength indeede
Then moft haue of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him (if this be fo) a wrong
Something vanilliall: Reafon my fonne
Should choose himselfe a wife, but as good rea'on
The Father (all whose joy is nothing elfe)
But faire poterity) shoul'd hold some counfalle
In such a bшинefse.

Flo. I yeeld all this;
But for some other rea'ons (my graue Sir)
Which 'ts not fit you know, I not acquaint
My Father of this buſiness.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Flo. No, he muft not.

Slep. Let him (my fonne) he shall not need to greeue
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he muft not;
Marke our Contract.

Pol. Marke your diuorce (yong Sir)
Whom fonne I dare not call: Thou art too bafe
To be acknowledge. Thou a Scepters heire,
That thus affects a theepe-hooke? Thou, old Traitor,
I am forry, that by hanging thee, I can but shorten thy life one weeke. And thou, frefh peece
Of excellent Witchcraft, whom of force muft know
The royall Foleou thou couplft with.

Slep. Oh my heart.

Pol. He have thy beauty scratcht with briers & made
More homely then thy fiate. For thee (fond boy)
If I may euer know thou doft but figh,
That thou no more thall neuer fee this knacke (as neuer
I meane thou shalt) we'll bare thee from fuecclion,
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our Kin,
Farre then Deuclion off: (marke thou my words)
Follow vs to the Court. Thou Charles, for this time
(Though full of our displeasure) yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. And you Enchantment,
Worthy enough a Heardsman: yea him too,
That makes himselfe (but for our Honor therein)
Worthy thine. If ever henceforth, thou
Thinck well rurall Latches, to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will desile a death, as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to't.

Exeunt.

I was not much a-fear'd: for once, or twice
I was about to speake, and tell him plainly,
The felde same Sun, that thines vpon his Court,
Hides not his vifage from our Cottage, but Lookes on alike. Wilt pleafe you (Sir) be gone?
I told you what would come of this: Befeech you
Of your owne flate take care: This dreame of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queene it no inch farther,
But milke my Ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why how now Father,
Speake ere thou dyest.

Shep. I cannot speake; nor thinke,
Nor dare to know, that which I know: O Sir,
You have vndone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet: yea,
To dye vpon the bed my father dy'de,
To lye close by his honest bones; but now
Some Hangman muft put on my shrowd, and lay me
Where no Priest shou'd in duft. Oh curfed wretch,
That knew't this was the Prince, and would not adventure
To mingle fault with him. Vndone, vndone:
If I might dye within this hour, I haue lu'd
To die when I desire.

Flo. Why looke you so vpon me?
I am but forry, not affair'd: delaid,
But nothing altred: What I was, I am:
More draining on, for plucking backe; not following
My leaff vnwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know my Fathers temper: at this time
He will allow no speche: (which I do gheffe
You do not purpofe to him:) and as hardly
Will he endure your fight, as yet I feare;
Then till the fury of his Highnesse settle
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpofe it:
I thinke Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my Lord.

Per. How often haue I told you 'twould be thus?
How often faid my dignity would laft
But till 'twer knowne?

Flo. It cannot faile, but by
The violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature cruft the fides o'th earth together,
And marre the fpeedes within. Lift vp thy lookees:
From my succeffion wipe me (Father) I
Am heyre to my affeccion.

Cam. Be adul'd.
Flo. I am: and by my fancie, if my Reason
Will thereto be obiedient: I haue reafon:
If not, my fences better pleas'd with madneffe,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. 'This is desperate (Sir.)

Flo. So call it: but it do's fulfill my vow:
I needs muft thinke it honestly. Camillo,
Not for Bohemian, nor the pompe that may
Be theret haften: for all the Sun fees,
The clofe earth wombes, or the profounde feas, hides

In vnknowne sadomes, will I breake my oath
To this my faire belou'd: Therefore, I pray you,
As you have cuer bin my Fathers honour'd friend,
When he shall misle me, as (in faith I meane not To fee him any more) caft your good counsailies
Upon his passion: Let my felfe, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And fo deliuer, I am put to Sea
With her, who heere I cannot hold on shore:
And moft opportune to her neede, I haue
A Veffel rides faft by, but not prepar'd
For this defigne. What courfe I meane to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concerne me the reparing.

Cam. O my Lord,
I would your spirit were easier for aduice,
Or stronger for your neede.
Flo. Heare Perdita,
Ile heare you by and by.

Cam. Hee's irremouable,
Refolu'd for flight: Now were I happy if
His going, I could frame to ferue my turns;
Sawe him from danger, do him loue and honor,
Purchafe the flight againe of deere Sicillia,
And that vnhappy King, my Master, whom
I fo much thirft to fee.

Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am fo fraught with curious businesse, that
I leave out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I thinke
You have heard of my poore seruices, 'tis loue
That I haue borne your Father?
Flo. Very nobly
Haue you defeu'd: It is my Fathers Muicke
To speake your deeds: not little of his care
To haue them recompen'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well (my Lord)
If you may pleafe to thinke I love the King,
And through him, what's neerest to him, which is
Your gracious felle; embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and settled proiect
May fufter alteration. On mine honor,
Ie point you where you shall haue fuch receiuing
As shall become your Highnesse, where you may Enjoy your Misris; from the whom, I fee
There's no difunction to be made, but by
(As heauens forefend) your ruine: Marry her,
And with my best endeauours, in your abence,
Your discontenting Father, ftriue to qualifie
And bring him vp to liking.

Flo. How Camillo
May this (almost a miracle) be done?
That I may call the something more then man,
And after that truth to thee.

Cam. Haue you thought on
A place whereeto you'l go?
Flo. Not any yet:
But as th'vnthought-on accident is guitle
To what we wildly do, fo we professe
Our felues to be the flaves of chance, and flies
Of every winde that blowes.

Cam. Then lift to me:
This followes, if you will not change your purpose
But vndergo this flight; make for Sicillia,
And there prefent your felfe, and your fayre Princeffe,
(For fo I fee the muft be) fore Leontes;

Shee
The Winters Tale.

She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Me thinkes I see Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping.
His Welcome forthasks thee there Sonne forgiveneffe,
As twere i'th' Fathers perfons: kiffes the hands
Of your fresh Princesse; ore and ore diuides him,
"Twixt his vnkindnese, and his Kindnese: th'one
He chiides to Heil, and bids the other grow
Faftern then Thought, or Time.

Fio. Why Camillia?
What colour for my Vifitation, shall I
Hold vp before him?

Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) shall deliver,
Things knowne betwixt vs three, Ile write you downe,
The which shall point you forth at every fitting
What you must say: that he not perceive,
But that you have your Fathers Bofome there,
And speake his very Heart.

Flo. I am bound to you:
There is some fappe in this.

Cam. A Courte more promising,
Then a wild dedication of your felves
To vnpaith'd Waters, vnthread'd Shores; moft certaine,
To Miferies enough: no hope to helpe you,
But as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing fo certaine, as your Anchors, who
Doe their bent office, if they can but flay you,
Where you're both to be: besides you know,
Proprietie's the very bond of Loue,
Whose fresh composition, and whole heart together,
Affliction alters.

Perd. One of these is true:
I thinke Affliction may subdue the Cheek e,
But not take-in the Mind.

Cam. Yea? say you fo?
There shall not, at your Fathers Houfe, these feuen yeeres
Be borne another fuch.

Flo. My good Camillia,
She's as forward, of her Breeding, as
She is i'th'earre our Birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lacks Instrucctions, for she seemes a Miiftrefse
To moft that teach.

Perd. Your pardon Sir, for this,
Ile blufh you Thanks.

Flo. My prettieft Perdita.
But O, the Thornes we stand vpon: (Camillio)
Preferner of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our Houfe: how shall we doe?
We are not furnish'd like Bobemia's Sonne,
Nor shall appeare in Sicilia.

Cam. My Lord,
Feare none of this: I thinke you know my fortunes
Doe all lye there: it shall be to my care,
To haue you royally appointed, as if
The Scene you play, were mine. For instance Sir,
That you may know you shall not want one word.

Enter Autolius.

Aut. Ha, ha, what is a Fooie Honestie is? and Trust (his fowne brother) a very fimple Gentleman. I have fold all my Trumperie: not a counterfeit Stone, not a Ribbon, Glaffe, Pomander, Brouch. Table-booke, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Gloue, Shooe-eye, Bracelet, Horne-Ring, to kepe

my Pack from fating: they throng who should buy drft, as if my Trinkets had beene hallowed, and brought a benediclion to the buyer: by which makes, I faw whose Perfue was bett in Picture; and what I faw, to my good wft, I remembred. My Clowne (who wants something to be a reaonable man) grew fo in loue with the Wenches Song, that hee would not flire his Petty-toes, till he had both Tun and Words, which fo drew the ref of the Heard to me, that all their other Seneces flucke in Eares: you might haue pinch'd a Placket, it was feneleffe; 'twas nothing to gueld a Cod-peece of a Purfe: I would haue fll'd Keyes of that hung in Chayres: no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the Nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargie, I pickd and cut most of their Fetifual Purfes: And had not the old-man come in with a Whoo-bub againft his Daughter, and the Kings Sonne, and fcar'd my Chowghes from the Chaffe, I had not left a Purfe alive in the whole Army.

Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this meanes being there
So foon as you arrive, faile clear that doubt.

Flo. And thoze that you procure from King Leontes?

Cam. Shall fatisfie your Father.

Perd. Happy be you:
All that you speake, thewes faire.

Cam. Who haue we here?
We'll make an Instrumnt of this: omit
Nothing may glue va alde.

Aut. If they have ouer-heard me now:why hanging.

Cam. How now (good Fellow)
Why flake't thou fo? Fear not (man)
Here's no harme intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be fo still: here's no body will feate that from thee: yet for the out-fide of thy pouerite, we muft make an exchange; therefore dif-cafe theeInstantly (thou muft thinke there's a nefceffe in't) and change Garments with this Gentleman: Though the penny-worth (on his side) be the worife, yet hold thee, there's fome boot.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir: (I know ye well eno.

Cam. Nay prethee dispatch: the Gentleman is halfe flid already.

Aut. Are you in earneft, Sir? (I f mell the trick on't.)

Flo. Diapatch, I prethee.

Aut. Indeed I haue had Earneft, but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Vn buckle, vn buckle.

Fortunate Miiftrefse (let my prophecie Come home to ye:) you must retire your felfe
Into fome Couer; take your sweet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browses, muffle your face,
Dif-mantle you; and (as you can) diflik'en
The truth of your own feeing, that you may
(For I doe feare eyes ouer) to Ship-board
Get vndercry'd.

Perd. I fee the Play fo lyes,
That I muft beare a part.

Cam. No remedie:
Haue you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Sonne.

Cam. Nay, you shall haue no Hat:

Come Lady, come: Farewell (my friend.)

Aut. Adieu, Sir.

Flo. O Perdis: what haue we twaine forgot?

'Pray
'Pray you a word.

Cam. What I doe next, shall be to tell the King
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so preuaile,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall re-view Sicilia; for whose figh,
I have a Womans Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed vs:
Thus we set on (Camilla) to th'Sea-fide.

Cam. The Swifter speed, the better.

Exit.

Aut. I understand the buinfife, I hear it: to have an open eye, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a Cut-purse; a good Nofe is requisite alfo, to fmal out worke for'th'other Sences. I fee this is the time that the vnuft man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? What a boot is here, with this exchange? Sure the Gods doe this yeere connue at vs, and we may doe any thing extenporo. The Prince himfelfe is about a piece of Iniquitie (fealing away from his Father, with his Clog at his heeles) if I thought it were a piece of honnefie to acquaint the King withall, I would not do't: I hold it the more knaurie to conceale it; and therein am I confiant to my Profellion.

Enter Cloven and Shepheard.

Aside, aside, here is more matter for a hot brained: Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Settlem, Hanging, yields a carefull man worth a looks.

Cloven. See, see: what a man you are now? there is no other way, but to tell the King thes a Changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Cloz. Nay; but hear me.

Shep. Goe too then.

Cloz. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood ha's not offended the King, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punifh'd by him. Shew thofe things you found about her (thofe secret things, all but what the ha's with her) This being done, let the Law goo withal, I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sonsse prancs too; who, I may fay, is no honest man, neither to his Father, nor to me, to goo about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Cloz. Indeed Brother in Law was the fartheft off you could have beene to him, and then your Blood had beene the dearer, by I know much an ounce.

Aut. Very wifely (Puppies.)

Shep. Well: let vs to the King: there is that in this Fartheil, will make him cratc his Beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this Complaint may be to the flight of my Matter.

Clo. 'Pray heartily he be at' Pallace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honnes, I am to fometimes by chance: Let me pocket vp my Pedlers excrement. Now how (Rufiques) whither are you bound?

Shep. To th' Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Aut. Your Affaires there? what? with whom? the Condition of that Fartheil? the place of your dwelling? your names? your ages? of what hauing? building, and any thing that is fitting to be knowne, difcouer?

Clo. We are but plaine fellowes, Sir.

Aut. A Lye; you are rough, and hayrie: Let me have no lying it becomes none but Tradel-men, and they often give vs (Souliers) the Lye, but wee pay them for it with flamped Coyne, not flabbing Steele, therefore they doe not give vs the Lye.

Clo. Your Worship had like to have gien us one, if you had not taken your fellow with the manner.

Shep. Are you a Courtier, and'd like you Sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seef thout not the ayre of the Court, in these enfoldings? Hath not my gate in it, the measure of the Court? Receiue not thy Nofe Court-Odour from me? Reife I not on thy Bafinesse, Court-Contempt? Think'ft thou, for that I infinate, at toafe from thee thy Bafinesse, I am therefore no Courtier? I am Courtier Cap-a-pe: and one that will eyther pufh-on, or pluck-back, thy Bafinesse there: whereupon I command thee to open thy Affaire.

Shep. My Bafinesse, Sir, is to the King.

Aut. What Advocat ha'll thou to him?

Shep. I know not (and'd like you.)

Clo. Advocat's the Court-word for a Pheazant: say you have none.

Shep. None, Sir: I have no Pheazant Cock, nor Hen.

Aut. How blessed are we, that are not simple men?

Yet Nature might have made me thefe as, Therefore I will not difdaine.

Clo. This cannot be but a great Courtier.

Shep. His Garments are rich, but he weares them not handlomely.

Clo. He feemes to be the more Noble, in being fanta-fical: A great man, Ille warrant; I know by the picking on's Teeth.

Aut. The Fartheil there? What's i'th' Fartheil?

Wherefore that Box?

Shep. Sir, there lyes fuch Secrets in this Fartheil and Box, which none must know but the King, and which hee shall know within this houre, if I may come to th' speeche of him.

Aut. Age, thou haft loft thy labour.

Shep. Why Sir?

Aut. The King is not at the Pallace, he is gone aboord a new Ship, to purge Melancholy, and ayre himfelfe: for if thou bee'ft capable of things ferior, thou muft know the King is full of griefe.

Shep. So 'tis faid (Sir) about his Sonne, that should have married a Shepheards Daughter.

Aut. If that Shepheard be not in hand-faft, let him flye; the Curfes if he shall haue, the Tortures he shall feele, will break the back of Man, the heart of Monffer.

Clo. Thineke you fo, Sir?

Aut. Not hee alone shall fuffer what Wit can make haue, and Vengeance bitter; but those that are fermane to him (though remou'd fiftie times) shall all come vnder the Hang-man: which, though it be great pity, yet it is necefaire. An old Sheepe-whifhling Rogue, a Ram-tender, to offer to have his Daughter come into grace?Some fay hee fhall be fyon'd: but that death is too faft for him (fay I:) Draw our Throne into a Sheep-Coat? all deaths are too few, the fhureft too easie.

Clo. Ha's the old-man ere a Sonne Sir (doe you haer) and'd like you, Sir?

Aut. Hee ha's a Sonne: who shall be f kayed alive, then 'nocented over with Honey, fet on the head of a Wafpes Neft, then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead: then recover'd againe with Aquavitae, or fome other hot Infuion: then he is faf, and in the hotest day Prognafic placymnes) fhall he be fet againft a Brick-wall, (the Sonne looking with a Southward eye vpon him; where bee is to behold him, with Flyes blown to death.) But what talke we of these Traitorly-rafcafs, whose mi-series are to be fimil'd at, their offences being fo capital?

Tell me (for you seeme to be honest plaine men) what you have to the King: being something gently consider'd, Ile bring you where he is aboord, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfes; and if it be in man, besides the King, to effect your Suites, here is man shall doe it.

Cleom. He seemes to be of great authority: clofe with him, give him Gold; and though Authority be a rubborne Beare, yet hee is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the in-side of your Purse to the out-side of his hand, and no more ado. Remember ston'd, and flay'd alowe.

Sleep. And't please you (Sir) to vndertake the Businesse for vs, here is that Gold I have: Ile make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Sleep. I Sir.

Aut. Well, give me the Moitie: Are you a partie in this Businesse?

Cleom. In some fort, Sir: but though my cafe be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flay'd out of it.

Aut. Oh, that's the cafe of the Shepheardes Sonne: hang him, hee'll be made an example.

Cleom. Comfort, good comfort: We muft to the King, and shew our strange fights: he muft know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Sifter: wee are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man do's, when the Businesse is performed, and remaine (as he fayes) your pawnne till it be brought you.

Aut. I will try you. Walkc before toward the Sea-side, goe on the right hand, I will but looke upon the Hedge, and follow you.

Cleom. We are blef'sd, in this man: as I may fay, even blef'd.

Sleep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was prouided to doe vs good.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honeft, I fee Fortune would not suffer mee: shee drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion (Gold, and a means to doe the Prince my Master good, which, who knowes how that may turne backe to my advancement?) I will bring these two Moailes, these blind-ones, aboord him: if he thinke it fit to shooare them againe, and that the Complaint they have to the King, concerns him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am prooue against that Title, and what shame else belongs to't: To him will I prefent them, there may be matter in it.

Exeunt.

The Winters Tale.

My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did my selues: which was so much,
That Heire-leeft he hath made my Kingdom, and Defroy'd the sweet'st Companion, that ere man
Bred his hopes out of true.

Paul. Too true (my Lord:)
If one by one, you wedded all the World,
Or from the All that are, tooke something good,
To make a perfect Woman: she you kill'd,
Would be unparallell'd.

Leo. I thinke fo. Kill'd?
She I kill'd? I did fo: but thou strik'est me
Sorely, to say I did: it is as bitter
Vpon thy Tongue, as in my Thought. Now, good now,
Say fo but feldome.

Cleo. Not at all, good Lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things, that would
Have done the time more benefit, and gread
Your kindnesse better.

Paul. You are one of thofe
Would haue him wed againe.

Dio. If you would not fo,
You pitty not the State, nor the Remembrance
Of his moft Soueraigne Name: Consider little,
What Dangers, by his Highnesse falle of Iffue,
May drop upon his Kingdom, and devoure Incertaine lookers on. What were more holy,
Then to rejoyce the former Queene is well?
What holer, then for Royalties repare,
For prefent comfort, and for future good,
To bleffe the Bed of Majefte againe
With a sweet Fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
(Refpeéting her that's gone) befides the Gods
Will haue fufull'd their secret purpofes:
For ha's not the Diuine Apollo faid?
It's not the tenor of his Oracle,
That King Leontes shall not haue an Heire,
Till his loft Child be found: Which, that it shall,
Is all as monftrous to our humane reafon,
As my Antigonus to breake his Graue,
And come againe to me: who, on my life,
Did perifh with the Infant. 'Tis your counsell,
My Lord holde to the Heauens be contrary,
Oppofe againft their wills. Care not for Iffue,
The Crowne will find an Heire. Great Alexander
Left his to th'o Worthieft: fo his Succifor
Was like to be the bef't.

Leo. Good Paulina,
Who haft the memoire of Hermione
I know in honor: O, that ever I
Had quarr'd me to thy counsell: then, even now,
I might have look'd vpon my Queenes full eyes,
Haue taken Treasure from her Lippes.

Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yeelded.

Leo. Thou fapeak't truth:
No more fuch Wiues, therefore no Wife: one worfe,
And better vs'd, would make her Sainted Spirit
Againfe poffeffe her Corps, and on this Stage
(Where we Offenders now appeare) Soule-vext,
And begin, why to me?

Paul. Had the fuch power,
She had luft fuch caufe.

Leo. She had, and would incende me
To murther her I married.
Paul. I should so:
Were I the Ghost that walk’d, I’d bid you marke
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in’t
You chose her: then I’d shrinkle, that even your cares
Should rift to heare me, and the words that follow’d,
Should be, Remember mine.
Leo. Starres, Starres,
And all eyes elle, dead coales: feare thou no Wife;
Ie have no Wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you weare
Neuer to marry, but by my free leaue?
Leo. Neuer (Paulina) fo be blest’d my Spirit.
Paul. Then good my Lords, beare witness to his Oath.
Cle. You tempt him over-much.
Paul. Vnlesse another,
As like Hermione, as is her Picture,
Afront his eye.
Cle. Good Madame, I have done.
Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry: if you will, Sir;
No remedy but you will: Give me the Office
To chuse you a Queene: she shall not be fo young
As was your former, but the shall be fuch
As (walk’d your first Queenes Ghost) it should take joy
To fee her in your armes.
Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidst vs.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queene’s againe in breath:
Neuer till then.
Enter a Servant.
Ser. One that gives out himselfe Prince Florisell, Sonne of Polisene, with his Princeffe (the
The fairest I have yet beheld) defines acceffe
To your high preence.
Leo. What with him? he comes not Like to his Fathers Greatneffe: his approach
(So out of circumsdance, and fuddaine) tells vs,
’Tis not a Visitation fram’d, but forc’d
By need, and accident. What Trayne?
Ser. But few.
And tho’ but meane.
Leo. His Princeffe (fay you)
Ser. 1: the moft peereleffe peece of Earth, I think,
That ere the Sunne fhone bright on.
Paul. Oh Hermione,
As ever present Time doth boaft it felfe
Aboue a better, gone; fo muft thy Graue
Give way to what’s feene now. Sir, you felfe
Hoate fain, and writ fo; but your writing now
Is colder then that Thame: she had not beene,
Nor was not to equal’d, thus your Verfe
Flow’d with her Beautie once; ’tis shrewdly ebb’d,
To fay you have, leene a better.
Ser. Pardon, Madame:
The one, I have almoft forgot (your pardon:)
The other, when she ha’s obtayn’d your Eye,
Will have your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Seet, might quench the zeale
Of all Professors elfe; make Profe lytes
Of who the but bid follow.
Paul. How? not women?
Ser. Women will loue her, that she is a Woman
More worth then any Man: Men, that she is
The rareft of all Women.
Leo. Gloe Clemoine,
Your selfe (affisted with your honor’d Friends)
Bring them to our embracement. Still ’tis strainge,
He thus should feale upon vs.
Exit.
Paul. Had our Prince
(Toewell of Children) tene this hour, he had pay’d
Well with this Lord; there was not full a moneth
Betwene their births.
Leo. ’Prethee no more; ceafe: thou know’st
He dyes to me againe, when talk’d-of: fare
When I shall fee this Gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to confider that, which may Vnfunfe me of Reason. They are come.
Enter Florisell, Perdite, Clemoines, and others.
Your Mother was moft true to Wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royall Father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twentie one,
Your Fathers Image is fo hit in you,
(His very ayre) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speake of something wildly
By vs perform’d before. Moft dearly welcome,
And your faire Princeffe (Goddefe) oh: alas,
I loft a couple, that ’twixt Heauen and Earth
Might thus have flood, begetter wonder, as
You (gracious Couple) doe: and then I loft
(All mine owne Folly) the Societe,
Amitie too of your braue Father, whom (Though bearing Miliftrie) I defire my life
Once more to looke on him.
Flo. By his command
Hawe I here touch’d Sicilia, and from him
Glue you all greetings, that a King (at friend)
Can fend his Brother: and but Infirmity
(Which waits upon worne times) hath something feiz’d
His with’d Abilitie, he had himselfe
The Lands and Waters, ’twixt your Throne and his,
Meafor’d, to looke upon you; whom he loues
(He bad me fay fo) more then all the Scepters,
And tho’ that beare them, illuinger.
Leo. Oh my Brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I have done thee, firrre
Affreth within me: and thouf and thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behinde-hand flackneffe. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th’Earth. And hath he too
Expos’d this Paragon to th’fearefull fvaige
(At leaft vngentle) of the dreadfull Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her paines; much leffe,
Th’aduenture of her perfon?
Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Libia.
Leo. Where the Warlike Smalus,
That Noble honor’d Lord, is fear’d, and lou’d?
Flo. Moft Royall Sir,
From thence: from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaym’d his parting with her: thence (A prosperous South-wind friendly) we have croft’d,
To execute the Charge my Father gave me,
For visiting your Highnesse: my beft Traine
I have from your Sicilian Shores dimin’d;
Who for Bobembia bend, to figure
Not onely my fucceffe in Libia (Sir)
But my arrual, and my Wifes, in fatietie
Here, where we are.
Leo. The bleffed Gods
Purge all Infecion from our Ayre, whilst you
Doe Clymate here: you have a holy Father,
A gracefull Gentleman, against whose perfon
The Winters Tale.

(So sacred as it is) I have done finne, For which, the Heauens (taking angry note) Have left me Ifue-leffe: and your Father's blest'd (As he from Heauen merits it) with you. Worthy his goodnesse, What might I have been, Might I a Sonne and Daughter now have look'd on, Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Moft Noble Sir, That which I flall report, will beare no credit, Were not the proofe fo nigh. Pleafe you (great Sir)

Bokemis greetes you from himselfe, by me:

Desires you to attach his Sonne, who ha's

(His Dignifie, and Dutie both call off)

Fied from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepheards Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bokemis? (speake)

Lord. Here, in your Cite : I now came from him.

I speake amazedly, and it becomes

My meruaille, and my Message. To your Court

Whiles he was hafhing (in the Chafe, it feemes,

Of that faire Couple) meets he on the way

The Father of this feeming Lady, and

Her Brother, having both their Country quitted,

With this young Prince.

Flo. Camillo ha's betray'd me;

Whole honor, and whose honeftie till now,

Endur'd all Westhers.

Lord. Lay't fo to his charge :

He's with the King your Father.

Leo. Who's Camillo?

Lord. Camillo (Sir:) I speake with him: who now

Ha's thefe poor men in question. Neuer faw I

Wretches fo quake: they kneele, they kiffe the Earth; Forweare themfelves as ofte as they speake:

Bokemis fops his cares, and threatens them

With divers deaths, in death.

Perd. Oh my poore Father:

The Heauen fea Spyes upon vs, will not haue

Our Contraft celebrated.

Leo. You are married?

Flo. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be:

The Starres (I fee) will kiffe the Valleys firft:

The oddes for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,

Is this the Daughter of a King?

Flo. She is,

When once she is my Wife.

Leo. That once (I fee) by your good Fathers speed,

Will come on very flowly. I am forry

(Most forry) you haue broken from his liking,

Where you were ty'd in dutie: and as forry,

Your Choice is not fo rich in Worth, as Beautie,

That you might well enjoy her,

Flo. Deare, looke vp:

Though Fortuny, visible an Enemie,

Should chafe vs, with my Father; powre no lot

Hath she to change our Loues. Befeech you (Sir)

Remember, since you ow'd no more to Time

Then I do now: with thought of such Affections,

Step forth mine Advocate: at your request,

My Father will grannt precious things, as Trifles,

Leo. Would he doe so, I'd beg your precious Miftris,

Which he counts but a Trifle.

Paul. Sir (my Liege)

Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a moneth

'Fore your Queene dy'd, she was more worth fuch gazes,

Then what you looke on now.

Leo. I thought of her,

Euen in thefe Lookes I made. But your Petition

Is yet vn-anfwer'd: I will to your Father:

Your Honor not o're-throwne by your defires,

I am friend to them, and you: Upon which Errand

I now goe toward him: therefore follow me,

And marke what way I make: Come good my Lord.

End.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Autolicus, and a Gentleman.

Aut. Befeech you (Sir) were you preffent at this Relation?

Gent. I. I was by at the opening of the Farthell, heard the old Shepheard deliuer the manner how he found it: Whereupon (after a little amazened) we were all commanded out of the Chamber: onely this (me thought) I heard the Shepheard say, he found the Child.

Aut. I would moft gladly know the issue of it.

Gent. I. I make a broken deliuerie of the Buminesse; but the changes I perceyled in the King, and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration: they feem'd almost, with flaring on one another, to teare the Cales of their Eyes. There was speech in their dumbnesse, Language in their very gefure: they look'd as they had heard of a World rancom'd, or one destroy'd: a notable paffion of Wonder appeared in them: but the wifeft beholder, that knew no more but feeing, could not fay, if th'importance were Ioy, or Sorrow; but in the extreamtie of the one, it muft needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more: The Newes, Roger.

Gent. 2. Nothing but Bon-fires the Oracle is fulfill'd: the Kings Daughter is found: fuch a deale of wonder is broken out within this houre, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to exprefs it.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, hee can deliuer you more. How does it now (Sir,) This Newes (which is call'd true) is fo like an old Tale, that the verite of it is in strong fpulfion: Ha's the King found his Heire?

Gent. 3. Moft true, if euer Truth were pregnant by Circumstance: That which you heare, you'll swear ye fee, there is fuch witlie in the proofs. The Mantle of Queene Hermione: her Jewell about the Neck of it: the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character: the Maffifie of the Creature, in reftemblance of the Mother: the Affection of Noblenesse, which Nature shewes above her Breeding, and many other Evidences, proclayme her, with all certaintie, to be the Kings Daughter. Did you fee the meeting of the two Kings?

Gent. 2. No.

Gent. 3. Then haue you loft a Sight which was to bee seene, cannot be spoken of. There might you haue beheld one Ioy crowne another, and in fuch manner, that it feem'd Sorrow wept to take leave of them: for their Ioy waded in teares. There was calling vp of Eyes, holding vp of Hands, with Countenance of fuch dilatraction, that they were to be knowne by Garment, not by Fauer. Our
Our King being ready to leape out of himselfe, for joy of his found Daughter; as if that joy were now become a Loffe, cryes, Oh, thy Mother, thy Mother: then askes Bohemia forgiveneffe, then embraces his Sonne-in-Law: then againe worries he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shepheard (which stand by, like a Weather-bitten Conduit, of many Kings Reignes.) I never heard of such another Encounter; which lanck Report to follow it. and vndo's description to doe it.

Gent. 2. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale fill, which will have matter to rehearsal, though Credit be aleepe, and not an eare open; he was torne to pieces with a Bear: This auouches the Shepheard Sonne; who ha's not onely his Innocence (which feemes much) yo luifhe him, but a Hand-kerchief and Rings of his, that Paulina knowes.

Gent. 1. What became of his Barke, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wrackt the same infant of their Masters death, and in the view of the Shepheard; so that all the Infrumens which ayd to expos the Child, were cuen then loft, when it was found. But oh the Noble Combat, that 'twixt Joy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina. Shee had one Eye declin'd for the loffe of her Husband, another elevated, that the Oracle was fulfill'd: Shee lifted the Princess from the Earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if shee would pin her to her heart, that thee might no more be in danger of looing.

Gent. 1. The Dignitie of this Act was the audience of Kings and Princes, for by fuch was it afted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettyst touches of all, and that which ang'd for mine Eyes (caught the Water, though not the Fith) was, when at the Relation of the Queenes death (with the manner how shee came to't, bruely confe'd, and lamented by the King) how attuentuenesse wounded his Daughter, till (from one signe of dolour to another) shee did (with an Atas) I would faine flye, bleed Teres; for I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most Marble, there changed colour: fome swounded, all forrowed: if all the World could haue feen't, the Woe had bee vnuerfall.

Gent. 3. Art they now returned to the Court?

Gent. 2. No: The Princess hearing of her Mothers Statuce (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Peece many yeeres in doing, and now newly perform'd, by that rare Italian Master, Julio Romano, who (had he himselfe Eternitie, and could put Breath into his Worke) would beguile Nature of her Cutfome, so perfectly he is her Apo: He so neere to Hermion, hath done Hermion, that they fay one would speake to her, and fane in hope of awnser. Thither (with all greeneffe of affection) are they gone, and there they intende to Sup.

Gent. 2. I thought the had fome great matter there in hand, for fhee hath priatey, twice or thrice a day, euer fince the death of Hermion, vifited that remoued Houfe. Shall wee thither, and with our companie pece the Rejoycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that ha's the benefit of Accesse? every winke of an Eye, fome new Grace will be borne: our Abfence makes vs vnthriftie to our Knowledge. Let's along.

Aut. Now (had I not the daft of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his Sonne aboord the Prince; told him, I heard them talke of a Farthell, and I know not what; but he at that time ouer-fond of the Shepheard Daughter (fo he then tooke her to be) who began to be much Sea-fick, and himselfe little better, extremitie of Weather continuing, this Mysterie remained vnandcouverd. But 'tis all one to me: for had I beene the finder-out of this Secret, It would not have releif'd among my other difcredia.

Enter Shepheard and Clowne.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and alreadie appearing in the blossomes of their Fortune.

Slep. Come Boy, I am past moe Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentlemen borne.

Clow. You are well met (Sir,) you deny'd to fight with mee this other day, because I was no Gentleman borne. See you thefe Clothes? fay you fee them not, and thinke me fill no Gentleman borne: You were bett fay thefe Robes are not Gentlemen borne. Gie me the Lye: doe: and try whether I am not now a Gentleman borne.

Aut. I know you are now (Sir) a Gentleman borne.

Slep. 1. and have been fo any time thefe four hours.

Slep. And fo haue I, Boy.

Clow. So you haue: but I was a Gentleman borne before my Father: for the Kings Sonne tooke me by the hand, and call'd mee Brother: and then the two Kings call'd my Father Brother: and then the Prince (my Brother) and the Princess (my Sister) call'd my Father, Father; and fo wee wept: and there was the first Gentleman-like teares that euer we fhed.

Slep. We may flie (Sonne) to shed many more.

Clow. I or else 'twere hard luck, being in fo preposterous eftate as we are.

Aut. I humbly befeech you (Sir) to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your Workhip, and to gie me your good report to the Prince my Master.

Slep. Prethee Sonne doe: for we must be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clow. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. I, and it like your good Workhip.

Clow. Gie me thy hand: I will fwear to the Prince, three art as honest a true Fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Slep. You may fay it, but not fwear it.

Clow. Not fwear it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boores and Francklins fay it, Ille fwear it.

Slep. How if it be falle (Sonne?)

Clow. If it be ne're fo falle, a true Gentleman may fwear it, in the behalfe of his Friend: And Ille fwear to the Prince, thou art a tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunke: but I know thou art no tall Fel low of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunke: But Ille fwear it, and I would thou would't be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove fo (Sir) to my power.

Clow. I, by any means proue a tall Fellow; if I do not wonder, how thou dar'ft venture to be drunke, not being a tall Fellow, trust me not. Harke, the Kings and the Princes (our Kindred) are going to fee the Queenes Picture. Come, follow vs: wee're but thy good Masters.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizell, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina: Hermione (is a Statue; Lords, &c.

Leo. O graue and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee?

Cc Paul. What
The Winters Tale.

Paul. What (Souveraigne Sir) I did not well, I meant well; all my Services You had so pay'd home, but that you have vouchsaf'd (With your Crown'd Brother, and thes your contracted Heires of your Kingdomes) my poor Houfe to visit; It is a surplus of your Grace, which neuer My life may laft to anfwer.

Leo. O Paulina, We honor you with trouble: but we came To fee the Statue of our Queene. Your Gallerie Have we pass'd through, not without much content In many singularities; but we faw not That which my Daughter came to look vp, The Statue of her Mother.

Paul. As the ful'd peerelie, So her dead likenefs I doe well beleue Excells what euer yet you look'd vp, Or hand of Man hath done: therefore I keep it Louely, apart. But here it is: prepare To fee the Life as liuely mock'd, as euer Still Sleep e mock'd Death: behold, and say tis well. I like your silence, it the more shewes off Your wonder but yet speake, firft you (my Liege) Comes it not something neere? Leo. Her naturall Pofure. Chide me (deare Stone) that I may fay indeed Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she, In thy not chiding: for she was as tender As Infancie, and Grace. But yet (Paulina) Hermione was not fo much wrinkle'd, nothing So aged as this feemes.

Pol. Oh, not by much.

Paul. So much the more our Caruers excellency, Which lets goe by some fixteen yeeres, and makes her As the none now.

Leo. As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my Soule. Oh, thus she ftood, Even with fuch Life of Maflie (warne Life, As now it coldly flands) when first I wou'd her. I am afham'd: Do's not the Stone rebufke me, For being more Stone then it? Oh Royall Pece: There's Magic in thy Maffie, which ha's My Euis conur'd to remembrance; and From thy admiring Daughter tooke the Spirits, Standing like Stone with thee.

Perd. And give me leaue, And do not say 'tis Superflition, that I kneele, and then implore her Blessing. Lady, Deere Queene, that ended when I but began, Give me that hand of yours, to kiffe.

Paul. O, patience: The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's Not dry.

Cam. My Lord, your Sorrow was too foore lay'd-on, Which fixteen Winters cannot blow away, So many Summers dry: scarce any joy Did euer fo long live: no Sorrow, But kill'd it felfe much sooner.

Pol. Deere my Brother, Let him, that was the caufe of this, hauie powre To take-off fo much griefe from you, as he Will pece vp in himelfe.

Paul. Indeed my Lord, If I had thought the flight of my poore Image Would thus have wrought you (for the Stone is mine)

I'd not have shew'd it.

Leo. Doe not draw the Curtaine.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, leaft your Fancie May thinke anon, it mounes.

Leo. Let be, let be:

Would I were dead, but that me thinke's already.

(What was he that did make it?) See (my Lord) Would you not deeme it breath'd? and that those veines Did verily bearre blood?

Pol. 'Mafterly done:
The very Life feemes warme vpon her Lippe.

Leo. The figure of her Eye ha's motion in',

As we are mock'd with Art.

Paul. Ils draw the Curtaine:

My Lord's almost fo farre transported, that He'll thinke anon it lies.

Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,

Make me to thinke fo twentie yeeres together:

No fetted Senes of the World can match The pleafure of that madneffe. Let's alone.

Paul. I am forry (Sir) I have thus farre flir'd you: but I could affift you farther.

Leo. Doe Paulina?

For this Affliction ha's a taste as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinke's There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me, For I will kiffe her.

Paul. Good my Lord, forbeare:

The ruddineffe vpon her Lippe, is wet:

You'll marre it, if you Kiffe it; by your owne

With Oyly Painting: shall I draw the Curtaine.

Leo. No: not thefe twentie yeeres.

Perd. So long could I

Stand-by, a looker-on.

Paul. Either forbeare,

Quit prefently the Chappell, or reloufe you

For more amazement: if you can behold it,

Ile make the Statue moue indeed; defcend, And take you by the hand; but then you'll thinke

(Which I protest against) I am affifted

By wicked Powers.

Leo. What you can make her doe, I am content to looke on: what to speake, I am content to heare: for 'tis as eafe

To make her speake, as moue.

Paul. It is requir'd

You doe awake your Faith: then, all fland still:

On those that thinke it is unlawful Businesse

I am about, let them depart.

Leo. Proceed:

No foot shall flirre.

Paul. Musick: awake her: Strike:

'Tis time: defcend: be Stone no more: approach:

Strike all that looke vpon with meruaile: Come:

Ile fill your Graue vp: flirre: nay, come away:

Bequetheath Death your nunnese: (for from him, Deere Life redeemes you) you perceiue the flirres:

Start not: her Aflions shall be holy, as

You hear my Spell is lawfull: doe not shun her, Vntill you fee her dye againe; for then

You kill her double: Nay, preflent your Hand:

When she was youg, you wou'd her: now, in age.

Is she the become the Suitor?

Leo. Oh she's warme:

If this be Magick, let it be an Art
The Winters Tale.

Lawfull as Eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his necke,

If she pertaine to life, let her speake too.

Pol. I, and make it manifest where she ha’s liu’d,

Or how floine from the dead?

Paul. That she is living,

Were it but told you, should be hooted at

Like an old Tale: but it appears she liues,

Though yet she speake not. Marke a little while:

Pleaſe you to interpole (faire Madam) kneele,

And pray your Mothres bleffing: turne good Lady,

Our Perdita is found.

Her. You God’s looke downe,

And from your sacred Viols pour your graces

Vpon my daughters head: Tell me (mine owne)

Where haft thou bin preferr’d? Where liu’d?How found

Thy Fathers Court? For thou shalt heare that I

Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle

Gauę hope thou waft in being, haue preferr’d

My selfe, to see the yfue.

Paul. There’s tyme enough for that,

Leaft they deffe (vpon this pufh) to trouble

Your loyes, with like Relation. Go together

You precious winners all: your exultation

Partake to every one: I (an old Turtle)

Will wing me to some wither’d bough, and there

My Mate (that’s never to be found again)

Lament, till I am loft.

Leo. O peace Paulina:

Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,

As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,

And made beweene’s by Vowes. Thou haft found mine,

But how, is to be queſtion’d: for I faw her

(As I thought) dead: and haue (in vaine) faid many

A prayer vpon her graue. Ille not fecke farre

(For him, I partly know his minde) to finde thee

An honourable husband. Come Camillo,

And take her by the hand: whole worth, and honestly

Is richly noted: and heere juifified

By Vs, a paire of Kings. Let’s from this place.

What looke vpon my Brother: both your pardons,

That ere I put betweene your holy lookes

My ill fuſpition: This your Son-in-law,

And Sonne vnto the King,whom heauens direcťing

Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,

Leade us from hence, where we may leyfurely

Each one demand, and anfwer to his part

Perform’d in this wide gap of Time, fince firft

We were diſſeuer’d: Hafily lead away.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
The lifefiand death of King John.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, and Salisbury, with the Chattyilion of France.

King John.

Ow say Chattillon, what would France with vs ?
Chat. Thus (after greeting) speaks the King of France,
In my behauour to the Maiesty,
The borrowed Maiesty of England here.
Elsa. A strange beginning: borrowed Maiesty ?
K. John. Silence (good mother) hear the Embassie.
Chat, Philip of France, in right and true behalfe
Of thy deceased brother, Geffreyes sonne,
Arthur Plantagenet, laies most lawfull claime
To this faire Iland, and the Territories:
To Ireland, Poyntziers, Anions, Torayme, Maine,
Defirin thee to lay aside the sword
Which Iwaues vfurpingly thefte severall titles,
And put the fame into yong Arturs hand,
Thy Nephew, and right royall Soueraigne.
K. John. What follows if we disallow of this?
Chat. The Pround controle of fierce and bloody warre,
To inform these rights, fo forcibly with-held,
K. Io. Heare haue we war for war, & bloud for bloud, Controlemnt for controlemnt: fo answr France.
Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my Embassie.
K. John. Beare mine to him, and fo depart in peace,
Be thou as lightning in the eies of France;
For ere thou canst report, I will be there:
The thunder of my Cannon shall be heard.
So hence: be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And fallen preface of your owne decay!
An honourable conduct let him haue,
Pembroke looke too: farewell Chattillon.

Exit Chat. and Fem.

Els. What now my sonne, haue I not euer said
How that ambitious Contiunce would not ceafe
Till she had kindled France and all the world,
Vpon the right and party of her sonne.
This might haue bene prevented, and made whole
With very caife arguments of louse,
Which now the manage of two kingdomes must
With fearfull bloody issue arbitrate.
K. John. Our strong pofteflion, and our right for vs.
Els. Your strong pofteflion much more then your right,
Or else it must goe wrong with you and me,
So much my confience whispers in your care,

Which none but heauen, and you, and I, shall heare.
Enter a Sheriff.

Essex. My Ligne, here is the strangest controverfie
Come from the Country to be iudg'd by you
That ere I heard: shall I produce the men?
K. John. Let them approach:
Our Abbies and our Priories shall pay
This expeditious charge: what men are you?
Enter Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip.

Philip. Your faithfull subject, I a gentleman,
Borne in Northamptonshire, and eldeft sonne
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A Souldier by the Honor-guing-hand
Of Cordelion, Knighted in the field.
K. John. What art thou?
Robert. The fon and heire to that fame Faulconbridge.
K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heyre?
You came not of one mother then it seemes.

Philip. Most certain of one mother, mighty King,
That is well knowne, and as I thinke one father:
But for the cennaine knowledge of that truth,
I put you o're to heauen, and to my mother;
Of that I doubt, as all mens children may.

Eli. Out on thee rude man, I doth shame thy mother,
And wound her honor with this diffidence.

Phil. I Madame? No, I have no reacon for it,
That is my brothers ples, and none of mine,
The which if he can prove, a pops me out,
At leaft from faire fue hundred pound a yeere:
Heauen guard my mothers honor, and my Land.
K. John. A good blunt fellow: why being younger born
Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Phil. I know not why, except to get the land:
But once he flandered me with bafardy:

But where I be as true begot or no,
That still I lay upon my mothers head,
But that I am as well begot my Ligne
(Faire fall the bones that tooke the paines for me)
Compare our faces, and be judge your selfe
If old Sir Robert did beget vs both,
And were our father, and this sonne like him:
Old Sir Robert Father, on my knee
I give heauen thankes I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why what a mad-cap hath heauen lent vs here?
Elen. He hath a tricke of Cordelions face,
The accent of his tongue affceth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my lonne
In the large compofition of this man?

K. John.
K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts, And findes them perfect. Richard: sirra speake, What doth move you to claime your brothers land. Philip. Because he hath a half-face like my father? With halfe that face would he haue all my land, A halfe-fac'd groat, five hundred pound a yeere? Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liu'd, Your brother did imploy my father much. Phil. Well far, by this you cannot get my land, Your tale must be how he employ'd my mother. Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie To Germany, there with the Emperor To treat of high affairs touching that time: Th'sadvantage of his absence tooke the King, And in the meane time fouiorn'd at my fathers; Where he did preuaile, I blame to speake: But truth is truth, large lengths of feas and shores Betweene my father, and my mother lay, As I have heard my father speake himselfe When this same lutfy gentleman was got: Upon his death-bed he by will besqueath'd His lands to me, and took it on his death That this my mothers fonne was none of his; And if he were, he came into the world Full fourteene weake before the courfe of time: Then good my Liedge let me haue what is mine, My fathers land, as was my fathers will. K. John. Sirra, your brother is legitimate, Your fathers wife did after wedlocke bee him: And if she did play false, the fault was hers, Which fault lyes on the hazards of all husbands That marry wives: tell me, how if my brother Who as you say, tooke pains to get this fonne, Had of your father took'd this fonne for his, Insooth, good friend, your father might have kept This Calfe, bred from his Cow from all the world: Insooth he might: then if he were my brothers, My brother might not claime him, nor your father Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes, My mothers fonne did get your fathers heyre, Your fathers heyre must haue your fathers land. Rob. Shal then my fathers Will be of no force, To dispoisifie that childe which is not his. Phil. Of no more force to dispoisifie me sir, Than was there to get me, as I think. Eli. Whether hadst thou rather bee a Faulconbridge, And like thy brother to enjoy thy land: Or the reputed fonne of Cordelion, Lord of thy preence, and no land before. Baft. Madam, and if my brother had my shape And I had his, sir Roberts his like him, And if my legs were two such riding rods, My armes, such ele-skins flut, my face so thin, That in mine care I durst not flitche a rofe, Left men should lay, looke where three furthings goes, And his shape were heyre to all this land, Would I might neuer flitche from off this place; I would glue it every foot to hauce this face: It would not be sir nobbe in any cafe. Elinor. I like thee well: wilt thou for sake thy fortune, Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me? I am a Souldier, and now bound to France. Baft. Brother, take you my land, Ile take my chance; Your face hath got five hundred pound a yeere, Yet fell your face for five pence and 'tis deere: Madam, Ile follow you vnto the death.

Elinor. Nay, I would haue you go before me thither. Baft. Our Country manners gue our better way. K. John. What is thy name? Baft. Philip my Liege, fo is my name begun, Philip, good old Sir Roberts wuies eldest fonne. K. John. From henceforth beare his name Whole forme thou forrest. Kneele thou downe Philip, but rife more great, Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet. Baft. Brother by th'mothers fide, gue me your hand, My father gaue me honor, yours gaue land: Now bleffed be the houre by night or day When I was got, Sir Robert was away. Ele. The very spirit of Plantaginet I am thy grandame Richard, call me fo. Baft. Madam: by chance, but not by truth, what thou; Something about a little from the right, In at the window, or else ore the hatch: Who dares not sittre by day, mutt wake by night, And haue is hauue, how euer men doe catch: Neree or off fett, well woman is still well hot; And I am I, how ere I was begot. K. John. Go, Faulconbridge, now haft thou thy desire, A landleffe Knight, makes thee a landed Squire: Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed For France, for France, for it is more then need. Baft. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee, For thou walt got i'th way of honesty. Exeunt all but baftard.

Baft. A foot of Honor better then I was, But many a many foot of Land the worke, Well, now can I make any laine a Lady, Good den Sir Richard, Godamercy fellow, And if his name be George, Ile call him Peter; For new made honor doth forget mens names: 'Tis two refpecheue, and to fociable For your conversion, now your traveller, Hee and his tooth-picke at my worshipes meffe, And when my knightly stomacke is fufed, Why then I fuckle my teeth, and catechize My picked man of Countries: my deare fir, Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin, I shall beftiche you; that is queftion now, And then comes answer like an Abbe Boke: O fir, fayes anfwer, at your left command, At your employment, at your fervice fir; No fir, fales queftion, I sweet fir at yours, And fo ere answer knowes what queftion would, Saing in Dialogue of Complement, And talking of the Alpes and Appenines, The Perenane and the ruer Po, It draws toward fupper in conclufion fo. But this is worthifull company, And fits the mounting spirit like my felfe; For he is but a baftard to the time That doth not fmoake of obfervation, And so am I whether I fmoake or no: And not alone in habit and deuice, Exterior forme, outward accoutrement; But from the inward motion to deliuer Sweet, sweet, sweet poyfon for the ages tooth, Which though I will not practive to deceuie, Yet to avoide deceit I meanes to learn; For it shal fire the footsteps of my rifting: But who comes in fuch hafte in riding robes?
Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

Lady. Where is that flawe thy brother? where is he?
That holds in chafe mine honour vp and downe.
Baff. My brother Roberts, old Sir Roberts fonne:
Colbrand the Oyant, that fame mighty man,
Is it Sir Roberts fonne that yecke fo?
Lady. Sir Roberts fonne, I thou vnreuered boy,
Sir Roberts fonne? why sform'th thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Roberts fonne, and foh art thou.
Baff. James Gournie, wilt thou glue vs leave a while?
Gour. Good leave good Philip.
Baff. Philip, sparrow, James,
There's toyes abroad, anon Ile tell thee more.
Exit James.

Madam, I was not old Sir Roberts fonne,
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Vpon good Friday, and were broke his fift:
Sir Robert could doe well, marrie to confedle
Could get me fir Robert could not doe it;
We know that handy-workes, there are good mother
To whom am I beholding for these limmes?
Sir Robert neuer holpe to make this legge.
Lady. Haft thou confired with thy brother too,
That for thine owne gaine shouldst defend mine honor?
What means this scorne, thou moft vntoward knau?
Baff. Knight, knight good mother, Bafiilico-like;
What, I am dub'd, I haue it on my shoulder:
But mother, I am not Sir Roberts fonne,
I haue disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone;
Then good my mother, let me know my father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it mother?
Lady. Haft thou denied thy felfe a Faulconbridge?
Baff. As fafhionably as I denye the deuil.
Lady. King Richard Cordellion was thy father,
By long and vehement fult I was feduc'd
To make roome for him in my husbands bed:
Heauen lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the ifue of my deere offence
Which was fo strongly vrg'd paff my defence.
Baff. Now by this light were I to get againe,
Madam I would not with a better father:
Some fannes doe beare their priuiledge on earth,
And fo doth yours: your fault, was not your follar,
Needs muft you lay your heart at his difpole,
SubieCted tribute to commanding love,
Against whose furie and vnmatched force,
The awfule Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keepe his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perfobe robs Lions of their hearts,
May easily winne a woman: aye my mother,
With all my heart I thanke thee for my father:
Who liues and dares but fay, thou did not well
When I was got, Ile fend his foule to hell.
Come Lady I will fwhel thee to my kinne,
And they fhall fay, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadft laid him now, it had beene fonne;
Who fayes it was, he lyes, I fay twas not.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Daulphin, Anfibia, Confiance, Arthur.

Nn. Before Angiers well met braue Austria,
Arthur that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard that rob'd the Lion of his heart,
And fought the holy Warres in Paffifene,
By this braue Dake came early to his grave:
And for amends to his pofterie,
At our importance hether is he come,
To fpread his colours boy, in thy behalfe,
And to rebuke the vfurpation
Of thy vnnatural Vncle, English John,
Embrace him, loue him, give him welcome hether.

Artb. God fhall forgive you Cordellions death
The rather, that you give his off-fpring life,
Shadowing their right vnder your wings of warre:
I gue you welcome with a powerless hand,
But with a heart full of vnflained loue,
Welcome before the gates of Angiers Duke.

Lewis. A noble boy, who would not doe thee right?
Aulf. Upon thy cheeke lay I this zealous kife,
As feale to this indenture of my loue:
That to my home I will no more returne
Till Angiers and the right thou haft in France,
Together with that pale, that white-faced flore,
Whose fote fparres backe the Oceans roaring tides,
And croopes from other lands thare landers,
Euen till that England hedg'd in with the maine,
That Water-walled Bulwarke, till feure
And confident from foreiene purpofes,
Euen till that vtopt corner of the Welt
Salute thee for her King, till then fuiue boy
Will I not thinke of home, but follow Armes.

Conf. O take his mothers thanks, a widdows thanks,
Till your strong hand shall helpes to give him strength,
To make a more requitall to your loue.
Aulf. The peace of heauen is theirs y lift their fwords
In such a luft and charitable warre.

King. Well, then to worke our Cannon shall be bent
Against the browes of this reftifing towne,
Call for our cheeffelt men of discifpline,
To cull the plotts of beft advantages:
We'll lay before this towne our Royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in French-men bloud,
But we will make it fubilef to this boy.

Con. Stay for an anfwer to your Embaffie,
Left vnaduis'd you fhaine your fwords with bloud,
My Lord Chaffton may from England bring
That right in peace which heere we vrze in warre,
And then we fhall repent each drop of bloud,
That hot rath haffe fo indirectly fhedde.

Enter Chaffton.

King. A wonder Lady: lo vpon thy wish
Our Miffenger Chaffton is arriued,
What England faires, fay briefely gentle Lord,
We coldly fave for thee, Chaffton Ipeake,
Chat. Then turne your forces from this paltry fegre,
And fhirte them vp againft a mightier taske:
England impatient of your luft demands,
Hath put himfelfe in Armes, the audefie windes.
Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time
To land his Legions all as foone as I:
His marches are expeditious to this towne,
His forces strong, his Soulier'd confident:
With him along is come the Mother Queene,
An Ace fliring him to bloud and thrite,
With her her Niece, the Lady Blancke of Spaine,
With them a Baftard of the Kings deceafe,
And all th'Æneas'd humors of the Land,
Rath, inconsiderate, fiere voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons spleenes,
Haue told their fortunes at their natie homes,
Bearing their birth-rights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes here:
In briefe, a brauer choyfe of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the Englifh bottomes haue waft ore,
Did neuer flote upon the dwelling tide,
To doe offence and scathe in Chriften dome:
The interruption of their churchful drums
Cuts off more circuinance, they are at hand,
Drum beats.

To parlie or to fight, therefore prepare.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.

Enter K. of England, Baftard, Queene, Blanche, Pembroke, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.

K. John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iuit and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace affend to heauen.
Thy finne are visited in this poor childe,
The Canon of the Law is laide on him,
Being but the second generation
Remoued from thy finne-conceuing wombe.

 أج. Bedlam haue done.

 Conj. I haue but this to say,
That he is not onely plagued for her fin,
But God hath made her finne and her, the plague
On this removed suffre, plagued for her,
And with her plague her finne: his injury
Her inuerie the Beadle to her finne,
All punifh'd in the perfon of this childe,
And all for her, a plague upon her.

 Que. Thou vnadvised Gold, I can produce
A Will, that barres the title of thy finne.

 Conj. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A women will, a cankered Grandsam will.

 Fry. Peace Lady, paufe, or be more temperate,
It ill beleeves this preience to cry ayme
To thefe ill-tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet fummon hither to the walles
Thefe men of Angiers, let vs heare them speake,
Whose title they admit, Arthur or Iohn.

 Trumpet sounds.

 Enter a Citizen upon the walles.

 Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd vs to the walles?

 Fry. 'Tis France, for England.

 أج. England for it felte:
You men of Angiers, and my louing subiects.

 Fry. You louing men of Angiers, Arthurius subiects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.

 أج. For our advantage, therefore heare vs firft:
Thefe flags of France that are advanced heere
Before the eye and prospect of your Towne,
Hauie hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons haue their bowls full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to frith forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainst your walles:
All preparation for a bloody fledge
And mericles proceeding, by thefe French.
Comfort your Citties eies, your winking gates:
And but for our approch, those sleeping stones,
That as a wafte doth girdle you about
By the compulion of their Ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of time
Had bin dishabited, and wide hauocke made
For bloody power to rush vpon your peace.
But on the right of vs your lawfull King,
Who painfullly with much expedient march
Hauie brought a counter-checke before your gates,
To waue vnscratch'd your Citties threatened checkes:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle,
And now insteed of bulletts wrapt in fire
To make a shakling feuer in your walles,
They shoote but calme words, folded vp in smoake,
To make a faithlesse error in your eares,
Which truft accordingly kinde Citizens,
And let vs in. Your King, whose labour'd spirits
Fore-worlded in this action of swift speede,
Crans harbourage within your Cittie walles.

 France. When I have guide, make answere to vs both.
Lye in this right hand, whose protection
Is moft diuinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, flands yong Plantagenet,
Sonne to the elder brother of this man,

And King ore him, and all that he enjoyes:
For this downe-troden equity, we tread
In warlike march, these greene before your Towne,
Being no further enemy to you.
Then the constraint of hopitable seale,
In the releefe of this oppreffed childe,
Religiously provoke. Be please then
To pay that dutie which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this yong Prince,
And then our Armes, like to a muzled Beare,
Sawe in apeace, hath all offence seal'd vp:
Our Cannons male vice all shall be spent
Against th'invulnerable clouds of heaven,
And with a bleeded and vn-veit retyre,
With vnheuck'd swords, and Helmets all vnbruiss'd,
We will beare home that lufte blood againe,
Which heere we came to spout against your Towne,
And leave your children, wifes, and you in peace.
But if you fondly paffe our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the rounder of your old-fac'd walles,
Can hide you from our meffengers of Warre,
Though all thefe English, and their discipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference:
Then tell vs, Shall your Citie call vs Lord,
In that behalfe which we haue challeng'd it?
Or shall we glue the signall to our rage,
And faile in blood to our poiffeion?

 Cit. In breefe, we are the King of Englands subiects
For him, and in his right, we hold this Towne.

 أج. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.

 Cit. That can we not: but he that proves the King
To him will we proue loyall, till that time
Hauie we ramm'd vp our gates against the world.

 أج. Doth not the Crowne of England, prooue the King?
And if not that, I bring you Witnisse
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of Englands breed.

 با. Baftards and elfe.

 أج. To verifie our title with their liues.

 فر. As many and as well-born bloody as thofe.

 با. Some Baftards too.

 فر. Stand in his face to contradiction his claime.

 ج. Till you compound whose right is worthie,
We for the worthieft hold the right from both.

 أج. Then God forgive the finne of all thofe soules,
That to their everlafting refidence,
Before the dew of evening fall, shall feete
In dreadfull triall of our kingdome King

 فر. Amen, Amen, mount Cheuallers to Armes.

 با. Saint George that wind'd the Dragon,
And ere since fit's on a horfebacke at mine Hoffesse dore
Teach vs some fence. Sirrah, were I at home
At your den firrah, with your Lionneffe,
I would fet an Ox-head to your Lyons hide
And make a monifter of you.

 با. Peace, no more.

 با. O tremble: for you heare the Lyon roare.

 أج. Vp higher to the plaine, where we'll fet forth
In beft appointment all our Regiments.

 با. Speed then to take advantage of the field,
Thou. It shall be fo, and at the other hill
Command the reft to fland, God and our right.

 Exeunt

 Here after excursions, Enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the gates.

 F. Her. You men of Angiers open wide your gates,
And let yong Arthur Duke of Britaine in,

A 3 A 3
Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much worke for tears in many an English mother,
Whose fones lie scattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widows husband grouling lies,
Coldly embracing the discoulerd earth,
And victorie with little offe doth play
Vpon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly displayed
To enter Conquerors, and to proclaim
Thrift: One From Whofe In Open Wee'l Before That There Vpon Coldly Whofe Our Their Commander To And Much Our John, Armours Worke embracing the Climate his hauing from the blood of this contemptuous Citty, I'd play incessantly vpon these lades, Euen till vnfenced defolation Leave them as naked as the vulgar ayre: That done, diffuere your knited strengthes, And part your mingled colours once again, Turne face to face, and bloody point to point: Then in a moment Fortune shall cull forth Out of one fide her happy Minion, To whom in fauer the shall gie the day, And kiffe him with a glorious victroy:
How like you this wildc confec recommending States, Smackes it not something of the policie.
John, Now by the sky that hangs above our heads, I like it well. France, shall we knit our powres, And lay this Angiers even with the ground, Then after fight who shall be king of it?
Beati. And if thou haft the mettle of a king, Being wrong'd as we are by this peecuil Towne: Turne thou the mouth of thy Artillerie, As we will ours, against thefa fawcie walles, And when that we haue dafh'd them to the ground, Why then defe each other, and pell-mell, Make works vpon our felues,for heauen or hell. Fra. Let it be so: say, where will you affault? John. We from the Weft will fend deffafion Into this Citties boforme. Auft. I from the North.
Fras. Our Thunder from the South,
Shall raine their drift of bullets on this Towne.
Beati. O prudent discipline! From North to South:
Austria and France shoot in eache others mouth.
Ile firme to them: Come, away, away.
Hub. Heare vs great kings, vouchsafe awhile to stay
And I shall shew you peace, and faire-fac'd league: Win you this Citty without stroke, or wound, Rescue thofe breathing lyes to dye in beds, That here be come facrifices for the field. Perfeuer not, but hear me mighty kings. John. Speake on with fauour, we are bent to heare.
Hub. That daughter there of Spaine, the Lady Blanche
Is neere to England, looke vpon the yeeres Of Lern's the Dolphin, and that lovely maid.
Ifluffle lune should go in guelt of beautie,

Where should he finde it fairer, then in Blanch:
If zealous loue should go in search of vertue,
Where should he finde it purer then in Blanch?
If loue ambitious, sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood then Lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beautie, vertue, birth,
Is the yong Dolphin every way compleat,
If not compleat of, fay he is not thee,
And she againe wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not hee:
He is the halfe part of a bleffed man,
Left to be finifh'd by fuch as thee,
And she a faire divided excellence,
Whose fulnesse of perfection lies in him.
O two fuch fifuler currents when they ioyne
Do glorifie the banke that bound them in:
And two fuch fhores, to two fuch freames made one,
Two fuch controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To thefe two Princes, if you marrie them:
This Union shal do more then batterie can
To our falt closed gates: for at this match,
With swifter fpeepe then powder can enforce
The mouth of paffage fhall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance: but without this match,
The fee enraged is not halfe fo deafe,
Lyons more confident, Mountains and rockes
More free from motion, no not death himfelfe
In mortal furie halt fo peremptorie,
As we to keepe this Cittie.

Baf#. Heres a flay,
That shaketh the rotten carkaffe of old death
Out of his ragges. Here's a large mouth indeede,
That fpits forth death, and mountains, rockes, and feas,
Talkes as familiarily of roaring Lyons,
As maids of thirteene do of puppi-dogges,
What Cannoneere begot this fullie blood,
He fpakes plaine Cannon fire, and smoake, and bounce,
He giues the batallion with his tongue:
Our cares are gudgel'd, not a word of his
But buffets better then a fift of France:
Zounds, I was never fo befhumpet with words,
Since I fift call'd my brothers father Dad.

Old Qa. Son, lift to this conjunction, make this match
Glue with our Neece a dowrie large enough,
For by this knot, thou fhalt fo furely tye
Thy now vnflur d affurance to the Crowne,
That yon greene boy fhall have no Sunne to ripe
The bloome that-promifeth a mightie fruite.
I fee a yelding in the lookes of France:
Marke how they whisper, verge them while their foules
Are capable of this ambition,
Leaft zeale now meltet by the windle breath
Of foft petition, pittie and remorse,
Coole and congeale againe to what it was.

Hub. Why anfwer not the double Malefies,
This friendly treatie of our threatened Towne.
Fra. Speake England firft, that hath bin forward firft
To fpake unto this Cittie: what fay you?
Iohn. If that the Dolphin there thy princely fonne,
Can in this booke of beautie read, I loue:
Her Dowrie fhall weigh equall with a Queene:
For Angiers, and faire Toraine Maine, Poyeffiers,
And all that we vpon this fide the Sea,
(Except this Cittie now by vs befedg'd)
Finde liable to our Crowne and Dignitie,
Shall gild her bridali bed and make her rich
In titles, honors, and promotions,
As she in beautie, education, blood,
Holdes hand with any Princefle of the world.
Fra. What fit'th thofe boy I looke in the Ladies face.
Del. I do my Lord, and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of my felfe form'd in her eye,
Which being but the shadow of your fonne,
Becomes a fonne and makes your fonne a shadow:
I do protest I neuer lou'd my felle
Till now, infixed I beheld my felfe,
Drawne in the flattering table of her eie.

Whiﬅers with Blanch.
Baf#. Drawne in the flattering table of her eie,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkale of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, hee doth efpe
Himfelfe loues truory, this is pittie now:
That hang'd, and drawne, and quarter'd there fhould be
In fuch a loye, fo vile a Loue as he.
Blan. My vnckles will in this refpeʃt is mine,
If he fee ought in you that makes him like,
That any thing he fee's which moues his likings,
I can with cafe tranflate it to my will:
Or if you will, to fpake more properly,
will enforce it earlie to my loue.
Further I will not flatter you, my Lord,
That all I fee in you is worthy loue.
Then this, that nothing do I fee in you,
Though churlifh thoughts themselves fhould bee your Judge,
That I can finde, fhould merit any hate.
Iohn. What faie thefe yong-ones? What fay you my Neece?
Blan. That she is bound in honor still to do
What you in wifedome fhall vouchsafe to fay.
Iohn. Speake then Prince Dolphin, can you loue this Ladie?
Del. Nay ask me if I can refraine from loue,
For I doe loue her moft vnfainedly.
Iohn. Then do I giue Vulqueʃen, Toraine, Maine,
Poyeffiers, and Aniove, thefe fuce Prouinces
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thoufand Markes of English coyne:
Phillip of France, if thou be pleaf'd withall,
Command thy fonne and daughtet to ioyne hands,
Fra. It likès vs well young Princes: clofe your hands
Auʃt. And your lippes too, for I am well affur'd,
That I did fo when I was affur'd.
Fra. Now Citizens of Angiers ope your gates,
Let in that amitice which you have made,
For at Saint Maries Chappell prefently,
The rights of marriage fhall be solemniz'd.
Is not the Ladie Confance in this troope?
I know she is not for this match made vp,
Her preffece would have interrupted much.
Where is he and her fonne, tell me, who knowes?
Del. She is fad and paffionate at your highnes Tent.
Fra. And by my faith, this league that we have made
Will giue her fulnesse very little cure:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widdow Ladie? In her right we came,
Which we God knowes, haue turn'd another way,
To our owne vantage.
Iohn. We will heale vp all,
For wee'l create yong Arthur Duke of Britaine
And Earle of Richmond, and this rich faire Towne

We
We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Constance,
Some speedy Messenger bid her repair,
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
(If not fill vp the measure of her will)
Yet in some measure satisfy her foe,
That we shall stop her exclamation,
Go we as well as haft will suffer vs,
To this vnlook'd for vnprepar'd pomp.

Exeunt.

Boff. Mad world, mad kings, mad composition:
Iohn to stop Artburs Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whose armour Conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charitie brought to the field,
As Gods owne fouldier, rounded in the eare,
With that fame purpose-changer, that flye diuel,
That Broker, that fill breaks the pate of faith,
That dayly breake-vow, he that winnes of all,
Of kings, of beggers, old men, yong men, maids,
Who hauing no externall thing to loope,
But the word Maid, cheats the poore Maide of that.
That smooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commodity,
Commoditie, the byas of the world,
The word, who of it felle is peyed well,
Made to run cun, upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing byas,
This fway of motion, this commoditie,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent.
And this fame byas, this Commoditie,
This Bawd, this Broker, this all-changing-word,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawne him from his owne determin'd ayd,
From a refolu'd and honourable warre,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace,
And why ryle I on this Commoditie?
But for because he hath not woed me yet:
Not that I haue the power to clutch my hand,
When his faire Angels would salute my palme,
But for my hand, as vnattempted yet,
Like a poore begger, raiteth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a begger, I will raile,
And say there is no fin but to be rich:
And being rich, my vertue then shall be,
To say there is no vice, but beggerie:
Since Kings breake faith vpom commoditie,
Gaine be my Lord, for I will worship thee.

Exeit.

Actus Secundus

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Con. Gone to be married? Gone to sweare a peace?
Falle blood to falle blood ion'd. Gone to be freinds?
Shall Lewis haue Blaunce, and Blaunce those Prouinces?
It is not fo, thou haft misspoke, mithheard,
Be well adult'd, tell ore thy tale again.
It cannot be, thou do'lt but say 'tis fo.
I truft I may not tryst thee, for thy word
Is but the vaine breath of a common man:
Beleeue me, I doe not beleue thee man,
I have a Kings oath to the contrarie.
Thou shalt be puni'd for thus frightening me,
For I am feele, and capable of feares,

Oppreft with wrongs, and therefore full of feares,
A widdow, husbands, subjicet to feares,
A woman naturally borne to feares;
And though thou now confelle thou didst but left
With my next spiritts, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What doft thou mane by flaking of thy head?
Why doft thou looke so sadly on my fonne?
What means that hand upon that breafh of thine?
Why holdes thine eie that lamentable rhowme,
Like a proud riever peering ore his bounds?
Be thefe fad fignes confirmeres of thy words?
Then fpeak again, not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleue you thinke them falle,
That gie you caufe to prove my faying true.

Con. Oh if thou teach me to beleue this forrow,
Teach thou this forrow, how to make me dye,
And let belefe, and life encounter fo,
As doth the furie of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and dye.

Lews marry Blaunce? O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot broke thy fight,
This newes hath made thee a moft vglie man.

Sal. What other harme hrosse I good Lady done,
But fpoke the harme, that is by others done?

Con. Which harme within it felle fo heynous is,
As it makes harmefull all that fpeak of it.

Ar. I do befeech you Madam be content.

Con. If thou that bidft me be content, wert grim
Vgily, and flandrous to thy Mothers wombe,
Full of vnpleasing blots, and frightful stains,
Lame, foolifh, crooked,Past, prodigious,
Patch'd with foule Moles, and eye-offending markes,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I should not loue thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deferue a Crowne.
But thou art faire, and at thy birth (deere boy)
Nature and Fortune ion'd to make thee great.
Of Natures guifts, thou mayft with Lillies boast,
And with the halfe-blowne Rofe.
But Fortune, oh, she is corrupted, chang'd, and wonne from thee,
Sh'adulterates hourly with thine Vnckle John,
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread downe faire reprefent of Sovereignty,
And made his Maiestie the bawd to theirs.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and king Iohn,
That brumptum Fortune, that vfurping Iohn?
Tell me thou fellow, is not France forfowrned?
Euenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave thofe woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to vnder-berare.

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not goe without you to the kings.

Con. Thou maift, thou shalt, I will not go with thee,
I will infruct my forrowes to bee proud,
For greffe is proud, and makes his owner foopie,
To me and to the flate of my great greffe,
Let kings afsemble: for my greffe's fo great,
That no supporter but the huge firme earth
Can hold it vp: here I and forrowes fit,
Heere is my Throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Actus
Actus Tertius, Scena prima.

Enter King John, France, Dolphin, Blanch, Eleanor, Philip, Auyr'ia, Confiance.

Fra. 'Tis true (faire daughter) and this blest day, Euer in France shall be kept fellituall: To feomelizze this day the glorious funne Stayes in his course, and plays the Alchymift, Turning with splendor of his precious eye The meager cloudy earth to glittering gold: The yearely courfle that brings this day about, Shall never fee it, but a holy day.

Conf. A wicked day, and not a holy day. What hath this day deferu'd? what hath it done, That it in golden letters shou'd be set Among the high tides in the Kalender ? Nay, rather turne this day out of the wecke, This day of shame, oppreffion, periyru. Or if it muft fland fill, let wises with childe Pray that their burthenes may not fall this day, Left that their hopes prodiligiously be crot: But (on this day) let Sea-men faire no wracke, No bargaine breake that are not this day made; This day all things begun, come to ill end.

Fra. By heauen Lady, you shall haue no caufe To curfe the faire proceedings of this day: Have I not pawn'd to you my Maffey?

Conf. You haue beguil'd me with a counterfeit Refleming Maiesty, which being touch'd and tride, Proues valueleff; you are fowrfone, forfiworne, You came in Armes to fpill mine enemies bloud, But now in Armes, you strenthen it with yours. The grasping vigor, and rough frowne of Warre Is cold in amite, and painted peace, And our oppreffion hath made vp this league: Arme, arme, you heauens, against thefe periu'd Kings, A widdow cries, be husband to me (heauens) Let not the howres of this vngodly day Weare out the daies in Peace; but ere Sun-fet, Set armed difcifd twixt thefe periu'd Kings,

Heare me, Oh, heare me.

Auff. Lady Confiance, peace.

Conf. War, war, no peace, peace is to me a warre: O Latymes, O Auyr'ia, thou doft fhame That bloudy fpoyle: thou flauze, thou wretch, Y coward, Thou little valiant, great in villanie, Thou euer frong vpon the stronger fide; Thou Fortunes Champion, that doft neuer figh But when her humours Ladihip is by To teach thee safety: thou art periu'd too, And footh'ft vp greatneffe. What a foole art thou, A rampeing foole, to brag, and fiam,p, and fwear, Vpon my partie: thou cold blooded flauze, Haft thou not fpoke like thunder on my fide? Beene fwoone my Soildier, bidding me depende Vpon thy farres, thy fortune, and thy ftreng, And doft thou now fall ouer to my foes? Thou ware a Lyons hide, doft it for fhame, And hang a Calues skin on thofe recreant limbes.

Auf. O that a man should fpake thofe words to me.

Phil. And hang a Calues-skin on thofe recreant limbs. Auf. Thou darst not fay fo villaine for thy life.

Phil. And hang a Calues-skin on thofe recreant limbs.

John. We like not this, thou doft forget thy felfe.

Enter Pandulpb.

Fra. Heere comes the holy Legate of the Pope. Pan. Haile you annotated deputies of heauen; To thee King John my holy errand is: I Pandulpb, of faire Millane Cardinal, And from Pope Innocent the Legate heere, Doe in his name religiounly demand Why thou againft the Church,our holy Mother, So wilfully doft fpurne; and force perfecro. Keeppe Stephen Langton chosen Arfhibishop Of Canterbury from that holy Sea: This in our foareful holy Fathers name Pope Innocent, I doe demand of thee.

John. What earthie name to Interrogatories Can taft the free breath of a facred King? Thou canft not (Cardinall) define a name So flight, vnworthy, and ridiculous To charge me to an anfwere, as the Pope: Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England, Addo thus much more, that no Italian Prieff Shall tythe or toll in our dominions: But as we, vnder heauen, are supreame head, So vnder him that great supremacy Where we doe reigne, we will alone vphold Without th'affiance of a mortall hand: So tell the Pope, all reuereence fet apart To him and his vfar'd authoritie.

Fra. Brother of England, you blaffheme in this.

John. Though you, and all the Kings of Christendom Are led fo groffely by this medling Prieff, Dreading the curfe that money may buy out, And by the merit of vilde gold, droffe, duft, Purchafe corrupted pardon of a man, Who in that fale fels pardon from himfelfe: Though you, and al the ref Groffely led, This jugling withtcraft with reuenue cherifh, Yet I alone, alone doe me oppofe Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then by the lawfull power that I haue, Thou falt fland curft, and excommunicate, And bleffed shall he be that doth revoll From his Allegerence to an heretique, And meritorious hall that hand be call'd, Canonized and worship'd as a Saint, That takes away by any secret courfe Thy hatefull life.

Con. O lawfull let it be That I have roome with Rome to curfe a while, Good Father Cardinall, cry thou Amen To my keene curfe; for without my wrong There is no tongue hath power to curfe him right.

Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curfe.

Conf. And for mine too, when Law can do no right. Let it be lawfull, that Law barre no wrong: Law cannot give my childe his kingdome heere; For he that holds his Kingdome, holds the Law: Therefore fince Law it felle is perfect wrong, How can the Law forbid my tongue to curfe?

Pand. Philip of France, on perill of a curfe, Let goe the hand of that Arch-heretique, And raife the power of France vpon his head, Vnleffe he doe submit himfelfe to Rome.

Elea. Look'rt thou pale France? do not let go thy hand. Con. Looko to that Deuill, left that France repent,
The life and death of King John.

And by dilouing hands hell lose a foule.
Ault. King Philip, listen to the Cardinal.
Bast. And hang a Calues-skin on his unintend limbs.
Ault. Well ruffian, I must pocket vp these wrongs, because,
Bast. Your breeches beft may carry them.
John. Philip, what faie thou to the Cardinal?
Con. What should he say, but as the Cardinal?
Delpb. Bethink ye father, for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy curfe from Rome,
Or the light loffe of England, for a friend:
Forgoe the eaiser.
Bla. That's the curfe of Rome.
Con. O Lewis, hand fall, the devil tempteth thee here
In likeness of a new untrimmed Bride.
Bla. The Lady Constance speakes not from her faith,
But from her need.
Con. Oh, if thou grant my need,
Which onely lies but by the death of faith,
That need, muft needs Inferre this principle,
That faith would live againe by death of need:
O then tread downe my need, and faith mounts vp,
Keep my need vp, and faith is trodden downe.
John. The king is moud, and answerst not to this.
Con. O be remou'd from him, and answerst well.
Ault. Do so king Philip, hang no more in doubt.
Bast. Hang nothing but a Calues skin most sweet loot.
Fra. I am perplexed, and know not what to say.
Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?
Fra. Good reuerend father, make my perfon yours,
And tell me how you would beftow your selfe?
This royall hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward foules
Married in league, coupled, and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vowes,
The last breath that gue the found of words
Was deepe-fworne faith, peace, amity, true love
Betwenee our kingdomes and our royall felues,
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer then we well could wash our hands,
To clasp this royall bargaine vp of peace,
Heuen knowes they were belmear'd and ouer-thaind
With flaughters pencil; where reuenge did paint
The fearfull difference of incenfed kings:
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of blood?
So newly Ioyn'd in love? so strong in both,
Vnlyke this feasure, and this kindo regreate?
Play fast and loose with fith? I left with heauen,
Make such vnconfent children of our felues
As now againe to snatch our palme from palme:
Vn-swore faith sworne, and on the marriage bed
Of simpling peace to march a bloody hoist,
And make a ryot on the gentle brow
Of true fincerity? O holy Sir
My reuerend father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, deuife, ordaine, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be bleft
To doe your pleasure, and continue friends.
Pand. All forme is formeless, order orderless,
Sawe what is oppoite to Englands loue.
Therefore to Armes, be Champion of our Church,
Or let the Church our mother breathe her curfe,
A mothers curfe, on her reuolting fonne:
France, thou maift hold a serpant by the tongue,
A cafed Lion by the mortall paw,

A falling Tyger safer by the tooth,
Then keepe in peace that hand which thou doft hold.
Fra. I may dif-loyne my hand, but not my faith.
Pand. So make'ft thou faith an enemy to faith,
And like a cuill warre fetteth oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O let thy vow
First mad to heauen, first be to heauen perform'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church,
What fince thou fwearest, is fawning against thy felfe,
And may not be performed by thy felfe,
For that which thou haft frowned to doe amitfe,
Is not amitfe when it is truly done:
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then moft done not done it:
The better Act of purpose miltooke,
Is to mistake again, though indirec,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falhood, falhood cures, as fire cooles fire
Within the forcered veins of one new burn'd:
It is religion that doth make vowes kept,
But thou haft frowned against religion,
By what thou fwear'st againft the thing thou fwear'ft,
And make'ft an oath the furette for thy truth,
Against an oath the truth, thou art vntrue
To fwear, fwarest onely not to be forsworne,
Elfe what a mockerie should it be to fwear?
But thou doft fware, onely to be forsworne,
And moft forsworne, to kepe what thou doft fware,
Therefore thy later vowes, againft thy firl,
Is in thy felfe rebellion to thy felfe:
And better conquest neuer canft thou make,
Then arme thy confant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose fuggifions:
Upon which better part, our prayrs come in,
If thou vouchsafe them.
But if not, then know
The peril of our curfes light on thee
So heauy, as thou shalt not fmake them off
But in defpaire, dye vnder their blacke weight.
Ault. Rebellion, flat rebellion.
Bast. Wilt not be?
Will not a Calues-skin flop that mouth of thine?
Daul. Father, to Armes.
Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?
Against the blood that thou haft married?
What, hall our fealt be kept with flaughtered men?
Shall harrying trumpets, and loud churilh drums
Clamors of hell, be meafures to our pomp?
O husband heare me, aye, alacke, how new
Is husband in my mouth? euen for that name
Which till this time my tongue did nere pronounce;
Upon my knee I beg, goe not to Armes
Against mine Uncle.
Confi. O, upon my knee made hard with kneading,
I doe pray to thee, thou vertuous Daulphin,
Alter not the doome fore-thought by heauen.
Blan. Now hall I fee thy loue, what motiue may
Be stronger with thee, then the name of wife?
Con. That which vpholdeth him, that thee vpholds,
His Honor, Oh thine Honor, Lewis thine Honor.
Delpb. I mule your Maiesty doth seeme fo cold,
When such profound respects doe pull you on?
Pand. I will denounce a curfe vpon his head.
Fra. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall fro thee.
Confi. O faire returne of banifh'd Maiesty.
Elia. O foule revoult of French inconfancy.
Eng. France, y hall rue this house within this hour.
Bast.
The life and death of King John.

Scena Secunda.

Allarums. Exeunt. Enter Bafard with Austria's bead.

Baf. Now by my life, this day grow wondrous hot,
Some ayer Deuil hours in the sike,
And pour's downe mitchlefe, Austria's head lye there,

Enter John, Arthur, Hubert.

While Philip breathe.

John. Hubert, kepe this boy, Philip make vp,
My Mother is affayled in our Tent,
And tane I feare.

Baf. My Lord I rescued her,
Her Highnesse is in safety, feare you not:
But on my Liege, for very little paines
Will bring this labor to an happy end.

Exit.

Allarums, executions, Retreat. Enter John, Eleanor, Arthur, Bafard, Hubert, Lords.

John. So shall ye be: your Grace shall stay behind
So strongly guarded: Cofen, looke not sad,
Thy Grandame louses thee, and thy Vncle will
As deere be to thee, as thy father was.

Arth. O this will make my mother die with griefe.

John. Cofen away for England, hate before,
And ere we comming see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding Abbots, imprisoned angels
Set at libertie the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed vpon:
Vfe our Commination in his utmost force.

Baf. Bell, Book, & Candle, shall not drive me back,
When gold and fluer beckes me to come on
I leave your highnesse: Grandame, I will pray
(If euer I remember to be holy)
For your faire safety: so I kisse your hand.

Els. Farewell gentle Cofen.

Els. Come better little kindman, harke, a worde.

John. Come better Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a foule counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage meanes to pay thy love:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lies in this bofte, deereely cherished.

I give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better tune.

By heaven Hubert, I am almoft aham'd
To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your Maiesty.

John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to fay so yet,
But thou shalt have: and cease ye time nere to flow,
Yet it shall come, for me to doe thee good.

I had a thing to fay, but let it goe:
"The Sunne is in the heauen, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes
To give me audience: If the mid-night bell
Did with his yron tongue, and brazen mouth
Sound on into the drowzie race of night:
If this fame were a Church-yard where we stand,
And thou poufled with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that guilty spirit melancholy
Had bak'd thy bloud, and made it heauy, thicke,
Which eile runnes tickling vp and downe the veins,
Making that idiot laughter kepe mens eyes,
And straine their cheekes to idle merriment,
A passion hatefull to my purposes:
Or if that thou couldst fee me without eyes,
Heare me without thine eares, and make reply
Without a tongue, ving conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears, and harmefull found of words:
Then, in deight of brooded watchfull day,
I would into thy boforme poure my thoughts:
But (ah) I will not, yet I love thee well,
And by my troth I thinke thou loue me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me vndertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my Aet,
By heauen I would doe it.

John. Doe not I know you wouldt?

Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert throw thine eye
On yon young boy: Ile tell thee what my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And whereofere this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: doth thou vnderstand me?

Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And Ile kepe him so,
That he shall not offend your Maiesty.

John. Death.

Hub. My Lord.

Hub. He shall not live.

John. Enough.

I could be merry now, Hubert, I love thee.
Well, Ile not say what I intend for thee:
Remember: Madam, Fare you well,
Ile fend those powers o're to your Maiesty.

Els. My bleffing goe with thee.

John. For England Cofen, goe.

Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
Withal true dutie: On toward Callics, hoa.

Exeunt.

Scena.
Scena Tertia.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandulph, Attendants.

Fra. So by a roaring Tempest on the flood,
A whole Armado of confciute faile
Is scattered and dif-loyn'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet goo well.

Fra. What can goe well, when we have runne fo ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers loft?

Arthure. Can prisoner! dues deere friends slaue?
And bloody England into England gone,
Ore-bearing interruption flight of France?

Del. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed, with such advice dispo'sd,
Such temperate order in foo fierce a caufe,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?

Fra. Well could I beare that England had this praise,
So we could finde some pattern of our shame:

Enter Conflance.

Looke who comes here? a gallant into a foule,
Holding that eternal spirit against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath:
I prethee Lady goe away with me.

Con. Lo! now: now see the issue of your peace.

Fra. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Conflance.

Con. No, I defe all Counsell, all redrefs,
But that which ends all counsell, true Redrefs:
Death, death, O amiable, lovely death,
Thou odorous fench! found rottenfnee,
Arie forth from the couch of lafting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperitie,
And I will kill thy detestable bones,
And put my eye-balls in thy vaultrie browes,
And ring these fiders with thy hollow wormes,
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome duft,
And be a Carrion Monfter like thy felfe;
Come, grin on me, and I will thinke thou smilft,
And baffe thee as thy wife: Milieres Loue,
O come to me.

Fra. O faire afpeet, peace.

Con. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a paffion would I flake the world,
And rowze from fleere that fell Anatomy,
Which cannot hear a Ladies feeble voyce,
Which scornes a moderne Inoculation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Con. Thou art holy to belye me fo,
I am not mad: this haire I teare is mine,
My name is Conflance, I was Geoffrey's wife,
Yong Arthure is my fonne, and he is loft:
I am not mad, I would to heaven I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget my felfe:
O, if I could, what griefe should I forget?
Preach some Philofophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be Canoniz'd (Cardinal.)
For, being not mad, but fenfible of griefe,
My reafonable part produces reafon
How I may be deliver'd of thefe woes,
And teaches mee to kill or hang my felfe:
If I were mad, I should forget my fonne,
Or madly thinke a babe of clowats were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feele
The different plague of each calamitie.

Fra. Binde vp those trefles: O what loue I note
In the faire multitude of thoſe her haire;
Where but by chance a filuer drop hath faile,
Even to that drop ten thoufand wiery fiends
Doe glean themefelves in fociable griefe,
Like true, infeparable, faithfull loues,
Sticking together in calamitie.

Con. To England, if you will.

Fra. Binde vp your haire.

Con. Yes that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and crièd aloud,
O, that these hands could fo redeeme my fonne,
As they have guen thee haeres their libertie:
But now I enue at their libertie,
And will againe commit them to their bonds,
Becauze my poor child is a prifoner.
And Father Cardinall, I have heard you fay
That we shall fee and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I fhall fee my boy againe;
For fince the birth of Caines, the first male-childe
To him that did but yesterday fupfire:
There was not fuch a gracious creature borne:
But now will Canker-forrow eat my bud,
And chafe the natue beauty from his cheeke,
And he will looke as hollow as a Ghoft,
As dim and meaenger as an Agues fitte,
And fo hee'll dye: and rifing fo againe,
When I fhall meet him in the Court of heaven
I fhall not know him: therefore neuer, neuer
Mutt I behold my pretty Arthure more.

Pand. You hold too heynous a repect of greffe.

Confl. He talke to me, that neuer had a fonne.

Fra. You are as fond of greffe, as of your childe.

Con. Greffe fills the roome vp of my abfent childe:
Lies in his bed, walkes vp and downe with me,
Putson his pretty lookes, repeats his words,
Remembets me of all his gracious parts,
Stufles out his vacant garments with his forme;
Then, haue I reafon to be fond of griefe?

Fareyouwell: had you such a loffe as I,
I could glue better comfort then you doe.

I will not keepe this forme vpon my head,
When there is fuch diſorder in my witte:
O Lord, my boy, my Arthure, my faire fonne,
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my forrowes cure.

Exit.

Fra. I flaire some out-rage, and Ile follow her. Exit.

Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me joy,
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull eare of a drowzie man;
And bitter shame hath fpayl'd the sweet words taste,
That it yeelds nought but shame and bitterneffe.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the infant of reaſpe, and health,
The fit is strongeſt: Euels that take leaque
On their departure, moft of all theyeull:
What have you loft by loſing of this day?

Dol. All daies of glory, joye, and happineffe.

Pan. If you had won it, certainly you had.

No, no: when Fortune means to men moft good,
She looks vpom them with a threatening eye:
'Tis strange to thinke how much King John hath loft
In this which he accounts fo clearly wonne:

Arc
The life and death of King John.

Are not you grie’d that Arthur is his prisoner?

Del. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.

Pan. Your minde is all as youthfull as your blood.

Now heare me speake with a prophetick spirit:
For even the breath of what I meane to speake,
Shall blow each duff, each straw, each little rub
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foote to Englands Throne. And therefore marke:
John hath seiz’d Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warme life playes in that infants veines,
The mil-place’d-John should entertaine an houre,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of reft.
A Scepter snatch’d with an unruly hand,
Muft be as boyterously maintaine’d as gain’d.
And he that stands upon a flipp’ry place,
Makes nice of no idle hold to flay him vp:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot but be so.

Del. But what shall I gaine by yong Arthurs fall?

Pan. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claime that Arthur did.

Del. And loose it life and all, as Arthur did.

Pan. How green you are, and fresh in this old world?
John lays you plots: the times confpire with you,
For he that flees his fate in true blood,
Shall finde but bloody safety, and vntrue.
This Act so eullly borne shall coole the hearts
Of all his people, and freee vp their inde,
That none so small advantage shall steep forth
To checke his regne, but they will cherishe it.
No naturall exhalation in the skie,
No scope of Nature, no diptermer’d day,
No common winde, no customed even,
But they will plucke away his naturall cause,
And call them Meteors, prodigies, and signes,
Abovertues, prefages, and tongues of heauen,
Plainly decrying vengeance upon John.

Del. May be he will not touch yong Arthurs life,
But hold him selfe safe in his prisonment.

Pan. O Sir, when he shall heare of your approach,
If that yong Arthur be no more in their hand,
Euen at that newes he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people shall revolt from him,
And kisse the lippes of vnacquainted change,
And picke strong matter of revolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of John.
Me thinks I see this hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Then I haue nam’d. The Ballad Falconbridge
Is now in England ranfackling the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Armes, they would be as a Call
To traine ten thousand English to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a Mountaine. O noble Dolphin,
Go with me to the King, ’tis wonderfull,
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their foules are topluff of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.

Del. Strong reasons makes strange actions: let vs go,
If you fay I, the King will not fay no. Exeunt.
If heaven be pleas'd that you must vse me ill, Why then you must. Will you put out mine eyes? Thace eyes, that never did, nor never shall So much as frown on you.

Hub. I have fwoorne to do it:
And with hot Irons must I burne them out.

Art. Ah, none but in this Iron Age, would do it:
The Iront of fiele, though heate red hot,
Approaching nearc thefe eyes, would drinkme my tears,
And quench this fiera indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, consume away in ruth,
But for containing fire to harme mine eye:
Are you more fubborne hard, then hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angel should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not have beleu'd him: no tongue but Huberts.

Art. O fawe me Hubert,faue me: my eyes are out
Even with the fierce lookes of these bloody men.
Hub. Give me the Iron I say, and binde him heere.
Art. Alas, what neede you be fo boltflours rough?
I will not strugge, I will stand fтоne fill:
For heaven fake Hubert let me not be bound:
Nay heare me Hubert,drive thefe men away,
And I will fit as quiet as a Lambe.
I will not ffringe, nor winch, nor speake a word,
Nor looke upon the Iron angrily:
Thrust but thefe men away, and Ile forgive you,
What euerm torment you do put me too.

Hub. Go ftrand within: let me alone with him.
Exec. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deede.
Art. Alas, I then have chide away my friend,
He hath a ferne looke, but a gentle heart:
Let him come backe, that his compaffion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come (Boy) prepareyourfelfe.

Art. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lofe your eyes.

Art. O heauen: that there were but a moth in yours,
A graine, a dfu, a gnat, a wandering haire,
Any annoyance in that precious felfc:
Then feeling what small things are boytherous there,
Your wilde intent must needs feeme horrible.

Hub. Is this your promife? Go too, hold your toog.
Art. Hubert, the vettrence of a brace of tongues,
Muf't needes want pleading for a pairc of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue: let me not Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may keepe mine eyes. O spare mine eyes,
Though to no vse, but fill to looke on you.
Loc, by my troth, the Instrument is cold;
And would not harme me.

Hub. I can heate it, Boy.

Art. No, in good ftooth: the fire is dead with griefe.
Being create for comfort, to be vs'd
In vnderdue extreme: See elfe your felfe,
There is no malice in this burning cole,
The breath of heaven, faith blowne his fpirit out,
And fire'd repentant afhe's on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can reducfe it Boy.

Art. And if you do, you will but make it blufh,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will prankle in your eyes:
And, like a dogge that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his Matter that doth tarre him on.

All things that you should vse to do me wrong
Deny their office: onely you do lacke
That mercie, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking vses.

Hub. Well, fee to live: I will not touch thine eye,
For all the Trefoure that thine Vnckle owes,
Yet am I fwayne, and I did purpofe, Boy,
With this fame very Iron, to burne them out.

Art. O now you looke like Hubert. All this while
You were difguis'd.

Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu,
Your Vnckle must not know but you are dead.
Ile fill these dogged Spies with fals reports:
And, pretty childe, sleepe doubleflfe, and secure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Art. O heauen! I thank you Hubert.
Hub. Silence, no more: go closely in with mee,
Much danger do I vndergoe for thee.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords.

John. Heere once againe we fit: once againt crown'd
And look'd vpon, i' hope, with chearefull eyes.

Pem. This once again (but that your Highnes pleas'd)
Was once superfluous: you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royaltie was nere pluck'd off:
The faiths of men, nere finne with resolute,
Freh expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better State.

Sal. Therefore, to be poftel'd with double pompe,
To guard a Title, that was rich before;
To gild refined Gold, to paint the Lilly;
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To smooth the yce, or add another hew
Vnto the Raine-bow; or with Taper-light
To feke the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is waftfull, and ridiculous exceffe.

Pem. But that your Royall pleafure must be done,
This acte, is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the lat repeating, troublesome,
Being vrged at a time vnleabonable.

Sal. In this the Antickes, and well noted face
Of plaine old forme, is more disfigured,
And like a shifted winde vnto a fallie,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights confideration:
Makes found opinion fixt; and truth suspected,
For putting on to new a fashion'd robe.

Pem. When Worckemen fhrieue to do better then well,
They do confound their skill in coutouefnffe,
And oftentimes excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worfe by the excufe:
As patches fet vpon a little breach,
Difcredite more in hiding of the fault
Then did the fault before it was to patch'd

Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Counsellor: but it pleas'd your Highnes
To ouer-bear it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and every part of what we would Doth make a fland, at what your Highnesse will.

John.
The life and death of King John.

Iob. Some reasons of this double Coronation
I have professed with you, and thanks them strong.
And more, more strong, then leflet is my fear
I shall indue you with: Meane time, but ask
What you would have reform'd: that is not well,
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both here, and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then 1, as one that am the tongue of thee
To found the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for my self, and them: but chief of all
Your safety: for the which, my selfe and them
Bend their best studie, heartily requite
Th'infranchiment of Arthur, who restrain'd
Dobh moue the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument.
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your fears, which (as they fay) attend
The steps of wrong, shoulde moue you to mew vp
Your tender kinfman, and to chaoke his dayes
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise,
That the times enemies may not have this
To grace occasions: let it be our sulte,
That you have bid vs aske his libertie,
Which for our goods, we do no further aske,
Then, whereupon our weale on you depending,
Counts it your weale: be hau'e his liberty.

Enter Hubert.

Iobn. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction: Hubert, what news with you?

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He shew'd his warrant to a friend of mine,
The image of a wicked heinous fault.
Lies in his eye: that close aspet of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled bref,
And I do fearfully beleue 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and go
Between it purpose and his confidence
Like Harolds 'twixt two dreadful battles fett:
His passion is to ripe, it needs must brake.

Pem. And when it breaks, I feare will iffue thence
The foule corruption of a sweet childes death.

Iobn. We cannot hold mortalities strong hand.
Good Lords, although my will to give, is liuing,
The sulte which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tells vs Arthur is deceased to night.

Sal. Indeed we fear'd his ficknesse was past cure.

Pem. Indeed we heard how neere his death he was,
Before the childe himselfe felt he was fick:
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.

Iobn. Why do you bend fuch folemne brows on me?
Thinke you I beare the Sheerers of deflay?
Have I commandement on the pulle of life?

Sal. It is apparant foule-play, and 'tis flame
That Greatniffe shoulde so groffly offer it;
So thrive it in your game, and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet (Lord Salisbury) Ile go with thee,
And finde th'inheritance of this poore child;
His little kingdome of a forced graue.
That blood which ow'd the breath of all this Ile,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while:
This muff not be thus borne, this will break out
To all our forrowes, and ere long I doubt.

Exeunt

Pem. They burn in indignation: I repent:
There is no sure foundation set on blood:

No certaine life atchieu'd by others death:
A fearefull eye thou haft. Where is that blood,
That I haue seene inhabitants in those check'd?
So foule a skie, cleeres not without a storme,
Pour downe thy weather: how goes all in France?

Mef. From France to England, neuer such a powre.
For any foraigne preparation,
Was leuell in the body of a land.
The Copie of your speede is learned'by them:
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes, that they are all arrivo'd.

Iob. Oh where hath our Intelligence bin drunken?
Where hath it flepp? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drawne in France,
And the not heare of it?

Mef. My Liege, her ear
Is flippd with duff: the rift of Aprill dide,
Your noble mother; and as I heare, my Lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzie dide.

Three days before: but this from Rumors tongue:
I idely heard: if true, or false I know not.

Iobn. With-hold thy speed! dreadingfull Occasion:
Of make a league with me, 'till I have plau'd.
My discontented Peeres. What Mother dead
How wildly then walkes my Efatte in France?
Vnder whole conduct came thofe powres of France;
That thou for truth gin't out are landed here?

Mef. Vnder the Dolphin.

Enter Baffard and Peter of Pomfret.

Iob. Thou haft made me giddy
With these ill tydings: Now what fayes the world?
To your proceedings? Do not fecke to stuffe I say.
My head with more ill news: for it is full.

Baff. But if you be a-feard to heare the worke?
And then the word vn-heard, fall on your head.

Iobn. Bearre with me Cohen, for I was amaz'd
Vnder the tide: but now I breath againe
Alfo the flood, and can give audience.

To any tongue, fpeake as much as what it will.

Baff. How I have sped amond the Clergy men,
The fummes I have collected shall exprefse:
But as I trauell'd hither through the land,
I finde the people strangely fantas'd,
Possfeft with rumors, full of idle dreames,
Not knowing what they feare, but full of fear.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heele.
To whom he fung in rude harth fbounding times,
That ere the next Ascension day at noone,
You Highnes should deliuer vp your Crowne.

Iobn. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out so.

Iobn. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noone, whereon he fayes
I shall yeeld vp my Crowne, let him be hang'd.
Deliuer him to fafety, and returne,
For I must vie thee. O my gentle Cohen,
Hear it thou the newes abroad, who are arrivo'd?

Baff. The French (my Lord) mens mouths are full of it:
Besides I met Lord Biges, and Lord Salibnlrt.
With eyes red as new enflamed fire,
And others more, going to fecke the graue
Of Arthur, whom they fay is kill'd to night, on your Iobn. Gentle kinfman, go (suggeftion)
And thru thy felfe into their Companies,
The life and death of King John.

I have a way to winne their loves againe:
Bring them before me.

'Baft. I will seake them out.

John. Nay, but make haste: the better foot before.
O, let me have no subiect enemies,
When aduerse Forreyners affright my Townes
With dreadfull pompe of stout Invasion.
Be Mercurie, fet feathers to thy heele,
And rye (like thought) from them, to me againe.

'Baft. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.
Exit John. Spoke like a sprightfull Noble Gentleman.
Go after him: for he perhaps shall neede
Some Messenger betwixt me, and the Peeres,
And be thou hee.

Maj. With all my heart, my Liege.

John. My mother dead?

Enter Hubert.

Hub. My Lord, they say five Moones were seene to Foure fixed, and the sith did whirle about
The other four, in wondrous motion.

John. Five Moones?

Hub. Old men, and Beldames, in the streets
Do propheticke vpon it dangerousely:
Yong Arturus death is common in their mouths,
And when they talke of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the eare,
And he that speakes, doth gripe the hearers wrift,
Whilst he that heares, makes fearefull action
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a Smith stand with his hammer (thus)
The whilst his Iron did on the Amule coole,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors newes,
Who with his Sheeres, and Measure in his hand,
Standing on flippers, which his nimble haffe
Had fallye thrust vpon contrary feete,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattailed, and rank'd in Kent.
Another leane, vvnval'd Artifer,
Cuts off his tale, and talkes of Arturus death.

'Is. Why feelest thou to pourrle me with these feares?
Why vertest thou so oft yong Arturus death?
Thy hand hath murdered him: I haue a mighty caufe
To with him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

H. No had (my Lord?) why, did you not prouoke me?

John. It is the curfe of Kings, to be attended
By flaues, that take their humors for a warrant,
To breake within the bloody houfe of life,
And on the winking of Authoritie
To vnderstand a Law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Malefie, when perchance it frownes
More vpon humor, then aduises respect.
Hub. Heere is your hand and Seale for what I did.

Isb. Oh, when the lift acconpt twixt heauen & earth
Is to be made, then fhall this hand and Seale
Witnefe against vs to damnation.
How oft the fight of meanes to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done? Had't not thou bene by,
A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deede of shame,
This murther had not come into my minde.
But taking note of thy abhor'd Aifeck,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainie:
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arturus death:
And thou, to be endeard to a King,
Made it no confidence to destroy a Prince.

Hub. My Lord.

Job. Had't thou but shooke thy head, or made a paufe
When I spake darkely, what I purposed;
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face;
As bid me tell my tale in expresse words:
Dumpe flame had fruck me dumbe, made me break off,
And thofe thy feares, might have wrought feares in me.
But, thou didst vnderstand me by my signes,
And didst in signes againe parle with finne,
Ye, without flop, didst let thy heart consent,
And conseqently, thy rude hand to acte
The deed, which both our tongues held vnde to name.
Out of my fight, and never fee me more:
My Nobles leave me, and my State is braue,
Even at my gates, with rankes of forraigne powres;
Nay, in the body of this fielde Land,
This kingdom, this Confine of blood, and breathe
Hoffiltite, and chyll tumult reignes.
Betweene my confidence, and my Coaffins death.

Hub. Arme you against your other enemies:
Ile make a peace betweene your soule, and you.
Yong Artur is alieue: This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden, and an innocent hand.
Not painted with the Crimson spots of blood,
Within this bosome, never entred yet
The dreadfull motion of a murderous thought,
And you haue flander'd Nature in my forme,
Which howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the couer of a fauyer minde,
Then to be butcher of an innocent child.

John. Doth Artur live? O haft thee to the Peeres,
Throw this report on their Incens'd rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgue the Comment that my passion made
Vpon thy feature, for my rage was blinde,
And foule imaginarie eyes of blood
Prefenten thee more hideous then thou art.
Oh, answere not; but to my Cloffet bring
The angry Lords, with all expedient halfe,
I coniure thee but slowly: run more faft.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Artur on the walls.

Ar. The Wall is high, and yet will I leape downe.
Good ground be pittifull, and hurt me not:
There's few or none do know me, if they did,
This Ship-boyes femeblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afaire, and yet Ile venture it.
If I get downe, and do not breake my limbs,
Ile finde a thousand shifts to get away;
As good to dye, and go; as dye, and fly.
Oh me, my Vnckles spirit is in these fones,
Heauen take my foule, and England keep my bones.

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, & Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at S. Edmonsbury,
It is our faetie, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinal?

Sal. The Count Meloon, a Noble Lord of France,
Whose private with me of the Dolfhines love,
Is much more general, then these lines import.

Big.
Big. To morrow morning let vs meete him then.
Sal. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be Two long dayes journey (Lords) or ere we meete.
Enter Bajfard.

Bajf. Once more to day well met, dittemp'd Lords, The King by me requests your presence stricte.
Sal. The king hath disposest himselfe of vs, We will not lyne his thin-beftained cloake With our pure Honors: nor attend the footer That leaves the print of blood where ere it walkes. Returne, and tell him so: we know the worfe.

Bajf. What ere ye thinke; good words I thinke were best.
Sal. Our griefes, and not our manners reason now.
Bajf. But there is little reason in your griefes. Therefore 'twere reason you had manners now.
Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his pruileadge.
Bajf. 'Tis true, to hurt his matter, no mans elfe.
Sal. This is the prizon: What is he lyes here? P.Oh death, made proud with pure & princely beauty, The earth had not a hole to hide this deede.
Sal. Murther, as hating what himselfe hath done, Doth lay it open to vrge on reuenge.

Big. Or when he doom'd this Beautie to a grave, Found it too precious Princely, for a grave.
Sal. Sir Richard, what thinke you? you haue beheld, Or haue you read, or heard, or could you thinke? Or do you by mod thinke, although you fee,
That you do fee? Could thought, without this obiect Forme fuch another? This is the very top,
The heighet, the Cref: or Cref vnto the Cref: Of murthers Armes: This is the bloodieft flame, The wildef Sauagery, the wildef stroke
That euer wall'-ey'd wrath, or flaring rage Prefented to the tears of lost remorfe.
Pem. All murthers paft, do ftant excus'd in this:
And this fo folde, and fo vnmatchable, Shall gie a holineffe, a purifie,
To the yet vnbegotten finne of times;
And proue a deadly blood-fled, but a left, Exampled by this hemy fatal stroke.

Bajf. It is a damned, and a bloody worke, The gracelesse action of a heauy hand, If that it be the worke of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the worke of any hand? We had a kinde of light, what would enuie:
It is the shamefull worke of Huberts hand, The practive, and the purpose of the king:
From whole obedience I forbid my soule, Kneeling before this ruine of sweete life, And breathing to his breathlesse Excellence
The Incence of a Vow; a holy Vow:
Neuer to taffe the pleasures of the world, Neuer to be infected with delight,
Nor conuerfant with Eafe, and Idlenesse,
Till I have fet a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of Reuenge.
Pem. Big. Our foules religiously confirmte thy words.
Enter Hubert.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with hafte, in teeking you, Arthur doth live, the king hath fent for you.
Sal. Oh he is bold, and blusses not at death, Auant thou hatefull villian, get thee gone. (the Law? Hu. I am no villaine, Sal. Muff I rob Bajf. Your fword is bright fir, put it vp againe.
Sal. Not tll I sheath it in a murtherers skin.

Hub. Stand backe Lord Salsbury, stand backe I say.

By heauen, I thinke my fword's as sharpe as yours. I would not haue you (Lord) forget your selle, Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Leat I, by marking of your rage, forget your Worth, your Greatneffe, and Nobility.
Bajf. Out dunghill: dar'ft thou braue a Nobleman?

Hub. Not for my life: But yet I dare defend My innocent life against an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.

Hub. Do not proue me fo:
Yet I am none. Whofe tonge fo ere speakes false,
Not truely speakes: who speakes not truly, Lies.
Pem. Cut him to pecces.
Bajf. Keep the peace, I say.
Sal. Stand by, or I shall gaul you Faulconbridge.
Bajf. Thou wert better gaul the diuell Salisbury.
If thou but crowne on me, or flirre thy footer, Or teach thy haffle fpleene to do me shame,
Ie afrike thee dead. Put vp thy fword betime,
Or Ie fo maule you, and your tofting-Iron,
That you shall thinke the diuell is come from hel.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?

Second a Villaine, and a Murtherer?
Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.
Big. Who kill'd this Prince?

Hub. "Tis not an hour since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lou'd him, and will wepe
My date of life out, for his sweete liues lofte.
Sal. Truf: not those cunning wateres of his eyes,
For villanie is not without such rheume,
And he, long traded in it, makes it feene
Like Ruiers of remorfe and innocencie.
A way with me, all you whole foules abhorre
Th'vn cleanly favours of a Slaughter-houfe,
For I am fillede with this smell of finne.

Big. Away, toward Buries, to the Dolphin there.
P. There tel the king, he may inqire vs out. Ex.Lords.
Bu. Here's a good world! know you of this faire work?

Bajf. Beyond the infinite, and boundlesse reach of mercie,
(If thou didst this deed of death) art ye damn'd Hubert.
Hub. Do but heare me fir.

Bajf. Ha! Ie tell thee what.
Thou'rt damn'd as blacke; nay nothing is fo blacke,
Thou art more deeppe damn'd then Prince Lucifer: There is not yet fo ugły a fiend of hell
As thou haft be, if thou didst kill this child.
Hub. Upon my foule.
Bajf. If thou dipt but content
To this moft cruell Act: do but dispare,
And if thou want'a Cord, the smallest thread
That euer Spider twisted from her wombe
Will lure to drangle thee: A rufh will be a beame
To hang thee on. Or wouldst thou drowne thy selle,
Put but a little water in a spoone,
And it shall be as all the Ocean,
Enough to fliue fuch a villaine vp.
I do fuppreth thee very greuously.
Hub. If I in act, content, or finne of thought,
Be guiltie of the fealing that sweete breath
Which was embossed in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want paimes enough to torture me:
I left him well.

Bajf. Go, bear him in thine arms:
I am amaz'd me thinkeis, and loafe my way
Among the thornes, and dangers of this world.

How
The life and death of King John.

How eafe doft thou take all England vp,
From forth this morcell of dead Royaltie?
The life, the right, and truth of all this Realme
Is fled to heaven: and England now is left
To tug and gambre, and to part by th' teeth.
The vn-owed interest of proud swelling State:
Now for the bare-pickt bone of Malefby,
Doth dogged warre bristle his angry creft,
And snarlith in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now Powers from home, and discontentes at home
Meet in one line: and vaft confusion waifes
As doth a Raunen on a sike-faine beast,
The imminent decay of wretched pompe.
Now happy he, whofe cloake and center can Hold out this tempset. Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed: lie to the King:
A thousand busineses are briefe in hand,
And heaven it selfe doth frowne vp on the Land. Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scena prima.

Enter King John and Pandolph, attendants.

K. John. Thus haue I yeelded vp into your hand
The Circle of my glory.
Pand. Take againe
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your Soueraigne greatneffe and authoritie.
Iobn. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holineffe vfe all your power
To stop their marches tore we are enflam'd:
Our discontented Counties doe revolt:
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing Allegiance, and the lose of foule
To stranger-bloud, to forren Royalty;
This inundation of misTempered humor,
Refts by you onely to be qualified.
Then paufe not: for the preuent time's fo sickle,
That preuent medicine must be miniftred,
Or overthrow incurable enfues.
Pand. It was my breath that blew this Tempest vp,
Vpon your rubbifer vfailage of the Pope:
But since you are a gentle conquerite,
My tongue shall hulth against this forme of warre,
And make faire weather in your blustering land:
On this Afencion day, remember well,
Vpon your oath of feruice to the Pope,
Goe I to make the French lay downe their Armes. Exit.
Iobn. Is this Afencion day? did not the Prophet
Say, that before Afencion day at noone,
My Crowne I should give off? even fo I haue:
I did fuppose it should be on constraint,
But (heau'n be thank'd) it is but voluntary.

Enter Biguard.

Baff. All Kent hath yeelded: nothing there holds out
But Dover Castle: London hath receiv'd.
Like a kinde Hoft, the Dolphin and his powers.
Your Nobles will not heare you, but are gone
To offer feruice to your enemy:
And wilde amazement hurries vp and downe
The little number of your doubtfull friends.
Iobn. Would not my Lords returne to me againe
After they heard yong Arthrur was alive?

Baff. They found him dead, and call into the streets,
An empty Casket, where the Jewell of life
By some damn'd hand was rob'd, and tane away.
Iobn. That villaine Hubert told me he did slue.
Baff. So on my soule he did, for ought he knew:
But wherefore doe you droope? why looke you fad?
Be great in act, as you have beene in thought:
Let not the world fee feares and fad distraught
Gouverne the motion of a kinglye eye:
Be firringsas the time, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threatener, and out-face the brow
Of bragging horror: So hath inferior eyes
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntlesse spirit of reolution,
Away, and glister like the god of warre
When he intedeth to become the field:
Shew boldneffe and aspiring confedence:
What, shall they feeke the Lion in his denne,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
Oh let it not be fai'd: forrage, and runne
To meet displeasure farther from the dores,
And grapple with him ere he come to nye.
Iobn. The Legat of the Pope hath beene with me,
And I haue made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promis'd to dismiff the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.

Baff. Oh inglorious league:
Shall we vpon the footing of our land,
Send fayre-play-orders, and make comprimifte,
Infinuation, parley, and safe truce
To Armes Inuaute? Shall a beardleffe boy,
A cocked-filken wanton braue our fields,
And fteal his spirit in a warre-like foyle,
Mocking the ayre with colours idlye fpred,
And finde no checkes? Let vs my Liege to Armes:
Perchance the Cardinall cannot make your peace;
Or if he doe, let it at leaft be fai'd
They faw we had a purpofe of defence.

Iobn. Haue thou the ordering of this preuent time.

Baff. Away then with good courage: yet I know
Our Partie may well meet a prowerd foe.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter (in Armes) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melone, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melone, lett this be coppyed out,
And keepe it fafe for our remembrance:
Return the president to thefe Lords againe,
That hauing our faire order written downe,
Both they and we, perusing ore thefe notes
May know wherefore we tooke the Sacrament,
And keepe our faithes firme and inuiolable.
Sec. Vpon our fides it neuer shall be broken.
And Noble Dolphin, albeit we fware
A voluntary zeale, and an vn-urgd Faith
To your proceedings: yet beleuue me Prince,
I am not glad that fuch a fore of Time
Should fceake a platter by contemnd revoult,
And heale the inuerate Canker of one wound,

By
The life and death of King John.

By making many: Oh it grieves my soule,
That I must draw this mettle from my side
To be a widdow-maker: oh, and there
Where honourable refuge, and defence
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That for the health and Phylficke of our right,
We cannot choose but with the very hand
Of fervent Injuiflice, and confused wrong:
And is't not pitie, (oh my grieved friends)
That we, the fornes and children of this life,
Was borne to fee so fast an hour as this,
Wherein we liep after a stranger, march
Vpon her gentle bofom, and fill vp
Her Enemies ranks? I must withdraw, and wepe
Vpon the foot of this inforced caufe,
To grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow vnacquainted colours heere:
What heere? O Nation that thou couldf't remove,
That Neptunes Armes who clippeth thee about,
Would beare thee from the knowledge of thy felfe,
And cripple thee vnto a Pagan shore,
Whereof twoe Chriflian Armies might combine
The bloud of malice, in a vaine of league,
And not to spend it fo vn-neighbourly.
Dolph. A noble temper doft thou fiew in this,
And great affections wraftling in thy bofome
Doth make an earth-quake of Nobility:
Oh, what a noble combat haft fought
Between compulfion, and a braue respect:
Let me wipe off this honourable dewe,
That fluerly doft progresse on thy checkes:
My heart hath melted at a Ladies tears,
Being an ordinary Inundation:
But this effufion of fuch manly drops,
This thowre, blowne vp by tempeft of the foule,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Then had I feene the vaultie top of heauen
Figur'd quite ore wirh burning Meteors.
Lift vp thy brow (renowned Saltibarie)
And with a great heart heave away this thorne:
Commense these waters to thefe baby-eyes
That neuer faw the giant-world enrag'd,
Nor met with Fortune, other then at fea,
Full warm of blood, of murm, of gofflipping:
Come, come; for thou fhalt thurf thy hand as deepe
Into the urine of rich prosperitie
As Lewd himfelfe: fo (Nobles) fhall you all,
That knitt your fineuews to the strengte of mine.
Enter Pandulpho.
And euene there, methinks an Angell fpake,
Looke where the holy Legate comes apace,
To glue vs warrant from the hand of heauen,
And on our actions fet the name of right
With holy breath.
Pand. Haile noble Prince of France:
The next is this: King Iohn hath reconn'd
Himfelfe to Rome, his fpirit is come in,
That fo ftood out againft the holy Church,
The great Metropolis and Sea of Rome:
Therefore thy threatening Colours now winde vp,
And tame the favage fpirit of wilde warre,
That like a Lion fotted vp at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmfull then in fhew.
Dol. Your Grace fhall pardon me, I will not backe:

I am too high-borne to be proportion'd
To be a fecundary at control,
Or viffull feruing-man, and Infrument
To any Soueraigne State throughout the world.
Your breath firft kindled the dead coale of warres,
Betweene this chaffie'd kingdome and my felfe,
And brought in matter that shou'd feed this fire;
And now 'tis farre too huge to be blowne out
With that fame weake winde, which enkindled it:
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interefl to this Land,
Yea, thurf this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His peace with Rome? what is that peace to me?
I (by the honour of my marriage bed)
After yong Arthur, claims this Land for mine,
And now it is halfe conquer'd, muft I backe,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's flave? What penny hath Rome borne?
What men provifed? What munition fent
To vnder-prop this Action? Is't not I
That vnder-goeth this charge? Who elfe but I,
And fuch as to my claime are liable,
Sweat in this busineffe, and maintaine this warre?
Hau'e I not heard thefe Ilanders shout out
Oui le Roy, as I haue bank'd their Townes?
Hau'e I not heere the beft Cards for the game
To winne this eafe match, plaid for a Crowne?
And fhall I now gave ore the yeelded Set?
No, no, on my foule it neuer fhall be faid.

Pand. You looke but on the out-fide of this worke.
Dol. Out-fide or In-fide, I will not returne
Till my attempt fo much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promis'd,
Before I drew this gallant head of warre,
And cull'd thefe fiery spirits from the world
To out-looke Conqueft, and to winne renowne
Even in the fawes of danger, and of death:
What lutfy Trumpet thus doth fummon vs?

Enter Boffard.
Bof. According to the faire-play of the world,
Let me haue audience: I am fent to fpake:
My holy Lord of Millane, from the King
I come to learne how you have dealt for him:
And, as you anfwer, I doe know the scope
And warrant limited vnto my tongue.
Pand. The Dolphin is too wilfull onffe
And will not temporize with my intreaties:
He flately fakes, he'll not lay downe his Armes.
Bof. By all the blood that euer fury breath'd,
The youth fakes well. Now hearre our Engilfe King,
For thus his Royalfe doth fpake in me:
He is prepar'd, and readie to he shoul'd,
This siph and vnmannerly approach,
This harnes'd Maske, and vnaudied Reuell,
This vn-heard fawinffe and boyfh Troopes,
The King doth fmile at, and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfh warre, this Pigmie Armes
From out the circle of his Territories.
That hand which had the strengte, even at your dore,
To cudgeill you, and make you take the hatch,
To diue like Buckets in concealed Welles,
To crowle in litter of your flable planks,
To lye like pawns, lock'd vp in cheese and trunks,
To hug withwine, to feake sweet fafety out
In vaults and prifons, and to thrill and f shake,
Euen at the crying of your Nations crow,
Thinking this voice an armed Englishman,
Shall that virtuous hand be feebled heere,
That in your Chambers gave you chaffecent?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o're his aerie towres,
To fowle annoyance that comes neere his Neft;
And you degenerate, you ingrate Revolts,
you bloudy Nero's, ripping vp the wombe
Of your deere Mother-England: bleeu for shame:
For your owne Ladies, and pale-vilag'd Maides,
Like Amazones, come tripping after drummes:
Their thimbles into armed Gauntlets change,
Their Needles to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Del. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace,
We grant thou canst out-fold vs: Far thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabler.

Pan. Give me leave to speake.

Baff. No, I will speake.

Del. We will attend to nother:
Strike vp the drummes, and let the tongue of warre
Plead for our interest, and our being heere.

Baff. Indeed thy drumms being beaten, wilt cry out;
And to shall you, being beaten: Do but flart
An echo with the clamor of thy drumme,
And even at hand, a drumme is readie brac'd,
That shall reuerberate all, as lowd as thine.
Sound but another, and another shall
(As lowd as thine) rattle the Welkins eare,
And mooke the deepse mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not trufting to this halting Legate heere, Whom he hath vs'd master for sport, then neede)
Is warlike John: and in his fore-head fits
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To feast vp one thousand of the French.

Del. Strike vp our drummes, to finde this danger out.

Baff. And thou shalt finde it (Dolphin) do not doubt

---

Scena Tertia.

Alarums. Enter John and Hubert.

John. How goes the day with vs? oh tell me Hubert.

Hub. Badly I fear: how fares your Maiestie?

John. This Feauer that hath troubled me to long,
Lyes heauie on me: oh, my heart is sicke.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord: your valiant kinman Falconbridge,
Defires your Maiestie to leave the field,
And lend him word by me, which way you go.

John. Tell him toward Swinfield, to the Abbey there.

Mes. Be of good comfort: for the great supply
That was expected by the Dolphin heere,
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This newes was brought to Richard but even now,
The French fight coldly, and retyre themselues.

John. Aye me, this tyrant Feauer burnes mee vp,
And will not let me welcome this good newes.
Set on toward Swinfield: to my Litter straight,
Weaknefe poiffeitch me, and I am faint.

Exeunt.

---

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.

Sal. I did not think the King to for'd with friends.

Pem. Vp once againe: put spirit in the French,
If they miscarry: we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten diewell Falconbridge,
In spight of spight, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say King John fore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Melon wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Revolts of England heere.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Melone.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly Noble English, you are bought and fold,
Vnthred the rude eye of Rebellion,
And welcome home againe discardfed faith,
Seek and King John, and fall before his feete:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He meanes to reconpence the paines you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworne,
And I with him, and many more with mee,
Upon the Altar at S. Edmondsbury,
Euen on that Altar, where we fwoere to you
Deere Amity, and everlafting love.

Sal. May this be possibl? May this be true?

Mel. Haue I not hideose death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a forme of waxe
Refolueth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceuie,
Since I must loose the vse of all deceite?
Why shold I then be falfe, since it is true
That I must dye heere, and live hence, by Truth?
I say againe, if Lewd do win the day,
He is forsworne, if ere those eyes of yours
Behold another day breake in the Eaat:
But euen this night, whose blacke contagious breath
Already fmoakes about the burning Creft
Of the old, feele, and day-wearied Sunne,
Euen this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Euen with a treacherous fire of all your luyes:
If Lewd, by your asfiftance win the day,
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The loue of him, and this respeft besides
(For that my Grandfire was an Englishman)
Awakes my Conscience to confesse all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you beare me hence
From forth the noife and rumour of the Field;
Where I may thinkie the remnant of my thoughts
In peace: and part this bodie and my soule
With contemplation, and decouet defires.

Sal. We do beleue thee, and beithrew my soule,
But I do lose the favour, and the forme
Of this most faire occasion, by the which
We will vntread the fleps of damnd flight,
And like a bated and retired Flood,
Leaving our ranknesse and irregular courfe,
Stoope love within those bounds we have once-look'd,
And calmly run on in obedience
Euen to our Ocean, to our great King John.

My arme shall give thee helpe to bear thee hence,
Scena Quinta.

Enter Dolphin, and bis Traine.

Doi. The Sun of heaven (me thought) was loth to set; But said, and made the Western Welkin blum, When English measure backward their owne ground In faint Retire: Ob brately came we off, When with a volley of our needle'shot, After such bloody tole, we bid good night, And woon'd our trott'ring colours clearly vp, Left in the field, and almoft Lords of it.

Enter a Messenger.

Msf. Where is my Prince, the Dolphin?

Doi. Heere: what newes?

Msf. The Count Melone is slaine; The English Lords By his perifhion, are againe falne off, And your supply, which you have with'd fo long, Are caft away, and funke on Goodwin lands.

Doi. Ah how! Baff. Where? did you do newes. Befhou thee very I did not thinke to be fo faid to night. (hart) As this hath made me. Who was he that faid King John did flie an houre or two before The bumbling night did part our warie powres?

Msf. Who euer spake it, it is true my Lord=

Doi. Well: keepe good quarter, & good care to night, The day shall not be vp fo loone as I, To try the faire adventur of to morrow.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Baffard and Hubert, jeerally.

Hub. Wholes there? Speake hoa, speake quickly, or I floothe.

Baff. A Friend. What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Baff. Whether doest thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee?

Why may not I demand of thine affaires, As well as thou of mine?

Baff. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou haft a perfect thought:
I will vp on all hazards well beleue Thou art my friend, that know'rt my tongue fo well: Who art thou?

Baff. Who thou wilt: and if thou please
Thou maist be-friend me fo much, as to thinke
I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Vnder the remembrance thou, & endales night,
Haue done me shame: Braue Soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue,
Should scep the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Baff. Come, come: fans complement, What newes abroad?

Hub. Why heere walke I, in the black brow of night
To finde you out.
It would not out at windowes, nor at doores,
There is so hot a sumner in my bofore,
That all my bowels crumble vp to dust:
I am a scribbled forme drawne with a pen
Vpon a Parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrinke vp.

Hen. How fares your Maiestie?

Isd. Poyfon'd, ill fate: dead, forsooke, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come
To thruft his ycie fingers in my paw;
Nor let my kingdoms Rivers take their course
Through my burn'd boforme: nor intreat the North
To make his bleake windes kisse my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not ask you much,
I begge cold comfort: and you are so strait
And to ingratulate, you deny me that.

Hen. Oh that there were some vertue in my teares,
That might releue you.

Isd. The fall in them is hot.
Within me is a hell, and there the poyfon
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannisze,
On vnrepreuuable condemned blood.

Enter Baftard.

Baft. Oh, I am scalde with my violent motion
And spleene of speede, to see your Maiestie.

Isd. Oh Cozen, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart, is crack'd and burn't,
And all the shrouds wherewith my life should fail,
Are turned to one thred, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor firing to flay it by,
Which holds but till thy newes be vertered,
And then all this thou feest, is but a clod,
And module of confounded royalty.

Baft. The Dolphin is preparing hither-ward;
Where heaven he knowes how we shall answere him.

For in a night the beft part of my powre,
As I vpon advantage did remoue,
Were in the Warses all vnwarily,
Dewour'd by the vnexpectad flood.

Sal. You breath thefe dead newses in as dead an ear
My Liege, my Lord: but now a King, now thus.

Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a King, and now is clay?

Baft. Art thou gone so? I doe but stay behinde,
To do the office for thee, of revengue,
And then my foule shall waite on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath bene thy servant still.
Now, now you Starres, that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powres? Shew now your mended faiths,
And infantly returne with me againe.

To push destruction, and perpetuall shame
Out of the weake doore of our fainting Land:
Straight let vs seeke, or straight we shall be fought,
The Dolphin rage at vs verie hecles.

Sal. It seemes you know not then so much as we,
The Cardinall Pandalphe is within at reft,
Who halfe an houre since came from the Dolphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honor and respect may take,
With purpose pretently to lease this warre.

Baft. He will the rather do it, when he sees
Our felues well finew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already,
For many carriages hee hath dispath'd
To the sea side, and put his caule and quarrell
To the disposing of the Cardinall,
With whom your selfe, my selfe, and other Lords,
If you thinke meete, this afternoone will post
To confummate this businesse happily.

Baft. Let it be so, and you my noble Prince,
With other Princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall waite upon your Fathers Funerall.

Hen. At Worlde must his bodie be inter'd,
For so he will it.

Baft. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet selfe put on
The lineall fate, and glory of the Land,
To whom with all submission on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful servuices
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our lone wee make
To reft without a spot for euermore.

Hen. I have a kinde foule, that would giue thanks,
And knowes not how to do it, but with tears.

Baft. Oh let vs pay the time: but needfull woe,
Since it hath bene before hand with our greeues.
This England never did, nor never shall
Lye at the proud fooe of a Conqueror,
But when it first did helpe to wound it selfe,
Now, these her Princes are come home againe,
Come the three corners of the world in Armes,
And we shall shocke them: Naught shall make vs rue,
If England to it selfe, do reft but true.

Exeunt.
Enter King Richard, John of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

Ld John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Haft thou according to thy oath and band
Brought hither Henry Herford thy bold son:
Heere to make good
Thou too hadst not let vs heare,
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
Gaunt. I haue my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, haft thou founded him,
If he appeale the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthyly as a good fabicet shoule
On some knowne ground of treacherie in him.
Gaunt. As neere as I could fin him on that argument,
On some apparant danger seene in him,
Aym'd at your Highnesse, no inueterate malice.

Kin. Then call them to our presence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our felues will heare
Th'accuscer, and the accused, freely speake;
High fotmack'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage, deafe as the sea; haffie as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bul. Many yeares of happy days befall
My gracious Soueraigne, my most loving Liege.

Mow. Each day fill better others happyneffe,
Vntill the heauen's enuying earths good hap,
Adde an immortal title to your Crowne.

King. We thank you both, yet one but flatters vs,
As well appeareth by the caufe you come,
Namely, to appeale each other of high treafon.
Coiof of Hereford, what doft thou obieet
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Bul. First, heauen be the record to my speeche,
In the devotion of a subiects love,
Tendering the precious safetie of my Prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appealtant to rhis Princely presence.
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turne to thee,
And marke my greetinge well; for what I speake,
My body falleth good upon this earth,
Or my diuine foule anfwer it in heauen.
Thou art a Traitor, and a Mifcreant;
Too good to be fo, and too bad to live,
Since the more faire and chirifall is the skie,
The vglie feeme the clouds that in it flye:
Once more, the more to aggrauate the note,
With a foule Traitors name thuffe I thy throats,
And with (fo pleafe my Soueraigne) ere I move,
What my tong speakes, my right drawn fword may proue

Mow. Let not my cold words here heare accufe my zeale:
'Tis not the triall of a Womans warre,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this caufe betwixt vs twaine:
The blood is hot that muft be coold for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hufht, and nought at all to fay,
First the faire reuerence of your Highnesse curbes mee,
From givin guinees and fpurres to my free speeche,
Which elie would poft, vntill it had return'd
Thefe tearmes of treafon, doubly dowe his throat.
Setting aside his high bloods Royalty,
And let him be no Kinsman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I fpit at him,
Call him a flanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
Which to maintaine, I would allow him oddes,
And meete him, were I tide to runne afoote,
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where euer Engliſhman durft fet his foote.
Meane time, let this defend my loyalbe,
By all my hopes most fally doth he lie.

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming heere the kindred of a King,
And lay aside my high bloods Royalty,
Which feare, not reuerence makes thee to except.
If guilty dread hath left thee fo much strength,
As to take vp mine Honors pawn, then floope,
By that, and all the rites of Knight-hood elie,
Will I make good against thee arme to arme,
What I haue fpoken, or thou canft deuife.

Mow. I take it vp, and by that fword I weare,
Which gently laid my Knight-hood on my shoulder,
Ile anfwer thee in any faire degree,
Or Churlous defigne of knightly triall:
And when I mount, alue may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or vniutiful ftrife.

King. What doth our Coifin lay to Membray's charge?
It muft be great that can inherite vs,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Looke what I faid, my life fhall proue it true,
That Mowbray hath receu'd eight thoufand Nobles,
In
In name of lendings for your Highness Soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious Villain.
Bedeles I say, and will in bataille prove,
Or here, or elsewhere to the furthest verge
That ever was Suryey'd by English eye,
That all the Treasons for these eightene yeares
Complotted, and continued in this Land,
Fetch'd from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say, and further will maintaine
Upon his bad life, to make all this good.
That he did plut the Duke of Glousters death,
Suggest his soone beleving adueraries,
And consequently, like a Traitor Coward,
Slue'd out his innocent soule through stremes of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing, Abel's cries,
(Euen from the toonglefe caufernes of the earth)
To me for ifufice, and rough chaffement:
And by the glorious worth of my difcend,
This arm' shall do it, or this life be spent.

King. How high a pitch his resolution foares:

Thomas of Norfolke, what fayef thou to this?

Mow. Oh let my Soueraigne turne away his face,
And bid his ears a little while he be deafe:
Till I haue told this flander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate fo foule a lyar.

King. Mowbray, impartiall are our eyes and ears,
As he is but my fathers brothers fonne;
Now by my Sceptres awe, I make a vow,
Such neighbour-neereneffe to our facred blood,
Should nothing pripulledge him, nor partialize
The vn-flipping firmeneffe of my vpright soule.
He is our fubicet (Mowbray) fo art thou,
Free Grace, and fearlesse, I to thee allow.

Mow. Then Bullingbrooke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the falsse passe of thy throat; thou lyest:
Three parts of that receipt I had for Callise,
Disburft I to his Highneffe souldiers;
The other part referu'd I by consent,
For that my Soueraigne Liege was in my debt,
Vpon remainder of a deere Accompt,
Since last I went to France to fetch his Queene;
Now shallowe downe that Lye. For Glousters death,
I flew him not; but (to mine owne dilgrace)
Neglected my (worne duty in that cafe:
For you my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honourable Father to my fe,.
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trepifie that doth vex my greene foule:
But ere I laft receu'd the Sacrament,
I did confesse it, and exaclly begg'd
Your Grace's pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the reft appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a Villaine,
A reccurent, and most degenerate Traitor,
Which in my fell I boldly will defend,
And interchangably hurle downe my mace
Vpon this ouer-weening Traitors foote,
To prooue my felte a lyalay Gentlemen,
Even in the beft blood chamber'd in his boforme.
In haft whereof, moat hearty I pray
Your Highness to affigne our Triall day.

King. Wrath-kindled Gentlemen be ruld by me:
Let's purge this choller without letting blood:
This we preferee, though no Phyftion,
Depee malice makes too depee incifion.
Forget, forgive, conclude, and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, This is no time to bleed.
Good Vnckle, let this end where it begun,
We'll calme the Duke of Norfolke; you, your fon.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age,
Throw downe (my fonne) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.

King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.

Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids I should not bid a gen.

King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bidde; there is no boote.

Mow. My selfe I throw (dread Soueraigne) at thy foot.
My life thou hast command, but not my shame,
The one my dutie owes, but my faire name
Defpight of death, that lies vpon my graue
To darke dishonours vfe, thou shalt not haue.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffe'd here,
Pierc'd to the soule with flanders venom'd fppeare:
The which no balme can cure, but his heart blood
Which breath'd this poftion.

King. Rage muft be withflode:
Give me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.

Ma. Yea, but not change his spots butake by my shame,
And I resigne my gage. My deere, deere Lord,
The purest treafure mortall times afford
Is spotleffe reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loame, or painted clay.
A Jewell in a ten times barr'd vp Cheft,
Is a bold spirit, in a loyall bref.
Mine Honor is my life; both grow in one:
Take Honor from me, and my life is done.
Then (deere my Liege) mine Honor let me trie,
In that I liue; and for that will I die.

King. Coofin, throw downe your gage,
Do you begin.

But. Oh heauen defend my foule from fuch foule fin.
Shall I feme Creé-falne in my fathers fight,
Or with pale beggar-feare imp each my hight
Before this out-dar'd daftard? Ere my toong,
Shall wound mine honor with fuch feeble wrong;
Or found so base a parle: my teeth shall teare
The flauish motiue of recanting feare,
And fip it bleeding in his high dilgrace,
Where fhame doth harbour, euon in Mowbray's face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not borne to fue, but to command,
Which since we cannot doo to make you friends,
Be ready (as your liues shall answer it)
At Couentree, vpon S. Lamberts day:
There fhall your fwords and Lances arbitrate
The dwelling difference of your fetted hate:
Since we cannot attone you, you fhall fee
Iuftice defigne the Viétors Chialuir.
Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,
Be ready to direct thefe home Alarmes.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutchefte of Gloucefter.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glousters blood,
Doth more follicite me then your exclamets,
To tirre againft the Butchers of his life.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutchefte of Gloucefter.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glousters blood,
Doth more follicite me then your exclamets,
To tirre againft the Butchers of his life.
But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of heaven,
Who when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will raise her hot vengeance on offenders heads.

Dut. Findes brotherhood in thee no further spurre?

Hath love in thy old blood no liuing fire?
Edwards feuen tones, (whereof thy selfe art one)
Were as feuen violles of his Sacred blood,
Or feuen faire branches springing from one roote:
Some of those feuen are drie by natures courfe;
Some of those branches by the defillies cut:

But Thomas, my deere Lord, my life, my Gloufter,
One Viol full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most Royall roote
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hacket downe, and his summer leaves all vaded
By Enuies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.
Ah Gaunt! His blood was thine, that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that selfe-mould that fasion'd thee,
Made him a man: and though thou liuft, and breath'ft,
Yet art thou flaine in him: thou doft confent
In some large measure to thy Fathers death,
In that thou feyst thy wretched brother dye,
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life,
Call it not patence (Gaunt) it is dispair
In fuffring thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou fiew'ft the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching terme muther how to butcher thee:
That which in meane men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble brefts:
What shall I fay, to safegard thine owne life,
The best way is to venge my Gloufters death.

Gaunt. Heauens is the quarrell: for heauens substitue
His Deputy anointed in his fight,
Hath caus'd his death, the which if wrongfully
Let heauen reuenge: for I may never lift
An angry arme against his Minifter.

Dut. Where then (alas may I) complaint my selfe?

Gau. To heauen, the widowes Champion to defence
Dut. Why then I will: farewell old Gaunt.

Thou go'ft to Coventrie, there to behold
Our Coine Herford, and fell Mowbray fight:
O fit my husbands wrongs on Herfords speare,
That it may enter butcher Mowbrandes breft:
Or if misfortune misfe the first carreere,
Be Mowbrandes finnes fo heavy in his bosome,
That they may breake his foaming Courfers backe,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Lifts,
A Caryffe recreant to my Coine Herford:
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
With her companion Greefe, muft end her life.

Gau. Sifter farewell: I muft to Coventree,
As much good fay with thee, as go with mee.

Dut. Yet one word more: Greefe boundeth where it
Not with the emptie hollownes, but weight: (falls,
I take my leave, before I haue begun,
For follow ends not, when it feemeth done.
Commend me to my brother Edmund York
Loe, this is all: nay, yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not fo quickly go,
I shall remember more: Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good speed at Plafhie vift mee.
Alacke, and what shall good old Yorke there see
But empty lodgings, and vnfurnished wallers,
Vn-peo dell' Offices, vntrouened stones?
And what heare there for welcome, but my grones?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seeke out sorrow, that dwells every where:
Defolate, desolate will I hence, and dye,
The laft leaue of thee, takes my weeping eye.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Marshell, and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Herford arm'd.
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The Duke of Norfolke, spightfully and bold,
Stayes but the summons of the Appeallants Trumpet.
Au. Why then the Champions, are prepar'd and stay
For nothing but his Maiesties approach.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bulfo, Bagot, Greene, & others: Then Mowbray in Ar- mor, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshell, demand of yonder Champion
The caufe of his arraull here in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To fware him in the iudicie of his caufe.

Mar. In Gods name, and the Kings, may who ? art,
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell,
Speake truly on thy knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heauen, and thy valour.

Mom. My name is the Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither comes engaged by my oath.
(Which heauen defend a knight shoulde violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding ifue,
Against the Duke of Herford, that appelleth me:
And by the grace of God, and this mine arms,
To prove him (in defending of my selfe)
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.

Tucket. Enter Herford, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshell: Ask ye yonder Knight in Armes,
Both who he is, and why he commeth hither,
Thus placed in habilitments of warre:
And formerly according to our Law
Depose him in the iudicie of his caufe.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherfore com'st y' hither
Before King Richard in his Royall Lifts?
Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarrell?
Speake like a true Knight, to defend thee heauen.

Bal. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derbie,
Am I: who ready heere do stand in Armes,
To prove by heauens grace, and my bodies valour,
In Lifts, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolke,
That he's a Traitor foule, and dangerous,
To God of heauen, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.

Mar. On paine of death, no perfon be fo bold,
Or daring hardie as to touch the Lites,
Except the Marshell, and such Officers
Appointed to direct the faire desigines.

Bal. Lord Marshell, let me kiffe, my Soueraigne hand,
And bow my knee before his Maiestie:
For Mowbray and my selfe are like two men,
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,

Then
Then let vs take a ceremonious leave
And louing farwell of our fearefull friends.

Mar. The Appellant in all duty greets your Highnes,
And craves to kisse your hand, and take his leave.

Rich. We will defend, and fold him in our armes.

Cofin of Herford, as thy caufe is luft,
So be thy fortune in this Royall fight:
Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou head,
Lament we may, but not reuenge thee dead.

Bull. Oh let no noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if I be gor'd with Membreys speare:
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Membray fight.

My loving Lord, I take my leaue of you,
Of you (my Noble Cofin) Lord! Aumerle;
Not fecke, although I have to do with death,
But luffe, yong, and cheerely drawing breath.

Looe, as at English Feasts, so I reclagate
The daintieft luft, to make the end moft sweet.
Oh thou the earthie author of my blood,
Whose youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold rigor lift mee vp
To reach at victorie above my head,
Adde profe vnto mine Armour with thy prays,
And with thy blessings fleele my Lances point,
That it may enter Membrayes waz'en Coute,
And furnish new the name of John a Gaunt,
Euen in the lustye hauior of his fonne.

Gaunt. Heauen in thy good caufe make thee prop'rous
Be twift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy biwes doubly reddoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Caufe
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.

Roaze vp thy youthfull blood, be valiant, and liue.

Bul. Mine innocenc, and S. George to thriue.

Mow. How ever heauen or fortune call my lot,
These lines, or dies, true to Kings Richards Throne,
A loyall, luft, and vright Gentleman:
Neuer did Captive with a freer heart,
Caff off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden vncontroll'd enfranchisement,
More then my dancing foule doth celebrate
This Feast of Battell, with mine Aduerarie.

Most myghty Lyege, and my companion Peeres,
Take from my mouth, the wiht of happy yeares,
As gentile, and as iocond, as to left,
Go I to fight: Truth, hath a quiet bref.

Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I epy
Vertue with Valoure, couched in thine eye:
Order the triall Marshall, and begin.

Mar. Harrie of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receiue thy Launce, and heauen defend thy right.

Bul. Strong as a towre in hope, I cry Amen.

Mar. Go beare this Lance to Thomas D. of Norfolke.

1 Har. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands heere for God, his Soueraigne, and himselfe,
On paine to be found falie, and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Membray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to fet forwards to the fight.

2 Har. Here standeth Thos. Membray Duke of Norfolke
On paine to be found falie and recreant,
Both to defend himselfe, and to approve
Henry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Soueraigne, and to him diuoyall:
Couragiously, and with a free desire

Attending but the fignall to begin. A charge,

Mar. Sound Trumpets, and let forward Combatants:
Stay, the King hath throwne his Warde downe.

Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets & their Spears,
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe:
Withdraw with vs, and let the Trumpets found,
While we returne these Dukes what we decree.

A long Flours.

Draw neere and lift
What weare our Counsell we haue done.
For that our kindomes earth should not be fayled
With that deere blood which it hath futtered,
And for our eyes do hate the dire aifeet
Of ciuill wounds plough'd vp with neighbours swords,
Which fo rouz'd vp with boyflous vntrum'd drummes,
With harf refounding Trumpets dreadfull bray,
And grating shocke of wrathfull yron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire peace,
And make vs vade euin in our kindreds blood:
Therefore, we banifie you our Territories.

You Cofin Herford, vpon paine of death,
Till twice flue Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regreet our faire dominions,
But truede the stranger pathes of banifhment.

Bul. Your will be done: This must my comfort be,
That Sun that warmes you heere, shall shine on me:
And thofe his golden beames to you heere lente,
Shall point on me, and gild my banifhment.

Rich. Norfolke: for thee remaines a heauier dombe,
Which I with some vnwillingeffe pronounce,
The flie flow houres shall not determinate
The datelesse limt of thy deere exile:
The hopelesse word, of Neuer to returne,
Breath I against thee, vpon paine of life.

Mow. A heauy sentence, my myt Soueraigne Lyege,
And all vnlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth:
A deere merit, not fo deepe a maim.
As to be caft forth in the common ayre
Haue I deferued at your Highnesse hands.

The Language I have learn'd thefe forty yeares
(My natue English) now I must forgo,
And now my tongues wheet is to me no more,
Then an vnfringed Vyll, or a Harpe,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd vp,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.

Within my mouth you haue engaol'd my tongue,
Doubly percullif'd with my teeth and lippes,
And dull vnfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my Gaoler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawne vpon a Nurse,
Too farre in yeeres to be a pupill now:
What is thy fenctence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing natue breath?

Rich. It boots thee not to be compasionate,
After our fenctence, plaining comes too late.

Mow. Then thus I turne me from my countries light to dwell in folemne shades of endelesse night.

Rix. Returne againe, and take an oath with thee,
Lay on our Royall fword, your banifh hands;
Sware by the duty that you owe to heauen
(Our part therein we banifie with your felves)
To keepe the Oath that we administer:
You euery shall (so helpe you Truth, and Heauen)
Embrace each others loue in banifhment,
Nor euer looke vpon each others face.
Nor euer write, regrcte, or reconcile
This lowring tempeft of your home-bred hate,
Nor euer by aduised purpose meeete,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst Vs, our State, our Subjectts, or our Land.

Bull. I teware.

Mow. And I, to keepe all this.

Bul. Norfolk,e, fo fare, as to mine enemie,
By this time (had the King permitted vs)
One of our foules had wandred in the ayre,
Banish'd this fragile fepulchre of our fleth,
As now our fleth is banish'd from this Land,
Confett thy Trefasons, ere thou flye this Realme,
Since thou haft farre to go, beare not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty foule.

Mow. No Bullingroke: if euer I were Traitor,
My name be blotted from the booke of Life,
And I from heauen banish'd,as from hence:
But what thou art, heauen, thou, and I do know,
And all too soone (I feare) the King shall rue.
Farewell (my Lyege) now no way can I stay,
Saue backe to England, all the worlds my way.

Rich. VnCLE, even in the glaiffes of thine eyes
I fee thy griefe appear. Euen soe
Hath from the number of his banish'd yeares
Pluck'd foure away: Six frozen Winters spent,
Returne with welcome home, from banifhment:

Bul. How long a time lyes in one little word:
Foure lagging Winters, and foure wanton springs
End in a word, such is the breath of Kings.

Gaunt. I thanke my Lyege, that in regard of me
He shortens foure yeares of my fonnes exile :
But little vantage shall I reape thereby,
For ere the fixe yeares that he hath to spend
Can change their Moones, and bring their times about,
My oyle-dride Lampe, and time-bewafed light
Shall be extinct with age, and endleffe night:
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me fee my fonne.

Rich. Why VnCLE, thou haft many yeeres to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canst give;
Shorten my dayes thou canft with sudden sorow,
And plucke nights from me, but not lend a morow:
Thou canft helpe time to furrow me with age,
But flop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kindomme cannot buy my breath.

Ric. Thy fonne is banish'd vpoun good advice,
Whereeto thy tongue a party-verdici gau;
Why at our justice feem'dt thou then to lowre?

Gau. Things sweet to taff, proue in digestion soure:
You urg'd me as a Judge, but I had rather you would haue bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I took'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine owne away:
But you gaue leaue to my vnwilling tong,
Against my will, to do my felte this wrong.

Rich. Cofine farewel: and VnCLE bid him so:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go.

Aum. Cofine farewell: what presence must not know
From where you do remaine, let paper shew.

Mow. My Lord, no leaue take I, for I will ride
As farre as land will let me, by your fide.

Gaunt. Oh to what purpoe doft thou hord thy words,
That thou returnst no greeting to thy friends?

---

Bull. I haue toofew to take my leaue of you,
When the tongues office should be prodigall,
To breath th'abundant dolour of the heart.

Gau. Thy greffe is but thy abfence for a time.

Bul. Ioyn abfent, greffe is preuent for that time.

Gau. What is fixe Winters, they are quickly gone?

Bul. To men in ioyn, but greffe makes one houre ten.

Gau. Call it a trauell that thou tak'ft for pleasure.

Bul. My heart will figh, when I mifcall it fo,
Which findes it an inforced Pilgrimage.

Gau. The fullen passage of thy weary fepper, Esteeme a foyle, wherein thou art to let
The precious Lewell of thy home returne.

Bul. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the froffie Caucafsus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
by bare imagination of a Feast?
Or Wallow naked in December snow
by thinking on fantaflicke summers heate?
Oh no, the apprehension of the good
Glues but the greater feeling to the worfe :
Fell forrowes tooth, doth euer ranckle more
Then when it bites, but lanceath not the fore.

Gau. Come, come, (my fan) Ite bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and canife, I would not fly.

Bul. Then Englands ground farewell: sweet foil adieu,
My Mother, and my Nurfe, which beares me yet:
Where ere I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish't, yet a true-born Englishman.

---

Scena Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Greene, and Bagot.

Rich. We did oblerue. Cofine Aumerle,
How far brought you high Herford on his way?

Aum. I brought high Herford (if you call him so) but to the next high way, and there I left him.

Ricb. And say, what store of parting tears were shed?

Aum. Faith none for me: except the Northeafte wind
Which then grew bitterly against our face,
Awake'd the sleepe rhemoe, and fo by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a teare.

Rich. What said our Cofin when you parted with him?

Aum. Farewell: and for my hart disfaine'd y my tongue
Should fo prophan the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such greefe,
That word I sem'd buried in my forrowes graue.

Marry. Would the word Farwell,haue lengthen'd houres,
And added yeeres to his short banifhment,
He should haue had a volume of Farwells,
but since it would not, he had none of me.

Ricb. He is our Cofin (Cofin) but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banifhment,
Whether our kinman come to fee his friends,
Our felle, and Bagby: heere Bagot and Greene
Obferu'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seeme to dye into their hearts,
With humble, and familiar courrefe,
What reverence he did throw away on flaves;
Wooing poore Crafted-men, with the craft of foules,
And patient vnder-bearing of his Fortune,

As 'twere to banifh their affefts with him.

Off goes his bonnet to an Oyfter-wench,
A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thankes my Countrimen, my loving friends,
As were our England in reuerion his,
And he our jubilts next degree in hope.

Gr. Well, he is gone, & with him go these thoughts:
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made my Liege
Ere further leyfure, yeeld them further means
For their advantage, and your Highmeetfe loffe.

Ric. We will our felne in perion to this warre,
And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
And liberall Largeffe, are growne somewhat light,
We are infor'd to farme our royall Realme,
The Reuennew whereof shall furnish vs
For our affayres in hand: if that come short
Our Substitutes at home shall have Blanke-charoters:
Whereeto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large summes of Gold,
And send them after to suply our wants:
For we will make for Ireland prentely.

Enter Boffy.

Boffy, what newes?

Bu. Old John of Gaunt is verie fickle my Lord, Sodainly taken, and hath fent fott/hate
To entreat your Maiestie to visit him.

Ric. Where lyes he?

Bu. At Ely house.

Ric. Now put it (heauen) in his Physitians minde,
To helpe him to his graue immediately:
The lining of his coffers shall make Coates
To decke our fouldiers for these Irish warres.
Come Gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray heauen we may make haft, and come too late. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gaunt, fiddle with Yorke.

Gaunt. Will the King come, that I may breath my laft
In wholsome counsell to his vnfaith youth?

Yorke. Vex not your felfe, nor flrie not with your breth,
For all in vaine comes counsell to his care.

Gaunt. Oh but (they fay) the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deep harmonie;
Where words are scarce, they are feldome spent in vaine,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in paine.
He that no more muft fay, is fitten more,
Then they whom youth and eafe haue taught to clofe,
More are mens ends mark'd, then their lives before,
The fetting Sun, and Moufick in the clofe
As the laft taste of sweetes, is sweetefl laft,
Writ in remembrance, more then things long past;
Though Richard my liues counsell would not heare,
My deaths sad tale, may yet vnfafe his care.

Yorke. No, it is flopt with other flatt'ring founds
As praifes of his flate: then there are found
Lafligious Minifters, to whose venom found
The open ear of youth doth alwaies liken.
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose mannes fill our tardie aplith Nation
Limpes after in bafe imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new, there's no repect how vile,
That is not quickly bu'z'd into his ears?
That all too late comes counfell to be heard,
Where will doth mufty with wis regard:
Direct not him, whose way himelfe will choofe,
Tis breath thou lackeft, and that breath wilt thou loofe.

Gaunt. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new infir'd,
And thus exspir'g, do foretell of him,
His rath fierce blaze of Ryot cannot laft,
For violent fires goone burne out themselfes,
Small flores laft long, but sodaine flores are short,
He tyres betimes, that spurs too falt betimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choake the feeder:
Light vanitie, infatiate corrosion,
Confuming meanes foon preyes vpon it felfe.
This royall Throne of Kings, this ifceptred Ile,
This earth of Maiesty, this feate of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradife,
This Fortrefse built by Nature for her felfe,
Against infciffion, and the hand of warre:
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious hone, set in the fluer fea,
Which ferues it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moate defenfivse to a houfe,
Against the enuy of leffe happier Lands.
This bleffed plot, this earth, this Realme this England,
This Nurfe, this teeming wombe of Royall Kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as farre from home,
For Chrifiant feruice, and true Chiallrie,
As is the sepulcher in Rubborev Iury
Of the Worlds ranfome, bleffed Marie Sonne.
This Land of fuch deere foules, this deere-deere Land,
Deere for her reputation through the world,
Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelting Farne.
England bound in with the triumphant fea,
Whose rocky shore beates backe the enuous fledge
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with flame,
With Inky blottes, and rotten Parchment bonds.
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shamefull conquest of it felfe.
Ahi! would the scandal vanifh with my life,
How happy then were my enufing death?

Enter King, Queene, Aumerle, Boffy, Greene,
Bagot, Ros, and Willauffhy.

Yorke. The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
For young hot Colts, being rag'd, do rage the more.

Queene. How fares our noble Uncle Lancatter?

Ri. What comfort man? How if with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. Oh how that name befits my composition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me greefe hath kept a tedious faft,
And who abitaynes from meate, that is not gaunt?
For heeping England long time haue I watcht,
Watching breeds leannelfe, leannelfe is all gaunt.
The pleasure that some Fathers feepe vpon,
Is my drift faft, I mean my Childrens lookes,
And therein fiffing, haft thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a graue,
Whose hollow wombe inhereth naught but bones.

Ric. Can fickle men play fo nicely with their names?
Gaunt. No, milery makes sport to mocke it felfe:
Since thou doft fecke to kill my name in me,

The life and death of Richard the second.

Rich. What sayes he?
Nor. Nay nothing, all is said:

His tongue is now a fit instrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

Tor. Be Yorke the next, that must be bankrupt so,
Though death be poore, it ends a mortal wo.

Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and to doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be:
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kernes,
Which live like venom, where no venom else
But only they, have privilege to live.
And for these great affayres do ask some charge
Towards our staiance, we do feize to vs
The plate, coine, revenue, and moueables,
Whereof our Uncle Gaunt did stand possess.

Tor. How long shall I be patient? Oh how long
Shall tender dutie make me suffer wrong?
Not Glosters death, nor Herfords banishment,
Nor Gauntes rebukes, nor Englands priuate wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poore Bullingbrookes,
About his marriage, nor my owne digrace
Haue euer made me fowe my patient cheeke,
Or bend one wrinkle on my Soueraigns face:
I am the laft of noble Edwards fonnes,
Of whom thy Father Prince of Wales was first,
In warre was newer Lyon rag'd more fierce:
In peace, was never gentle Lambe more milde,
Then was that yong and Principly Gentleman,
His face thou haue, for euen so look'd he Accompli'd with the number of thy howers:
But when he frownd, it was againft the French,
And not againft his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend: and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kinne:
Oh Richard, Yorke is to farre gone with greefe,
Or else he neuer would compare betwene.

Rich. Why Vncle, What's the matter?

Tor. Oh my Liege, pardon me if you pleafe, if not
I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
Seek ye to feize, and gripe into your hands
The Royalties and Rights of banifhed Herford?
Is it not Gaunt dead? and doth not Herford live?
Was not Gaunt juft? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deferue to haue an heyre?
Is not his heyre a well-deferuing heyre?
Take Herfords rights away, and take from time
His Charters, and his customarie rights:
Let not to morrow then infue to day,
Be not thy felfe. For how art thou a King
But by faire sequence and sucception:
Now afore God, God forbid I fay true,
If you do wrongfully feize Herfords right,
Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
By his Atrurneyes generall, to fue
His Louterie, and denie his offer'd hommage,
You plucke a thousand dangers on your head,
You loose a thousand well-difposed hearts,
And pricke my tender patience to thofe thoughts
Which honor and alledgeance cannot thinke.

Rich. Thinke what you will: we feifie into our hands,
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

Tor. Ile not be by the while: My Liege farewell,

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, olde Gaunt commends him to your Maiestie.
The life and death of Richard the second.

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell.
But by bad courses may be vnderstood,
That their events can never fall out good.

Rich. Go由此 to the Earl of Wilshire's right,
Bid him repair to vs to Ely houes,
To see this businesse: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create in absence of our felfe
Our Vncle Yorke, Lord Gouernour of England:
For he is luft, and always lou'd vs well.

Come on our Queene, to morrow must we part,
Be merry, for our time of flay is short.

Enter Richard, Mait Durh, Willoughby, & Ros.

Nor. Well Lords, the Duke of Lancastrie is dead.
Ros. And living too, for now his sonne is Duke,
Wil. Barely in title, not in reuenue.

Nor. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ros. My heart is great: but it must break with silence,

Er't be disburthen'd with a liberal tongue.

Nor. Nay speake thy mind: & let him ne'er speak more
That speakes thy words againe to do thee harme.

Wil. Tends that thou'd speake to th'Du. of Hereford,
If it be so, out with it boldly man,
Quicke is mine ease to heare of good towards him.

Ros. No good at all that I can do for him,
Vnlefe you call it good to pilde him,
Bereit and gelled of his patrimonie.

Nor. Now afore heauen, 'tis shame fuch wrongs are borne,
In him a royall Prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himselfe, but bafely led
By Flatterers, and what they will informe
Meere in hate gainst any of vs all,
That will the King feuerely prosecute
'Gainft vs, our lives, our children, and our heires.

Ref. The Commons hath he pil'd with greuous taxes
And quite loft their hearts: the Nobles hath he finde
For ancient quarrel, and quite loft their hearts.

Wil. And daily new exactions are deuid'd,
As blanke, beneuolences, and I wot not what:
But what o'Goel's name doth become of this?

Nor. Wars hath not wafted it, for war'd he hath not.
But bafely yeelded upon comprimize,
That which his Ancestors atchieu'd with blowes:

More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.

Ref. The Earl of Wilshire hath the realme in Farme.

Wil. The Kings groome bankrupt like a broken man.

Nor. Reproach and disfollution hangeth over him.

Ref. He hath not monie for these Irish warres:
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)

But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

Nor. His noble Kinman, moft degenerate King:
But Lords, we heare this fearfule tempeft fing,
Yet seeke no shelter to auoid the storme:
We fee the winde fit fore vpon our sailes,
And yet we strike not, but securely perihed.

Ref. We fee the very wracke that we must suffer,
And vnauoyed is the danger now
For sufferinge fo the caufes of our wracke.

Nor. Not fo: when through the hollow eyes of death,
I fee life peering: but I dare not say
How neere the tidings of our comfort is.

Wil. Nay let vs share thy thoughts, as thou doest our

Ref. Be confident to speake Northumberland,
We three, are but thy felfe, and speaking fo,

Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.

Nor. Then thus: I haue from Port le Blan
A Bay in Britaine, receiued intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Herford, Raimond Lord Cabbam,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archibishop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingbam, Sir John Rainfhton,
Sir John Norbertis, Sir Robert Waterton, & Francis Quaint,
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Britaine,
With eight tall shipps, three thousand men of warre
Are making bither with all due expedience,
And shortly meanes to touch our Northern shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we shall shake off our flauish yoake,
Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,
Redeme from breaking pawne the blemih'd Crowne,
Wipe off the durt that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Maiestie looke like it felt,
Away with me in pote to Rauspurges,
But if you faint, as fearing to do so:
Stay, and be secret, and my felfe will go.

Ref. To horse, to horse, vrgo doubts to them \\ y feare.

Wil. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queens, Busby, and Baget.

Busb. Madam, your Maiestie is too much sad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside selfe-harming heauinesse,
And entertaine a chearefull disposition.

Qu. To pleasa the King, I did: to pleasa my felfe
I cannot do it: yet I know no caufe
Why I should welcome such a guest as greefe,
Saue bidding farewell to so sweet a gueste
As my sweet Richard: yet againe me thinkes,
Some vnborne sorrow, ripe in fortunes wombe
Is comming towards me, and my inward soule
With nothing trembles, at something it grieues,
More then with parting from my Lord the King.

Busb. Each substance of a greefe hath twenty shaddows
Which shewes like greefe it selfe, but is not fo:
For forrowes eye, glazed with blinding teares,
Diides one thing intire, to many objectes,
Like perceptseler, which rightely gaz'd vpon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Diftinguinsh formes: so your sweet Maiestie
Looking awry vpon your Lords departurc,
Finde shapes of greefe, more then himselfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is taught bur shaddowes
Of what it is not: then thriue-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departurc weep not, more's not
Or if it be, 'tis with sable forrowes eie,
Which for things true, weep things imaginery.

Qu. It may be so: but yet my inward soule
Perwaies me it is otherwise: how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad: so heauy sad,
As though on thinking on no thought I thinkes,
Makes me with heauy nothing faint and shrinke.

Busb. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)
The life and death of Richard the second.

Qs. 'Tis nothing lese: conceit is still deri'd From some fore-father greese, mine is not so, For nothing hath begot my somethinge greese, Or somethinge, hath the nothing that I greeve, 'Tis in reverson that I do posseffe, But what it is, that is not yet knowne, what I cannot name, 'tis nameleffe woe I wot.

Enter Greene.

Gree. Heauen saue your Maiestye, and wel met Gentle- I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (men: Qs Why hop'll thou fou? 'Tis better hope he is: For his defignes craue haft, his haft good hope, Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipt? Gree. That he our hope, might have retyr'd his power, and druen into dispaire an enemies hope, Who strongly hath fet footing in this Land. The banish'd Bullingbrooke repeales himselfe, And with vp-lifted Armes is safe arriu'd At Rauenfjurg.

Qu. Now God in heauen forbid.

Gr. O Madam 'tis too true: and that is worse, The L.Northermberland, his yong sonne Henrie Percie, The Lords of Roffe, Beaumond, and Willoughby, With all their powerfull friends are fleed to him. Bullb. Why haue you not proclaim'd Northumberland And the rest of the revolted faction, Traitors?

Gree. We hau: Whereupone the Earl of Worcestre Hath broke his taffe, regined his Stewardship, And at the household seruants fled with him to Bullingbrook.

Qu. So Greene, thou art the midwife of my woe, And Bullingbrooke my forrowes dismall heyre:

Now hath my soule brought forth her progezie, And I a gasping new deliver'd mother, Haue woe to woe, forrow to forrow ioyn'd.

Bullb. Dispaire not Madam.

Qu. Who hall hinder me?

I will dispaire, and be at emnitie
With counzeing hope; he is a Flatterer, A Parasite, a keeper beske of death, Who generall would disprize the bands of life, Which selfe hopes linger in extremity.

Enter York.

Gree. Heere comes the Duke of Yorke.

Qu. With signes of warre about his aged necke, Oh full of carefull buinesse are his lookes:

Vndie, for heauens fake speake comfortable words:

Tor. Comfort's in heauen, and we are on the earth, Where nothing lyes but croffes, care and greexe: Your husband he is gone to saue farre off, Whilist others come to make him loofe at home; Heere am I left to vnder-prop his Land, Who weake with age, cannot support my felse: Now comes the fickle that his furiet made, Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a seruant.

Ser. My Lord, your sonne was gone before I came.

Tor. He was: why so; go all which way it will:

The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold, And will I feare reuolt on Herfords fide.

Sirra, get thee to Plafhie to my fitter Glofier, Bid her fend me presently a thousand pound, Hold, take my Ring.

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there, But I shall greeue you to report the reft.

Tor. What is't knaue?

Ser. An hour before I came, the Dutchesse dide,

Tor. Heau'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes Come ruishing on this wofull Land at one? I know not what to do: I would to heauen (So my vntruth had not provok'd him to it) The King had cut off my head with my brothers. What, are there postes dispatcht for Ireland? How shall we do for money for these warres? Come fitter (Cozen I would fay) pray pardon me. Go fellow, get thee home, pouide some Cartes, And bring away the Armour that is there.

Gentlemen, will you mutter men?
If I know how, or which way to order these affaires Thus disorderly thrust into my hands, Neuer beleue me. Both are my kinsmen, Th'one is my Soueraigne, whom both my oath And dutie bids defend: th'other againe Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd, Whom confidence, and my kindred bids to right: Well, somewhat we must do: Come Cozen, Ile dispofe of you. Gentlemen, go mutter vp your men, And meet me presently at Barkley Caffle: I shoul'd to Plafhy too: but time will not permit, All is vneuen, and every thing is left at fix and feeuon. Exit Bullb. The winde fits fite for newes to go to Ireland, But none returns: For vs to leue power Proportionable to th'enemy, is all imposible.

Gr. Besides our nesceffe to the King in loue, Is nere the hate of those loue not the King.

Da And that's the waueering Commons, for their loue Lies in their purfes, and who fo empties them, By fo much fils their hearts with deadly hate.

Bullb. Wherein the king fands generally condemn'd Bag. If judgement lye in them, then do we, Because we have beene euere nere the King.

Gr. Well: I will for refuge ftrait to Britoff Caffle, The Earle of Wiltshire is alreadie there.

Bullb. Thither will I with you, for little office Will the hateful Commons perfome for vs, Except flike hood, to teare vs all in pieces:

Will you go along with vs?

Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Maiestye:

Farewell, if hearts prefages be not vain, We three here part, that neu'r shall meete againe.

Bu. That's as Yorke thriues to beate back Bullingbrooke.

Gr. Alas poore Duke, the task he vndertakes Is numbring fands, and drinking Oceans drie,

Where one on his fide flies, thouenands will iyle.

Bullb. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and euere. We'll, we may meete againe.

Bag. I feare me neuer.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Herefford, and Northum- berland.

Bull. How farre is it my Lord to Berkley now?

Nor. Believe me noble Lord, I am a stranger heere in Gloucefhire, These high wilde hilles, and rough vnseuen wales, Draws out our miles, and makes them wearieome: And yet our faire discurfe hath beene as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable:
But I thank you, what a weary way
From Rauenpurgh to Cotteshold will be found,
In Roffe and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which I protest hath very much beguiled
The tediousness, and proceffe of my travell:
But theirs is sweetened with the hope to have
The present benefit that I poffeffe;
And hope to joy, is little left in joy,
Then hope enjoy'd: By this, the wise Lords
Shall make their way feeme shorter, as mine hath done,
By sight. What I have, your Noble Company.
But. Of much lefte value is my Company,
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percie.

North. It is my Sonne, young Harry Percie,
Sent from my Brother Worcester: Whenence fouer?
Harry, how fares your Vnkle?

Percie. I had thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queene?

Percie. No, my good Lord, he hath forlookt the Court,
Broken his Staffe of Office, and disperff
The Houfhold of the King.

North. What was his reason?
He was not fo resolu'd, when we last spake together.

Percie. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traitor.
But hee, my Lord, is gone to Rauenpurgh,
To offer fervice to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent mee ouer by Barkely, to difcouer
What power the Duke of Yorke had leau'd there,
Then with direction to repaire to Rauenpurgh.

North. What was the Duke of Hereford (Boy.)

Percie. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I neuer in my life did looke on him.

North. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.

Percie. My gracious Lord, I tender you my fervice,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirmre
To more approued fervice, and defert,

Bull. I thank thee gentle Percie, and be sure
I count my felfe in nothing elle to happy,
As in a Soule remembering my good Friends:
And as my Fortune ripens with thy Loue,
It shall be still thy true Loues recompence,
My Heart this Covenant makes, my Hand thus feales it.

North. How farre is it to Barkely? and what ftre Keepes good old Torke there, with his Men of Warre?

Percie. There standes the Castle, by yond tuft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard,
And in it are the Lords of Torke, Barkely, and Seymor,
None elle of Name, and noble erimate.

Enter Roffe and Willoughby.

North. Here come the Lords of Roffe and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, firie red with hate.

Bull. Welcome my Lords, I wet your loue pursues
A banifht Trayer; all my Treaury.
Is yet but vnfeft thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your loue, and labour recompence.
Roffe. Your presence makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.
With. And farre furemounts our labour to attaine it.

Bull. Evermore thanks, the Exchequer of the poore,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to yeeres,
Stands for my Bountie: but who comes here?
The life and death of Richard the second.

What would you have me do? I am a Subject,
And challenge Law: Attorneys are deny'd me;
And therefore personally I lay my claime
To my Inheritance of free Difcent.

North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abuses'd.
Ruff. It stands your Grace upon, to doe him right.
Wills. Bafe men by his endowments are made great.

York. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I have had feeling of my Coens Wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to doe him right:
But in this kind, to come in brauing Armes,
Be his own Carver, and cut out his way,
To find out Right with Wrongs, it may not be;
And you that doe abett him in this kind,
Cherifh Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

North. The Noble Duke hath sworn his comming is
But for his owne; and for the right of that,
Wee all have strongly sworn to give him ayd,
And let him neuer fee Joy, that breaks that Oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these Armes,
I cannot mend it, I must needs confesse,
Because my power is weake, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that sues his ease,
I would attach you all, and make you move.
Vnto the Soueraigne Mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it knowne to you,
I doe remaine as Neuter. So fare you well,
Vntlease you please to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this Night.

Bull. An offer Vnkle, that wee will accept:
But wee must winne your Grace to goe with vs
To Bristow Castle, which they say is held
By Bussie, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillers of the Commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed, and plucke away.

York. It may be I will go with you: but yet Ie pawfe,
For I am loth to breake our Countries Lawes:
Nor Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Excut.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captaine.

Capt. My Lord of Salisbury, we haue stayd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countreymen together,
And yet we hearre no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will disperse our felues: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trustie Welchman,
The King repeloth all his confidence in thee.
Capt. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay;
The Bay-trees in our Country all are wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heauen;
The pale-faie Moone lookes bloody on the Earth,
And leane-look'd Prophets whisper fearfull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leape,
The one in fearre, to loose what they enjoy,
The other to enioy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
 Farewell, our Countreymen are gone and fled,
As well afflu'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eyes of haueful mind,
I see thy Glory, like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly West,
Witnessing Stormes to come, Woe, and Unrest:
Thy Friends are fled, to wait vpon thy Foes,
And croffely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter 'Bullingbrooke, York, Northumberland,' Ruff, Percie, Willoughby, with 'Bussie' and Greene Trifoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men:
Bussie and Greene, I will not vex your foules,
(Since presenty your foules must part your bodies)
With too much care I must rush your pernicious lives:
For 'twere no Charitie: yet to waft your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You haue mis-led a Prince, a Royall King,
A happie Gentleman in Blood, and Lineaments,
By you vnhappy, and disfigur'd cleane:
You haue in manner with your sinfull hours
Made a Diuorce betwixt his Queene and him,
Broke the poheelsion of a Royall Bed,
And flay'n the beauty of a faire Queens Cheekes,
With tears drawn froe her eyes, with your foule wrongs.
My selfe a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neere to the King in blood, and neere in love,
Till you did make him mis-interprete me,
Have stoop't my neck vnder your injuries,
And figh't my English breath in foraine Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you have fed vpon my Seignories,
Dif-park'd my Parkes, and fell'd my Forrest Woods;
From mine owne Windows torne my Household Coat,
Raz'd out my Imprefle, leauing me no figne,
Sawe mens opinions, and my living blood,
To shew the World I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemnes you to the death: see them deliuer'd over
To execution, and the hand of death.

Bussie. More welcome is the stroake of death to me,
Then 'Bullingbrooke to England.

Greene. My comfort is, that Heauen will take our foules,
And plague Injuicse with the paines of Hell.

Bull. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd:
Vnkle, you say the Queene is at your House,
For Heauens take fairely let her be entreated,
Tell her I fend to her my kind commends;
Take speciall care my Greetings be deliuer'd.

York. A Gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With Letters of your love, to her at large.

Bull. Thankes gentle Vnkle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendore, and his Complices;
A while to worke, and after holyday.

Exeunt.
Scena Secunda.

Drums: Fleuris, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carllte, and Sauldiers.

Rich. Barklyough Castle call you this at hand?
Au. Yes, my Lord; how brooks your Grace the ayre,
After your late toffing on the breaking Seas?
Rich. Needs must I like it well: I wepe for joy
To fland upon my Kingdom once again.
Deere Earth, I doe salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horfes hooves:
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her teares, and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, smilng, greet I thee my Earth,
And doe thee fauer with my Royall hands.
Feed not thy Soueraignes Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy Sweetes, comfort his ravenous fence:
But let thy Spiders, that fack vp thy Venome,
And heauie-gated Toades ly in their way,
Doing annoyance to the trecherous feete,
Which with vurther steps doe trample thee.
Yeeld flinging Nettles to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy Bofome pluck a Flower,
Guard it I prethee with a lurking Adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortall touch
Throw death vpon thy Soueraignes Enemies.
Mock not my fencelie Conuertion, Lords;
This Earth fhal haue a feeling, and thafe Stones
Proue armed Sauldiers, ere her Natue King
Shall fatter under foule Rebellious Armes.

Car. Fear not my Lords, that Power that made you King
Hath power to kepe you King, in fight of all.

Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remiffe,
Whileft Bullyingbroke through our fecurite,
Growes strong and great, in subfance and in friends.

Rich. Discomfortable Councif, knoweft thou not,
That when the fearching Eye of Heauen is hid
Behind the Globe, that lights the lower World,
Then Theeues and Robbers raunge abroad vnleene,
In Murthers and in Out rage bloody here:
But when from vnder this Terreftiall Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Eafterne Pines,
And dares his Lightning through eu'ry giltie hole,
Then Murthers, Trefaun, and detelected finnes
(The Cloake of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Theefe, this Traitor Bullyingbroke,
Who all this while hath reuell'd in the Night,
Shall fee vs rifting in our Throne, the Earl,
His Trefaun will fit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the fight of Day;
But felfe-affrighted, tremble at his finne.
Not all the Water in the rough rude Sea,
Can waie the Balme from an anoynted King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depece
The Deputie elected by the Lord:
For every man that Bullyingbroke hath preft,
To lift threw Steele against our Golden Crowne,
Heauen for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious Angell: then if Angels fight,
Weake men muf fall, for Heauen still guards the right.
Enter Salisbury.
Welcome my Lord, how farre off lyes your Power?
Salisb. Nor neere, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weake arme: difcomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speake of nothing but defpaire:
One day too late, I fear (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all thy happe dayes on Earth:
Oh call backe Yesterday, bid Time returne,
And thou shalt haue twelve thousand fighting men:
To day, to day, vnhandy day too late
Orthrowes thy Joyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State;
For all the Welchmen hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bullingbroke, difperf, and fled.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, why lookses your Grace fo pale?

Rich. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till fo much blood thither come againe,
Hawe I not reafon to looke pale, and dead?
All Soules that will be fafe, flye from my fide,
For Time hath fet a blot vpon my pride.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.

Rich. I had forgot my felfe. Am I not King?
Awake thou fuggard Maieftie, thou fleepeth:
Is not the Kings Name forte thyfted Names?
Arm, arme my Name: a punie Subiect strikes
At thy great glory. Looke not to the ground,
Ye Favorites of a King: are wee not high?
High be our thoughts: I know my Vnkle Torkes
Hath Power enough to ferue our turne,
But who comes here?

Enter Scroope.

Scroope. More health and happineffe betide my Liege,
Then can my care-turn'd tongue deliver him.

Rich. Mine care is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worfe is worldly loft, thou canft vnfold:
Say, is my Kingdom loft? why twas my Care:
And what loft is it to be rid of Care?
Stries Bullingbroke to be as Great as wee?
Greater he fhall not be: if hee ferue God,
Woe! ferue him too, and be his Fellow fo.
Revolt our Subiects? That we cannot mend,
They breake their Faith to God, as well as vs:
Cry Woe, Deftruction, Ruine, Loffe, Decay,
The worfe is Death, and Death will haue his day.

Scroope. Glad am I, that your Highneffe is fo arm'd
To bear the tidings of Calamitie.
Like an unfearable Stormie day,
Which make the Siluer Rivers drowne their Shores,
As if the World were all diffolu'd to teares:
So high, above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullyingbroke, covering your fearefull Land
With hard bright Steele, and hearts harder then Steele:
White Beares haue arm'd their thin and hairleffe Scalps
Against thy Maieftie, and Boyes with Womens Voyces,
Strue to speake bigge, and clap their female loinits
In fithe vnwieldie Armes: against thy Crowne
Thy very Bead-men learne to bend their Bowes
Of double fatall Eugh: against thy State
Ye Daftafe- Womens manage ruffie Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebel,
And all goes worfe then I have power to tell.

Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'ft a Tale fo ill.
Where is the Earle of Wiltshire, where is Bagan?
What is become of Bafhe? where is Greene?
The life and death of Richard the second.

That they have let the dangerous Enemie
Measure our Confines with such peacefull steps?
If we preuaile, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Ballingbrooke.

Scoope. Peace haue they made with him indee( my Lord.)

that makes peace terrible Hell make warre
Upon their spottted Soules for this Offence.

Scoope. Sweet Love(I see) changing his propertie,
Turnes to the fourest,and most deadly hate:
Againe vacurse their Soules; their peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands:those whom you curse
Haue felt the worke of Deaths destroying hand,
And lye full low, grau'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bubbie, Greene, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead?

Scoope. Yea, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power?

Rich. No matter where ; of comfort no man speake:
Let's talke of Graues, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
Make Duft our Paper, and with Raynie eyes
Write Sorrow on the Bosome of the Earth.
Let's chufe Executors, and talke of Wills:
And yet not fo; for what can we bequest,
Saue our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Lives, and all are Ballingbrookes,
And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
And that small Modell of the barren Earth,
Which ferues as Pafe, and Couer to our Bones:
For Heauens fake let vs fit upon the ground,
And tell fad stories of the death of Kings:
How fome haue beene depos'd, fome flaine in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghofts they haue depos'd,
Some poyfon'd by their Wifes, fome feepling kill'd,
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crowne
That rounds the mortall Temples of a King,
Keeps Death his Court, and there the Antique fits
Scuffing his State, and grinning at his Pompe,
Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,
To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looke's,
Infuing him with felfe and vaine conceit,
As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
Were Braffe impregnable : and humor'd thus,
Comes at the laft, and with a little Pinne
Bores through his Caffile Walls, and farwell King.
Couver your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With folemne Reuerence : throw away Respect,
Tradition, Forme, and Ceremonious duty,
For you have beene misooke me all this while:
I live with Bread like you, feele Want,
Taffe Grieue, need Friends : fubiectd thus,
How can you fay to me, I am a King?

Carl. My Lord, wife men ne're waile their present woes,
But prefently prevent the ways to waile :
To feare the Foe, since feare oppreffeth strength,
Gius in your weakenesse, strength vnto your Foe;
Fear, and be flaine, no worfe can come to fight,
And fight and die, is death deftroying death,
Where fearing, dying, payes death feruile breath.

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And leaue to make a Body of a Limbe.

Rich. Thou child'd me we'll proud 'Ballingbrooke I come

To change Blowses with thee, for our day of Doome:
This aueg fit of fcare is over-blowne,
An eafe take it is to winne our owne.

Say Scoope, where lyes our Vnkle with his Power?
Speake sweetly man, although thy lookes be fowre.

Scoope. Men judge by the complexion of the Skie
The flate and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heauie Eye:
My Tongue hath but a heauier Tale to fay:
I play the Torturer, by small and fmall
To lengthen out the worfe, that muft be fpoken.
Your Vnkle York is loyn'd with Ballingbrookes,
And all your Northerne Caffile yeld vp,
And all your Southerne Gentlemen in Armes
Upon his Facion.

Rich. Thou haft faid enough.
Befrew thee Cousin, which didst lead me forth
Of that sweett way I was in, to defpaire:
What fay you now? What comfort haue we now?
By Heauen Ile hate him everlaftingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Goe to Flint Caffle, there Ile pine away,
A King, Woes flauer, flall Kingly Woe obey:
That Power I haue, dilcharge, and let'em goe
To eare the Land, that hath fome hope to grow,
For I haue none. Let no man speake againe
To alter this, for counfaile is but vaine.

Aum. My Liege, one word.
Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Dilcharge my followers : let them hence away,
From Richards Night, to Ballingbrookes faire Day.

Exeunt.

Scana Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Ballingbrookes,
York, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learne
The Welchmen are differs'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few private friends, upon this Coast.

Norib. The newes is very faire and good, my Lord,
Richard,not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

York. It would befoome the Lord Northumberland,
To fay King Richard's alack the heauie day,
When fuch a sacred King should hide his head.

North. Your Grace mistakes: onely to be briefe, Left I his Title out.

York. The time hath beene,
Would you have beene so briefe with him, he would
Have beene so briefe with you, to shorten you,
For taking fo the Head, your whole heads length.

Bull. Mistake not (Vnkle) farther then you should.

York. Take not (good Cousin) farther then you shou'd.
Leaft you mistake the Heauens are ore your head.

Bull. I know it (Vnkle) and oppose not my felfe Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Percey.

Welcome Harrry, what will not this Caffle yeald?
Per. The Caffle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.

'Bull. Roy.
The life and death of Richard the second.

Bull. Royally? Why, it contains no King?
Per. Yes (my good Lord)
It doth contain a King: King Richard lyes
Within the limits of your Lord, and Stone,
And with him the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scrope, besides a Clergie man
Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learne.

North. Oh, believe it is the Bishop of Carlile.
Bull. Noble Lord,
Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Caffle,
Through Brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle,
Into his ruin'd Eares, and thus deliuer:
Henry Bullingbrooke vpon his knees doth kisse
King Richard's hand, and lends allegiance
And true faith of heart to his Royall Person: hither come
Euen at his feet, to lay my Armes and Power,
Prouided, that my Banishment repeale'ld,
And Lands reforer'd againe, be freely granted:
If not, Ile we th'advantage of my Power,
And lay the Summers duft with flowers of blood,
Ray'n'd from the wounds of harther Englishmen:
The which, how farre off from the mind of 'Bullingbrooke'
It is, Iuch Crimson Tempet should bedrench
The freth greene Lap of faire King Richard's Land,
My fooping dutie tenderly shal till:
Goe signifie as much, while here we march
Vpon the Graffie Carpet of this Plaine:
Let's march without the noyfe of threatening Drum,
That from this Caftles tatter'd Battelments
Our faire Appointments may be well perus'd.
Me thinkes King Richard and my felfe shoulde meet
With no leffe terror then the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundring smoke at Meeting teares the cloudie Cheeke's of Heauen:
Be he the fire, Ile be the yeelding Water;
The Rage be his, while on the Earth I raine
My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
March on, and marke King Richard how he lookes.
Parle without, and anwerc within: iben a Fleuris.
Enter on the Walls: Richard, Carlile, Aumerle, Scroop, Salisbury.

See, see, King Richard doth himselfe appeare
As doth the blushing discontented Sunne,
From out the fierie Portall of the East,
When he perceives the envious Clouds are bent
To dimme his glory, and to faine the tract
Of his bright passag to the Occident.
York. Yet lookes he like a King: behold his Eye
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Malefic: slack, slack, for wee,
That any harme should faine fo faire a fhew.

Rich. Wee are amaz'd, and thus long hau'e we fliped
To watch the fearfull bending of thy knee,
Because we thought our felfe thy lawfull King:
And if we be, how dare thy loyntes forget
To pay their awfull dutie to our presence?
If we be not, fhev vs the Hand of God,
That hath difemb'd vs from our Stewardhip,
For well wee know, no Hand of Blood and Bone
Can gripe the fared Handle of our Sceptre,
Vnleeffe he doe profanne, feale, or viurpe.
And though you thinke, that all, as you have done,
Hau'e torne their Soules, by turning them from vs,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Mafter, God Omnipotent,
Is mutrifie in his Clouds, on our behalfe,

Armies of Pestilence, and they shall strike
Your Children yet vnborne, and vnbegot,
That lift your Vaffall Hands against my Head,
And threat the glory of my precious Crowne.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinkes he is,
That every hride he makes vpon my Land,
Is dangerous Treafon: He is come to ope
The purple Testament of bleeding Warre;
But er the Crowne he looks for, flue in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crownes of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complection of her Maid-pale Peace
To Scarlet Indigation, and bedew
Her Pastors Graffe with faithful English Blood.

North. The King of Heauen forbid our Lord the King
Should so with ciuill and vnCiuill Armes
Be ruf'd vpon: Thy thrice-noble Coufin,
Harry Bullingbrooke, doth humbly kiffe thy hand,
And by the Honorale Tombe he fweares,
That stands vpon your Royall Grandfaires Bones,
And by the Royalties of both your Bloods,
(Currents that fpring from one most gracious Head)
And by the buried Hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the Worth and Honor of himselfe,
Compring all that may be fwoare, or faid,
His comming hither hath no further scope,
Then for his Lineall Royalties, and to begge
Infranchiment immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royall partie granteed once,
His glittering Armes he will commend to't Ruft,
His barbed Stedes to Stables, and his heart
To faithfull feruice of your Malefic;
This fware he, as he is a Prince, is luft,
And as I am a Gentleman, I credit him.

Rich. Northumberland, fay thus: The King returns,
His Noble Coufin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his faire demands
Shall be accomplifh'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious vterance thou haft,
Speake to his gentle hearing kind commends.
We doe deabe our felves (Coufin) doe we not,
To looke so poorly, and to speake fo faire?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and fend
Defiance to the Traror, and fo die?

Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpfull Swords.

Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine,
That layd the Sentence of dread Banishment
On yond proud man, should take it off againe
With words of footh: Oh that I were as great
As is my Grieff, or leffer then my Name,
Or that I could forget what I have bene,
Or not remember what I must be now:
Swell'llt thou proud heart? Hee give thee scope to beat,
Since Foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

Aum. Northumberland comes backe from 'Bullingbrooke.

Rich. What must the King doe now? must he submit?
The King shall doe it: Must he be depos'd?
The King shall be contented: Must he leafe
The Name of King? o' Gods Name let it goe.
Ile give my Jewels for a fertt of Beades,
My gorgeous Palacie, for a Hermitage,
My gay Apparrell, for an Almes-mans Gowne,
My figur'd Goblets, for a Difh of Wood,
My Scepter, for a Palmers walking Staffe,
My Subiects, for a payre of carued Saints,
And my large Kingdome, for a little Graue,
A little little Graue, an obscure Graue.
Or Ile be buyred in the Kings high-way,
Some way of common Trade, where Subjectes feet
May howrely trample on their Soueraigne Head:
For on my heart they tread now, whilst I live;
And buyred once, why not vpon my Head?
Aumerly, thou weep't (my tender-hearted Counsell)
We'll make foule Weather with despifed Teares:
Our sighes, and they, shall lodge the Summer Corne.
And make a Dearth in this revolting Land,
Or shall we play the Wantons with our Woes,
And make some prettie Match, with shedding Teares?
As thus: to drop them still vpon one place,
Till they haue fretted vs a payre of Graues,
Within the Earth: and therein lay'd, there lies
Two Kinsmen, digg'd their Graues with weeping Eyes?
Would not this ill, doe well? Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at mee.
Most mightie Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What fayes King BuUingbrooke? Will his Maiestie
Give Richard leaue to live, till Richard die?
You make a Legge, and BuUingbrooke fayes I.
North. My Lord, in the bafe Court he doth attend
To speake with you, may it please you to come downe.
Rich. Downe, downe I come, like glift'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of varly Ladies.
In the bafe Court? bafe Court, where Kings grow bafe,
To come at Traytors Calls, and doe them Grace.
In the bafe Court come down: down Court, down King,
For night-Owls shriike, where mouting Larks shou'd fing.
BuU. What fayes his Maiestie?
North. Sorrow, and griefe of heart
Makes him speake fondly, like a franticke man:
Yet he is come.
BuU. Stand all apart,
And shew faire dutie to his Maiestie.
My gracious Lord.
Rich. Fare Counsell,
You debace your Princely Knee,
To make the bafe Earth proud with kisstng it.
Me rather had, my Heart might feeble your Loue,
Then my vnpleas'd Eye see your Courtesie.
Vp Counsell, vp, your Heart is vp, I know,
Thus high at leasth, although your Knee be low.
BuU. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine owne.
Rich. Your owne is yours, and I am yours, and all.
BuU. So farre be mine, my moft reddoubted Lord,
As my true feruice shall deferve your loue.
Rich. Well you reftru'd:
They well deferve to hau'e,
That know the strong'd, and fureft way to get.
Vnklel give me your Hand: pay, drye your Eyes,
Teares shew their Loue, but want their Remedies.
Counsell, I am too young to be your Father,
Though you are old enough to be my Helire.
What you will haue, Ile give, and willing to,
For doe we muf't what force will haue vs doe.
Set on towards London:
Counsell, is it fo?
BuU. Yea, my good Lord.
Rich. Then I must not fay, no.

The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Queens, and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we deuise here in this Garden,
To drue away the heauie thought of Care?
La. Madame, wee'le play at Bowles.
Qu. 'Twill make me thinke the World is full of Ruts,
And that my fortune runnes against the Byas.
La. Madame, wee'le Dance.
Qu. My Legges can keepe no measure in Delight,
When my poore Heart no measure keepe's in Griefe.
Therefore no Dancing(Girls) some other sport.
La. Madame, we'e'll tell Tales.
Qu. Of Sorrow, or of Grieffe?
La. Of eyther, Madame.
Qu. Of neyther, Girle.
For if of joy, being altogether wanting
It doth remembre me the more of Sorrow:
Or if of Griefe, being altogether had,
It adds more Sorrow to my want of Joy:
For what I haue, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boote's not to complaine.
La. Madame, Ile fing.
Qu. 'Tis well that you haue caufe:
But thou should't please me better, would't thou wepee.
La. I could wepee, Madame, would it doe you good.
Qu. And I could fing, would weeping doe me good,
And never borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardener, and two Servants.
But flye, here comes the Gardiners,
Let's step into the shadow of these Tress.
My wretchednesse, vs to a Rowe of Pines,
They'll talke of State: for every one doth fo,
Against a Change; Woe is fore-runne with Woe.
Gard. Go beinde thou vp yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like varly Children, make their Syre
Stoupe with oppreffion of their prodigall weight:
Gieue some fupportance to the bending twigges.
Goe thou, and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too falt growing sprayes,
That looke too loftie in our Common-wealth:
All must be eu'n, in our Gouvernment.
You thus imploy'd, I will goe root away
The noyfome Weeds, that without profit fucke
The Soyles fertilitie from wholome flowers.

Ser. Why should we, in the compaffe of a Pale,
Keepe Law and Forme, and due Proportion,
Shewing as in a Modell our firme Estate?
When our Sea-walled Garden, the whole Land,
Is full of Weedes, her faireft Flowers choakt vp,
Her Fruit-trees all vnpruin'd, her Hedges ruin'd,
Her Knots diforder'd, and her wholome Hearses
Swarming with Caterpillers.

Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,
Hath now himfelfe met with the Fall of Leafe.
The Weeds that his broad-spreadinge Leaues did shelter,
That seem'd, in eating him, to hold him vp,
Are pull'd vp, Root and all, by BuUingbrooke:
I meane, the Earle of Wiltshire, Bussy, Greene.

Ser. What,
Enter as to the Parliament, Bullyingbrokes, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Wysminster, Herauld, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullyingbrokes. Call forth Bagot.

Now Bagot, freely speake thy minde, What thou do'rt know of Noble Gloushters death: Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd The bloody Office of his Timeleffe end. Bag. Then fet before my face, the Lord Aumerle. Bul. Cinfin, stand forth, and looke upon that man. Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue Scornes to vnflay, what it hath once deliuer'd.

In that dead time, when Gloushters death was plotted, I heard you fay, I am not my arme of length, That reacheth from the reftfull English Court As farre as Callis, to my Vnkle's head. Amongst much other talkes, that very time, I heard you fay, that you had rather refuse The offer of an hundred thousand Crownes, Then Bullyingbrokes return to England; adding withall, How bleft this Land would be, in this your Cofins death. Aum. Princes, and Noble Lords: What anfwer shall I make to this base man? Shall I fo much difhonor my faire Starres, On equall termes to give him chafficement? Either I muft, or haue mine honor foyd With th'Attaindor of his fland'rous Lippes. There is my Gage, the manuall Seale of death That markes thee out for Hell. Thou lyef, And will maintaine what thou haft faid, is false, In thy heart blood, though being all too fafe To flaine the temper of my Knightly word.

Bul. Bagot forbear, thou shalt not take it vp. Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the beft In all this prefence, that hath mou'd me fo. Fitz. If that thy valour stand on fympathize: There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thinke: By that faire Sunne, that fhes we when thou fand'ft, I heard thee fay (and vauntingly thou fpak'ft it) That thou wer'ft caufe of Noble Gloushters death. If thou denieft it, twenty times thou lyef, And I will turne thy falshood to thy hart, Where it was forged with my Rapiers point. Aum. Thou dar'st not (Coward) liue to fee the day. Fitz. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre. Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this. Per. Aumerle, thou lyef't: his Honor is as true In this Appeale, as thou art all vnluf't: And that thou art fo, that for my Gage To prove it on thee, to their extreme point Of mortall breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st. Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off, And neuer brandish more reuengefull Steele, Ouer the glittering Helmet of my Foe. Surrey. My Lord Fitzwater: I do remember well, the very time Aumerle, and you did talke.

Fitz. My Lord, Tis very true: You were in prefence then, And you can witneffe with me, this is true. Surrey. As faile, by heauen, As Heauen it faile is true. Fitz. Surrey, thou Lyef. Surrey. Difhonourable Boy; That Lyef, shall lie fo heavy on my Sword, That it shall render Vengeance, and Reuenge, Till thou the Lye-gius; and that Lyef, doe lyce In earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull, In prooffe whereof, there is mine Honors pawn, Engage it to the Trial, if thou dar'ft.
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Rich. How fondly do'th thou purre a forward Horse?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breathe, or live, I dare meete Surrey in a Wildernes,
And spit vpon him, whilest I lay he Lyes, And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my Bond of Faith, To trye thee to my strong Correction.
As I intend to thriue in this new World, Aumerle is guiltie of my true Appelle.
Besides, I heard the banished Norfolk say, That thou Aumerle didst lend two of thy men, To execute the Noble Duke at Calais. Aum. Some honest Christian trueth me with a Gage,
That Norfolk layes: here doe I throw downe this, If he may be releaved, to trie his Honor.
Bull. These differences shall all rest vnder Gage,
Till Norfolk be releaved: releaved he shall be;
And (though mine Enemy) refor't against
To all his Lands and Seignories: when hee's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his Tryall.
Carl. That honorable day shall ne're be seen.
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Iefu Christ, in glorious Christian field
Streaming the Ensigne of the Christian Croffe,
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And toy'd with workers of Warre, they'd himselfe
To Italy, and there at Venice gane
His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soule vnto his Captain Christ,
Vnder whose Colours he had fought so long.
Bull. Why Bishop, is Norfolk dead?
Carl. As sure as I live, my Lord.
Bull. Sweet peace conduct his sweet Soule
To the Bosome of good old Abraham.
Lords Appeallants, your differences shall all rest vnder gage,
Till we assigne you to your days of Tryall.
Enter York.
York. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee From plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soule
Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeelds
To the possession of thy Royall Hand.
Enter Carle. He mindeth, descending now from him,
And long liue Henry, of that Name the Fourth.
Bull. In Gods Name, Ile affende the Regall Throne.
Carl. Mary, Heauen forbid.
Worshp in this Royall Presence may I speake,
Yet bold beameing me to speake the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
Were enough Noble, to be vpright Judge
Of Noble Richard: then true Noblenesse would Lerne him forbearance from to foule a Wrong.
What Subject can glue Sentience on his King?
And who fits here, that is not Richard Subject?
Theeues are not iudg'd, but they are by to heare,
Although apparant guilt be seene in them:
And shall the figure of Gods Malestie,
His Captain, Steward, Deputie elect,
Anoynted, Crown'd, planted many yeeres,
Be iudg'd by lubie, and inferior breathe,
And he himselfe not preftent? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Christian Climate, Soules renf'de
Should shew so heamous, black, obscene a deed.
I speake to Subject, and a Subject speakes,
Stir'd vp by Heauen, thus boldly for his King,
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
Is a foule Traytor to prow'd Herefords King.
And if you Crowne him, let me prophecie,

The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future Ages groane for his foule Act.
Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinne with Kinde confound.
Diforder, Horror, Fear, and Mutinie
Shall here inhabite, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead mens Sculls.
Oh, if you reare this Houfe, against this Houfe
It will the wofullest Diuision prove,
That euer fell vp vnpon this cursed Earth.
Preuent it, refhit it, and let it not be fo,
Leafe Child, Childs Children cry against you, Woe.
North. Woe: I long to see you argu'd Sir: and for your pains,
Of Capittall Treacon we arrest you here.
My Lord of Westminister, be it your charge,
To keeper him safely, till his day of Tryall.
May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may furrender: to we shall proceed.
Without further delay.
York. I will be his Conduct.
York. I long in your Service.
Bull. Lords, you that here are vnder our Arrest,
Procurue your Liberties for your Dayes of Anfwre:
Little are we beholding to your Lordes,
And little look'd for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and York.
Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
Before I have fouke off the Regall thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To infinite, flatter, bowe, and bend my Knee.
Glue Sorrow leave a while, to tute me
To this submition. Yet I well remember
The favours of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All heayle to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he in twelue,
Found truth in all, but one; in twelve thousand, none.
God faue the King: will no man say, Amen?
Am I both Prize, and Clarke? well then, Amen.
God faue the King: although I be not hee:
And yet Amen, if Heauen doe thinke him mee.
To doe what service, am I sent for hither?
York. To doe that office of thine owne good will,
Which tyred Maiestie did make thee offer:
The Regnification of thy State and Crowne
To Henry Bullingbrook.
Rich. Glue me the Crown. Here Cousin, feere 'c Crown:
Here Cousin, on this side my Hand, on that side thine.
Now is this Golden Crowne like a deep
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier euer dancing in the aye,
The other downe, vnseeinge, and full of Water:
That Bucket downe, and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefes, whil'st you mount vp on high.
Bull. I thought you had been willing to refigne.
Rich. My Crowne am I, but fill my Griefes are mine:
You may my Glories and my State depo:
But not my Griefes; still am I King of those.
Bull. Part of your Care you giue me with your Crowne.
Rich. Your Care for me, do not pluck my Care downe,
My Care, is loffe of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gaine of Care, by new Care wonne:
The Cares I giue, I have, though giuen away,
They 'tend the Crowne, yet fill with me they stay:
Bull. Are you contented to refigne the Crowne?

Rich. I.

---
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Richard. I, no, no, I: for I must nothing bee: Therefore no, no, for I reigne to thee.
Now, mark me, how I will vndoe my selfe, I give this heauenie Weight from off my Head, And this vawie,ldie Scepter from my Hand, The pride of Kingly Iway from out my Heart. With mine owne Teares I wash away my Balmes, With mine owne Hands I give away my Crowne, With mine owne Tongue denie my Sacred State, With mine owne Breath release all dudious Oathes; And Pomme and Maiiffe I doe forswear: My Manors, Rents, Revenues, I forgive; My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I denie: God pardon all Oathes that are broke to mee, God keep all Vowes vnbroke to be made to thee, Make me, that nothing haue, with nothing grieu'd, And thou with all plea'sd, that haft attchieu'd. Long may't thou live in Richards Seat to fit, And soone lye Richard in an Earthe Pit. God faue King Henry, vn-King'd Richard sayes, And send him many yeeres of Sunne-hine days. What more remains? North. No more: but that you reade These Accusations, and these grievous Crymes, Committed by your Perfon, and your followers, Against the State, and Profit of this Land: That by confessing them, the Soules of men May deeme, that you are worthily depo'd. Rich. Must I doe so? and must I rauell out My weau'd vp follyes: Gentle Northumberland, If thy Offences were vpno Record, Would it not shame thee, in so faire a troupe, To reade a Lecture of them? I thou wouldst, There should't thou finde one heynes Article, Contayning the depoing of a King, And cracking the strong Warrant of an Oath, Mark'd with a Blot,damn'd in the Booke of Haueyn. Nay, all of you, that fland and looke vpone mee, Whill't that my wretchednesse doth baie my selfe, Though some of you, with Pilate, waie your hands, Shewing an outward pitie: yet you Pilates Have here deliver'd me to my foure Croffe, And Water cannot waie away your sinne. North. My Lord dispatch, reade o're these Articles. Rich. Mine Eyes are full of Teares, I cannot see: And yet falt-Water blinde them not so much, But they can see a sort of Traytors here. Nay, if I turne mine Eyes vpon my selfe, I finde my selfe a Traytor with the rest: For I have guien here my Soules consent, T'vndeck the pompous Body of a King; Made Glory bale; a Soueraigne, a Slawe; Proud Maiiffle, a Subject; State, a Pefant. North. My Lord. Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught-infulting man; No, nor no mans Lord: I have no Name, no Title; No, nor that Name was guien me at the Font, But 'tis vpfrupt: slack the heausie day, That I haue wore so many Winters out, And know not now, what Name to call my selfe. Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow, Standing before the Sunne of Ballingbrooks, To melt my selfe away in Water-drops. Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good, And if my word be Sterling yet in England, Let it command a Mirror hither straightef,
What euer I shall happen to deuise.
I see your Browes are full of Discontent,
Your Heart of Sorrow,and your Eyes of Teares.
Come home with me to Supper, Ie lay a Plot
Shall shew vs all a merry day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Queene, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come: this is the way
To Julius Caesar ill-erected Tower:
To whose first Bofome, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke.
Here let vs ref, if this rebellious Earth
Haue any reffing for her true Kings Queene.
Enter Richard, and Guard.

But soft, but fee, or rather doe not fee,
My faire Rofe wither: yet looke vp; behold,
That you in pittie may diffoloe to dye,
And waft him froth againe with true loute Teares.
Ah thou, the Modell where old Troy did fland,
Thou Mappe of Honor, thou King Richards Tombe,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-fauor'd Griefe be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-houfe Gueft.

Ricb. Joyne not with griefe, faire Woman, do not fo,
To make my end too fudden: learn good Soule,
To thinke our former State a happie Dreaume,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shewes vs but this. I am fworne Brother(Sweet)
To grim Necessitie; and hee and I
Will keep a League till Death. High thee to France,
And Cloyfter thee in some Religious Houfe:
Our holy liues muft winne a new Worlds Crowne,
Which our prophane hours here haue stricken downe.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and minde
Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depo'd thine Intellett? hath he beene in thy Heart?
The Lyon dying, threfheth forth his Paw,
And wounds the Earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-powr'd: and wilt thou, Pupill-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kiffe the Rodde,
And fwayne on Rage with base Humilitie,
Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of Beasts indeed: if aught but Beasts,
I had bene still a happy King of Men.
Good(sometime Queene)prepare thee hence for France:
Thinke I am dead, and that eu'n here thou tak'st it,
As from my Death-bed, my laft Luing leaue.
In Winters tedious Nights fit by the fire
With good old folkes, and let them tell thee Tales
Of woull Ages, long age betide:
And ere thou bid good-night, to quit their griefe,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And fend the hearers weeping to their Beds:
For why? the fencelleffe Brands will sympathize
The heauie accent of thy mouing Tongue,
And in compation, wepe the fire out:
And fome will mourne in ashes, some coale-black,
For the depoing of a rightfull King.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.

You must to Pomfret, not vnto the Tower.
And Madame, there is order ta'ne for you:
With all swift speed, you must away to France.
Ricb. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke acends my Throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age,
More then it is, ere foule finne, gathering head,
Shall breake into corruption: thou shalt thinke,
Though he duide the Realme, and glue thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all:
He shall thinke, that thou which know'st the way
To plant varrieftull Kings, will know againe,
Being ne're fo little vy'd another way,
To pluck him headlong from the vfurped Throne.
The Loue of wicked friends convertus to Feare;
That Feare, to Hate: and Hate turns one, or both,
To worthie Danger, and defereued Death.

North. My guilt be on my Head, and there an end:
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

Ricb. Doubly diuor'd (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage; twixt my Crowne, and me,
And then betwixt me, and my married Wife.
Let me vn-kiffe the Oath 'twixt thee, and me;
And yet not fo, for with a Kiffe 'twas made.
Part vs, Northumberland: I towards the North,
Where fliuering Cold and Sickneffe pines the Clyme:
My Queene to France: from whence, set forth in pome,
She came adorn'd hither like sweet May;
Sent back like Hollowmas, or short'ft of day.

Qu. And must we be diuided? must we part?
Ricb. I, hand from hand (my Loue) and heart fro heart.
Qu. Banish vs both, and send the King with me.

North. That were some Loue, but little Policy.

Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me goe.
Ricb. So two together weeping, make one Woe.
Weepe thou for me in France; I, for thee here:
Better farre off, then neere, be ne're the neere,
Goe, count thy Way with Sighes; I, mine with Groanes.

Qu. So longeft Way shall have the longeft Moanes.
Ricb. Twice for one step Ie groane, 'Way being short,
And peece the Way out with a heauie heart.
Come, come, in woing Sorrow let's be briefe,
Since wedding it, there is fuch length in Griefe:
One Kiffe shall fllope our mouthes, and dumbely part
Thus glie I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Glie me mine owne against were no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine owne againe, be gone,
That I may trie to kill it with a groane.

Rich. We make Woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest, let Sorrow say.

Enter Yorks, and his Dukeff.

Duch. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you breake the story off,
Of our two Cousins comming into London.
York. Where did I leave?
Duch. At that sad stoppe, my Lord,
Where rude mis-gouern'd hands, from Windowes tops,
Threw dust and rubbiff on King Richards head.

York. Then d 3
Yecke. Then, as I said, the Duke, great Bullingbrooke, Mounted upon a hot and fierce Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With flow, but fleetly pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cry, God save thee Bullingbrooke.
You would have thought the very windowes spake,
So many greedy lookes of young and old,
Through Caeferants darte their desiring eyes
Vpon his vifage: and that all the walles,
With painted Imagery had sail at once,
Iefu preferue thee, welcom Bullingbrooke.
Whil't he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower then his proud Steeds necke,
Befpake them thus: I thank you Countrimen:
And thus full doing, thus he past along.
*Dutch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the while?
Yecke. As in a Theater, the eyes of men
After a well grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Euen fo, or with more much contempt, mens eyes
Did scowle on Richard: no man cride, God save him:
No loyfull tongue gave him his welcome home,
But duft was throwne vnpon his Sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shooke off,
His face full combating with tears and smiles
(The badges of his griefe and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce haue melted,
And Barbarifme if felte haue pittied him.
But heauen hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calme contents.
To Bullingbrooke, are we foweone Subiects now,
Whole State, and Honor, I for aye allow.
Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Here comes my Sonne Aumerle.
Yor. Aumerle that was,
But that is loft, for being Richards Friend,
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now:
I am in Parliament plege for his truth,
And lafting feastie to the new-made King.
Dut. Welcome my sonne: who are the Violets now,
That cleared the green lea of the new-Spring?
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knowes, I had as lief be none, as one.
Yecke. Well, beare you well in this new-Spring of time
Leaff you be cropt before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? Hold thofe Ludes & Triumphs?
Aum. For ought I know my Lord, they do.
Yecke. You will be there I know.
Aum. If God preseru not, I purpose fo.
Yor. What Seale is that that hangs without thy bosom?
Yor. As I thought, hee was a false, not a true.
Yes, look'st thou pale? Let me fee the Writing.
Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.
Yecke. No manner then who sees it,
I will be satisfied, let me fee the Writing.
Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence.
Who by some reasons I would not have seene.
Yecke. Which for some reasons sir, I mean to see:
I feare, I feare.
Dut. What should you feare?
'Tis nothing but some bond, that he is enter'd into
For gay apparell, against the Triumph.
Yecke. Bound to him selfe? What doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

For there (they say) he dayly doth frequent, With unrestrained looks Companions, Euen such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes, And rob our Watch, and beate our passengers, Which he, yong wanton, and effeminate Boy Takes on the point of Honor, to support So disfloute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two dayes since I saw the Prince, And told him of thesee Triumphes held at Oxford.

Bul. And what said the Gallant?

Per. His answere was: he would vnto the Stewes, And from the common it creature plucke a Gloue And were it as a favour, and with that He would vnohorfe the luslifft Challenger.

Bul. As disfloute as desperate, yet through both, I fee some sparkes of better hope: which elder dayes May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bul. What meanes our Cofin, that hee fares And lookes so wildly?

Aum. God faue your Grace. I do besome your Malefty To have some conference with your Grace alone.

Bul. Withdraw your felues, and leave vs here alone: What is the matter with our Cofin now?

Aum. For euer may my knees grow to the earth, My tongue cleawe to my roote within my mouth, Vnlesse a Pardon, ere I rife, or speake.

Bul. Intended, or committet was this fault? If on the first, how heinous ere if bee, To win thy after loute, I pardon thee. Aum. Then glue me leave, that I may turne the key, That no man enter, till my tale me done.

Bul. Haue thy deere.

Yor. My Liege beware, looke to thy selfe, Thou haft a Traitor in thy presence there.

Bul. Villaine, lie make thee safe.

Aum. Stay thy reuengefull hand, thou haft no cause to feare.

Yorke. Open the doore, secure foole-hardy King: Shall I for loue (speake treston to thy face) Open the doore, or I will broke it open.

Enter Yorke.

Bul. What is the matter (Vnkle) speake, recover breath, Tell vs how neere is danger, That we may arme vs to encounter it.

Yor. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know The reaoun that my halfe forbids me thow.

Aum. Remember as thou read'st, thy promise part: I do repent me, reate not my name there, My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Yor. It was (villaine) ere thy hand did fet it downe. I tore it from the Traitors bofore, King. Feare, and not Loue, begets his penitence; Forget to pity him, leaft thy pitty prowe A Serpent, that will dinge thee to the heart.

Bul. Oh heinous, strong, and bold Conspiracie, O lousy Father of a treacherous Sonne: Thou shearne, immaculate, and fliuer fountain, From whence this fireame, through muddy paffages Hath had his current, and defli'd himselfe. Thy overflow of good, conquers to bad, And thy abundant goodneffe shall excufe This deadly blot, in thy digreffing fonne.

Yorke. So shall my Vertue be his Vices bawd, And he shall spand mine Honour, with his Shame;

As thrilteffe Sonnes, their scraping Fathers Gold, Mine honor liues, when his difhonor dies, Or my sham'd life, in his difhonor lie: Thou kill'st me in his life, giving him breath, The Traitor liues, the true man's put to death.

Dutcheffe within.

Dut. What hooa (my Liege) for heavenes like let me in.

Bul. What thril-voic'd Suppliant, makes this eager cry?

Dut. A woman, and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I. Speake with me, pitty me, open the dore, A Beggar begets, that neuer beg'd before.

Bul. Our Scene is alter'd from a serious thing, And now chang'd to the Begger, and the King. My dangerous Cofin, let your Mother in, I know she's come, to pray for your foule fin.

Tyrke. If thou do pardon, whofore pray, More finnes for this forguieneffe, prosper may. This fester'd loynte cut off, the reft refted found, This let alone, will all the refc confound.

Enter Dutcheffe.

Dut. O King, beleue not this hard-hearted man, Love, louting not it selfe, none other can.

Tor. Thou frantick woman, what doft thou make here, Shall thy old dugges, once more a Traitor reare?

Dut. Sweet Yorke be patient, heare me gentle Liege.

Bul. Rife vp good Aunt.

Dut. Not yet, I thee beseech.

For euer will I kneele vp my knees, And neuer fee day, that the happy feet, Till thou give joy: vntill thou bid me joy.

By pardoning Rutland, my tranfgreffing Boy.

Aum. Vnto my mothers prayers, I bend my knee. Tyrke. Against them both, my true ioynets bended be.

Dut. Pleades he in earneft? Looke vpon his Face, His eyes do drop no teares: his prayers are in left:

His words come from his mouth, ours from our breft.

He prays but faintly, and would be denide, We prays with heart, and foule, and all beide: His weary ioynets would gladly rife, I know.

Our knees shall kneele, till to the ground they grow:

His prayers are full of falfe hypocrifie,

Ours of true zeale, and deepe integritie:

Our prayers do out-pray his, then let them haue That mercy, which true prayers ought to haue.

Bul. Good Aunt stand vp.

And if I were thy Nurfe, thy tongue to teach, Pardon should be the firft word of thy speach. I neuer long'd to heare a word till now: Say Pardon (King), let pitty teach thee how.

The word is short: but no fo short as sweet, No word like Pardon, for Kings mouth's fo meet.

Tyrke. Speake it in French (King) say Pardon ne moy.

Dut. Doth thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy? Ah my bowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord, That set'st the word it selfe, against the word.

Speake Pardon, as 'tis currant in our Land, The chopping French we do not vnderstand, Thine eye begins to speake, feit thy tongue there, Or in thy pittous heart, plant thou thine ear.

That hearing how our plaunts and prayer do peace, Pitty may move thee, Pardon to rehearse.

Bul. Good Aunt, stand vp.

Dut. I do not sue to stand, Pardon is all the foule I haue in hand.

Bul.
The Life and Death of Richard the Second.

Bul. I pardon him, as heaven shall pardon mee.
Dut. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:
Yet am I ficek for feare: Speake it againe,
Twice faying Pardon, doth not pardon twaine,
But makes one pardon strong.
Bul. I pardon him with all my hart.
Dut. A God on earth thou art.
Bul. But for our truly brother-in-Law, the Abbot,
With all the rest of that conforted crew,
Defftruclon straignt shal dogge them at the heales:
Good Vnckle helpe to order feuerall powres
To Oxford, or where e're thefe Traitors are:
They shall not live within this world I fware,
But I will have them, if I once know where.
Vnckle farewell, and Coftan adieu.
Your mother well hath praid, and proue you true.
Dut. Come my old fon, I pray heauen make thee new.

Enter Eton and Servants.

Exit. Didst thou not marke the King what words hee spake?
Hauet I no friend will rid me of this luing feare:
Was it not fo?
Ser. Thefe were his very words.
Ex. Haue I no Friend?(quot he:) he spake it twice,
And wrg'd it twice together, did he not?
Ser. He did.
Ex. And speaking it, he wiftly look'd on me,
As who should say, I would thou wer't the man
That would diuorange this terror from my heart,
Meaning the King at Pomfret: Come, let's goe;
I am the Kings Friend, and will rid his Foe.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I haue bin fludying, how to compare
This Prison where I lye, vnto the World:
And for becaufe the world is populous,
And heere is not a Creature, but my felfe,
I cannot do it: yet Ie hammer't out.
My Braine, Ie proue the Female to my Soule,
My Soule, the Father: and thefe two beget
A generation of flill breeding Thoughts;
And their fame Thoughts, people this Little World
In humors, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better fort,
As thoughts of things Duine, are intermixt
With fcruples, and do fet the Faith it felle
Againft the Faiths thus: Come little ones: & then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camell
To thred the poterne of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vaine weake naites
May teare a paffage through the Flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prifon walles:
And for they cannot, dye in theyr owne pride.
Thoughts tending to Content, flatter themfelves,
That they are not the firt of Fortunes flaues,
Nor shall not be the laft. Like filly Beggars,
Who fitting in the Stockes, refughe their fame
That many hau, and others muft fit there;
And in this Thought, they finde a kind of eafe,

Bearing their owne misfortune on the backe
Of fuch as hau before indur'd the like.
Thus play I in one Prifon, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King;
Then Trefaun makes me with my felle a Beggar,
And 10 I am. Then crudhing penurie,
Periwales me, I was better when a King:
Then am I King'd againe:and by and by,
Thinkke that I am vn-King'd by Bullingbrooke,
And ftraight am nothing. But what ere I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing fhall be pleas'd, till he be eau'd
With being nothing. Muficke do I heare?
Ha, ha!keepe time: How fowre sweet Muficke is,
When Time is broke, and no Proportion kept?
So is it in the Muficke of mens liues:
And heere haue I the daintineffe of care,
To heare time broke in a disorder'd string:
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an care to hear my true Time broke.
I wafted Time, and now doth Time waste me:
For now hath Time made me his numbring clocke;
My Thoughts, are minutes: and with Sighes they laire,
Their watches on vnto mine eyes, the outward Watch,
Whereeto my finger, like a Dials point,
Is pointing still, in cleaning them from teares.
Now fir, the found that tels what houre it is,
Are clamorous groanes, that strike vpon my heart,
Which is the bell: fo Sighes, and Teares, and Groanes,
Shew Minutes, Hours, andTimes: but my Time
Runs paffing on, in Bullingbrooke proud joy,
While I fland foolling here, his jacke o'th'Clocke.
This Muficke mads me, let it found no more,
For though it haue holpe madmen to their wits,
In me it feme, it will make wife-men mad:
Yet bleffing on his heart that gives it me;
For 'tis a figne of loue, and love to Richard,
Is a strange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Grooms.

Groo. Haile Royall Prince.
Rich. Thankes Noble Peere,
The cheapeft of vs, is ten groatres too deere.
What art thou? And how com'th thou hither?
Where no man euer comes, but that fad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune line?
Groo. I was a poore Gromme of thy Stable (King)
When thou wer't King: who travelling towards Yorke,
With much ado, at length hauge gotten leaxe.
To looke vpon my (sometimes Royall) masters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets, that Coronation day,
When Bullingbrooke rode on Roane Barbary,
That horfe, that thou so often haft beftrid,
That horfe, that I fo carefully haue dreft.
Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me gentle Friend,
How went he vnder him?
Groo. So proudly, as if he had disflain'd the ground.
Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his bucke;
That lafe hath eate bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not fumble? Would he not fall downe
(Since Pride must have a fall) and breake the necke
Of that proud man, that did vfurpe his backe?
Forgiueness horfe: Why do I raile on thee,
Since thou creatst to be aw'd by man
Was't borne to bear? I was not made a horfe,
And yet I bear a burden like an Aflc,
Spur-gall’d, and tyr’d by launcing Bullingbrookes.
Enter Kester and a Djab.
Keep. Fellow, give place, heere is no longer say.
Ricb. If thou love me, ’tis time thou wer’t away.
Groo. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.
Exit.
Keep. My Lord, wilt please you to fall too?
Ricb. Taste of it first, as thou wer’t wont to doo.
Keep. My Lord I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from th’King, commands the contrary.
Ricb. The diuell take Heart! of Lancaster, and thee;
Patience is flate, and I am weary of it.
Keep. Help, help, help, help.

Enter Exton and Seruants.
Ri. How now! what means Death in this rude assault?
Villaine, thine owne hand yieldst thy deaths instrumet,
Go thou and fill another room in hell.

Exton strikes him downe.
That hand shall burne in never-quenching fire,
That flaggiers thus my perfon.
Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood,斯坦’d the Kings own land.
Mount, mount my foule, thy face is vp on high,
Whil’s’t my groffe flesh sinks downward, heere to dye.
Exton. As full of Valour, as of Royall blood,
Both haue I spilt: Oh would the deed were good.
For now the diuell, that told me I did well,
Sayes, that this deede is chronicled in hell.
This dead King to the liuing King Ile beare,
Take hence the rest, and give them buriall heere.

Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrooke, York, and other Lords & attendants.

Bal. Kinde Vnkle Yorke, the latest newes we heare,
Is that the Rebels haue conformed with fire
Our Townes of Cicerter in Gloucestershire,
But whether they be tane or flaine, we heare not.

Enter Northumberland.
Welcome my Lord: What is the newes?
Nor. First to thy Sacred State, with I all happinesse:
The next newes is, I haue to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appeare
At large discouerd in this paper heere.

But. We thank thee gentle Percy for thy paines,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gaines.

Enter Percy and Carlile.

Fris. My Lord, I haue from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Scoty,
Two of the dangerous comforted Traitors,
That fought at Oxford, thy dare outwray.

But. Thy paines Friswater shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy and Carlile.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Westminister,
With clog of Conscience, and soure Melancholy,
Hath yeelded vp his body to the graue:
But here is Carlile, living to abide
Thy Kingly doome, and sentence of his pride.

But. Carlile, this is your doome:
Choose out some secret place, some reuerend roome
More then thou haft, and with it joy thy life:
So as thou liu’st in peace, dye free from strife:
For though mine enemy, thou haft euer beene,
High sparkes of Honor in thee haue I seene.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried feare. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightieft of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Burdeaux, by me hither brought.

But. Exton, I thanke thee not, for thou haft wrought
A deede of Slaughter, with thy fatall hand,
Vpon my head, and all this famous Land.

Ex. From your owne mouth my Lord, did I this deed.

But. They loue not poyson, that do poyson neede,
Nor do I thee: though I did with him dead,
I hate the Murtherer, loue himmurthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor Princely fauour.

With Caine go wander through the shade of night,
And neuer shew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I protect my foule is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, to make me grow.
Come morn with me, for that I do lament,
And put on full Blacke incontinent:
Ie make a voyage to the Holy-land,
To waie this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after, grace my mourning heere,
In weeping after this vntimely Beere.

Exeunt.

FINIS.
The First Part of Henry the Fourth, with the Life and Death of HENRY Sirnamed HOT-SPVRRE.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Welfmerland, with others.

King. O shaken as we are, so wan with care, Find we a time for frighted Peace to pant, And breath shortwinded accents of new broils To be commenc'd in Stronds a-fare remote: No more the thirfty entrance of this Soile, Shall daube her lipps with her owne childrens blood: No more shall trenching Warre channell her fields, Nor bruife her Flowrets with the Armed hooves Of hostile paces. Tho' opposed eyes, Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heauen, All of one Nature, of one Substancie bred, Did lately meete in the intelline shoke, And furious close of chuiell Butcherie, Shall now in mutuall well-beeeming rankes March all one way, and be no more oppos'd Against Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies. The edge of Warre, like an ill-shafted knife, No more shall cut his Master. Therefore Friends, As farre as to the Sepulcher of Chrif't, Whose Souldier now vnder whose bleffed Crofe We are impreffed and ingag'd to fight, Forthwith a power of English shall we leue, Whose armes were moulded in their Mothers wombe, To chace these Pagans in those holy Fields, Ouer whofe Acres walk'd those bleffed feete Which fourteene hundred yeares ago were nail'd For our advantage on the bitter Crofe, But this our purpofe is a twelvemonth old, And bootleffe 'tis to tell you we will go: Therefore we meete not now. Then let me heare Of you my gentle Cousin Welfmerland, What yeelfermaine our Councell did decrea, In forwarding this deere expedience. Welf. My Liege: This halfe was hot in question, And many limits of the Charge fet downe But yeelfermaine: when all arthwart there came A Poft from Wales, laden with heavy News; Whose worst was, That the Noble Mortimer, Leading the men of Herefordhife to fight Against the irregular and wilde Glendower, Was by the rude hands of that Welfman taken, And a thousand of his people butchered:

Vpon whose dead corpes there was fuch misufe, Such beaftly, flameleffe transformation, By thofe Welfwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or fpoken of. King. It feemes then, that the tidings of this broyle, Brake off our businesse for the Holy land. Welf. This matcht with other like, my gracious Lord, Farre more vneuen and vnwelcome News Came from the North, and thus it did report: On Holy-roode day, the gallant Hotspurre there, Young Harry Percy, and braue Archibald, That euer-valiant and approoued Scot, At Holmeden met, where they did spend A fad and bloody houre: As by discharge of their Artillerie, And shape of likely-hood the newes was told: For he that brought them, in the very heate And pride of their contention, did take horfe, Vncertaine of the issue any way. King. Heere is a deere and true indutribus friend, Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horfe, Strain'd with the variation of each foyle, Betwixt that Holmedon, and this Seat of ours: And he hath brought vs smooth and welcomes newes. The Earle of Douglass is discomfited, Ten thousand bould Scots, two and twenty Knights Balk'd in their owne blood did Sir Walter fee. On Holmedon Plains. Of Prisoners, Hotspurre tooke Mordake Earl of Fife, and eldeft fonne To beaten Douglas, and the Earle of Ariboll, Of Mury, Angus, and Menteith. And is not this an honourable foyle? A gallant prize? Ha Cousin, is it not? Infaith it is. Welf. A Conquest for a Prince to boast of. King. Yea, there thou mak'st me fad, & mak'st me fin, In envy, that my Lord Northumberland Should be the Father of fo bleft a Sonne: A Sonne, who is the Theame of Honors tongue; Among't a Groue, the very straighteft Plant, Who is sweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride: Whilft I by looking on the praffe of him, See Ryot and Difhonour flaine the brow Of my yong Harry. O that it could be prou'd, That some Night-tripping-Faiery, had exchang'd In Cradle-clothes, our Children where they lay, And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet:
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine: But let him from my thoughts. What think you Coze Of this young Pericles pride? The Prisoners Which he in this adventure hath surpriz'd, To his owne vfe he keeps, and fends me word I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife.

Wft. This is his Vnklees teaching. This is Worcester Malevolent to you in all Apects: Which makes him prune himfelfe, and brifte vp The creft of Youth against your Dignity.

King. But I have fent for him to anfwer this: And for this caufe a-while we muft negleéft Our holy purpofe to Jerusalem.

Cofin, on Wednesday next, our Courfe we will hold At Windfor, and to informe the Lords: But come your felfe with speed to vs againe, For more is to be faid, and to be done, Then out of anger can be vterted.

Wft. I will my Liege.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir John Falstaff, and Points.

Fal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Ld? Prince. Thou art fo fat-witted with drinking of olde Sacke, and vnbuttoning thee after Supper, and fleeping uppon Benches in the afternoon, that thou haft forgotten to demand that truely, which thou wouldeft truly know. What a diuell haft thou to do with the time of the day? vnfounte hours were cups of Sacke, and minutes Capons, and clockes the tongues of Bawdes, and dialls the fignes of Leaping-houfes, and the bleffed Sunne himfelfe a faire hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffata: I fee no reafon, why thou shouldeft bee fo superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you come neere me now Hal, for we that take Purfes, go by the Moone and feuen Starres, and not by Phreas hee, that wand'reing Knight fo faire. And I prythee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God faue thy Grace, Maiefly I should say, for Grace thou wilt haue none.

Prin. What, none? Fal. No, not fo much as will ferue to be Prologue to an Egge and Butter.

Prin. Well, how then? Come roundly, roundly!

Fal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not vs that are Squires of the Nights bodie, bee call'd Theeues of the Dayses beautie. Let vs be Dianez Forrefters, Gentlemens of the Shade, Minions of the Moone; and let men fay, we be men of good Gouernment, being gouerned as the Sea is, by our noble and chafte miftries the Moone, vnder whole countenance we feeale.

Prin. Thou fay'ft well, and it holds well too: for the fortune of vs that are the Moones men, doeth ebe and flowe like the Sea, beeing gouerned as the Sea is, by the Moone; as for proofs. Now a Purfe of Gold moft refructely snatch'd on Monday night, and moft difficultly fpent on Tuesday Morning; got with fweares, Lay by; and fpent with crying, Bring in: now, in as low an ebe as the foot of the Ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the Galloues.

Fal. Thou fay'ft true Ld: and is not my Hoftelde of the Tauerne a moft sweet Wench?

Prin. As is the hony, my old Ld of the Catle: and is not a Buffe Ierkin a moft sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now? how now mad Wagge? What in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a plague haue I to doe with a Buffe-Ierkin?

Prin. Why, what a poxe haue I to doe with my Hoftel of the Tauerne? Fal. Well, thou haft call'd her to a reck'ning many a time and oft.

Prin. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part? Fal. No, Ile gue thee thy due, thou haft payd al there.

Prin. Yea and elsewhere, fo farre as my Coine would vretch, and where it would not, I haue va'd my credit.

Fal. Yea, and fo va'd it, that was it heere apparant, that thou art Heire apparant. But I prythee sweet Wag, shall there be Galloues flanding in England when thou art King: and resolution thouf'f as it is, with the ruftle curbe of old Father Anticke the Law? Doe not thou when thou art a King, hang a Theeue.

Prin. No, thou shalt. Fal. Shall I P O rare! Ile be a braue Judge.

Prin. Thou judgft falfely already. I meane, thou fhalt haue the haging of the Theeues, and fo become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well: and in some fort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell you.

Prin. For obtaining of fuites? Fal. Yea, for obtaining of fuites, whereof the Hangman hath no leane Wardrobe. I am as Melancholly as a Gyb-Cat, or a lugg'd Bear.

Prin. Or an old Lyon, or a Louen Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prin. What fay'ft thou to a Hare, or the Melancholly of Moore-Ditch?

Fal. Thou haft the moft vnfaoury fmines, and art indeed the moft comparativfe raifeall sweet yong Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity, I wold thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good names were to be bought: an olde Lord of the Courfe Councill rated me the other day in the freet about you fir; but I mark'd him not, and yet hee talk'd very vffyly, but I regarded him not, and yet he talkt vffyly, and in the freet too.

Prin. Thou didft well: for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou haft damnable iteration, and art indeeable able to corrupt a Saint. Thou haft done much harme vn to me Hal, God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal, I knew nothing: and now I am (if a man should speake truly) little better then one of the wicked. I must give ouer this life, and I will give it ouer: and I do not, I am a Villaine. Ile be damn'd for never a Kings fonne in Chriftendome.

Prin. Where fhall we take a purfe to morrow, Jacke? Fal. Where thou wilt Ld, Ile make one: and I doe not, call me Villaine, and baffe me.

Prin. I fee a good amende ment of life in thee: From Praying, to Purfe-taking.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my Vocation Hal: 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Points. Now fhall wee know if Gods hill haue fet a Watch. O, if men were to be faued by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the moft omnipotent Villaine, that euer cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow Ned,
Pains. Good morrow sweet Hal. What sies Mon-
Ro. fieur Remorse? What sies Sir John Sacke and Sugar:
true bred Cowards as euer turn'd backe and for the third
if he fight longer then he sees reason, Ile forwarr Armes.
The vertue of this left will be, the incomprehensible sies that this fat Rogue will tell vs, when we meete at Supper:
how thirty at left he fought with, what Wardes, what blows, what extremities he endur'd and in the reprofe of this, sies the left.

Pains. Well, Ile goe with thee, proude vs all things necessary, and meete me to morrow night in Eaffcheape, there Ile sup. Farewell.

Pyes. Farewell, my Lord.

Exit Points.

Pains. I know you all, and will a-while vphold
The vnyask'd humor of your idlenes.
Yet herein will I imitate the Sunne,
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To fmoother vp his Beauty from the world,
That when he pleafe againe to be himselfe,
Being wanted, he may be more wondered at,
By breaking through the foule and vgly mists
Of vapours, that did feme to tranfame him.
If all the yeare were playing holidays,
To fport, would be as tedious as to worke;
But when they feldom came, they would-for come,
And nothing pleafeth but rare accidents.
So when this loffe behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promifed;
By how much better then my word I am,
By fo much shall I falfifie mens hopes,
And like bright Mettall on a fullen ground:
My reformation glittering o're my fault,
Shall fhow more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Then that which hath no foyle to fett it off.
Ile fo offend, to make offence a skil,
Redempting time, when men thinke leaff I will.

Scana Tertia.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur,
Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath beene too cold and temperate,
Vnapt to thirre at these indigines,
And you have found me; for accordingly,
You tread vpun my patience: But be fure,
I will from henceforth rather be my Selfe,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, then my condition
Which hath beene smooth as Oyle, soft as yong Downe,
And therefore loft that title of refped,
Which the proud foule ne're payes, but to the proud.
Wor. Our houfe (my Soueraigne Liege) little deferves
The scourge of greatneffe to be vfed on it,
And that fame greatneffe too, which our owne hands
Have holpe to make fo portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester get thee gone: for I do fee
Danger and disobedience in thin eye.
O fin, your prefence is too bold and peremptory,
And Malefiti might never yet endure
The moody Frontier of a feruant brow,
You have good leave to leave vs: When we need
Your vif and counfelf, we fhall fend for you.
You were about to fpake.

Norb. Yea, my good Lord.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

51

No: on the barren Mountaine let him flerue:
For I shall never hold that man my Friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one peny cost
To ranfome home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revoluted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Soueraigne Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to presume that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all those Wounds,
Thofe mouthed Wounds, which valiantly he tooke,
When on the gentle Seuernes fiedgie banke,
In fingle Opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the beft part of an houre
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink
Upon agreement, of swift Seuernes flood;
Who then affhighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his criffe-head in the hollow banke,
Blood-trained with thefe Valiant Combatants.
Neuer did safe and rotten Policy
Colour her working with fuch deadly wounds;
Nor neuer could the Noble Mortimer
Receive fo many, and all willingly:
Then let him not be fland red with Revolt.

King. Thou dost help him Percy, thou doft bely him;
He neuer did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee, he durft as well have met the diuell alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not aham'd? But Sirrah, henceforth
Let me not heare you speake of Mortimer.
Send me your Prifoners with the speediest meane,
Or you shall heare in fuch a kinde from me
As will diſpleafe ye. My Lord Northumberland,
We Licenfe your departure with your fonne,
Send vs your Prifoners, or you'le hear of it.

Exit King.

Hot. And if the diuell come and roare for them
I will not fend them. I will after straight
And tell him fo: for I will cafe my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head.

Nor. What? drunke with choller? stay & paufe awhile,
Heere comes your Vnkle, Enter Worcefter.

Hot. Speake of Mortimer?
Yes, I will speake of him, and let my foule
Want mercy, if I do not lyone with him.
In his behalf, Ile empty all thefe Vaines,
And flie my deere blood drop by drop i' th duft,
But I will lift the downfall Mortimer.
As high i' th Ayre, as this Vnthankfull King,
As this Ingrate and Cankred Bullingbrooke.

Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad
Wor. Who tyrooke this heate vp after I was gone?
Hot. He will (forfooth)haue all my Prifoners:
And when I vrg'd the ranfome once againe
Of my Wives Brother, then his cheeke look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling eu'n at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?
Nor. He was: I heard the Proclamation,
And then it was, when this unhappy King
(Whofe wrongs in vs God pardon) did fet forth
Vpon his Iriſh Expedition:
From whence he intercepted, did returne
To be depos'd, and shortly murthered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the worlds wide mouth Lieu scandaliz'd, and fouly spoken of.

Hot.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Ile keepe them, by this Hand.

War. You start away, and lend no care vnto my purposes.

Those Prifoners you shall keepe.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:

He faid, he would not ranke Mortimer: Forbad my tongue to speake of Mortimer.

But I will finde him when he lyes asleep, And in his care, Ile holla Mortimer.

Nay, Ile have a Starling shall be taught to speake Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,

To keepe his anger still in motion.

War. Hearre you Couin: a word.

Hot. All studie here I solemnly defie, Saue how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrooke, And that fame Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales. But that I thinke his Father loves him not, And would be glad he met with some mishance, I would have poynt'd him with a pot of Ale. War. Farewell Kinman: Ile talke to you When you are better temper'd to attend.

Ner. Why what a Wafe-tongued & impatient foolo Art thou, to brake into this Womans mood, Tying thine care to no tongue but thine owne?

Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & scour'd with rods, Netled, and fng with Pifmires, when I heare Of this vile Politician Bullingbrook. In Richards time: What de'ye call the place? A plague vpon't, it is in Glouffershie: 'Twas, where the madcap Duke his Vncle kept, His Vncle Vrke, where I firt bowd my knee Vnto this King of Smiles, this Bullingbrook:

When you and he came backe from Rauenpurgh.

Ner. At Barkley Cate.

Hot. You say true:

Why what a cadle deale of curtesie, This fawning Grey-hound then did proffer me. Looke when his infant Fortune came to age, And gentle Harry Percy, and kinde Cousin: O, the Drell taketh such Couseners, God forgive me, Good Vncle tell your tale, for I have done.

War. Nay, if you have not, too' againe,

Weel' say your letters.

Hot. I have done in sworthe. War. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners. Deliver them vp without their ranke fraight, And make the Douglas fonne your only meane For powres in Scotland: which for divers reasons Which I shall fnd you written, be affur'd Will easily be granted you, my Lord. Your Sonne in Scotland being thus impli'd, Shall secretly into the boforme creepe Of that fame noble Prelate, well belou'd, The Archbibop.

Hot. Of Yorke, is't not?

War. True, who bears hard His Brothers death at Brifhow, the Lord Scoope. I speake not this in effication, As what I thinke might be, but what I know Is ruminated, plotted, and set downe, And oneely days but to behold the face Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I fineth it:

Vpon my life, it will do wond'rous well.

Ner. Before the game's a-foot, thou still let't slip. Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a Noble plot,
And then the power of Scotland, and of Yorke
To loyne with Mortimer, Ha.
Wor. And so they shall.
Her. In faith it is exceedingly well aym’d.
Wor. And ’tis no little reaçon bids vs speed,
To take our heads, by raising of a Head:
For, beare our felues as euén as we can,
The King will alwaies thinke him in our debt,
And think, we thinke our selues unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay vs home.
And fee already, how he doth beginne
To make vs frengers to his lookes of loue.
Her. He does, he does; we’l be reueng’d on him.
Wor. Cufon, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, which will be sodainly:
Ile steale to Glendower, and loe, Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our powres at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meete,
To beare our fortunes in our owne strong armes,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.
Nor. Farewell good Brother, we shall thrive, I truut.
Her. Vncline, advie: O let the houres be short,
Till fields, and blowes, and grones, applaud our fport.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lanterne in his hand.
1. Car. Heigh-ho, an’t be not foure by the day, Ile be hang’d. Charles waine is ouer the new Chimney, and yet our houfe not packt. What Ofler?
Off. Anon, anon.
1. Car. I prethee Tom, beate Cuts Saddle, put a few Flockes in the point: the poore lade is wrung in the wthers, out of all ceffe.
Enter another Carrier.
2. Car. Peace and Beanes are as danke here as a Dog, and this is the next way to give poore lades the Bottes: This houfe is turned vpedef downe since Robbie the Ofler dyed.
1. Car. Poore fellow neuer ioy’d since the price of oats rofe, it was the death of him.
2. Car. I thinke this is the most villanous house in al London rode for Fless: I am flung like a Trench.
1. Car. Like a Trench? There is ne’re a King in Chriften dome, could be better bit, then I haue bene since the first Cocke.
2. Car. Why, you will allow vs ne’re a Jourden, and then we leake in your Chimney: and your Chamber-lye breeds Fless like a Loach.
1. Car. What Ofler, come away, and be hang’d: come away,
2. Car. I haue a Gammon of Bacon, and two razez of Ginger, to be delivered as farre as Charing-croffe.
1. Car. The Turkies in my Pannier are quite starved. What Ofler? A plague on thee, haft thou neuer an eye in thy head? Can’t it no heare? And ‘twere not as good a deed as drinke, to break the pate of thee, I am a very Villaine. Come and be hang’d, haft no faith in thee?
Enter Gads-bill.
Gad. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorne to see my Gelding in the fable.
Gad. I prethee lend me thine.
2. Car. I, when, can’t tell? Lend mee thy Lanthorne (quoth-a) marry Ile fee thee hang’d first.
Gad. Sirra Carrier: What time do you mean to come to London?
2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Mugges, we’ll call vp the Gentleman, they will along with company, for they haue great charge.
Exeunt.

Enter Chamberlaine.

Gad. What ho, Chamberlaine?
Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purfe.
Gad. That’s even as faire, as at hand quoth the Chamberlaine: For thou varest no more from picking of Pur-fes, than giving direction, doth from labouring. Thou lay’t the plot, how.
Cham. Good morrow Master Gad-Hill, it holds currant that I told you yeftermight. There’s a Franklin in the wilde of Kent, hath bought three hundred Markes with him in Gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at Supper; a kinde of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knows what) they are vp already, and call for Eggs and Butter. They will away presently.
Gad. Sirra, if they meete not with S. Nicholas Clarks, Ile give thee this necke.
Cham. No, Ile none of it: I prethee keep that for the Hangman, for I know thou worshipst S. Nicholas as truely as a man of faillhood may.
Gad. What talkeft thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, Ile make a fat payre of Gallowes. For, if I hang, old Sir Iohn hangs with me, and thou know’st hee’s no Starueling. Tut, there are other Troians that I dream’t not of, the which (for sport free) are content to doe the Profession some grace; that would (if matters shou’d bee looke’d into) for their owne Credite false, make all Whole. I am ioyned with no Foot-land-Rakers, no Long-flaffe six-penny strikers; none of these mad Muftacho-purple-hud-Maltwormes, but with Nobility, and Tranquilitie; Bourgomasters, and great Oneyes, such as can holde in, such as will drinke fooner then speake; and speake fooner then drinke, and drinke fooner then pray: and yet I lye, for they pray continually unto their Saint the Common-wealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on herfor they ride vp & downe on her, and make hir their Bootes.
Cham. What, the Commonwealthe their Bootes? Will she hold out water in foule way?
Gad. She will, she will; Iuffice hath liquor’d her. We steale as in a Caffle,cockfure: we haue the receit of Fern-seede, we walke inuincible.
Cham. Nay, I thinke rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then to the Fernfeed, for your walking inuincible.
Gad. Give me thy hand.
Thou shalt have a flare in our purpose,
As I am a true man.
Cham. Nay, rather mee have it, as you are a falfe Thieve.
Gad. Goe too: Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the Ofler bring the Gelding out of the fable. Farewell, ye muddy Knaue.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince, Poynts, and Peto.

Poynts. Come shelter, shelter, I have removed Falstaff Horfe, and he frets like a gunt'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poynts, Poynts, and be hang'd Poynts.

Fal. What is Poynts. Ho!

Prin. He is walk'd vp to the top of the hill, Ile go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Theeue companies: that Rafcall hath removed my Horfe, and tied him I know not where. If I trauell but fooure foot by the squire further a foote, I shall breake my winde. Well, I doubt not but to dye a faire death for all this, if I fcape hanging for killing that Rogue, I have forsworne his company hourley any time this two and twenty years, & yet I am bewitch'd with the Rogues company. If the Rafcall have not giv'n me medicines to make me lose him, Ile behang'd it could not be els: I have drunke Medicines, Poynts, Hal, a Plague vpon you both. Bardolph, Peto: Ile fatue ere I rob a foote further. And 'twere not as good a deede as to drinke, to turne True-man, and to leave thefe Rogues, I am the verie Varlet that euer chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of vneue ground, is threefore & ten miles aboft with me: and the flone-hearted Villaines knowe it well enough. A plague vpon't, when Theeues cannot be true one to another.

They Whistle.

Whew: a plagelight vpon you all. Giue my Horfe you Rogues: giue me my Horfe, and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat guttes, lye downe, lay thine eare clofe to the ground, and lift if thou can hear the tread of Travellers.

Fal. Have you any Leauers to lift me vp again being downe? Ile not beare mine owne flesh so far afoot again, for all the coine in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plagelane ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou ly'st, thou art not colted, thou art vncoled. Fal. I preth good Prince Hal, help me to my horfe, good Kings fonne.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Offler?

Fal. Go hang thy felfe in thine owne heire-apparant-Garters: if I be tane, Ile pech for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sacke be my poyfon: when a left is fo forward, & a foote too, I hate it.

Enter Gads-bill.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I do againft my will.

Poin. O this our Setter, I know his voyce: Bardolph, what news? Bar. Cafe ye, cafe ye; on with your Vizards, there's mony of the Kings comming downe the hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie you rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tauern.

Gad. There's enough to make vs all.

Fal. To he hang'd.

Prin. You foure shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I, will walke lower; if they fcape from your encounter, then they light on vs.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob vs?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir Iobn Gaunt?

Fal. Indeed I am not Iobn of Gaunt your Grandfather; but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'll leaue that to the poore.

Poin. Sirra lacke, thy horfe flands behinde the hedg, when thou need'st him, there thou shalt finde him. Farewell, and fland faft.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I shoule be hang'd.

Poin. Ned, where are our difguifles?

Poin. Heere hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, fay I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come Neighbor: the boy shall leade our Horfes downe the hill: We'll walke a-foot a while, and eafe ourLegges.

Theeues. Stay.

Tra. Iefu bleffe vs.

Fal. Strike: down with them, cut the villains throats; a whorfon Caterpillars: Bacon-fed Knaues, they hate vs youth; downe with them, fleete them.

Tra. O, we are vndone, both we and ours for euer.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied knaues, are you vndone? No ye Fat Chaffes, I would your ftore were heere. On Bacons, on, what ye knaues? Yong men mutt liue, you are Grand Jurers, are ye? We'll lure ye iflih.

Here they rob them, and bind them. Enter the Prince and Poynts.

Prin. The Theeues have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the Theeues, and go merily to London, it would be argument for a Weeké, Laugheter for a Moneth, and a good left for euer.

Poynts. Stand close, I heare them comming.

Enter Theeues againe.

Fal. Come my Masters, let vs share, and then to horffe before day: and the Prince and Poynts bee not two arrand Cowards, there's no equity fliring. There's no moe vaure in that Poynte, than in a wilde Ducke.

Prin. Your money.

Poin. Villaines.

As they are flaring, the Prince and Poynts fit upon them. They all run away, leaving the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much eafe. Now merrily to Horfe: The Theeues are facetted, and poiffet with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned, Falstaff sweates to death, and Lards the leane earth as he walke along: were't not for laughing, I shoule pitty him.

Poin. How the Rogue roar'd.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotspur, John, reading a Letter.

But for mine owne part, my Lord, I could bee well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bare your houfe.
He could be contented: Why is he not then? in respect of the loue he beares our houfe. He fheues in this, he loues his owne Barne better then he loues our houfe. Let me fee some more. *The purpofe you undertake is dangerous. Why that's certaine: 'Tis dangerous to take a Colde, to fleepe, to drinke: but I tell you (my Lord foole) out of this Nettle, Danger; we plucke this Flower, Safety. The purpofe you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you have na ted uncertaine, the Time it fells unfortuned, and your whole Plow too light, for the counterpoize of so great an Opposition.
Say you fo, lay you fo: I fay vnto you againe, you are a shallow cowardly Hinde, and you Lye. What a lacke-braine is this? I protest, our plot is as good a plot as ever was laid; our Friend true and confiant: A good Plotte, good Friends, and full of expectation: An excellent plot, very good Friends. What a Frothy-spirited rogue is this? Why, my Lord of Yorke commendeth the plot, and the generall course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rafcall, I could braine him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Vnkle, and my Seife, Lord Edmund Mortimer, my Lord of Yorke, and Owen Glandour? Is there not besides, the Deneslas? Haue I not all their letters, to meete me in Armes by the ninth of the next Mon th? and are they not fome of them fet forward already? What a Pagan Rafcall is this? An infedell. Haue you not feen in very finceritie of Fearé and Cold heart, will he to the King, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could diuide my felfe, and go to buffets, for mowing such a dith of skims'd Milk with fo honourable an Action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will fet forwaards to night.

Enter ba Lady.

How now Kate, I must leave you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone? For what offence haue I this fortnight bin
A banid' woman from my Harris bed?
Tell me (sweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee
Thy faumacke,pleasure, and thy golden fleep? Why doft thou bend thine eyes vpon the earth?
And start fo often when thou fitt' alone?
Why haft thou loft the freth blood in thy cheekes?
And gien my Treasures and my righes of thee,
To thicke-ey'd muflng, and curft melancholly?
In my faint-flumbers, I by thee have watcht,
And heard thee murmure tales of Iron Warres:
Speake tearmes of manage to thy bounding Steed,
Cry courage to the field. And thou haft talk'd
Of Salles, and Retires; Trenches, Tent's,
Of Pallzaades, Frontiers, Parapets,
Of Baflilakes, of Canon, Culuerin,
Of Prifoners ranfome, and of Souldiers flaine,
And all the current of a heady fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath beene fo at Warre,
And thus hath fo befir'd thee in thy sleepe,
That beds of sweate hath flood vpon thy Brow,
Like bubbles in a late-distarbed Stramme;
And in thy face strange motions haue appear'd,
Such as we fee when men restraine their breath
On some great fodiaine haft. O what portents are these?
Some heaue buifieffe hath my Lord in hand,
And I muft know it: elle he lomes me not.
Hot. What ho; Is Williams with the Packet gone?
Sr. He is my Lord, an houre agoe.
Hot. Hath Butler brought those horfes fro the Sheriffe?
they cry hem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficent in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any Tinker in his owne Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou haft lost much honor, that thou wert not with me in this action: but sweet Ned, to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this penworth of Sugar, clapt even now into my hand by an under Skinker, one that never spake other English in his life, then Eight flillings and fix pence, and, You are welcome: with this thril addition, Anon, Anon fir, Score a Pint of Baffard in the Half Moone, or so. But Ned, to drive away time till Falstaff come, I prittyse doe thou stand in some by-roome, while I question my puny Drawer, to what end hee gave me the Sugar, and do never leave calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: step aside, and Ie shew thee a President.

Points. Francis.

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Pain. Francis.

Enter Drawer.

Frans. Anon, anon fir; looke downe into the Pomgarnet, Raffe.

Prince. Come hither Francis.

Franc. My Lord.

Prin. How long haue thou to ferue, Francis?

Franc. Forsooth five yeares, and as much as I can.

Pain. Francis.

Franc. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. Five yeares: Beriady a long Leafe for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, & shew it a faire paire of heelees, and run from it?

Franc. O Lord fir, Ile be sworne vpon all the Books in England,I could finde in my heart.

Pain. Francis.

Franc. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Franc. Let me see, about Michaelmas next I halfe——

Pain. Francis.

Franc. Anon fir, pray you faie a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay but harkke you Francis, for the Sugar thou gaueft me, twas a penworth, was't not?

Franc. O Lord fir, I would it had bene two.

Prin. I will glue thee for it a thousand pound: Ask me when thou wilt, and thou hafte haue it.

Pain. Francis.

Franc. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon Francis? No Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis, on thursday or indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Franc. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou rob this Leathern Jerkin, Chriftall button, Not-pated, Agat ring, Pucke flocking, Caddice garter, Smooth tongue, Spanifh pouch.

Franc. O Lord fir, who do you mean?

Prin. Why then your browne Baffard is your onely drinke: for looke you Francis, your white Canvas doublet will fullely in Barbary fir, it cannot come to so much.

Franc. What fir?

Pain. Francis.

Prin. Away you Rogue, doth thou hearre them call?

Here they bath call him, the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Winter.

Pint. What, stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Lookke to the Gueffs within: My Lord, old Sir John with halfe a dozen more, are at the doore: shall I let them in?

Pain. Let them alone awhile, and then open the doore.

Points.

Pain. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. Sirra, Falstaffe and the rest of the Theeues, are at the doore, hall we be merry?

Pain. As merrie as Crickets my Lad. But harkke yee, What cunning match haue you made with this left of the Drawer? Come, what's the ifue?

Prin. I am now of all humors, that haue shewed themselfes humorous, since the old daies of Goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this present twelue a clock at midnight. What's a clocke Francis?

Franc. Anon, anon fir.

Prin. That euer this Fellow shoulde have fewe words then a Parret, and yet the wonne of a Woman. His industry is vp-staires and down-staires, his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Parcer mind, the Hotspurre of the North, he that kills me some fime or seuen dozen of Scots at a Breakfast, washes his hands, and faies to his wife; Fie vpon this quiet life, I want worke. O my sweet Harry fayes fie, how many hath thou kill'd to day? Give my Roane horfe a drench (fayes hee) and anfwers, some fourteen, an hour after: a trife, a trife. I prethee call in Falstaffe, Ile play Percy, and that damn'd Brawne hall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Riuos fayes the drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falstaffe.

Pain. Welcome Jacke, where haft thou beene?

Fal. A plague of all Cowards I say, and a Vengeance too, marry and Amen. Give me a cup of Sacke Boy. Ere I leade this life long, Ile fowe nether flockes, and mend them too. A plague of all cowards. Give me a Cup of Sacke, Rogue. Is there no Vertue extant?

Prin. Didft thou neuer fee Titian kiffe a dith of Butter, pitifull hearted Titan that melted at the sweete Tale of the Sunne? If thou didft, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, heere's Lime in this Sacke toothere is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man yet a Coward is worke then a Cup of Sack with lime. A vilulous Coward, go thy wayes old Jackie, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot vpon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten Herring; there liues not three good men vnhang'd in England, & one of them is fat, and groves old, God helpes the while, a bad world I say. I would I were a Weaver, I could finge all manner of fongs. A plague of all Cowards, I say fill.

Pain. How now Wooflacke, what mntter you?

Fal. A Kings Sonne? If I do not beate thee out of thy Kingdome with a dager of Lath, and drive all thy Subiects afore thee like a flocke of Wilde-geete, Ile never weare haire on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horfon round man?what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a Coward? Anfwer me to that, and Poins there?

Prin. Ye fateh paunch, and yee call mee Coward, Ile flab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? Ile fee thee damned'rd ere I call the Coward; but I would give a thousand pound I could run as far as thou canst. You are straignt enough in the shoulders, you care not who fees your backe: Call you that that backing of your friends? a plague vpon such backing: give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunke to day.
The First Part of Henry the Fourth.

Prince. O Villaine, thy Lippes are scarce wip'd, since thou drunke't left.

Falst. All's one for that. He drinks.

A plague of all Cowards still, say I.

Prince. What's the matter?

Falst. What's the matter? here be foure of vs, haue tane a thousand pound this Morning.

Prince. Where is it? Jack? where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from vs, it is: a hundred vpon poore foure of vs.

Prince. What, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a Rogue, if I were not at halfe Sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I haue seaped by miracle. I am eight times thrusft through the Doublet, foure through the Hoope, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hackt like a Hand-faw, etceta figurum. I neuer dealt better since I was a man: all would not doe. A plague of all Cowards: let them speake; if they speake more or leffe then truth, they are villaines, and the fonn of darkneffe.

Prince. Speake first, how was it?

Gad. We foure fet vpon some dozen.

Falst. Sixteene, at leaff, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Pet. No, no, they were not bound.

Falst. You Rogue, they were bound, euery man of them, or I am a lew elfe, an Ebrew Jew.

Gad. As we were vairing, some fixe or foure freth men fet vpon vs.

Falst. And vnbound the reft, and then came in the other.

Prince. What, fought vee with them all?

Falst. All? I know not what vee call all: but if I fought not with fiftie of them, I am a bunch of Radifh: if there were not two or three and fiftie vpon poore olde Jack, then am I no two-leg'd Creation.

Pain. Pray Heauen, you haue not murthered some of them.

Falst. Nay, that's past praying for; I haue pepper'd two of them: Two I am sure I haue payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Sutes. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye, fpit in my face, call me Horfe: thou knoweft my olde word: here I lay, and thus I bore my point; foure Rogues in Buckrom let drusse at me.

Prince. What, foure? thou say'dst but two, eu'en now.

Falst. Youre Hal, I told thee foure.

Pain. I, I, he faid foure.

Falst. These foure came all a-front, and mainly thrusft at me; I made no more adoe, but tooke all their feuen points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seuen? why there were but foure, eu'en now.

Falst. In Buckrom.

Pain. I, foure, in Buckrom Sutes.

Falst. Seuen, by thefe Hills, or I am a Villaine elfe.

Prince. Prethce let him alone, we shall haue more anon.

Falst. Doest thou heare me, Hal?

Prince. Land marke thee too, Jack.

Falst. Doe fo, for it is worth the lifting too: thefe nine in Buckrom, that I told thee of.

Prince. So, too more alreadie.

Falst. Their Points being broken.

Pain. Downe fell his Horfe.

Falst. Began to give me ground: but I followed me clofe, came in foot and hand, and with a thought, seuen of the seuen I pay'd.

Prince. O monftrous! seuen Buckrom men growne out of two?

Falst. But as the Deuill would haue it, three misbegotten Knaues, in Kendall Greene, came at my Back, and let drusse at me; for it was so darke, Hal, that thou couldst not see thee Hand.

Prince. Thefe Lyes are like the Father that begetts them, groffe as a Mountaine, open, palpable. Why thou Claybray'd Ghost, thou Knotty-pated Poele, thou Horfon obfence greatfull Tallow Catch.

Falst. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prince. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendall Greene, when it was fo darke, thou couldst not see thee Hand? Come, tell vs your reason: what say'thou to this?

Pain. Come, your reason Jack, your reason.

Falst. What, vpon compulsi? No: were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsi. Glue you a reason on compulsi? If Reafons were as plente as Blackberries, I would give no man a Reafon vpon compulsi.

Pain. Ile be no longer guiltie of this finne. This fanquine Coward, this Bed-presifter, this Horf-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Fles:

Prince. Well, breath a while, and then to'again: and when thou haft tyr'd thy fyle in base comparisions, heare me speake but thus.

Pain. Marke lacke.

Prince. We two, faue you foure fet on foure and bound them, and were Masters of their Wealth: mark now how a plaine Tale thall put you downe. Then did we two, fet on you foure, and with a word, outfa'd you from your prize, and haue it: yea, and can fhw you in the Houfe. And Falstaff, you caried your Guts away as nimblly, as with a Quicke dextertie, and roared for mercy, and fell raile and roar'd, as eu' I heard Bull-Calfe. What a Slave art thou, to hacke thy fword as thou haft done, and then fay it was in fight. What trick? what deceau? what starting hole canft thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparant Shame?

Pain. Come. Let's heare Jacke: What trickke haft thou now?

Fal. I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why heare ye my Masters, was it for to me the Heire apparent? Should I turne vpon the true Prince? Why, thou knoweft I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware Infinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Infinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Infinct: I shall thinke the better of my felfe, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant Lion, and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you haue the Mony. Ho, Ho, Ho, clap to the doores: watch to night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boyes, Harts of Gold, all the good Titles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we have a Play extempore.

Prince. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. A no more of that Hal, and thou loueft me.

Enter Hoft.

Hoft. My Lord, the Prince?
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Prin. So did he neuer the Sparrow.
Falst. Well, that Rascall hath good metall in him, hee will not runne.
Prin. Why, what a Rascall art thou then, to prayse him so for running?
Falst. A Horfe-backe (ye Cuckoe) but a foot hee will not budge a foot.
Prin. Yes Jacke, upon infinit.
Falst. I grant ye, upon infinit: Well, hee is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blew-Cappes more.
Worcestor is done away by Night: thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the Newes; you may buy Land now as cheape as flinking Mackrell.
Prin. Then tis like, if there come a hot Sunne, and this ciuall buffeting hold, we shall buy Maiden-heads as they buy Hob-nayles, by the Hundreds.
Falst. By the Maffe Lad, thou say'ft true, it is like wee shall haue good trading that way. But tell me Hal, art not thou horrible aftar'd? thou being Heire apparant, could the World pickte thee out three fuch Enemies againe, as that Fiend Dampflatt, that Spirit Percy, and that Deuell Glendower? Art not thou horrible afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it?
Prin. Not a whit: I lacke some of thy infinit.
Falst. Well, thou wilt be horrible chidde to morrow, when thou commetst to thy Father: if thou doe lume, praclife an answere.
Prin. Doe thou fand for my Father, and examine mee upon the particulars of my Life.
Falst. Shall I? content: This Chayre shall bee my State, this Dagger my Scepter, and this Cushion my Crowne.
Prin. Thy State is taken for a loyn'd-Stooles, thy Golden Scepter for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious rich Crowne, for a pitiful bald Crowne.
Falst. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee, now shall thou be moued. Give me a Cup of Sacke to make mine eyes looke reddre, that it may be thought I haue wept, for I must speake in passicon, and I will doe it in King Cambyses vaine.
Prin. Well, heere is my Legge.
Falst. And heere is my speach: stand aside Nobilitie.
Hoftlif. This is excellent spurt, yfaith.
Falst. Weepe not, sweet Queene, for trickling tears are vaine.
Hoftliff. O the Father, how hee holds his countenance?
Falst. For Gods sake Lords, conuey my truthfull Queen, For teares doe flop the stout-gates of her eyes.
Hoftliff. O rare, he doth it as like one of these harlotry Players, as euer I fee.
Falst. Peace good Pint-pot, peace good Tickle-braine.
Harry, I doe not onely maruell where thou spendest thy time; but also, how thou art accompanied: For though the Camomile, the more it is troden, the fatter it growes; yet Youth, the more it is wafted, the sooner it waere. Thou art my Sonne: I haue partly thy Mothers Word, partly my Opinion but chiefly, a villanous tricke of thine Eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether Lippe, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Sonne to mee, heere leyth the point: why, being Sonne to me, art thou fo poyneted at? Shall the bleffed Sonne of Heauen proue a Micher, and eate Black berries? a question not to bee askt. Shall the Sonne of England proue a Theefe, and take Purfes? a question to be askt. There is a thing, Harry, which thou haft often heard of, and it is knowne to many many in our Land, by the Name of Pitch: this Pitch (as ancient Writers doe report) doth defile; fo doth the company thou keepest: for Harry, now I doe not speake to thee in Drink, but in Teares; not in Pleasure, but in Paffion; not in Words onely, but in Woes also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Majestie?

Falst. A goodly portly man yfaith, and a corpulent, of a chearfull Looke, a pleasing Eye, and a moft noble Carriage, and as I thinke, his age some fiftie, or(bylady) inclining to threescore; and now I remember mee, his Name is Falstaff: if that man should be lwydy giuen, hee deceives mee; for Harry, I see Vertue in his Looke.

If then the Tree may be knowne by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptoriely I speake it, there is Vertue in that Falstaff: him keepe with, the reft banish. And tell mee now, thou naughtie Varlet, tell mee, where haft thou beene this moneth?

Prin. Doth thou speake like a King? doe thou stand for mee, and Ile play my Father.

Falst. Depoie me: if thou doest halfe so grauellie, so malicefully, both in word and matter, hang me vp by the heele for a Rabbet-fucker, or a Poulters Hare.

Prin. Well, heere I am fet.

Falst. And heere I stand: judge my Matters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from East-cheape.

Prin. The complaints I heare of thee, are grievous.

Falst. Yfaith, my Lord, they are false: Nay, Ile tickle ye for a mโรงแรม Prince.

Prin. Swearre thou, vngracious Boy? henceforth ne're looke on me: thou art violently carried away from Grace: there is a Deuill haunts thee, in the likenesse of a fat old Man; a Tunne of Man is thy Companions: Why do'th thou converse with that Trunke of Humors, that Boulding-Hutch of Beatlinifhes, that Sworne Parcell of Dropfies, that huge Bombard of Sacke, that fuff Cloake-bagge of Guts, that roifed Manning Tree Ox with the Pudding in his Belly, that reuerend Vice, that grey Iniquitie, that Father Rufian, that Vanitie in yeeres? wherein is he good, but to taffe Sacke, and drinke it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carue a Capon, and eat it? wherein in Cunningham, but in Craft? wherein Craftie, but in Viliemie? wherein Villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom meanes your Grace?

Prince. That villainous abominable mis-leader of Youth, Falstaffe, that old white-bearded Satan.

Falst. My Lords, the man I know.

Prince. I know thou doft.

Falst. But to say, I know more harme in him then in my felfe, were to fay more then I know. That hee is olde (the more the pittie) his white hayres doe witneffe it: but that hee is (fauing your reuerence) a Whore-mafter, that I vterly deny. If Sacke and Sugar bee a fault, Heauen helpe the Wicked: if to be olde and merry, to be a finne, then many an olde Hoafe that I know, is dam'd: if to be fat, be to be hatted, then Pharaons lame Kine are to be loued.

No, my good Lord, banifh Peo, banifh Bardolph, banifh Poins: but for sweete Lache Falstaffe, kinde Lache Falstaffe, true Lache Falstaffe, valiant Lache Falstaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as hee is olde Lache Falstaffe, banifh not him thy Harryes companie, banifh not him thy Harryes companie; banifh plump Lache, and banifh all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sherife, with a moft most monstrous Watch, is at the door.

Falst. Out you Rogue, play out the Play: I haue much to say in the behalfe of that Falstaffe.

Enter the Hoefeffe.

Hoefeffe. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falst. Heigh, heigh, the Deuill rides upon a Fiddle-ficke: what's the matter?

Hoefeffe. The Sherife and all the Watch are at the door: they are come to search the Houfe, shall I let them in?

Falst. Do'th thou hearre Hal, never call a true preece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art essentially made, without seeming fo.

Prince. And thou a natural Coward, without instinct.

Falst. I deny your Maior: if you will deny the Sherife, so if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing vp: I hope I shall as soon be wrangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Goe hide thee behinde the Arras, the reft walk vp above. Now my Mafters, for a true Face and good Conscience.

Falst. Both which I haue had: but their date is out, and therefore Ile hide me.

Enter Sherife and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Maister Sherife, what is your will with mee?

She. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certaine men vnto this house.

Prince. What men?

She. One of them is well knowne, my gracious Lord, a groffe fift man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prince. The man, I doe affure you, is not heere, For I my felfe at this time haue employ'd him: And Sherife, I will engage my word to thee, That I will by to morrow Dinner time, Send him to answere thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charg'd withall: And fo let me entreat you, leave the house.

She. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen Have in this Roberie loft three hundred Marke.

Prince. It may be fo: if he have robb'd these men, He shall be answerable: and so farewell.

She. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prince. I thinke it is good Morrow, is it not?

She. Indeede, my Lord, I thinke it be two a Clocke.

Exit. Prince. This oyl Raffall is knowne as well as Poules: goe call him forth.

Peto. Falstaffe? saft aifece behinde the Arras, and finorting like a Hore.

Prince. Harke, how hard he fetches breath: search his Pockets.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

He searcheth his Pockets, and findeth certaine Papers.

Prince. What hast thou found?
Peto. Nothing but Papers, my Lord.

Prince. Let's see, what be they? reade them.
Peto. Item, a Capon. Item, a Sacke, two Gallons. Item, Anchouses and Sacke after Supper. Item, Bread.

Prince. 0 monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this intolerable deale of Sacke? What there is else, keepe close, wee'll reade it at more advantage: there let him sleepe till day. Ile to the Court in the Morning: Wee must all to the Warres, and thy place shall be homo- rable. Ile procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a Match of Twelve-score. The Money shall be pay'd backe againe with advantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning: and goe good morrow Peto.
Peto. Good morrow, good my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspur, Worcyster, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are faire, the parties sure, And our induccion full of prosperus hope.

Hotsp. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower, Will you styd downe? And Vackle Worcyster; a plague vpon it, I haue forgot the Mappe.

Glen. No, here it is: Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspur: For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speake of you, His Cheekes looke pale, and with a rying figh, He wiltheth you in Hauean.

Hotsp. And you in Hell, as oft as heareth Owen Glen- dower spoke of.

Glen. I cannot blame him: At my Nautilus, The front of Hauean was full of ferie haipes, Of burning Creflets: and at my Birth, The frame and foundation of the Earth Shaked like a Coward.

Hotsp. Why fo it would haue done at the same seasion, if your Mothers Cat had but kitten'd, though your selfe had never beene borne.

Glen. I say the Earth did shake when I was borne.

Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my minde, If you suppose, as fearing you, it shooke.

Glen. The Heauens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.

Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shooke To see the Heauens on fire, And not in fear of your Nautilus.

Difeased Nature oftentimes breakes forth In strange eruptions; and the teeming Earth Is with a kinde of Collick pinch't and vex't, By the impropirion of varuly Winde Within her Wombe: which for enlargeth struing, Shakes the old Beldame Earth, and tombles downe Steeples, and moffe-grown Toweres. At your Birth, Our Grandam Earth, hauing this diftemperature, In passion shooke.

Glen. Cousin: of many men I do not beare thefe Croffings: Glue me leau.

To tell you once againe, that at my Birth The front of Heauen was full of ferie haipes, The Gostes ranne from the Mountains, and the Heards Were strangly clamorous to the frightened fields: These signes haue markeft me extraordinarie, And all the couries of my Life doe shew, I am not in the Roll of common men,

Where is the Luing, clipt in with the Sea, That chides the Bankes of England, Scotland, and Wales, Which calls me Pupill, or hath read to me? And bring him out, that is but Womans Sonne, Can trace me in the tedious ways of Art, And hold me pace in depe experiments.

Hotsp. I thinke there's no man speaks better Welsh: Ile to Dinner.

Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.

Glen. I can call Spirits from the vaddie Depee.

Hotsp. Why fo can I, or fo can any man:

But will they come, when you doe call for them?

Glen. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Deuil.

Hotsp. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Deuil, By telling truth. Tell truth, and shane the Deuil.

If thou haue power to rayle him, bring him hither,

And Ie be fowrne, I haue power to shame him hence.

Oh, while you live, tell truth, and shane the Deuil.

Mort. Come, come, no more of this vnprofitable Chat.

Glen. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrooke made head Against my Power: thrice from the Banks of Wye, And fandy-bottom'd Severne, have I pent him Bootleffe home, and Weather-beaten backe.

Hotsp. Home without Bootes, And in foule Weather too, How scapes he Agues in the Deuils name?

Glen. Come, here's the Mappe: Shall we wise diuide our Right, According to our three-fold order ta'ne?

Mort. The Arch-Deacon hath diuided it Into three Limits, very equally: England, from Trent, and Severne, hitherto, By South and East, is to my part affign'd: All Westward, Wales, beyond the Severne shore, And all the fertile Land within that bound, To Owen Glendower: And deare Cousse, to you The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent. And our Indentures Tripartite are drawne: Which being sealed enterchangeably, (A Buisine that this Night may execute) To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I, And my good Lord of Worcyster, will set forth, To meette your Father, and the Scottifh Power, As is appointed vs at Shrewsbury. My Father Glendower is not readie yet, Nor shall we neede his helpe thefe foureteene dayes: Within that space, you may haue drawne togethre Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.

Glen. A shorter time shall fend me to you, Lords: And in my Conduct shall your Ladies come, From whom you now must steale, and take no leave, For there will be a World of Water shed, Vpon the parting of your Wives and you.

Haf.b. Me thinks my Moity, North from Burton here,
In quantitate equals not one of yours:
See, how this Ruer comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the beet of all my Land,
A huge halfe Moone, a monfrous Cantle out.
Ile haue the Currant in this place damn’d vp,
And here the Smug and Siluer Trent shall runne,
In a new Channell, faire and evenly:
It shall not winde with such a deepe indent,
To rob me of so rich a Bottope here.

Glend. Not winde? it shall, it mut, you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but mark how he bears his course,
And runnes me vp, with like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the oppossed Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.

Worc. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side winne this Cape of Land,
And then he runnes straight and even.

Haf.b. Ile haue it fo, a little Charge will doe it.

Glend. Ile not haue it alter’d.

Haf.b. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Haf.b. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I,

Haf.b. Let me not vnderstand you then, speake it in Well.

Glend. I can speake English, Lord, as well as you:
For I was trayn’d vp in the English Court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harpe
Many an English Dittie, lovely well,
And gau the Tongue a helpefull Ornament;
A Vertue that was neuer seene in you.

Haf.b. Marry, and I am glad of it with all my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Then one of these fame Meeter Ballad-mongers:
I had rather hearre a Brazen Candlefick turn’d,
Or a dry Wheele grate on the Axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth nothing an edge,
Nothing so much, as mincing Poetrie as
’Tis like the forc’t gate of a shuffling Nagge.

Glend. Come, you shall haue Trent turn’d.

Haf.b. I doe not care: Ile giue thrice fo much Land
To any well-defering friend;
In the way of Bargaine, marke ye me,
Ile caull on the ninth part of a hayre.
Are the Indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glend. The Moone shines faire,
You may away by Night:
Ile hafte the Writer; and withall,
Break with your Wifes, of your departure hence:
I am afraid my Daughter will runne madde,
So much the dether on her Mortimer.

Exit.

Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you croffe my Father.

Haf.b. I cannot chuse; sometime he angera me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies;
And of a Dragon, and a finne-leffe Fift,
A clip-wing’d Griffin, and a moulen Rauen,
A couching Lyon, and a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble-skamble Stuffe,
As putes me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night, at least, nine howres,
In reckning up the feuerall Deuils Names,
That were his Lacqueyes:

I cry’d hum, and well, goe too,
But mark’d him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Harfe, a rayling Wife,
Worse then a smoakie Houfe. I had rather lie
With Cheese and Garlick in a Windmill farre,
Then feede on Cates, and haue him talke to me,
In any Summer-Houfe in Christendome.

Mort. In faith he was a worthy Gentleman,
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealements:
Vallant as a Lyon, and wondrous affable,
And as bountifull, as Mynes of India.
Shall I tell you, Cousin,
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbes himselfe, even of his naturall scope,
When you doe croffe his humor:’faith he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alue,
Might fo haue tempted him, as you have done,
Without the taste of danger, and reprofe:
But doe not vfe it oft, let me entreat you,

Worc. In faith, my Lord, you are too wilfull blame,
And since your comming hither, have done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience.
You must needs learne, Lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it shew Greatneffe, Courage, Blood,
And that’s the dearest grace it renders you;
Yet oftimes it doth present harsh Rage,
Defect of Manners, want of Governmert,
Pride, Hauightineffe, Opinion, and Difaine:
The leaft of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Lofeth mens hearts, and leaves behinde a flavne
Vpon the beautie of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Haf.b. Well, I am schoold:
Good-manners be your superf:
Heere come your Wives, and let vs take our leave.

Enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spight, that angers me,
My Wife can speake no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My Daughter weepes, shee’le not part with you,
Shee’le be a Soulier too, shee’le to the Warres.

Mort. Good Father tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy Shall follow in your Conduett speedily.

Glendower speakes to her in Welsh: and she answers him in the same.

Glend. Shee is desperate heere:
A peevish selfe-will’d Harlotry,
One that no perfwation can doe good vpon.

The Lady speakes in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Lookes: that pretty Welsh
Which thou poer’t down from thee swelling Heauens,
I am too perfect in: and but for flame,
In fuch a parley shoul I anfwere thee.

The Lady againe in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Kiffes, and thou mine,
And that’s a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a Truant, Loue,
Till I have learnt thy Language: for thy tongue

Makes
The Lady speaks again in Welsh.

Gld. Nay, if thou melt, then will the sunne madde.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give vs leave:
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must have some private conference:
But be neere at hand,
For wee shall presently have neede of you.

Exeunt Lords.

I know not whether Heauen will have it fo,
For some displeasing feruice I have done;
That in his secret Doomes, out of my Blood,
Hee le brede Reuenge, and a Scourge for me:
But thou do'ft in thy passages of Life,
Make me believer, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of heauen
To punish my Mistreadings. Tell me eile,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poore, such bare, such lewd, such meane attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude societie,
As thou art matcht withall, and grafted too,
Accomplie the greatneffe of thy blood,
And hold their leuell with thy Princely heart?

Prince. So pleaze your Maiesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as cleare excuse,
As well as I am doubtleffe I can purge
My felfe of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet such extenuation let me begge,
As in reproofs of many Tales deius'd,
Which oft the Ear of Greatneffe needes must heare,
By smiling Pick-thankes, and base Newes-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faultie wandred, and irregular,
Finde pardon on my true submissiuon.

King. Heauen pardon thee:
Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which doe hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in Counsell thou hast rudei loft,
Which by thy younger Brother is supply'de;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and the Soule of every man
Prophetically doe fore-thinke thy fall.
Had I fo lauifh of my presence bene,
So common hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did helpe me to the Crowne,
Had still kept loyal to poffession,
And left me in repute lesse banishment,
A fellow of no marke, nor likelyhood.
By being feldome seene, I could not flirre,
But like a Comet, I was wonderd at;

Scena Secunda.
That men would tell their Children, This ishee:
Others would say, Where, Which is Ballingbrooke.
And then I stole all Courtesse from Heauen,
And dreft my selfe in such Humilitie,
That I did plucke Allegiance from mens hearts,
Lowd Showts and Salutations from their mouthes,
Euen in the presence of the Crowned King.
Thus I did keepe my Person freth and new,
My Preence like a Robe Pontificall,
Ne're seene, but wondred at : and so my State,
Seldom but fumptuous, flewed like a Fealt,
And wonne by rareneffe such Solemnitie.
The skipping King hee ambled vp and downe,
With shallow Jefferes, and rath Bauin Wits,
Soone kindled, and loone burn't, car'd his State,
Mingled his Royaltie with Carping Fools,
Had his great Name prophaned with their Scornes,
And gauce his Countenance, against his Name,
To laugh at gyling Boyes, and fland the puff
Of euer Beardless vaïne Comparativse ;
Grew a Companion to the common Streetes,
Enfess'sed himsef to Popularitie :
That being dayly flourawled by mens Eyes,
They furtued with Honey,and began to loathe
The taffe of Sweeteffe, whereof a little
More then a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occation to be seene,
He was but as the Cuckow is in June,
Heard, not regarded : seene, but with fuch Eyes,
As fickle and blunted with Communitie,
Afford no extraordinarie Gaze,
Such as is bent on Sunne-like Maiestie,
When it shines feldome in admiring Eyes :
But rather drows'd, and hung their eye-lids downe,
Slept in his Face, and rendred such affect
As Cloudie men vfe to doe to their adueraries,
Being with his preence glettred, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Henry, flanteft thou :
For thou haft loft thy Princely Prulledge,
With vite participation. Not an Eye
But is aweares of thy common fight,
Some men with hate with deft, doe thee more :
Which now doth that I would not have it doe,
Make blinde it felle with foolish tenderneffe.
Prince. I hall hereafter, my thrice gracious Lord,
Be more my selfe.
King. For all the World,
As thou art to this house, was Richard then,
When I from France fet foot at Rauenburgh ;
And even as I was then, is Percy now :
Now by my Scepter, and my Soule to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the State
Then thou, the shadow of Succelion,
For of no Right, nor colour like to Right.
He doth fill fields with Harneis in the Realme,
Turnes head against the Lyons armed Iwes ;
And being no more in debt to yeeres, then thou,
Leads ancient Lords, and reverent Bishops on
To bloody Battell's, and to bruuing Armes.
What never-dying Honor hath he got,
Against renowned Douglass what height Deedes,
Whole hot Incursions, and great Name in Armes,
Holdes from all Souldiers chiefe Maioritie,
And Militarie Title Capitall.
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Chrift,
Thrice hath the Hotspur Mars, in swathing Clothes,
This Infant Warrior, in his Enterprizes,
Discomfited great Douglass, ta'me him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep Defance vp,
And shake the peace and fafetie of our Throne.
And what say you to this ? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-bishops Grace of Yorke, Douglass,Mortimer, Capitulate against vs, and are vp.
But wherefore doe I tell thee Newes to thee?
Why, Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my neer'ft and dearest Enemie ?
Thou, that art like enough, through vaffall Feare,
Bafe Inclination, and the start of Spleene.
To fight againft me vnder Percies pay,
To dogge his heelles, and curtie at his frownes,
To shew how much thou art degenerate.
Prince. Doe not thinkse so, you hall not finde it so :
And Heauen forgive them, that so much have hwa'd
Your Malefities good thoughts away from me :
I will redeeme all this on Percies head,
And in the cloasing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Sonne,
When I will weare a Garment all of Blood,
And faine my favours in a bloody Maske : Which wha't away, shall fioore my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, when ere it lights,
That this fame Child of Honor and Renowne,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-prayed Knight,
And your vnthought-of Harry chance to meet :
For every Honor fitting on his Helme,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My flames-redoubled. For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northerne Youth exchange
His glorious Deedes for my Indignities :
Percy is but my Fa'tor, good my Lord,
To engraffe vp glorious Deedes on my behalfe :
And I will call him to fo strict account,
That he shall render every Glory vp,
Yea, even the fliightlye worhip of his time,
Or I will tare the Reckoning from his Heart.
This, in the Name of Heauen, I promife here :
The which, if I performe, and doe furuiue,
I doo beeche your Malefie maye, falue
The long-growne Wounds of my intemperature :
If not, the end of Life cancells all Bands,
And I will dye a hundred thoufand Deaths,
Ere breake the smallleft parcell of this Vow.
King. A hundred thoufand Rebels dye in this :
Thou hall haue Charge, and foueraigne truit herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now good Blunt? thy Lookes are full of speed.
Blunt. So hath the Buinesse that I come to ipeake of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath fent word,
That Douglass and the Englifh Rebels met
The eleventh of this moneth, at Shrewsbury :
A mightie and a fearfull Head they are,
(If Promifes be kept on euery hand)
As euer offered foule play in a State.

King. The Earl of Westmerland fet forth to day :
With him my fonne, Lord John of Lancafter,
For this adverfiment is five daies old.
On Wednesday next, Harry thou hall fet forward :
On Thursday, wee our felues will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorths and Harry, you shall march
Through Gloucestershire: by which account, Our Busineff valued some twelve days hence, Our general Forces at Bridgenorth shall meete. Our Hands are full of Businefte: let's away, Advantage feedes him fat, while men delay. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolph.

Falstaff. Bardolph, am I not faine away vilely, since this halt action? doe I not hate? doe I not dwindle? Why my skinne hangs about me like an olde Ladies loofe Gowne: I am withered like an olde Apple John. Well, Ie repent, and that suddenly, while I am in fome liking: I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the in-fide of a Church is made of; I am a Pepper-Corne, a Brewers Horfe, the in-fide of a Church. Company, villainous Company hath beene the fpyole of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are fo fretfull, you cannot live long.

Falstaff. Why there is it: Come, finge me a bawdy Song, make me merry: I was as vertuous guen, as a Gentleman need to be; vertuous enough, fware little, dic'd not aboue feuen times a weke, went to a Bawdy-houfe not aboue once in a quarter of an houre, payd Money that I borrowed, three or foure times; flied well, and in good compaffe: and now I live out of all order, out of compaffe.

Bard. Why, you are fo fat, Sir John, that you must needes bee out of all compaffe; out of all reaonable compaffe, Sir John.

Falstaff. Doe thou amend thy Face, and Ie amend thy Life: Thou art our Admiral, thou beareth the Lanterne in the Poope, but 'ts in the Nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lampe.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harme.

Falstaff. No, Ie be fware: I make as good vie of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memento Mori. I never fee thy Face, but I thinkke upon Hell fire, and Diues that liued in Purple; for there he is in his Robes burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to vertue, I would sweare by thy Face; my Oath should bee, By the Fire: But thou art altogether guen over; and wert indeepe, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sunne of vttre Darke neffe. When thou ran't vp Gads-Hill in the Night, to catch my Horfe, if I did not thinkke that thou hadst beene an Ignis fatius, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no Purchase in Money. O, thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an ever-laffing Bone-fire-Light: thou haft faued me a thoufand Markes in Linkes and Torches, walking with thee in the Night betwixt Tauerne and Tauerne: But the Sack that thou haft drunke me, would haue bought me Lights as good cheape, as the deareft Chandlers in Europe. I haue maintaine'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirtie yeares, Heauen reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your Belly.

Falstaff. So should I be fure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter HoSaffe.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, haue you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket?

HoSaffe. Why Sir John, what do you thinke, Sir John? do you thinke I keepe Theues in my Houfe? I have search'd, I have enquired, fo haz my Husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Servant by Servant: the tighe of an Hayre was neuer loft in my houfe before.

Falstaff. Ye łye HoSaffe: Bardolph was thau'd, and loft many an Hayre; and Ie be fware my Pocket was pick't: goe to, you are a Woman, goe.

HoSaffe. Who I? I defire thee: I was never call'd fo in mine owne houfe before.

Falstaff. Go, I know you well enough.

HoSaffe. No, Sir John, you do not know me, Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me Money, Sir John, and now you picke a quarrell, to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your Backe.

Falstaff. Doulas, filthy Doulas: I haue given them away to Bakers Wiues, and they have made Boulters of them.

HoSaffe. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight fillings an Ell: You owe Money here besides, Sir John, for your Dyet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, foure and twenty pounds.

Falstaff. Hee had his part of it, let him pay.

HoSaffe. Fie, alas hee is poore, hee hath nothing.

Falstaff. How? Poore? Looke vpon his Face: What call you Rich? Let them coynye his Nose, let them coynye his Cheeke: Ie not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Younger of me? Shall I not take mine cafe in mine Inne, but I shall have my Pocket pick'd? I haue loft a Scale-Ring of my Grandfathers, worth forty Markes.

HoSaffe. I haue heard the Prince tell him, I know not how off, that that Ring was Copper.

Falstaff. How? the Prince is a Jacke, a Sneake-Cuppe: and if hee were heere, I would cudgell him like a Dogge, if hee would fay fo.

Enter the Prince marching, and Falstaffe meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Falstaff. How now Lad? is the Winde in that Doe? Muft we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

HoSaffe. My Lord, I pray you heare me, Prince. What fay't thou, Miftrife Quickly? How does thy Husband? I love him well, hee is an honeft man.

HoSaffe. Good, my Lord, heare mee.

Falstaff. Preethe let her alone, and lift to mee.

Prince. What fay't thou, Jacke?

Falstaff. The other Night I felle asleep heere behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt: this Houfe is turn'd Bawdy-houfe, they picke Pocktes.

Prince. What didft thou lofe, Jacke?

Falstaff. Wilt thou beleue me, Hal? Three or foure Bonds of fortie pound apeece, and a Scale-Ring of my Grandfathers.

Prince. A Trife, some eight-penny matter.

HoSaffe. So I told him, my Lord; and I faid, I heard your Grace fay fo: and (my Lord) hee speakes moft vilely of you, like a foule-mouth'd man as hee is, and faid, hee would cudgell you.

Prince. What hee did not?

HoSaffe. There's neyther Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me elfe.

Falstaff. There's
Fal. There's no more faith in thee then a flu'de Prune; nor no more truth in thee, then in a drawne Fox: and for Woman-hood, Maid-marian may be the Deputies wife of the Ward to thee. Go, you nothing: go.

Fal. What thing? why a thing to thanke heauen on.

Hof. I am no thing to thanke heauen on, I wold thou sholdst know it: I am an honest mans wife: and setting thy Knights-hood aside, thou art a knaue to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy woman-hood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Hof. Say, what beast, thou knaue thou?

Prin. An Otter, sir John? Why an Otter?

Fal. Why? She's neither fish nor feaft; a man knowes not where to have her.

Hof. Thou art vnuit man in saying so; thou, or anie man knowes where to have me, thou knaue thou.

Prince. Thou say'ft true Hosteller, and he flanders thee most grosfily.

Hof. So he doth you, my Lord, and fayde this other day, You ought him a thoufand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thoufand pound?

Fal. A thoufand pound Hal? A Million. Thy loue is worth a Million; thou ow'ft me thy loue.

Hof. Nay my Lord, he call'd you lacke, and faid hee would cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bar. Indeed Sir John, you faid fo.

Fal. Yeaf, if he faid my Ring was Copper.

Prince. I fay 'tis Copper. Dar'ft thou bee as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why Hal? thou know'ft, as thou art but a man, I dare: but, as thou art a Prince, I feare thee, as I feare the roaring of the Lyons Whelpes.

Prince. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himfelfe is to bee feared as the Lyon: Do'ft thou thinke Ie fear thee, as I fear thy Father may if I do, let my Girdle break.

Prin. O, if it should. bow would thy guttes fall about thy knees. but fira: There's no roome for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bofome of thine: it is all fill'd vp with Guttes and Mirdiffe. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket? Why thou horfon impudent imboft Rafcall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tauerne Recknungs, Memorandums of Bawdle-houfes, and one poore peny-worth of Sugar-candie to make thee long-winded: if thy pocket were enrich'd with anie o- ther injuries but thefe, I am a Villaine: And yet you will hand to it, you will not Pocket vp wrong. Art thou not afham'd?

Fal. Do'ft thou heare Hal? Thou know'ft in the flate of Innocency, Adam fell: and what should poore Jacke Falaffe do, in the days of Villany? Thou feeft, I have more flie then another man, and therefore more flarity. You confede then you pickt my Pocket?

Prin. It appears fo by the Story.

Fal. Hosteller, I forgiue thee: Go make ready Breakfaste, loue thy Husband, Looke to thy Servants, and cherifh thy Guests: Thou shalt find me truftabl'e to any honfet reafon: Thou feeft, I have pacified all.

Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hosteller.

Now Hal, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad? How is that answered?

Prin. O my sweet Beefe: I must flill be good Angell to thee. The Monie is paid backe againe.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying backe, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'ft, and do it with vnwaft'd hands too.

Bard. Do my Lord.

Prin. I haue procured thee Lacke, a Charge of Foot.

Fal. I would it had beene of Horfe. Where fhall I finde one that can fteale well? O, for a fine thefe of two and twenty, or thereabout: I am heymonouly vnprouded. Wel God be thanked for thefe Rebels, they offend none but the Vertuous. I laud them, I praife them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go beare this Letter to Lord John of Lancaster To my Brother John. This to my Lord of Westmerland, Go Peto, to horfe: for thou, and I, Haue thirtie miles to ride yet ere dinner time.

Lacke, meet me to morrow in the Temple Hall At two a clokke in the afternoone, Where thall thou know thy Charge, and there receiue Money and Order for their Furniture. The Land is burning, Percie flands on hye, And either they, or we must lower lye. Fal. Rare words! braue world.

Hosteller, my breakfaft, come: Oh, I could with this Tauerne were my drumme.

Exit omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Harry Hotspur, Worcefter, and Dowglas.

Hot. Well faid, my Noble Scot, if speaking truth In this fine Age, were not thought flatterie, Such attribution should the Dowglas haue, As not a Soulard of this fessions flame, Should go fo generallly currant through the world. By heaven I can tale feller: I defie The Tongues of Soother. But a Brauer place In my hearts lue, hath no man then your Selfe. Nay,take me to my word: approue me Lord.

Dow. Thou art the King of Honor:

No man so potent breathes upon the ground,

But I will Beard him.

Enter a Megifter.

Hot. Do fo, and 'tis well. What Letters haft there? I can but thank you. Meg. Th'fe Letters come from your Father.

Hot. Letters from him?

Why comes he not himfelfe?

Meg. He cannot come, my Lord, He is greeuous sicke.

Hot. How? haz he the leyfure to be fickle now In such a flufing time? Who leads his power? Vnder whole Government come they along?

Meg.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Moff. His Letters beares his minde, not I his minde.
Wor. I prethee tell me, doth he keep his Bed?
Moff. He did, my Lord, fourye dayes ere I fet forth:
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his Physician.
Wor. I would the fates of time had firft beeene whole,
Ere he by fickness had beene vifited:
His health was never better worth then now.
Hoff. Sicke, now! droope now! this fickness doth infect
The very Life-blood of our Enterprize,
'Tis catching hither, even to our Campe.
He writes me here, that inward fickness,
And that his friends by deputation
Could not fo foon be drawn: nor did he thinke it meet,
To lay fo dangerous and dear a truth
On any Soule remoul'd, but on his owne.
Yet doth he give vs bold aduertifement,
That with our small conuufion we should on,
To see how Fortune is difpo'd to vs:
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Because the King is certainly poffeff
Of all our purpofes. What fay you to it?
Wor. Your Fathers fickneffe is a mayme to vs.
Hoff. A perillous Caff, a very Limme loft off:
And yet, in faith, it is not his preuent want
Seemes more then we shall finde it.
Were it good, to fet the exact wealth of all our flates
All at one Caft? To fet fo rich a mayne
On the nice hazard of one doubtfull hour,
It were not good: for therein should we reade
The very Botome, and the Soule of Hope,
The very Lift, the very vtmof Bound
Of all our fortunes.
Deng. Faith, and fo wee should,
Where now remains a sweet reuerion.
We may boldly fpend, vpoun the hope
Of what is to come in:
A comfort of retreymt lies in this.
Hoff. A Randeuous, a Home to fye vnto,
If that the Deuill and Mischance looke bigge
Vpon the Maydenhead of our Affaires.
Wor. But yet I would your Father had beene here:
The Qualitie and Heire of our Attempt
Brookes no diuilion: It will be thought
By fome, that know not why he is away,
That wifedome, loyaltie, and meere diflike
Of our proceedings, kept the Earle from hence.
And thinke, how fuch an apprehension
May turne the lyke of fearfull Paffion,
And breede a kinde of quefition in our caufe:
For well you know, wee of the offering fide,
Muft keepe aloofe from strict arbitrement,
And ftop all fight-holes, eyre loope, from whence
The eye of reafon may pre in vpoun vs:
This abfence of your Father draws a Curtaine,
That fhes the ignorant a kinde of fearre,
Before not dreamt of.
Hoff. You trayne too farre.
I rather of his abfence make this fve:
It lends a Luftre, and more great Opinion,
A larger Dare to your great Enterprize,
Then if the Earle were here: for men muft thinke,
If we without his helpe, can make a Head
To pufh againft the Kingdome; with his helpe,
We shall o're-turne it tofte-turvy downe:
Yet all goes well, yet all our loyants are whole.
Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falstaff. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry, fill me a Bottle of Sack, our Souldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-cop-hill to Night.

Bardolph. Will you give me Money, Captaine?

Falstaff. Lay out, lay out.

Bardolph. This Bottle makes an Angel.

Falstaff. And if it doe, take it for thy labour: and if it make twentie, take them all, Ile anfwer the Coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Petru meete me at the Townes end.

Bardolph. I will Captaine: farewell.

Falstaff. If I be not aham'd of my Souldiers, I am a sove't-Gurnet: I have mif-v'd the Kings Preffe damably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fiftie Souldiers, three hundred and odde Pounds. I preffe mee none but good Houfe-holders, Yeomens Sonnes: enquire me out contratfed Batchelers, such as had bene ask'd twice on the Banes: such a Commodity of warme faues, as had as lieue heare the Deuill, as a Drumme; fuch as feare the report of a Caliuier, worfe then a truc' Foole, or a hurt wilde-Ducke. I preffe mee none but fuch Toites and Butter, with Hearts in their Belies no bigger then Pinnes heads, and they have bought out their fervices: And now, my whole Charge, confifts of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentlemen of Companies, Slaves as ragged as Laxarus in the painted Cloth, where the Gluttons Dogges licked his Sores: and fuch, as indeed were neuer Souldiers, but dif-carded vnuift Slueringmen, younger Sonnes to younger Brothers, revolted Tapfeters and Oftlers, Trade-faine, the Cankers of a calme World, and long Peace, tenne times more dis-honorable ragged, then an old-fa'd Ancient; and fuch haue I to fill vp the roome of them that have bought out their fervices: that you would thinkke, that I had a hundred and fiftie totter'd Prodigalls, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Drafte and Huskes. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unloaded all the Gibbets, and preft the dead bodies. No eye hath fere such skar-Crowes: Ile not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the Villaines march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyues on; for indeede, I had the moft of them out of Prison. There's not a Shirt and a halfe in all my Company: and the halfe Shirt is two Napkins tacket together, and throwne over the shoulders like a Heralds Coat, without fleeves: and the Shirt, to fay the truth, fchine from my Hoft of S Albones, or the Red-Nofe Keeper-of Dauntry. But that's all one, they're finde Linnen enough on euerie Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Weftermiland.

Prince. How now blovne Jack? how now Quilt?

Falstaff. What Hai! How now mad Wag, what a Deuill do't thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Weftermiland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had alreadie beene at Shrewsbury.

Wesg. 'Faith, Sir John, tis more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there alreadie. The King, I can tell you, looks for vs all: we must away all to Night.

Falstaff. 'Tut, neuer feare me, I am as vigilant as a Cat, to steale Creame.

Prince. I think to steale Creame indeed, for thy theft hath alreadie made thee Butter: but tell me, Jack, whose fellows are thefe that come after?

Prince. I did neuer fuch pitifull Rascals.

Falstaff. Tut, tut, good enough to toffe foode for Power, foode for Powder: they're a Pit, as well as better: rufh man, mortall men, mortall men.

Wefg. I, but Sir Iohn, me thinkes they are exceeding poore and bare, too beggarly.

Falstaff. Faith, for their pouerietie, I know not where they had that; and for their barenffe, I am sure they neuer learn'd that of me.

Prince. No, Ile be sworne, vnleffe you call three fingers on the Ribbes bare. But firra, make haffe, Percy is already in the field.

Falstaff. What, is the King encamp'd?

Wesg. Hee is, Sir Iohn, I fee wee shall flay too long.

Falstaff. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the begining of a Feafe, fits a dull fighter, and a keene Gueft.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hafbur, Wrecflel, Dowglait, and Vernon.

Hafbur. Wee'le fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Dowglait. You give him then advantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hafbur. Why lay you fo? lookes he not for supply?

Vern. So doe wee.

Hafbur. His is certaine, ours is doubtfull.

Worc. Good Cousin be aduia'd, firre not to night.

Vern. Doe not, my Lord.

Dowglait. You doe not counfaile well:

Vern. You speake it out of feare, and cold heart.

Vern. Doe me no fandler, Dowglait by my Life, and I dare well maintain it with my Life, if well-reſpectede Honor bid me on, I hold as little counſaile with weake feares, as you, my Lord, or any Scot that this day lyes. Let it be feene to morrow in the Battell,
Which of vs feares.

Dowglait. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hafbur. To night, fay I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be.

I wonder much, being me of fuch great leading as you are,

That you fore-fe in not what impediments

Drag backe our expedition: certaine Horfe

Of my Cousin Vernon's are not yet come vp,

Your Vnclle Wrecflel Horfe came but to day,

And now their pride and mettall alfeepes,

Their Courage with hard Labour tame and dull,

That not a Horfe is halfe the halfe of himselfe.

Hafbur. So are the Horfes of the Enemie,

In generall journey bated, and brought low:

The better part of ours are full of reft.

Worc. The
Worc. The number of the King exceedeth ours:
For Gods sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you would have me hearing, and respect.

Huff. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt:
And would to God you were of our determination.

Some of vs love you well: and even though some Enuie your great deseruing, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against us like an Enemy.

Blunt. And Heauen defend, but still I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anoynted Maleifie.
But to my Charge.

The King hath sent to know
The nature of your Griefes, and whereupon
You coniure from the Bref of Civill Peace,
Such bold Hostiliteit, teaching his dutious Land
Audacipus Crueltie. If that the King
Have any way your good Deferts forgot,
Which he confeceth to be manifold,
He bids you name your Griefes, and with all speed
You shall have your desires, with interest;
And Pardon absolute for your felfe, and thefe,
Herein mis-led, by your suggestion.

Huff. The King is kind:
And well wee know, the King
Knowes at what time to promife, when to pay.
My Father, vour Vnckle, and my felfe,
Did give him that fame Royaltie he wearas:
And when he was not fixe and twentie strong,
Sick in the Worlds regard, wretched, and low,
A poore vmminded Out-law, sneaking home,
My Father gaue him welcome to the foare:
And when he heard him fware, and vow to God,
He came but to be Duke of Lancashire,
To fee his Luerie, and begge his Peace,
With tears of Innocencie, and tearmes of Zeale;
My Father, in kinde heart and pitty mou'd,
Swoare him affiance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realme
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and leffe came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, ffood in Lanes,
Layed Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oathes,
Gave him their Heires, as Pages followed him,
Euen at the heele, in golden multitudes.
He prefently, as Greatnesse knowes it felle,
Steps me a little higher then his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poor,
Vpon the naked fhor at Rauenpurg:h
And now (foorth) takes on him to reforme
Some certaine Edicts, and some ftrait Decreets,
That lay too heavie on the Common-wealth;
Cryes out vpon.abus'd, fremes to weepen
Ouer his Countries Wrongs: and by this Face,
This seeming Brow of Justice, did he winne
The hearts of all that hee did angle for.
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favorites, that the abfent King
In deputation left behinde him heere,

When hee was perfonall in the Irih Warre.
Blunt. Tis, I came not to heare this.
Huff. Then to the point.
In short time after, hee depos'd the King.
Sonee after that, deprin'd him of his Life:
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worfe, fuffer'd his Kinffman March,
Who is, if every Owner were plac'd,
Indeed his King, to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without Ranfome, to lye forfeited:
Difgrac'd me in my happy Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Vnckle from the Counsell-Boord,
In rage difmil'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath on Oath, committ'd Wrong on Wrong,
And in conclusion, drove vs to fearch out
This Head of fafetie; and withall, to prie
Into his Title: the which wee finde
Too indirect, for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I returne this anfwer to the King?
W'e'll with-draw a while:
Goe to the King, and let there be impawn'd
Some foretie for a fafe returne againe,
And in the Morning early hall my Vnckle
Bring him our purpofe: and fo farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Loue.
Huff. And't may be, we wee hal'll.
Blunt. Pray Heauen you doe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch-BiJhop of Yorks, and Sir Michell.

Arch. Hee, good Sir Michell, beare this fealed Briefe
With winged haffe to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroope, and all the reft
To whom they are directed.
If you knew how much they doe import,
You would make haste.

Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch. For Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly giuen to vnderstand,
The King, with mightie and quick-rayfed Power,
Meetes with Lord Harry; and I feare, Sir Michell,
What with the sicknesse of Northumberland,
Whose Power was in the firft proportion;
And what with Owen Glendowers abfence thence,
Who with them was rated firmeely too,
And comes not in, ouer-ru'd by Prophecies,
I feare the Power of Percy is too weake,
To wage an infant tryall with the King.

Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, you need not feare,
There is Douglas, and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir Mich. But there is Marsdy, Perrow, Lord Harry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worcester,
And a Head of gallant Warriors,
Noble Gentlemen.

Arch. And
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Act III. Scene I.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmorland, Sir Walter Blunt, and Falstaff.

King. How bloodylie the Sunne begins to peere
Aboue you buske hill : the day lookes pale
At his ditemperature.

Prince. The Southerne winde
Doth play the Trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whirling in the Leaues,
Fortells a Tempest, and a blufing day.

King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
For nothing can feeme soule to thofe that win.

Enter Worcester.

King. How now my Lord of Worcest? 'Tis not so well
That you and I should meet vpon fuch tearmes,
As now we meet. You haue decrei'd our trutth,
And made vs doffe our eafie Robes of Peace,
To cruft our old limbes in vngentle Steele :
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What fay you to it? Will you againe vgnknt
This churlifh knot of all-abhorred Warre?
And moue in that obedient Orbe againe,
Where you did give a faire and natural light,
And be no more an exahll'd Meteor,
A prodigie of Fear, and a Portent
Of broached Mifcheefe, to the vnborne Times?

Wor. Hearre me, my Lige :
For mine owne part, I could be well content
To entertaine the Lagge-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do protest,
I haue not fought the day of this dislike,

King. You haue not fought it: how comes it then?
Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

Prince. Peace, Chewet, peace.

Wor. It pleas'd your Maiesty, to turne your lookes
Of Favour, from my Selfe, and all our Houfe ;
And yet I muft remember you my Lord,
We were the first, and deareft of your Friends :
For you, my Staaffe of Office did I breake
In Richards time, and poated day and night
To meete you on the way, and kiffe your hand,

When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing fo strong and fortunate, as I ;
It was my SELF, my Brother, and his Sonne,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The danger of the time. You swore to vs,
And you did fware that Oath at Doncafter,
That you did nothing of purpole'gainft the State,
Nor claim no further, then your new-falne right,
The feate of Gaunt, Dukedom of Lancaster,
To this, we fware our aide: But in short space,
It rain'd downe Fortune snowing on your head,
And fuch a fould of Greatnes fell on you,
What with our helpe, what with the ablest King,
What with the injuries of wanton time,
The feeming fuffrances that you had borne,
And the contrarious Windes that held the King
So long in the vnlucky Irish Warres,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarme of faire advantages,
You tooke occaion to be quickly woode,
To gripe the generall fway into your hand,
Forgot your Oath to vs at Doncafter,
And being fed by vs, you'd vs fo,
As that vngentle gull the Cuckowes Bird,
Vfeth the Sparrow, did opprefse our Neffe,
Grew by our Feeding, to fo great a bulke,
That euen our Loue duft not come neere your flight.

For fear of swallowing : But with nimble wing
We were inforc'd for safety fake, to flye
Out of your sight, and raise this prefent Head,
Whereby we fland oppofed by fuch meanes
As you your felfe, haue forg'd againft your felfe,
By vnkinde viage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and truith
Sworne to vs in yourner enterprize.

Kis. These things indeede you haue articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Croffe, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion
With some fine colour, that may pleafe the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poore Difcontents,
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the newes
Of hurly burly Innovation :
And never yet did Inforrcfion want
Such water-colours, to imprint his caufe:
Nor moody Beggars, haruing for a time
Of pell-mell hauocke, and confufion.

Prince. In both our Armies, there is many a soule
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they lyone in triall. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth lyone with all the world
In praiue of Henry Percy : By my Hopes,
This prefent enterprize fet off his head,
I do not thinke a brauer Gentleman,
More actue, valiant, or more valiant yong,
More daring, or more bold, is now alie,
To grace this latter Age with Noble deeds.
For my part, I may fpeak it to my fame,
I haue a Truant beene to Chialury,
And fo I heare, he doth account me too :
Yet this before my Fathers Maiestie,
I am content that he shall take the oddes
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to faue the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him, in a Single Fight.

King. And Prince of Wales, do dare we venter thee,
Albeit, confiderations infinite
Do make against it: No good Worfev, no,
We love our people well; even those we love
That are milled upon your Cowins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace:
Both he, and they, and you; yes, every man
Shall be my Friend againe, and Ile be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yeld,
Rebuke and dread corretion waiete on vs,
And they shall do their Office. So bee gone,
We will not now be trubled with reply,
We offer faiire, take it aduifefully.

Exit Worcefter.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my life,
The Dowglas and the Hafloure both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.

King. Hence therefore, every Leader to his charge,
For on their anwer will we fet on them;
And God befriended vs, as our caufe is luft.

Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falaffe.

Fal. Hal, if thou fee me downe in the battell,
And befriend me,io; tis a point of friendship.

Prin. Nothing but a Coloflius can doe thee that friendship
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed time Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why, thou ow'th heaven a death.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would bee loath to pay him before his day.
What neede I bee fo forward with him, that call's not on me. Well, 'tis no matter, Honor pricke me on. But if Honour pricke me off when I come on?
How then? Can Honour fet too a legge? No: or an arre? No: Or take away the greefe of a wound? No.
Honour hath no skill in Surgerie, then? No. What is Honour? A word. What is that word Honour? Ayre: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy'de a Wednesday. Doth he fee it? No. Doth hee hear it? No. Is it inffible then? yea, to the dead. But wil it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction wil not suffet it therefore Ile none of it. Honour is a meere Scutcheon, and so ends my Catechifme.

Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Worcefter, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my Nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere bett he did.

It is not poffible, it cannot be,
The King would keepe his word in louing vs,
He will not feeke vs ill, and finde a time
To punifh this offence in others faults:
Supposition, all our liues, shall be fluke full of eyes;
For Traifon is but trufted like the Foxe,
Where ne're fo tame, fo cheeriſh, and lock'd vp,
Will have a wilde tricke of his Ancestors:
Looke how he can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our lookes,
And we shall feede like Oxen at a hall,
The better cheeriſh, the nearer death.
My Nephewes treajaffe may be well forgot,
It hath the exclue of youth, and heate of blood,

And an adopted name of P'dulidge,
A hair-brain'd Haffour, governed by a Spleene:
All his offences lieu upon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did traine him on,
And his corruption being tane from vs,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all:
Therefore good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any cafe, the offer of the King.

Ver. Deliver what you will, Ile say 'tis fo.
Here comes your Cousin.

Enter Hafloure.

Hot. My Vnkle is return'd,
Deliver vp my Lord of Weftmerland.
Vnkle, what news?

Wor. The King will bid you battell presently.

Dow. Defie him by the Lord of Weftmerland.
Hot. Lord Dowglas: Go you and tell him so.

Wor. Marty and shall, and verie willingly.

Exeunt Dowглас.

Wor. There is no feemong mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you begge any? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gentle of our grievances,
Of his Oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworne,
He calls vs Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hateful full name in vs.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I haue thrown
A braye defiance in King Henries teeth:
And Weftmerland that was ingag'd did haue it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales left forth before the king,
And Nephew, challenge d you to fingle fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrell lay vp on our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell mee,
How shew'd his Talking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my Soule: I never in my life
Did heare a Challenge vrg'd more modestly,
Vnleffe a Brother shoul'd a Brother dare
To gentle exercife, and proofe of Armes.
He gauue you all the Duties of a Man,
Trimm'd vp your praiſes with a Princely tongue,
Spoke your deferuings like a Chronicle,
Making you enuer better then his praiſe,
By still depraifing praiſe, valew'd with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing citall of himselfe,
And chid his Trewant youth with fuch a Grace,
As if he maftred there a double spirit
Of teaching, and of learning intantly:
There did he praufe. But let me tell the World,
If he out-lie the enue of this day,
England did never owre fo fweet a hope,
So much miscoujtrued in his Wantonneffe.

Hot. Cousin, I thinke thou art enamored
On his Follies: neuer did I hear
Of any Prince so wilde at Liberty.
But he is as he will, yet once ere night,
I will imbrace him with a Souldiers arme,
That he shall shrinke vnder my curteſie.
Arme, arme with feede. And Fellow's, Soldiers, Friends,
Better consider what you haue to do,
That I that haue not well the gift of Tongue,
Can lift your blood vp with perfwation.

Msf. My Lord, heere are Letters for you.

Hor. I cannot reade them now.

O Gentlemen, the time of life is short;
To spend that shortneffe bafely, were too long.
If life did ride vp a Dials point,
Still ending at the arrual of an houre,
And if we live, we live to treade on Kings:
If dye; brave death, when Princes dye with vs.
Now for our Conferences, the Armes is faire,
When the intent for bearing them is last.

Msf. My Lord prepare, the King comes on spacce.

Hor. I thanke him, that he cuts me from my tale:
For I professe not talking: Onely this,
Let each man do his bent. And heere I draw a Sword,
Whoe worthy temper I intend to flaine
With the beft blood that I can meeete withall,
In the adventure of this perillous day.
Now Elperance Percy, and fett on :
Sound all the lofty Infruments of Warre,
And by that Mufick, let vs all embrace :
For heauen to earth, fome of vs neuer hall,
A fecond time do fhuch a curtefe.

They embrace the Trumpets sound, the King entereth with his power, alarum unto the battell. Then enter Dowglas, and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy name, that in battell thus y crosseit me?
What honor doft thou fecke vpon my head?

Dow. Know then my name is Dowglas,
And I do haunt thee in the battell thus,
Because fome tell me, that thou art a King.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Dow. The Lord of Stafford deere to day hath bought Thy likeneffe : for ifted of thee Harry
This Sword hath ended him, fo thall it thee,
Vnleffe thou yeeld thee as a Prifoner.

Blu. I was not borne to yeeld, thou haughty Scot,
And thou fhalt finde a King that will revenge
Lords Stafford's death.

Flight, Blunt is flaine, then enters Hotspur.

Hot. O Dowglas, hadft thou fought at Holmedon thus
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.

Dow. All's done, all's won, here breathles lies the king
Hot. Where #

Dow. Heere.

Hot. This Dowglas? No, I know this face full well : A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt, Semblably furnifh'd like the King himfelfe.

Dow. Ah foole: go with thy soule whether it goes,
A borrowed Title haft thou bought too deere.
Why difdft thou tell me, that thou wert a King?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his Coats.

Dow. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coates,
Ile murder all his Wardrobe peece by peece,
Vntill I meet the King.

Hot. Vp, and away,
Our Souldiers stand full fairely for the day. Exeunt

Fal. Though I could fcape shot-free at London, I fear the shot heere : here's no scoring, but upon the pate.
Soft who are you? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you:
here's no vanity, I am as hot as molten Lead, and as hearty too; heauen keepe Lead out of mee, I neede no more weight then mine owne Bowelles. I haue led my rag of Muffins where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my 150. left alue, and they for the Townes end, to beg during life. But who comes heere?

Enter the Prince.

Pri. What, stand'st thou idle here? Lend me thy fword,
Many a Nobleman likesftarke and fiffe
Vnder the houses of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are vnreqveng'd. Pretyy lend me thy fword
Fal. O Hal, I prethee give me leaue to breath awhile:
Turke Gregory never did fuch deeds in Armes, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him fure.

Pri. He is indeed, and liking to kill thee :
I prethee lend me thy fword.

Fal. Nay Hal, if Percy bee alue, thou geth not my Sword; but take my Piffoll if thou wilt.

Pri. Glue it me : What, is it in the Cafe ?
Fal. I Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sacke a City.
The Prince draws out a Bourne of Sacke.

Pri. What, is it a time to left and daily now. Exit.

Throes it at him.

Fal. If Percy be alue, Ile pierce him: if he do come in my way, fo : if he do not, if I come in his (willingly) let him make a Carbonado of me. I like not fuch grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: Give mee life, which if I can faue, fo : if not, honour comes vnlook'd for, and ther's an end.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Alarum, execrations, enter the King, the Prince,
Lord John of Lancafter, and Earle of Wiftmerland.

King. I prethee Harry withdraw thy felfe, thou blee-deft too much: Lord John of Lancafter, go you with him.

P. Job. Not I, my Lord, vnleffe I did bleed too.

Pri. I brefeeh your Maiety make vp,
Leaff your retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do fo :
My Lord of Wiftmerland leade him to his Tent.

Wst. Come my Lord, Ile leade you to your Tent.

Pri. Lead me my Lord! I do not need your helpe:
And heauen forbid a shallow scratch shoud drive
The Prince of Wales from fuch a field as this,
Where ftain'd Nobility lyes troden on,
And Rebels Armes triumph in lnflacces.

Job. We breath too long : Come cofin Wiftmerland,
Our duty this way lies, for heauens fake come.

Pri. By heauen thou haft deceu'd me Lancafter,
I did not thinke thee Lord of fuch a Spirit:
Before, I lou'd thee as a Brother, John;
But now, I do reftpeckt thee as my Soule.

King. I law him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With fuffer meanteine then I did looke for
Of fuch an vngrowe Warriour.

Pri. O this Boy, lends metall to vs all.

Exeunt.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Another King? They grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Dowglas, fatal to all thofe
That ware those colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit the perfon of a King?

King. The King himfelfe : who Dowglas grieves at hart

So
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

So many of his shadowes thou haft met,
And not the very King, I have two Boyes
Seeke Percy and thy felie about the Field:
But seeing thou fall'ft on me so luckily,
I will affay thee: so defend thy felie.

'Dow. I feare thou art another counterfeit:
And yet infait thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, wherebe thou be,
And thus I win thee. They fight, the Kate in danger,
Enter Prince.

Prin. Hold vp they head vile Scot, or thou art like
Neuer to hold it vp againe: the Spirits
Of valiant Stedy, Stafford, Blunts, are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promifieth, but he means to pay.

They Fight, Dowglas fyeth.

Cheerely My Lord: how far'e your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gaufey hath for succour sent,
And fo hath Clifton: Ile to Clifton Straight.
King. Stay, and breath awhile.
Thou haft redeem'd thy loft opinion,
And shew'd thou ma'k't some tender of my life
In this faire refuge thou haft brought to mee.
Prin. 0 heauen, they did me too much injury,
That euer said I heartned to your death.
If it were, so I might haue let alone
The infulting hand of Dowglas ouer you,
Which would haue bene as speedy in your end,
As all the poynous Potions in the world,
And fau'd the Treacherous labour of your Sonne.

K. Make vp to Clifton, Ile to Sir Nicholas Gaufey, Exit Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.
Prin. Thou speakest as if I would deny my name.
Hot. Thy name is Harris Percy.

Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and thinke not Percy,
To dare with me in glory any more:
Two Starres keepe not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brooke a double reign,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it Harry, for the hour is come
To end the one of vs, and would to heauen,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.
Prin. Ile make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honours on thy Creed,
Ile crop, to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brooke thy Vanities. Fight.
Enter Falshaft.

Fal. Well said Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall finde no
Boytes play here, I can tell you.

Enter Dowglas, be fights with Falshaff, who falls down as if be were dead. The Prince killeth Percy.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou haft rob'd me of my youth:
I better brooke the losse of brettie life,
Then though proud Titles thou haft wonne of me,
They wound my thoughts woorke, then the sword my felie:
But thought's the flame of Life, and Life, Times foole;
And Time, that takes suruey of all the world,
Must haue a stop. O, I could Prophefie,
But that the Earth, and the cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No Percy, thou art duft
And food for——

Prin. For Wormes, braue Percy. Farewell great hearts
Ill-w'en'd Ambition, how much art thou frustrate?
When that this bodie did containe a spirit,

A Kingdome for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vileft Earth
Is roome enough. This Earth that bears the dead,
Beares not alue fo flout a Gentleman.
If thou wert'te fensible of curtefe,
I should not make fo great a shew of Zeale.
But let my favours hide thy mangled face,
And euen in thy behalfe, Ile thanke my felle
For doing thee fayre Rites of Tendemefe.
Adieu, and take thy prafe with thee to heauen,
Thy ignomy fiepe with thee in the graue,
But not remembred in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this fleh
Kepe in a little life? Poore Iacke, farewell:
I could haue better spar'd a better man,
O, I fhaould have a heauy mifle of thee,
If Ie were much in loue with Vanity.
Death hath not ftrucke fo fat a Deere to day,
Though many dearer in this bloody Fray:
Imbowell'd will I fee thee by and by,
Till then, in blood, by Noble Percie lye.

Falstaff riseth up.

Fal. Imbowell'd! If thou imbowell mee to day, Ile give you leauue to powder me, and eat me too to morow.
Twas time to counterfeft, or that hotte Termagant Scot, had paid me Scot and lot too.Counterfeft? I am no counterfeft; to dye, is to be a counterfeft, for hee is but the counterfeft of a man, who hath not the life of a man: But to counterfeft dyeing, when a man thereby lieth,is to be no counterfeft, but the true and perfect image of life indeede. The better part of Valour, is Difcretion; in the which better part, I haue faued my life. I am affraid of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if hee should counterfeft too, and rife? I am afraid hee would proue the better counterfeft: therefore Ile make him fore: yea, and Ile fware I kill'd him. Why may not hee rife as well as I: Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-bodie fees me.Therefore leaue, with a new wound in thy thigh come you along me.

Enter Prince and John of Lancafher.

Prin. Come Brother John, full bruely haft thou fleete thy Maiden sword.

John. But foft, who haue we here?
Did you not tell me this Fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I faw him dead,
Breathleffe, and bleeding on the ground: Art thou alue?
Or is it fantafe that plays vpou our eye-fight?
I prethee speakes, we will not truft our eyes
Without our eares. Thou art not what thou feemt'

Fal. No, that's certaine: I am not a double man: but or I be not Jacke Falstaffe, then am I a Jacke: There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honor, fo: if not, let him kill the next Percie himselfe. I looke to be either Earle or Duke, I can affure you.

Prin. Why, Percy I kill'd my felfe, and faw thee dead.

Fal. Did it thou Lord, Lord, how the world is gien to Lying? I grant you I was downe, and out of Breath, and fo was he, but we rofe both at an instant, and fought a long houre by Shrewsburie clocke. If I may bee beleued, fo: if not, let them that should reward Valoure, bear their finne vpou their owne heads. Ile take't on my death I gaue him this wound in the Thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, I would make him eate a peace of my fword.

John. This is the strangelf Tale that e're I heard.

Prin. This is the strangelf Fellow, Brother John.
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Come bring your luggage Nobly on your backe:
For my part, if a lye may do thee grace,
Ile gil’d it with the happiest tearmes I haue.

_A Retreat is founded._
The Trumpets sound Retreat, the day is ours:
Come Brother, let’s to the highest of the field,
To see what Friends are lying, who are dead.  _Exeunt_ Fal. Ile follow as they lay, for Reward. HEE that rewards me, heaven reward him. If I do grow great again,
Ile grow leffe? For Ile purge, and leave Sacke, and fue cleanly, as a Nobleman should do.  _Exit_

Scena Quarta.

_The Trumpets sound._

_Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Weftmerland, with Worcester & Vernon Prisoners._

King. Thus euer did Rebellion finde Rebuke. Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not fend Grace, Pardon, and tearmes of Loue to all of you? And would’st thou turne our offers contrary? Misufe the tenor of thy Kinfmans truth?

Three Knights upon our party flaine to day,
A Noble Earle, and many a creature else,
Had beene alue this houre,
If like a Christifian thou had’st truly borne
Betwixt our Armies, true Intelligence.

Wor. What I haue done, my safety urg’d me to,
And I embrace this fortune patientely,
Since not to be avoyd, it falls on mee.

King. Beare Worfefter to death, and Vernon too:
Other Offenders we will paufe vpon.

_How goes the Field?_

Prin. The Noble Scot Lord Dowglas, when hee faw
The fortune of the day quite turn’d from him,
The Noble Percy flaine, and all his men,
Vpon the foot of feare, fled with the reft;
And falling from a hill, he was fo bruiz’d
That the purfuers tooke him. At my Tent
The Dowglas is, and I befeech your Grace,
I may difpofe of him.

King. With all my heart.

Prin. Then Brother John of Lancafter,
To you this honourable bounty fhall belong:
Go to the Dowglas, and deliuer him
Vp to his pleafure, ranfomleffe and free:
His Valour fhewne vpon our Crefts to day,
Hath taught vs how to cherifh fuch high deeds,
Euen in the bofone of our Aduerfaries.

King. Then this remains: that we diuidde our Power.
You Sonne John, and my Coufin Weftmerland
Towards Yorke fhall bend you, with your deereft speed
To meet Northumberland, and the Prelate Scroope,
Who(as we hear)are bufly in Armes.
My Selfe, and you Sonne Harry will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earle of March.
Rebellion in this Land fhall lofe his way,
Meeting the Checke of fuch another day:
And since this Buineffe fo faire is done,
Let vs not leave till all our owne be wonne.  _Exeunt._

FINIS.
The Second Part of Henry the Fourth,
Containing his Death: and the Coronation of King Henry the Fift.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Induction.

Pen your Eares: For which of you will stop
The vent of Hearing, when loud Rumor speaks?
I, from the Orient, to the drooping Weft
(Making the winde my Poft-horfe) still vnfold
The Acts commenced on this Ball of Earth.
Vpon my Tongue, coniuent Slanders ride,
The which, in every Language, I pronounce,
Stuffing the Eares of them with false Reports:
I speake of Peace, while couert Enmity
(Vnder the smile of Safety) wounds the World:
And who but Rumor, who but onely I
Make fearfull Muslers, and prepar'd Defence,
Whil're the bigge yeare, with love and some other griefes,
Is thought with childe, by the terme Tyrant, Warre,
And no such matter? Rumor, is a Pipe
Blowne by Surmifes, Ieloufies, Coniectures;
And of so eafe, and fo plaide a flop,
That the blunt Monfer, with vnaccounted heads,
The till discordant, waruing Multiude,
Can play vpon it. But what neede I thus
My well-knowne Body to Anatomize
Among my houshold? Why is Rumor here?
I run before King Harrises victory,
Who in a bloodie field by Shrewsburie
Hath beaten downe yong Hotspurres, and his Troopes,
Quenching the flame of bold Rebellion,
Euen with the Rebels blood. But what meanes I
To speake so true at first? My Office is
To noyle abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Vnder the Wrath of Noble Hotspurres Sword:
And that the King, before the Douglas Rage
Stoop'd his Anointed head, as low as death.
This haue I rumour'd through the peafant-Townes,
Betwenee the Royall Field of Shrewsburie,
And this Worne-eaten-Hole of ragged Stone,
Where Hotspurres Father, old Northumberland, Lyes crafty fickle. The Poftes come tying on,
And not a man of them brings other newes
Then they have learnt of Me. From Rumours Tongues,

Nor. How is this deriu'd?
Saw you the Field? Came you from Shrewsburie?
L.Bar. I speake with one (my L.) that came fro thence,
A Gentleman well bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me thefe newes for true.
Nor. Heere comes my Seruant Traueres, whom I sent
On Tuesday laft, to listen after Newes.
Enter Traueres.
L.Bar. My Lord, I ouer-rod him on the way,
And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
More then he (haply) may retaile from me.
Nor. Now Traueres, what good tidings comes fro you?
Tra.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Tra. My Lord, Sir Iohn Umfreuil! turn'd me backe
With joyfull rydings; and (being better hors'd) Out-rode me. After him, came spurring head
A Gentleman (almost fore-spent with speed)
That stopp'd by me, to breath his bloody horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester: And of him I did demand what Newes from Shrewsbury:
He told me, that Rebellion had ill lucke,
And that yong Harry Percies Spurre was cold.
With that he gaue his able Horfe the head,
Against the paiting sides of his poore Iade
Vp to the Rowell head, and starting so,
He seem'd in running, to deouer the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Againe:
Said he yong Harry Percies Spurre was cold?
(Or Hot-Spurre,cold-Spurre?) that Rebellion, Had met ill lucke?
L.'Bar. My Lord : Ile tell you what,
If my yong Lord your Sonne,have not the day,
Vpon mine Honor, for a silken point
Ile glue my Barony. Neuer talke of it.

Nor. Why should the Gentleman that rode by Trouers
Glue then such infancies of Lofse?
L.'Bar. Who, he?
He was some fielding Fellow, that had fitone
The Horfe he rode-on: and vpon my life
Speake at adventure. Looke, here comes more Newes.

Enter Morton.

Nor. Yea, this mans brow, like to a Title-leaf,
Fore-teils the nature of a Tragicke Volume:
So lookes the Strond, when the Imperious Flood
Hath left a witneft Vfipuration.
Say Morton, did't thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury (my Noble Lord)
Where hateful death put on his vglieft Maske
To fright our party.

North. How doth my Sonne, and Brother?
Thou trembl'd, and the whiteenefly in thy Cheeke
Is apter then thy Tongue, to tell thy Errand.
Euen such a man, so faint, so spiritlesse,
So dull, so dead in looke, so vowe-be-gone,
Drew Priams Curtaine, in the dead of night,
And would haue told him, Halfie his Troy was burn'd.
But Priam found the Fire,ere he his Tongue:
And I, my Percies death, ere thou report it.
This, thou would'ft say : Your Sonne did thus, and thus:
Your Brother, thus. So fought the Noble Dowglas,
Stopping my greedy ear, with their bold deeds.
But in the end (to frop mine Eare indeed)
Thou haft a Sigh, to blow away this Praife,
Ending with Brother, Sonne, and all are dead.

Mor. Dowglas is liuing, and your Brother,yet:
But for my Lord, your Sonne.

North. Why, he is dead.
See what a ready tongue Suspiration hath:
He that but feares the thing, he would not know,
Hath by InfiniCit, knowledge from others Eyes,
That what he feard, is chanc'd. Yet speake(Morton)
Tell thou thy Earle, his Diuination Lies,
And I will take it, as a sweet Dilgrace,
And make thee rich, for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great, to be (by me) gain'd:

Your Spirit is too true, your Feares too certaine.

North. Yet for all this, fay not that Percies dead.
I fee a strange Confession in thine Eye:
Thou haft't thy head, and hold'lt it Feare, or Sinne,
To speake a truth. If he be Jaine, fay fo:
The Tongue offends not, that reports his death:
And he doth Jinne that doth belye the dead:
Not he, which fayes the dead is not alioie:
Yet the first bringer of vnwelcome Newes
Hath but a looking Office: and his Tongue,
Sounds euer after as a fullen Bell
Rememberd, knolling a departing Friend.

L.'Bar. I cannot thinke (my Lord)yourn Son is dead.

Mor. I am forry, I shoule force you to beleue
That, which I would to heauen, I had not feene.
But thofe mine eyes, faw him in bloody flate,
Rend'ring faint quittance (wearied, and out-breath'd)
To Henrie Mammouth, whose Iftarting wrath beate downe
The neuer-daunted Percie to the earth,
From whence (with life) he neuer more firung vp.
In few; his death (whose Spirit lent a fire, Euen to the dulleft Peasant in his Campe)
Being bruited once, tooke fire and heate away
From the bext temper'd Courage in his Truppen.
For from his Mettle, was his Party fteel'd;
Which once, in him abated, all the reft
Turn'd on themfelves, like dull and heauy Lead:
And as the Thing, that's heauy in it felie,
Vpon enforcement, flyes with greaftefp speede,
So did our Men, heauy in Hopfurre's loffe.
Lend to this weight, fuch lightneffe with their Feare,
That Arroves fled not swifter toward their aymne,
Then did our Soldiers (aymng at their safetie)
Fly from the field. Then was that Noble Worcefter
Too foonne ta'ne prifoner: and that furious Scot,
(The bloody Dowglas) whose well-labouring Iword
Had three times Jaine th'appearance of the King,
Gan vail his flamacke, and did grace the fame
Of thofe that turn'd their backes: and in his flight,
Stumbling in Feare, was tooke.
The fumme of all, Is, that the King hath wonne, and hath fent out
A fpeeody power, to encounter you my Lord,
Vnder the Conduct of yong Lancater.
And Weifterland. This is the Newes at full.

North. For this, I shall have time enough to mourne.
In Poyfon, there is Phyncke : and this newes
(Hauning beuen well) that would haue made me fick'e,
Being fick'e, haue in some meafeure, made me well.
And as the Wretch, whose Feauer-weakned loynts,
Like strengthleffe Hingdes, buckle vnnder life,
Impatience of his Fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keepers armes : Euen fo, in Limbes
(Weak'ned with griefes) being now infrag'd with greffe,
Are thrice themfelves. Hence therefore thou nice crutch,
A faclie Gautlet now, with loynts of Steele
Muft glue this hand. And hence thou fickly Quife,
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,
Which Princes,feft'h with Conquest,lyame to hit.
Now binde my Browes with Iron, and approach
The ragged'it houre, that Time and Spight dare bring
To frowne vnpon th'enrag'd Northumberland.
Let Heauen kiffe Earth : now let not Nature hand
Kepee the wilde Flood confin'd : Let Order dye,
And let the world no longer be a flage
To feede Contention in a ling'ring Act:
But let one Spirit of the First-borne Gaine
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Reigne in all boomes, that each heart being fet
On bloody Court's, the rude Scene may end,
And dairene be the buyer of the dead.  (Honor.

L.Bar. Sweet Earle, divorce not wisdom from your
Mar. The liues of all your loyal Complexes
Lease-on your health, the which if you give-o're
To runny Paffion, must perforce decay.

You call the event of Warre (my Noble Lord)
And sum'd the accompt of Chance, before you fald
Let vs make head: It was your prefurmize,
That in the dole of blowses, your Son might drop.
You knew he walk'd o're perils, on an edge
More likely to fall in, then to get o're:
You were adviz'd his flesh was capable
Of Wounds, and Scares; and that his forward Spirit
Would lift him, where moff trade of danger raged,
Yet did you fay go forth: and none of this (Though ftrongly apprehended) could refraine
The flipte-borne Acton: What hath then befalne?
Or what hath this bold enterprise bring forth,
More then that Being, which was like to be?

Mar. We all that are engaged to this loffe,
Knew that we ventur'd on fuch dangerous Seas,
That if we wrought out life, was ten to one:
And yet we ventur'd for the gaine propo'd,
Chouk'd the refpeft of likely perill fear'd,
And fince we are o're-fet, venture againe.
Come, we will all put forth; Body, and Goods,
Mar. 'Tis more then time: And (my moft Noble Lord)
I heare for certaine, and do speake the truth:
The gentle Arch-bishop of Yorke is vp
With well appointed Powres: he is a man
Who with a double Surety bindes his Followers.
My Lord (your Sonne)had onely but the Corpes,
But shadowes, and the fhes of men to fight.
For that fame word (Rebellion) did divide
The action of their bodies, from their foules,
And they did fight with wantonffe, conftrain'd
As men drinke Potions; that their Weapons only
Seem'd on our fide: but for their Spirits and Soules,
This word (Rebellion)it had froze them vp,
As Fifh are in a Pond. But now the Bishop
Turnes Inuffurrection to Religion,
Suppof'd sincere, and holy in his Thoughts:
He's follow'd both with Body, and with Minde:
And doth enlarge his Riling, with the blood
Of faire King Richard, scarp'd from Pompfret stones,
Derives from heauen, his Quarrel, and his Caufe:
Tels them, he doth behinde a bleeding Land,
Gafping for life, vnder great Baulingbrooke,
And more, and leffe, do flocke to follow him.

Norb. I knew of this before. But to speake truth,
This prefent grace had wip'd it from my minde.
Go in with me, and counsell every man
The aptefr way for safety, and reueenge:
Get Potfs, and Letters, and make Friends with speed,
Neuer fo few, nor neuer yet more need.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaff, and Pag.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what fates the Doct'o my water?
Pag. He fald fir, the water it selfe was a good healthy water: but for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diffeles then he knew for.

Fal. Men of all forts take a pride to gird at mee: the braine of this foolish compound Clay-man, is not able to inuent any thing that tends to laughter, more then I inuent, or is inuented on me. I am not onely witty in my felfe, but the caufe that wit is in other men. I doe heere walke before thee, like a Sow, that hath o'rewhelm'd all her Litter, but one. If the Prince put thee into my Seruice for any other reafon, then to fet mee off, why then I have no judgement. Thou horion Mandrake, thou art fitter to be wore in my cap, then to wait at my heeles. I was never man'd with an Agot till now: but I will fette thee neyther in Gold, nor Silver, but in vile apparell, and fent you backe againe to your Mafter, for a Jewell. The Insuena((the Prince your Mafter) whose Chin is not yet ftedg'd, I will sooner have a beard grow in the Palm of my hand, then he shall get one on his cheeke: yet he will not flicke to fay, his Face is a Face-Royall. Heauen may finifh it when he will, it is not a haire amiffe yet: he may keep it still at a Face-Royall, for a Barber shall neuer earne fixe pence out of it: and yet he will be crowing, as if he had wrat man ever since his Father was a Batchellour. He may keepe his owne Grace, but he is almoft out of mine, I can affure him.

What faid M.Dobledom, about the Satten for my short Cloake, and Slops?

Pag. He fald fir, you should procure him better Affurance, then Bardolf: he wold not take his Bond & yours, he lik'd not the Security.

Fal. Let him bee damn'd like the Glutton, may his Tongue be hotter, a horion Ankitepole: a Raflcally-yeaforoofh-knaue, to beare a Gentleman in hand, and then stand vp on Security? The horion smooth-pates doe now weare nothing but high shoes, and bunches of Keyes at their girdles: and if a man is through with them in honnest Taking-vp, then they must hand vp on Security: I had as lief than, they would put Rats-bane in my mouth, as offer to stoppe it with Security. I look'd hee should have fent me two and twenty yards of Satten (as I am true Knight) and he fends me Security. Well, he may sleep in Security, for he hath the horne of Abundance: and the lightneffe of his Wife thines through it, and yet cannot he fsee, though he haue his owne Lanthorne to light him. Where's Bardolf?

Pag. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worffe a horne.

Fal. I bought him in Paules, and hee'll buy me a horne in Smithfield. If I could get mee a wife in the Stewes, I were Mann'd, Hors'd, and Wi'd.

Enter Chiefie Infuite, and Servant.

Pag. Sir, here comes the Nobleman that committed the Prince for ftriking him, about Bardolf.

Fal. Wait clofe, I will not fee him.

Ch. Luft. What's he that goes there?
Ser. Falstaffe, and don't pleafe your Lordship.

Luft. He that was in quefition for the Robbery?
Ser. He my Lord, but he hath fince done good fervice at Shrewsbury: and (as I heare) is now going with fome Charge, to the Lord John of Lancasfer.

Ser. Sir John Falstaffe.

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deafe.

Pag. You must speake lowder, my Mafter is deafe.

Luft. I am fure he is, to the hearing of any thing good. Go plucke him by the Elbow, I must speake with him.

Ser. Sir John.

Fal. What's a yong knaue and beg? Is there not wars? Is there not improvement? Dost not the K. lack subiects? Do not the Rebels want Soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any fide but one, it is worfe flame to begge, then to be on the worst fide, were it worfe then the name of Re- bellion can tell how to make it.
The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Ser. You miiltake me Sir.
Fal. Why sir? Did I say you were an honest man? Setting my Knight-hood, and my Souldiership aside, I had lyed in my throate, if I had faid so.
Ser. I pray you (Sir) then fet your Knighthood and your Souldiership aside, and give mee leave to tell you, you lye in your throate, if you say I am any, other then an honest man.
Fal. I gie thee leave to tell me so? I lay a-fide that which grows to me? If thou gett' any leave of me, hang me: if thou tak' leave, thou wert not better be hang'd: you Hunt-counter, hence: Auant.

Ser. Sir, my Lord would speake with you.

Iluf. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good Lord: give your Lordship good time of the day. I am glad to fee your Lordship abroad: I heard say your Lordship was sickie. I hope your Lordship goes abroad by aduise. Your Lordship (touh not clean past your youth) hath yet some fimack of age in you: some relic of the failness of Time, and I most humbly beseech your Lordship, to have a tender care of your health.

Iluf. Sir John, I sent you before your Expedition, to Shrewsbury.

Fal. If it pleafe your Lordship, I hear his Maiestie is return'd with some diffcomfort from Wales.

Iluf. I talke not of his Maiestie: you would not come when I fent for you?

Fal. And I hear moreover, his Highness is false into this fame whorfon Appoilexie. (you)

Iluf. Well, heauen mend him. I pray let me fpake with Fal. This Appoilexie is (as I take it) a kind of Lethargie, a sleeping of the blood, a horfon Tingling.

Iluf. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it originall from much greefe; from fludy and perturbation of the braine. I haue read the caufe of his effect in Galen. It is a kind of deafeenelle.

Iluf. I thynke you are false into the difafe: For you hearre not what I fay to you.

Fal. Very well (my Lord) very well: rather an pleafe you it is the difafe of not Liftening, the malady of not Marking, that I am troubled withall.

Iluf. To punifh you by the heecles, would amend the attention of your ears, & I care not if I be your Phytician Fal. I am as poore as Iluf, my Lord; but not fo Patient: your Lordship may minifie the Potion of imprisonment to me, in reprefett of Pouertie: but how I shoule bee your Patient, to follow your prefcriptions, the wife may make some dram of a scruple, or indeede, a scruple it felfe.

Iluf. I fent for you (when there were matters againft you for your life) to come fpake with you.

Fal. As I was then admited by my learned Councellor, in the laves of this Land-feruice, I did not come.

Iluf. Well, the truth is (Sir John) you live in great infamy Fal. He that buckles him in my belt, can not live in leffe.

Iluf. Your Meanes is very flender, and your waft great.

Fal. I would it were otherwife: I would my Meanes were greater, and my waft flender.

Iluf. You have miffed the youthfull Prince.

Fal. The yong Prince hath miffed mee. I am the Fel- low with the great belly, and he my Dogge.

Iluf. Well, I am both to gall a new-heal'd wound; your daies fervice at Shrewsbury, hath a little gilded over your Nights exploit on Gads-hill. You may thanke the vnquiet time, for your quiet o're-plotting that Action.

Fal. My Lord? (Wolfe)

Iluf. But since all is well, keep it fo: wake not a sleepping Fal. To wake a Wolfe, is as bad as to smell a Fox.

Iluf. What you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A Waffell-Candle, my Lord; all Tallow: if I did fay of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Iluf. There is not a white hair on your face, but foold haue his effect of grauity.

Fal. His effect of grauity, grauity, grauity.

Iluf. You follow the yong Prince vp and downe, like his euill Angel.

Fal. Not fo (my Lord) your ill Angell is light; but I hope, he that lookes vpon meee, will take mee without, weighing: and yet, in some respectes I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Vertue is of fo little regard in thse Cofformgers, that true valor is turn'd Bearer-heard. Pregnan- cie is made a Tapfer, and hath his quickke wit wafted in giuing Recknings: all the other gifts apportion to man (as the malice of this Age shapes them) are not worth a Gooberfly. You that are old, consider not the capacities of vs that are young; you meaure the heat of our Li- uers, with the bitternes of your gal: & we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confes, are waages too.

Iluf. Do you fett downe your name in the fcrowle of youth, that are written downe old, with all the Charac- teres of age? Haue you not a moift eye? a dry hand? a yel- low cheek? white beard? a decreasing leg? an increifing belly? Is not your voice broken? your winde ftrong? your wit fingle? and every part about you blaited with Anti- quity? and will you cal your felfe young? Ey, ey, ey, fir Iluf.

Fal. My Lord, I was borne with a white head, & fom- thing a round belly. For my voice, I haue left it with hal- lowing and finging of Anthemes. To approve my youth farther, I will not: the truth is, I am onely olde in judgement and vnderhanding, and he that will cafer with mee for a thonfand Markes, let him lend mee the mony, & haue at him. For the boxe of th' ear that the Prince gave you, he gaue it like a rude Prince, and you tooke it like a fenfi- bie Lord. I haue checkt him for it, and the yong Lion re- pents: Marry not in afhes and facke-claith, but in new Silke, and old Sacke.

Iluf. Well, heauen fend the Prince a better companion.

Fal. Heauen fend the Companion a better Prince: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Iluf. Well, the King hath feuer'd you and Prince Harry, I hearre you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, a- gainft the Archibishop, and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yes, I thynke your prettie sweet wit for it: but looke you praye, (all you that kiife my Ladie Peace, at home) that our Armies ioyn not in a hot day: for if I take but two shirts out with me, and I meant not to fweat ex- traordinarily: if it bee a hot day, if I brandifh any thing but my Bottle, would I might neuer fip white againe: There is not a dangerous Action can peepe out his head, but I am thruf upon it. Well, I cannot lather.

Iluf. Well, be honett, be honett, and heauen bleffe your Expedition.

Fal. Will your Lordship lend mee a thonfand pound, to furnish me forth?

Iluf. Not a peney, not a peney: you are too impatient to beare croffes. Fare you well. Commend mee to your Coffin Wellmerland.

Fal. If I do, fillop me with a three-man-Beetle. A man can no more separate Age and Courteoufneffe, then he can part yong limbes and leetchery: but the Gowl gall the g one, and the pox pinches the other: and so both the Degrees prevent my curles. Boy?

Page. Sir.

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats, and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this Consumption of the purse. Borrowing onely lingers, and lingers it out, but the disease is increas'd. Go and bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the Prince, this to the Earle of Welfterland, and this to old Mistris Ursula, whose I have weekly fworne to marry, since I perceul'd the firft white haire on my chin. About it: you know where to finde me. A pcox of this Gown, or a Gowt of this Poxe: for the one or th'other plays the rogue with my great toe: it is no matte, if I do halt, I haue the warres for my colour, and my Penfion shall fume the more reasonable. A good wit will make vfe of any thing: I will turne diseases to commodity.

Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Archbishop, Haling, Monbray, and Lord Bardolph.

Ar. Thus haue you heard our caufes, & know our Means: And my most noble Friends, I pray you all Spake plainly your opinions of our hopes, And firft (Lord Marshall) what you to it? Mow. I well allow the occasion of our Armes, But gladly would be better satisfied, How (in our Means) we shoul aduanse our felues To looke with forthead bold and big enough Vpon the Power and puifance of the King.

Haff. Our present Mutters grow vpon the File To fuce and twenty thousand men of choice: And our Supplies, lieue largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose boforme burnes With an incendt Fire of Injuries.

L. Bar. The queftion then (Lord Haffing) standeth thus Whether our present fuce and twenty thousand May hold-vp-head,without Northumberland:

Haff. With him, we may.

L. Bar. I marry, there's the point: But if without him we be thought to feeble, My judgement is, we should not ftep too farre Till we had his Affiftance by the hand. For in a Theame fo bloody fac'd, as this, Confirmeth, Expecation, and Sufferne Of Aydes incertaine, fhould not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true Lord Bardolph, for indeed It was yong Haffing cafe, at Shrewsbury.

L. Bar. It was (my Lord) who lin'd himfelf with hope, Eating the aye, on promife of Supply, Flatt'ring himfelfe with Profeft of a power, Much smaller, then the fmalleet of his Thoughts, And fo with great imagination (Proper to mad men) led his Powers to death, And (winking) leap'd into deftruction.

Haff. But (by your leave) it never yet did hurt, To lay downe liketly-h怎, his, and fformes of hope.

L. Bar. Yes, if this prefent quality of warre, Indeed the inchant action: a caufe on foot, Lines fo in hope: as in an early Spring, We fee theapp'ring buds, which to proue fruite, Hope giues not fo much warrant, as Diplate That frofts will bite them. When we meane to build, We firft surveye the Plot, then draw the Modell,
And take thou this (O thoughts of men accord'd)
"Pass to and to Come, becomes, be stings, Present, worth.
Most. Shall we both draw our numbers and set on?
Hal. We are 'Times subiects, and 'Time bids, be gone.

_Acitus Secundus, Scena Prima._

_Enter Hofshe, with two Officers, Fang, and Snare._
_Hofshe._ Mr. Fang, have you entred the Action?
_Fang._ It is enter'd.
_Hofshe._ Where's your Yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman?
_Will he stand to it?
_Fang._ Sirrah, where's Snare?
_Hofshe._ I, I, good M. Snare.
_Snare._ Heere, heere.
_Hofshe._ Fang, Fang, we must Arreit Sir John Falstaff.
_Hofshe._ I good M. Snare, I have enter'd him, and all.
_Sir._ It may chance of some of your liues: he flab'd me.
_Hofshe._ Alas the day! take heed of him: he flab'd me in mine owne house, and that most bably: he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out. Hee will foone like any duell, he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.
_Fang._ If I can clofe with him, I care not for his thrust.
_Hofshe._ No, nor I neither: I lebe at your elbow.
_Fang._ If I but fift him once if he come but within my Vice.

_Hofshe._ I am vndone with his going; I warrant he is an infinite thing viptone my foare. Good M. Fang hold him. fore good M. Snare let him not scape, he comes continuantly to Py-Corner (sauing your manhoods) to buy a faddl, and hee is indited to dinner to the Lubbars head in Lombardstreet, to M. Smoothes the Silkman. I pra'ye, fixe my Exion is enter'd, and my Cafe io openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his anwser. 100. Marke is a long one, for a poore lone woman to bear: & I haue borne, and borne and borne, and have bin lub'd off, and lub'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, vna woman should be made an Affe and a Beafe, to bear every Knaues wrong. _Enter Falstaffe and Bardolfe._
_Yonder he comes, and that arrant Malmsey-Nepe Bardolfe with him. Do your Offices, do your Offices M. Fang, & M. Snare, do me, do me, do me your Offices.
Fal._ How now? Whose Mare's dead? What's the matter?
_Fang._ Sir John, I arrest you, at the suit of Mift. Quickly.
_Falst._ Away Variets, draw Bardolfe: cut me off the Villaines head: throw the Queene in the Channel.
_Falst._ Keep them off, Bardolfe. Fang: A refue, a refue.
Page. Away you Scullion, you Rampallian, you Fulfillarian: Ile tucke your Catastrophe. _Enter_ Ch. Sinfies. _ch._ What's the matter? Keep the Peace here, hoa.
_Hofshe._ Good my Lord be good to mee. I beleev shall to me.

_Ch. Sinfies._ How now sir John? What are you brauling here?
_Doth this become your place, your time, and businesse? You should have bene well on your way to Yorke. Stand from him Fellow; wherefore hang't vpon him._

_Hofshe._ Oh my most worshipfull Lord, and't please your Grace, I am a poore widdow of Easchapel, and he is arrest'd at my suit.

_Cb. Sinfies._ For what summe?
_Hofshe._ It is more then for some (my Lord) it is for all: I haue, he hath eaten me out of house and home; bee hath put all my Subsance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out againe, or I will ride thee o'Nights, like the Mare.

_Falst._ I thinke I am as like to ride the Mare, if I haue any vantage of ground, to get vp.

_Cb. Sinfies._ How comes this, Sir John? Fry, what a man of good temper would endure this tempeft of exclamation? Are you not asham'd to inforce a poore Widdowe to fo rough a courte, to come by her owne?

_Falst._ What is the groffe summe that I owe thee?
_Hofshe._ Marry (if thou wer't an honest man) thy selfe, & the mony too. Thou diidst sware to mee vpon a parcell gilt Goblet, fitting in my Dolphin-chamber at the round table, by a lee-cole fire, on Wednesday in Whiton week, when the Prince broke thy head for liking him to a finging man of Windfor; Thou didst sware to me then (as I was washing thy wound) to marry me, and make mee my Lady thy wife. Canst y deny it? Did not goodwife Keech the Butchers wife come in then, and call me golip Quick ly? comming in to borrow a meefe of Vinegar telling vs, she had a good difh of Prawnes: whereby y didst defire to eat some: whereby I told thee they were ill for a greene wound? And didst not thou (when y was gone downe stairs)defire me to be no more familiar with such poore people, saying, that ere long they should call me Madam? And did't y not kiffe me, and bid mee fetch thee 30s? I put thee now to thy Book-oath, deny it if thou canst.

_Falst._ My Lord, this is a poore mad foule:and the fayes vp & downe the town, that her eldeft fon is like you. She hath bin in good cafe, & the truthe is, poverty hath diftraied her: but for these foolifh Officers, I beleev thee, I may haue redrefse against them.

_Falst._ Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your maner of wenching the true cafe, the falske way. It is not a confidnet brow, nor the throng of wordes, that come with such (more then impudent) fawines from you, can thruft me from a leuell confideration, I know you ha pra'ci'd ypon the eafe-yielding spirit of this woman.
_Hofshe._ Yes in troth my Lord.

_Inq._ Prethee peace:pay her the debt you owe her, and vpay the villany you have done her:the one you may do with flerling mony, & the other with currant repentance.

_Falst._ My Lord, I will not vndergoe this辛辣e without reply. You call honorable Boldines, impudent Sawinesse: If a man wil cur't, and say nothing, he is vertuous: No, my Lord (your humble duty remembred) I will not be your tutor. I say to you, I defire deliu'rance from these Officers being vpon hafty employment in the Kings Affairs.
_Inq._ You speake, as having power to do wrong: But answer in the effect of your Reputation, and satise the poore woman.

_Falst._ Come hither Holfeffe.
_Enter M. Gower._
_Falst._ As I am a Gentleman.
_Hofshe._ Nay, you said so before.
_Falst._ As I am a Gentleman. Come, no more words of it.
_Hofshe._ By this Heavenly ground I tred on, I must be faine to paven both my Plate, and the Tapisery of my dy-ning Chambers.

_3._

Falst.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy wweles a pretty flight Drolley, or the Storie of the Prodigall, or the Germane hunting in Water worke, is worth a thousand of these Bed-hangings, and these Fly-bitten Tapifries. Let it be tenne pound (if thou canst). Come, if it were not for thy humors, there is not a better Wench in England. Go, with thy face, and draw thy Action: Come, thou must not bee in this humour with me, come, I know thou was't set on to this.

Hjs. Prethee (Sir Iohn) let it be but twenty Nobles, I loathe to payne my Plate, in good earneft la.

Fal. Let it alone, Ile make other shift: you'll be a fool still.

Hjs. Well, you shall have it although I payne my Gowne. I hope you'll come to Supper: You'll pay me al-together?

Fal. Will I lie? Go with her, with her: -hooke-on, hooke-on.

Hjs. Will you have Doll Tearre-fбот meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words. Let's have her.

Ch. If. I have heard bitter newes.

Fal. What's the newes (my good Lord?)

Ch. If. Where lay the King last night?

Msf. At Bafingfike my Lord.

Fal. I hope (my Lord) all's well. What is the newes my Lord?

Ch. If. Come all his Forces backe?

Msf. No: Fiftee hundred Foot, five hundred Horfe

Are march'd vp to my Lord of Lancaster,

Against Northumberland, and the Archibishop.

Fal. Comes the King backe from Wales, my noble L?

Ch. If. You shall have Letters of me prefently.

Come, go along with me, good M. Gowre.

Fal. My Lord.

Ch. If. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gowre, shall I entreate you with mee to dinner?

Gow. I must waite vpon my good Lord heere.

I thank you, good Sir Iohn.

Ch. If. Sir Iohn, you loyster heere too long, being you are to take Souldiers vp, in Countries as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gowre?

Ch. If. What foolish Master taught you these manner's, Sir Iohn?

Fal. Master Gowre, if they become mee not, hee was a Foole that taught them mee. This is the right Fencing grace (my Lord) tap for tap, and so part faire.

Ch. If. Now the Lord lighten thee, thow art a great Foole.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince Henry, Poins, Bardolfes, and Page.

Prin. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poin. Is it come to that? I had thought wareness durst not have attach'd one of so high blood.

Prin. It doth me though it discolours the complexion of my Greatneffe to acknowledge it. Doth it not shew widelie in me, to define small Beere?

Poin. Why, a Prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weake a Composition.

Prin. Belike then, my Appetite was not Princely got: for (in troth) I do now remember the poore Creature, Small Beere. But indeede thefe humble considerations make me out of loue with my Greatneffe. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? Or to know thy face to morrow? Or to take note how many pairs of Silk stockings y haft? (Viz. thefe, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones:) Or to beare the Inuentorie of thy shirts, as one for superfluitie, and one other, for vs. But that the Tennis-Court-keeper knowes better then I, for it is a low ebe of Linnen with thee, when thou kept't not Racket there, as thou haft not done a great while, because the reft of thy Low Countries, have made a shift to eate vp thy Holland.

Poin. How ill it followes, after you have labou'd so hard, you should talke so idlely? Tell me how many good yong Princes would do so, their Fathers lying so fickle, as yours is?

Prin. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poin. Yes: and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prin. It shall serue among wittes of no higher breeding then thine.

Poin. Go to: I stand the push of your one thing, that you'll tell.

Prin. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet, that I should be sad now my Father is fickle: albeit I could tell to thee (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poin. Very hardly, vpon such a subiect.

Prin. Thou think'st me as farre in the Dlues Booke, as thou, and Falstaffe, for ob duracie and perficience. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my Father is so fickle: and keeping such vild company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me, all othersation of sorrow.

Poin. The reason?

Prin. What wouldst thou think of me, if I shold weep?

Poin. I would thinke thee a most Princely hypocrite.

Prin. It would be every mans thought: and thou art a bleffed Fellow, to thinke as every man thinkes: never a mans thought in the world, keeps the Rode-way better then thine: every man would thinke me an Hypocrite indeed. And what excites thy most worshipful thought to thinke so?

Poin. Why, because you have beene so lewde, and so much ingrafted to Falstaffe?

Prin. And to thece.

Poins. Nay, I am well spok'en of, I can hear it with mine owne eares the worfe that they can say of me is, that I am a second Brother, and that I am a proper Fellowe of my hands: and those two things I confess I cannot helpe. Looke, looke, here comes Bardolfes.

Prin. And the Boy that I gave Falstaffe, he had him from me Christlian, and see if the fat villain have not trans form'd him Ape.

Enter Bardolfes.

Bar. Save your Grace.

Prin. And yours, most Noble Bardolfes.

Poin. Come you pittious Affe, you halifh Full, must you be blushing? Wherefore blush you now? what a Maidenly man at Armes are you become? Is it such a matter to get a Pottle-pots Maiden-head?

Page. He call'd me euen now (my Lord) through a red Lattice, and I could discerne no part of his face from the window:
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Page. None my Lord, but old Miftris Quickly, and M. Doll Tearse-foot.

Prin. What Pagan may that be?

Page. A proper Gentleswoman, Sir, and a Kinwoman of my Masters.

Prin. Euen such Kin, as the Parish Heyfors are to the Towne-Bull?

Shall we feate upon them (Ned) at Supper?

Poin. I am your shadow, my Lord, Ile follow you.

Prin. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your Master that I am yet in Towne.

There's for your silence.

Bar. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine Sir, I will governe it.

Prin. Fare ye well: go.

This Doll Tearse-foot should be some Rode.

Poin. I warrant you, as common as the way betweene S. Albans, and London.

Prin. How might we see Falstaff betowe himselfe to night, in his true colours, and not our felues be feene? Poin. Put on two Leather Jerkins, and Aprons, and waite upon him at his Table, like Drawers.

Prin. From a God, to a Bull? A haue declension: It was Ioues cafe. From a Prince, to a Pretext, a low transformation, that shall be mine: for in every thing, the purpoe must weigh with the folly. Follow me Ned. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Northumberland bid Ladie, and Harrie Percies Ladie.

North. I prethee lover Wife, and gentle Daughter, Glue an euyn way vnto my rough Affaires:
Put not you on the vifage of the Times,
And be like them to Percie, troubleome.
Wife. I haue giuen ouer, I will speake no more,
Do what you will : your Wifedome, be your guide.

North. Alas! (sweet Wife) my Honor is at pawne,
And but my going, nothing can redeeme it.

La. Oh yet, for heauens sake, go not to these Wars;
The Time was (Father) when you broke your word,
When you were more endeare'd to it, then now,
When your owne Percy, when my heart-deere-Harry,
Threw many a Northward looke, to see his Father
Bring vp his Powres : but he did long in vaine.
Who then perfwaded you to stay at home?
There were two Honors loft; Yours, and your Sonnes.

For Yours, may heauenly glory brighten it:
For His, it bucke vpon him, as the Sunne
In the gray vault of Heauen : and by his Light
Did all the Chevalerie of England moue
To do braue Acts. He was (indeed) the Glafe
Wherein the Noble-Youth did dreffe themselues.
He had no Legges, that prati'd not his Gate:
And speaking thicke (which Nature made his blemish)
Became the Accents of the Valliant.
For those that could speake low, and tardily,
Would turne their owne Perfection, to Abufe,
To seeme like him. So that in Speech, in Gate,
In Diet, in Affections of delight,
In Militarie Rules, Humors of Blood, window: at last I spy'd his eyes, and me thought he had made two holes in the Ale-wives new Petticoat, & peeved through.

Prin. Hath not the boy profited?

Bar. Away, you horson upright Rabbet, away.

Page. Away, you rascally Altbreas dreame, away.

Prin. Instruct vs Boy: what dreame, Boy?

Page. Marry (my Lord) Altbea dream'd, she was de-liuer'd of a Firebrand, and therefore I call him his dream.

Prince. A Crownes-worth of good Interpretation: There it is, Boy.

Pain. O that this good Blossome could bee kept from Canker: Well, there is fix pence to preferue thee.

Bard. If you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallowse shall be wrong'd.

Prince. And how doth thy Master, Bardolph?

Bar. Well, my good Lord: he heard of your Graces comming to Towne. There's a Letter for you.

Poin. Deliver'd with good respeckt: And how doth the Martlemas, your Master?

Bard. In bodily health Sir.

Pain. Marry, the immortal part needes a Phisitian: but that moves not him: though that bee sickes, it dyes not.

Prince. I do allow this Wen to bee as familiar with monarchs, as my dogge: and he holds his place, for looke you he writes.

Poin.Letter. John Falstaff Knight: (Every man must know that, as oft as hee hath occasion to name himself:) Even like those that are kinne to the King, for they neuer pricke their finger, but they say, there is som of the kings blood spilt. How comes that (fayes he) that takes upon him not to conceiue? the answer is as ready as a borrow-ed cap: I am the Kings poore Cofin, Sir.

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to vs, but they will fetch it from Lapher. But to the Letter: —Sir John Falstaff, Knight, to the Sonne of the King, neere his Father, Harrie Prince of Wales, greeting.

Poin. Why this is a Certificate.

Prin. Peace.

I will imitate the honourable Remaines in breuite.

Poin. Sure he means breuitie in breath:short-winded. I commende to thee, I commende thee, and I loose thee. Bee not too familiar with Points, for bee my fayes thy Favours so much, that he sweares thou art to marrie his Sifer Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayst, and go farewell.

Thine, by yea and no: which is as much as to say, as thou willest him. Jacke Falstaff with my Familiars: Iohn with my Bradors and Sifer: & Sir Iohn, with all Europe.

My Lord, I will steepe this Letter in Sack, and make him eate it.

Prin. That's to make him eate twenty of his Words. But do you vfe me thus Ned? Must I marry your Sifer?

Poin. May the Wench have no worfe Fortune. But I never said so.

Prin. Well, thus we play the Fools with the time, & the spirits of the wife, fit in the clouds, and mocke vs: Is your Master heere in London?

Bard. Yes my Lord.

Prin. Where fuppes he? Doth the old Bore, feede in the old Franke?

Bard. At the old place my Lord, in East-cheape.

Prin. What Company?

Page. Ephesians my Lord, of the old Church.

Prin. Sup any women with him?
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

He was the Marke, and Glasse, Coppie, and Booke, That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous! him, O Miracle of Men! Him did you leave (Second to none) vn-feconded by you, To look upon the hideous God of Warre, In dis-advantage, to abide a field, Where nothing but the found of Hoffours Name Did seeme defendable: so you left him. Neuer, O neuer doe his Ghost the wrong, To hold your Honor more precise and nice With others, then with him. Let them alone: The Marshall and the Arch-bishop are strong. Had my sweet Harry had but halfe their Numbers, To day might I (hanging on Hoffours Necke) Haue talk'd of Mommouth's Graue.

NORTH. Bebresh your heart, (Faire Daughter) you doe draw my Spirits from me, With new lamenting ancient Over-fights. But I must goe, and meet with Danger there, Or it will seek me in another place, And finde me worse provok'd.

Wife. O flye to Scotland, Thus that the Nobles, and the armed Commons, Haue of their Puissancie made a little taile.

Lady. If they get ground, and vantage of the King, Then loyne you with them, like a Ribbe of Steele, To make Strength fronger. But, for all our loues, First let them trye themselues. So did your Sonne, He was fo suffer'd; so came I a Widow: And neuer shall have length of Life enough, To raine vpon Remembrance with mine Eyes, That it may grow, and sprowt, as high as Heauen, For Recordation to my Noble Husband.

NORTH. Come, come, come into in with me, with my Minde As with the Tyde, Iuell'd vp vnto his height, That makes a still-hand, running nether way. Faine would I goe to meet the Arch-bishop, But many thousand Reasons hold me backe. I will reflowe for Scotland: there am I, Till Time and Vantage craue my company.

Scena Quarta.

Enter two Drawers.

2. Dravet. Thou say'lt true: the Prince once fet a Dih of Applejohns before him, and told him there were five more Sir John: and, putting off his Hat, sayd, I will now take my issue of these fixe drie, round, old-wither'd Knights. It angered him to the heart: but hee hate for got that.

1. Dravet. Why then cover, and fet them downe: and see if thou cant finde out Sneakers Noble; Miftris Tære-

2. Syrirra,* heere will be the Prince, and Master Points, anon: and they will put on two of our Jerkins, and Aprons, and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1. Dravet. Then here will be old Viis: it will be an excellent Dramagem.

2. Dravet. Ile see if I can finde out Sneakers.

Enter Hotteaff, and Dol.

Hoff. Sweet-heart, me thinkes now you are in an excellent good temperallite: your Pulidge beastes as extraordinary, as heart would desire; and your Colour (I warrant you) is as red as any Rofe. But you haue drunk too much Canaries, and that's a maruellous fear-

HALFE. Why that was well faid: A good heart's worth Gold. Looke, here comes Sir John.

Enter Faltstaf.

Falst. When Arthur first in Court.—(emptie the Jordan) and was a worthy King: How now Miftris Dol?

Hoff. Sick of a Calme: yea, good-footh.

Falst. So is all her Seft: if they be once in a Calme, they are sick.

Dol. You muddie Rafaull, is that all the comfort you give me?

Falst. You make fat Rafaulls, Miftris Dol.

Dol. I make them? Gluttonie and Diseases make them, I make them not.

Falst. If the Cooke make the Gluttonie, you helpe to make the Diseases (Dol) we catch of you (Dol) we catch of you: Grant that, my poore Vurret, grant that.

Dol. I marry, our Chaynes, and our jewels.

Falst. Your Brooches, Pearles, and Owches: For to ferue bravely, is to come halting off: you know, to come off the Brench, with his Pikes bent bravely, and to Surge-

Hoff. Why this is the old fashion: you two neuer meetes, but you fall to some difcord: you are both (in good troth) as Rheumatike as two drie Tofles, you cannot one beare with another Confirmities. What the good-yere? One muft beare, and that muft bee you: you are the weaker Vezelf; as they say, the emptier Vezelf.

Dol. Can a weake emptie Vezelf beare such a huge full Hogs-head? There's a whole Marchants Venture of Breeux-Staffe in him: you haue not seene a Hulke better stufft in the Holde. Come, lie be friends with thee.

Jacky. Thou art going to the Warres, and whether I shall euer see thee againe, or no, there is no body cares.

Enter Dravet.

Dravet. Sir, Ancient Pitésell is below, and would speake with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering Rafaull, let him not come hither: it is the foule-mouth'dt Rouge in Eng-

Hoff. If hee swagger, let him not come here: I must lie amongst my Neighbors, Ile no Swaggerers: I am liue amongst my Neighbors, and fame, with the very best: that the doore, there comes no Swaggerers here: I haue not liu'd all this while, to haue swaggering now: that the doore, I praye you.

Falst. Do'lt thou haue, Hotteaffe?

Hoff. Pray you pacifie your selfe (Sir John) there comes no Swaggerers heree.

Falst. Do'lt
Falst. Do't thou heare? it is mine Ancient.

Hofl. Tilly-fally(Sir Iohn)neuer tell me, your ancient Swaggerer comes not in my doores. I was before Master Tisck the Deputie, the other day : and as hee faid to me, it was no longer agoe then Wednesday laft: Neighbour Quicly (fayes hee;) Master Dombe,our Minifter, was by then: Neighbour Quicly (fayes hee) receive those that are Ciull: for (fayth hee) you are in an ill Name: now hee faid so, I can tell whereupon: for(fayes hee) you are an honest Woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what Guests you receive: Receive (fayes hee) no swaggering Companions. There comes none heere. You would bleffe you to hear what hee faid. No, Ile no Swaggerers.

Falst. Hee's no Swaggerer(Hofstef:): a tame Cheater, hee: you may stroake him as gently, as a Puppy Greyhound: hee will not swagger with a Barbaric Henne, if her feathers turne backe in any fiew of reftistance. Call him vp.(Drawer.)

Hofl. Cheater, call you him? I will barre no honest man my house, nor no Cheater: but I doe not loue swagger: I am the worfe when one fayes, swagger: Feele Maffers, how I flakers looke you, I warrant you.

Falst. So you doe, Hofteff.

Hofl. Doe I? yes, in very truth doe I,if it were an Ap- pen Leafe: I cannot abide Swaggerers.

Enter Piflol, and Bardolph and bin Boy.

Piflol. Saue you, Sir Iohn.

Falst. Welcome Ancient Piflol. Here(Piflol) I charge you with a Cup of Sacke: doe you difcharge vpon mine Hofteff.

Piflol. I will difcharge vpon her (Sir Iohn) with two Bullets.

Falst. She is Pifftoll-proofe (Sir) you fhall hardly offend her.

Hofl. Come, Ile drinke no Proofs, nor no Bullets: I will drink no more then will doe me good, for no mans pleafure, I.

Piflol. Then to you (Miftris Dorothee) I will charge you.

'Dol. Charge me? I fcorne you (fcurue Companion) what? you poore, bafe, raffally, cheating, lacke-Linnen-Mate: away you mouldie Rogue, away; I am meat for your Mafter.

Piflol. I know you, Miftris Dorothee.

Dol. Away you Cut-purfe Rafcall, you filthy Bung, away: By this Wine, Ile thrust my Knife in your mouldie Chappes,if you play the fwee Cuttle with me. Away you Bottle-Ale Rafcall, you Basket-hilt fale Ingler, you. When since, I pray you, Sir? what, with two Points on your shoulder? much.

Piflol. I will mutther your Ruffe, for this.

Hofl. No, good Captaine Piflol: not heere, sweete Captaine.

Dol. Captaine? thou abominable damn'd Cheater, art thou not afham'd to be call'd Captaine? If Captaines were of my minde, they would trunchion you out, for tak- ing their Names vpon you, before you have earn'd them. You a Captaine? you falue,for what? for tearing a poore Whores Ruffe in a Bawdy-house? Hee a Captaine? hang him Rogge, hee liues vpon mouldie flew'd-Praines, and dry'de Cakes. A Captaine? These Villaines will make the word Captaine odious: Therefore Captaines had neede looke to it.

Bard. 'Pray thee goe downe, good Ancient.

Falst. Heareke thes hither, Miftris Dol.

Piflol. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporall Bardolph, I could teare her: Ile be reueng'd on her.

Piflol. Ile see her damn'd first: to Pluto's damn'd Lake, to the Infernal Deppe, where Erubes and Tortures vilde alfo. Hold Hooke and Line, lay I: Downe: downe Dogges, downe Fates: haue wee not Hiren here? Bardolph. Good Captaine Piflol be quiet, it is very late: I beleefe you now, aggravate your Choler.

Piflol. Thefe be good Humors indeede. Shall Pack-Horses, and hollow-pumper'd Iades of Afia, which can-not goe but thirtie miles a day, compare with Ceasar, and with Caniballs, and Traion Greekses? nay, rather damme them with King Cerberus, and let the Welkin roare: shall we fall foule for Toyes?

Hofl. By my troth Captaine, these are very bitter words.

'Bard. Be gone, good Ancient: this will grow to a Brawle anone.

Piflol. Die men, like Dogges; glue Crownes like Pannes: Haue we not Hiren here?

Hofl. On my word(Captaine)there's none such here. What the good-yere,doe you thinke I would deny her? I pray be quiet.

Piflol. Then feed, and be fat (my faire Calipolis, )Come, give me some Sack, Si fortune me tormente, fierato me con- tente. Feare wee brood-fides? No, let the Fiend glue fire: Give me some Sack: and Sweet-heart lythe thou there: Come wee to full Points here, and are et cetera's no- thing?

Falst. Piflol, I would be quiet.

Dol. Thruff him downe ftyares, I cannot endure fuch a Faulian Rafcall.

Pif梭. Thruff him downe ftyares? know we not Gallow- way Naggess?

Falst. Quoit him downe (Bardolph) like a fhouie-groat fhilling: nay, if hee doe nothing but fpeeke nothing, hee shall be nothing here.

'Bard. Come, get you downe ftyares.

Piflol. What? fhal wee haue Inclifon? fhal wee emb- rew? then Death rocke me afepepe, abridge my dollfule days: why then let grievous, gaily, gaping Wounds, vntwin'd the Sifters three: Come Aropos, I say.

Hofl. Here's good flute toward.

Falst. Gloe me my Rapier, Boy.

Dol. I prethee lacc, I prethee doe not draw.

Falst. Get you downe ftyares.

Hofl. Here's a goodly tumult: Ile forswearke keeping house, before Ile be in these tiritus, and frights. So: Murther I warrant now. Alas, alas, put vp your naked Wea- pon, put vp your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee lacc be quiet, the Rafcall is gone: ah, you whorfon little valiant Villaine,you.

Hofl. Are you not hurt 't'h'Groyne? I thought hee made a threed Thruft at your Belly.

Falst. Haue you turn'd him out of doores?

Bardolph. Yes Sir: the Rafcall's drunke: you haue hurt him (Sip)in the shouder.

Falst. A Rafcall to braue me.

Dol. Ah, you sweet little Rogue, you: alas,poore Ape, how thou sweat'st? Come, let me wipe thy Face: Come, let you whorfon Chops: Ah Rogue, I love thee: Thou art
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

art as valorous as Hefter of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and tenne times better then the nine Worthies: ah Villaine.

Fal. A raftally Slaue, I will toffe the Rogue in a Blanket.

Del. Doe, if thou dar'ft for thy heart: if thou doo'ft, Ile canaus thee betweene a paar of Sheetces.

Enter Mufique.

Post. The Mufique is come, Sir.

Del. And thou followedst him like a Church: thou worfon little tyde Bartholomew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leave fighting on dayes, and feyning on nights, and begin to patch vp thine old Body for Heauen?

Enter the Prince and Paines daisguist'd.

Fal. Peace (good Del.) doe not speake like a Death-head: doe not bid me remember mine end.

Del. Sirrha, what humor is the Prince of? Fal. A good shallow young fellow: hee would have made a good Panter, hee would have chipp'd Bread well.

Del. They say Paines hath a good Wit.

Fal. Hee a good Wit? hang him Baboone, his Wit is as thick as Tewksburie Muffard: there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Del. Why doth the Prince lose him so then?

Fal. Because their Legges are both of a bignefte: and hee plays at Quoits well, and eate Conger and Fennell, and drinks off Candles ends for Flap-drags, and rides the wilde-Marie with the Boyes, and lumpes vpion Ioynd-flowles, and fweares with a good grace, and weares his Boot very smooth, like vnto the Signe of the Legge: and breedes no bate with telling of disreete stories: and fuch other Gamboll Faculties hee hath, that shew a weake Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admits him; for the Prince himselfe is fuch another: the weight of an hayre will turne the Scales betwixt theire Haker-de-pay.

Prince. Would not this Naue of a Wheele haue his Eares cut off?

Pain. Let vs beat him before his Whore.

Prince. Looke, if the wither'd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Pain. Is it not strange, that Defire should so many yeeres out-live performance?

Fal. Kiffe me Del.

Prince. Saturne and Venus this yeere in Conjunction? What fayes the Almanack to that?

Pain. And looke whether the ferie Trigon, his Man, be not lifting to his Masters old Tables, his Note-Booke, his Counsell-keeper?

Fal. Thou doft give mee flatt'ring Buffes.

Del. Nay truely, I kiffe thee with a most conflant heart.

Fal. I am olde, I am olde.

Del. I love thee better, then I love ere a fcuriue young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Suffe wilt thou have a Kittle of? I shall receive Money on Thursday: thou shalt have a Cappe to morrow. A merrie Song, come: it growes late, wee will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Del. Thou wilt fet me a weeping, if thou say'ft so: proue that ever I dreffe my selfe handfome, till thy returne: well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Prince. Annon, anon, Sir.

Fal. Ha! a Baffard Sonne of the Kings? And art not thou Paines, his Brother?

Prince. Why thou Globe of finfull Continents, what a Life do'th thou lead?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou art a Drawer.

Prince. Very true, Sir: and I come to draw you out by the Eares.

Hoft. Oh, the Lord prefervre thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now Heauen bleffe that Sweete Face of thine: what, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou worfon mad Compound of Maiffe: by this light Fleth, and corrupt Blood, thou art welcome.

Pain. My Lord, hee will drive you out of your reuenge, and turne all to aerryment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You worfon Candle myne you, how wildly did you speake of me euen now, before this honett, vertuous, ciuitall Gentlewman?

Hoft. 'Bleffing on your good heart, and so thee is by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou heare me?

Prince. You and you knew me, as you did when you ranne away by Gods-hill: you knew I was at your back, and spooke it on purpose, to trie my patience.

Fal. No, no, no: not fo: I did not thinke, thou waft within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confelle the wilfull abufe, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abufe (Hall) on mine Honor, no abufe.

Prince. Not to disparaye me? and call me Pantler, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abufe (Hal.)

Pain. No abufe?

I dispraye'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in love with him: In which doing, I have done the part of a carefull Friend, and a true Subieft, and thy Father is to give me thankes for it. No abufe (Hal:) none ( Ned:) none; no Boyes, none.

Prince. See now whether pure Farea, and entire Cowardif, doth not make thee wrong this vertuous Gentlewoman, to close with vs? Is thee of the Wicked? Is thine Hoftesse heere, of the Wicked? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honett Bardolph (whose Zeele burns in his Nose) of the Wicked?

Pain. Answere thou dead Elme,answere.

Fal. The Fiend hath prickt downe Bardolph irreconcileable, and his Face is Lucifer Priu-Kitchin, where hee doth nothing but roft Mault-Wormes: for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Deuill outbids him too.

Prince. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, thee is in Hell alreadie, and burns poure Soules: for the other, I owe her Money; and whether thee bee damn'd for that, I know not.

Hoft. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No,
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Fal. No, I thinke thou art not: I thinke thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another Indisposition vpon thee, for suffering flesh to bee eaten in thy house, contrary to the Law, for which I thinke thou wilt howle.

Holl. All Victuallers doe so: What is a joynt of Mutton, or two, in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, Gentlewoman.

Dol. What fayes your Grace?

Fal. His Grace fayes that, which his flesh rebells against.

Hofi. Who knockes so lowd at doores? Looke to the doore there, Francis?

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now? what newes?

Peto. The King, your Father, is at Westminster, And there are twentie weake and wearied Postes, Come from the North: and as I came along, I met, and ouer-tooke a dozen Captaines, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the Tauernes, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By Heaven (Peto) I feele me much to blame, So idly to prophane the precious time, When Tempeft of Commotion, like the South, Borne with black Vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop vpon our bare vnarmed heads. Glue me my Sword, and Cloake:

Falstaff, good night.

Falst. Now comes in the sweetest Morcell of the night, and wee must hence, and leave it vnpickt. More knocking at the doore? How now? what is the matter?

'Bard. You must away to Court, Sir, presently, A dozen Captaines flay at doore for you.

Falst. Pay the Muttons, Sirrha: farewell Hostefe, farewell Dol. You fee (my good Wenches) how men of Merit are sought after: the vnederuer may sleepe, when the man of Aditon is call'd on. Farewell good Wenches: if I be not sent away poste, I will fee you againe, ere I goe.

Dol. I cannot speake: if my heart bee not ready to burst.-- Well (sweete Isaac) have a care of thy selfe.

Falst. Farewell, farewell.

Hofi. Well, fare thee well: I have knowne thee thefe twentie nine yeeres, come Pecod-time: but an honest, and truer-hearted man—— Well, fare thee well.

Bard. Misfit nice-doost.

Hofi. What is the matter?

Bard. Bid Misfit nice-doost come to my Master.

Hofi. Oh runne Dol, runne: runne, good Dol.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, with a Page.

King. Go, call the Earles of Surrey, and of Warwick: But ere they come, bid them ore-reade thefe Letters, And well consider of them: make good speed. Exit.

How many thousand of my poorest Subjects Are at this howre appeare? O Sleep, O gentle Sleepe, Natures soft Nurse, how haue I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weign my eye-lids downe, And sleepe my Sences in Forgetfulness?

Why rather (Sleepe) lyest thou in smoake Cribs, Vpon vnaefie Pallads stretching thee, And huiuft with buffing Night, eyes to thy slumber, Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great?

Vnder the Canopies of costly State, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest Melodie?

O thou dull God, why lyest thou with the wilde, In loathsome Beds, and leaue'th the Kingly Couch,

A Watch-cafe, or a common Larum-Bell? Wilt thou, vpon the high and giddie Maff,

Scale vp the Ship-boyes Eyes, and rock his Braines, In Cradle of the rude imperious Surge,

And in the visitation of the Windes, Who take the Ruffian Billowes by the top, Curling their montrous heads, and hanging them With deaff'ning Clamors in the flipp'y Clouds, That with the hurly, Death it selfe awakes? Canst thou (O partiall Sleepe) guie thy Repose

To the wet Sea-Boy, in an hour fo rude:

And in the calme, and most stillliefte Night,

With all appliances, and means to boote, Deny it to a King? Then happy Lowe, lye downe, Vnaefie lyes the Head, that weares a Crowne.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

War. Many good-morrows to your Maiestie.

King. Is it good-morrow, Lords?

War. 'Tis One a Clock, and palf.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all (my Lords:) Have you read o're the Letters that I sent you?

War. We have (my Liege.)

King. Then you perceiue the Body of our Kingdome, How foule it is: what ranke Diseases grow,

And with what danger, neere the Heart of it?

War. It is but as a Body, yet disempier'd,

Which to his former strength may be refor'd,

With good aduice, and little Medicine:

My Lord Northumberland will foone be cool'd.

King. Oh Heauen, that one might read the Book of Fate, And folle the revolution of the Times

Make Mountains leuelle, and the Continent

(Wearie of folide firmenete) melt it felle

Into the Sea: and other Times, to fee

The heache Girdle of the Ocean

Too wide for Neptunes hipples; how Chances mockes

And Changes fill the Cuppe of Alteration

With divers Liquors, "Tis not tenne yeeres gone,

Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together; and in two yeeres after,

Were they at Warres. It is but eight yeeres since,

This Percie was the man, neerest my Soule,

Who, like a Brother, tody in my Affaires,

And layd his Loue and Life vnder my foot:

Yes, for my fake, even to the eyes of Richard

Gave him.defiance. But which of you was by

The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Skallow and Silence: with Moultie, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calf.

Skal. Come-on, come-on, come-on: give mee your Hand, Sir; give mee your Hand, Sir: an early stirrer, by the Rood. And how doth my good Cousin Silence?

Sil. Good-morrow, good Cousin Skallow.

Skal. And how doth my Cousin, your Bed-fellow? and your fairest Daughter, and mine, my God-Daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a blacke Ousel (Cousin Shallow.)

Skal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say my Cousin William is become a good Scholler? hee is at Oxford still, is hee not?

Sil. Indeede Sir, to my cost.

Skal. Hee must then to the Innes of Court shortly: I was onc of Clemens Inne; where (I thinke) they will talke of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call’d luffie Shallow then (Cousin.)

Skal. I was call’d any thing: and I would have done any thing indeede too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Dot of Staffordshire, and blacke George Bar, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squeel a Cot-fal-man, you had not foure fuch Swinge-bucklers in all the Innes of Court againe: And I may say to you, wee knew where the Bon-a-Rita’s were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was Jacke Falstaff (now Sir Iohn) a Boy, and Page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir Iohn (Cousin) that comes hither anon about Souldiers?

Skal. The fame Sir Iohn, the very fame: I saw him breake Scoggan’s Head at the Court-Gate, when he was a Crack, not thus high: and the very fame day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a Fruterer, behind Greyes-Inne. Oh the mad dayes that I haue spent! and to fee how many of mine olde Acquaintance are dead?

Sil. Wee shall all follow (Cousin.)

Skal. Certainly: ’tis certaine: very sure, very sure: Death is certaine to all, all shall dye. How a good Yoke of Bullocks at Stamford Fayre?

Sil. Truly Cousin, I was not there.

Skal. Death is certaine. Is old Double of your Towne living yet?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Skal. Dead? See, fee: hee drew a good Bow: and dead? hee shot a fine Shooe. Iohn of Gaunt loued him well, and beeted much Money on his head. Dead? hee would have clapt in the Clowt at Twelve-score, and carried you a fore-hand Shaft at fourteene, and fourteene, and a half, that it would have done a mans heart good to fee. How a score of Ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good Ewes may be worth tenne pounds.

Skal. And is olde Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and his Boy.

Sil. Heere come two of Sir Iohn Falstaffes Men (as I thinke.)

Skal. Good-morrow, honest Gentlemen.

Bard. I beeche you, which is Iuffice Shallow?

Skal. I am Robert Shallow (Sir) a poore Esquire of this Country, and one of the Kings Iuffices of the Peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My Captaine (Sir) commands him to you: my Captaine, Sir Iohn Falstaff: a tall Gentleman, and a moft gallant Leader.

Skal. Hee greeteth me well? (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight? may I ask, how my Lady his Wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a Souldier is better accommodation, then with a Wife.

Skal. It is well said, Sir; and it is well said, indeede, too: Better accommodation? it is good, yea indeede is it: good phrares are surely, and every where very commendable. Accommodated, it comes of Accommodate: very good, a good Phrafe.

Bard. Pardon, Sir, I have heard the word. Phrafe call you it? by this Day, I know not the Phrafe: but I will maintaine the Word with my Sword, to bee a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Accommodated: that is, when a man is (as they fay) accommodated: or, when a man is, being whereby whereby he thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. It is very just : Looke, heere comes good Sir John. Glue me your hand, glue me your Worships good hand : Trust me, you look well: and beare your yeares very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good M. Robert Shallow: Master Sure-card as I thinkne.

Shal. No sir John, it is my Cusin Silence : in Commissi- on with mee.

Fal. Good M. Silence, it well beseeth you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good Worship is welcome.

Fal Fye, this is hot weather (Gentlemen) have you prouised me heere halfe a dozen of sufficient men?

Shal. Marry have we fir: Will you fit?

Fal. Let me see them, I befeech you.

Shal. Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see: fo, fo, fo: yea marry Sir. Raphe Mouldie: let them appear as I call: let them do fo, let them do fo: Let mee see, Where is Mouldie?

Moul. Heere, if it please you.

Shal. What think you (Sir John) a good limb'd fel- low: yong, strong, and of good friends?

Fal. Is thy name Mouldie?

Moul. Yea, if it please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert vs'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, most excellent. Things that are mou- die, lacke vie: very singular good. Well saide Sir John, very well saide.

Fal. Prick me him.

Moul. I was prickt well enough before, if you could haue me alone: my old Dame will be vndone now, for one to doe her Husbandry, and her Drudgery; you need not to haue prickt me, there are other men fitter to goe out, then I.

Fal. Go too: peace Mouldie, you shall goe. Mouldie, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent?

Shallow. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside : Know you where you are? For the other sir John : Let me see:Simon Shadow.

Fal. I marry, let me haue him to fit vnder: he's like to be a cold fouldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Heere fir.

Fal. Shadow, whose sonne art thou ?

Shad. My Mothers sonne, Sir.

Falst. Thy Mothers sonne: like enough, and thy Fa- thers shadow : fo the sonne of the Female, is the shadow of the Male : it is often fo indeede, but not of the Fathers substancc.

Shal. Do you like him, sir John?

Falst. Shadow will serve for Summer : pricke him: For wee haue a number of shadowes to fill vppe the Mutter- Bookes.

Shal. Thomas Wart?

Falst. Where's he?

Wart. Heere fir.

Falst. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea fir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged Wart.

Shal. Shall I pricke him downe,

Sir John?

Falst. It were superfluous: for his apparel is built vp- on his backe, and the whole frame stands vpon pinsprick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it fir: you can doe it: I commend you well.

Francis Feble.

Feble. Heere fir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feble?

Feble. A Womans Taylor fir.

Shal. Shall I pricke him, fir?

Fal. You may:

But if he had beene a mans Taylor, he would haue prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Bat- talle, as thou haft done in a Womans petticoat?

Feble. I will doe my good will fir, you can haue no more.

Falst. Well said, good Womans Tailour : Well sayde Courageous Feble : thou wilt bee as valiant as the wrath- ful Doue, or most magnanimous Moue. Pricke the womans Tailour well Master Shallow, deepe Master Shal- low.

Feble. I would Wart might have gone fir.

Fal. I would thou wert a mans Tailor, that y might't mend him, and make him fit to goe. I cannot put him to a private fouldier, that is the Leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most Forcible Feble.

Feble. It shall suffice.

Falst. I am bound to thee, severend Feble. Who is the next?

Shal. Peter Bulcalf thee of the Greene.

Falst. Yea marry, let vs see Bulcalf.

Bul. Heere fir.

Fal. Trust me, a likely Fellow. Come, pricke me Bul- calf'till he beare againe.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captaine.

Fal. What do'th thou roare before th'art prickt.

Bul. Oh fir, I am a defesed man.

Fal. What diseset haft thou ?

Bul. A whorson cold fir, a cough fir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affayres, vpon his Coronation day, fir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the Warres in a Gowne : we will haue thy Cold, and I will take such order, that thy Friends shall ring for thee. Is heere all ?

Shal. There is two more called then your number : you must haue but foure heere fir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will goe drinke with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to fee you in good troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O sir John, doe you remember since wee lay all night in the Winde-mill, in S Georges Field.

Falstaff. No more of that good Master Shallow: No more of that.

Shal. Ha? It was a merry night. And is Lane Night- work alie?

Fal. She lives, M. Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Neuer, neuer: she would always sy se she could not abide M. Shallow.

Shal. I could anger her to the heart : thee was then a Bon-Roba. Dobh she hold her owne well.

Fal. Old,old, M. Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old, she cannot choose but be old.
old: certaine fierce old: and had Robin Night-work, by old Night-work, before I came to Clements Inne.

Sir. That's fifty-five yeeres agoe.

Skal. Ha, Cousin Silence, that thou hadst feene that, that this Knight and I have feene: hah, Sir John, said I well?

Falst. Wee haue heard the Chymes at mid-night, Maifer Shallow.

Skal. That wee haue, that wee haue: in faith, Sir John, wee haue: our watch-word was, Hem-Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner; come, let's to Dinner: Oh the daies that wee haue feene. Come, come.

But Good Maifer Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here is foure Harry tenne failings in French Crownes for you: in very truth, Sir, I had as lief be hang'd fir, as goe: and yet, for mine owne part, I do not care; but rather, because I am vnwilling, and for mine owne part, have a defire to fay with my friends: else, fir, I did not care, for mine owne part, so much.

Bard. Go-too: stand aside.

Mould. And good Maifer Corporall Captaine, for my old Dames sake, stand my friend: fere hath no body to doe any thing about her, when I am gone: and she is old, and cannot help her selle: you shall haue forit, fir.

Bard. Go-too: stand aside.

Fecle. I care not, a man can die but once: wee owe a death. I will never beare a bafe minde: if it be my deftinie, so: if it be not, so: no man is too good to fere his Prince: and let it goe which way it will, he that dies this yeere, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said, thou art a good fellow.

Fecle. Nay, I will beare no bafe minde.

Falst. Come fir, which men shall I haue?

Skal. Foure of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I haue three pound, to free Mouldie and Bull-calf.

Falst. Go-too: well.

Skal. Come, fir John, which four will you haue?

Falst. Doe you chuse for me.

Skal. Marry then, Mouldie, Bull-calf, Fecle, and Shaddock.

Mould. Mouldie, and Bull-calf: for you Mouldie, fay at home, till you are past servise: and for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come into it: I will none of you.

Skal. Sir John, Sir John, doe not your selle wrong, they are your likefey men, and I would haue you seru'd with the best.

Falst. Will you tell me (Maifer Shallow) how to chufe a man? Care I for the Limbe, the Thewes, the stature, bulke, and bigge affemblance of a man? give mee the spirit (Maifer Shallow.) Where's Worts? you see what a ragged appearance it is: hee shall charge you, and discount you, with the motion of a Pewtgers Hammer: come off, and on, twitter then hee that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this name halfe-tied fellow, Shaddock, give me this man: hee pretens no marke to the Enemie, the foe-man may with as great ayme leuell at the edge of a Pen-knife: and for a Retract, how swiftly will this Fecle, the Womans Taylor, runne off. O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a Caliver into Warts hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold Wart, Trauerse: thus, thus.

Falst. Come, manage me your Caliver: for very well, go-too, very good, exceeding good. O, give me always a little, leane, old, chopt, bald Shot. Well said Wart, thou art a good Scab: hold, there is a Tetter for thee.

Skal. Hee is not his Crafts-maifer, hee doth not doe it right. I remember at Mile-end-Greene, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sir Daugnet in Acturs Show: there was a little quiffer fellow, and hee would manage you his Pece thus: and hee would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: Rah, tah, tah, would hee fay, Bowence would hee fay, and away againe would hee goe, and againe would he come: I shal never fee such a fellow.

Falst. These fellows will doe well, Maifer Shallow. Farewell Maifer Silence, I will not vse many wordes with you: fare you well, Gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to night. Bardolph, give the Souldiers Coates.

Skal. Sir John, Heauen bleffe you, and prosper your Affaires, and send vs Peace. As you returne, visit my house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: per-adventure I will with you to the Court.

Falst. I would you would, Maifer Shallow.

Skal. Go-too: I haue speke at a word. Fare you well.

Exit.

Falst. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bardolph, leade the men away. As I returne, I will fetch off these Iuftices: I doe fee the bottome of Iuftice Shallow. How sufiect wee old men are to this vice of Lying? This fame fana'd Iuftice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildenesse of his Youth, and the Feates hee hath done about Tarnbull-freet, and every third word a Lye, duer pay'd to the hearer, then the Turkes Tribute. I doe remember him at Clements Inne, like a man made after Supper,of a Cheefe-paring. When hee was naked, hee was, for all the world, like a forked Radifh, with a Head fantastically car'd upon it with a Knife. Hee was fo forlorne, that his Dimenions ( to any thicke fight) were inuincible. Hee was the very Genius of Famine: hee came euer in the rere-ward of the Fashion: And now is this Vices Dagger become a Squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if hee had beene sworn Brothre to him: and Ile be sworn hee neuer faw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he hurft his Head, for crowding among the Marshals men. I saw it, and told John of Gaunt, hee beat his owne Name, for you might haue tru'd him and all his Apparel into an Edle-skinne: the Cafe of a Treble Hoe-boy was a Manfhop for him: a Court: and now hath hee Land, and Beuues. Well, I will be with him, if I returne: and it shal goe hard, but I will make him a Philosophers two Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bayt for the old Pike, I see no reason, in the Law of Nature, but I may snap at him. Let time fhape, and there an end.

Excut.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Arch-bishop, Mowbray, Hallings, Weltherland, Caleulce.

Biff. What is this Forrest call'd?

Hall. 'Tis Gualtree Forrest, and 'tis not pleafe your Grace.

Biff. Here stand (my Lords) and send discouers forth, To know the numbers of our Enemies.
Haft. Wee haue sent forth alreadie.

Bijb. 'Tis well done.

My Friends, and Brethren (in these great Affairs)
I must acquaint you, that I haue receiu'd
New-dated Letters from Northumberland:
Their cold intent, tenure, and substance thus,
Here doth hee with his Perfon, with such Powers
As might hold fortance with his Quality,
The which hee could not leve: whereupon
Hee is return'd, to rife his growing Fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in heartie prayers,
That your Attempts may ouer-lie the hazard,
And fearfull meeting of their Opponets.

Mow. Thus do the hopes we have in him, touch ground,
And daft themselues to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Haft. Now? what newes?

Mow. Steeft of this Forrest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly forme, comes on the Enemy:
And by the ground they hide, I judge their number
Upon, or nere, the rate of thirtie thousand.

Mow. The iuft proportion that we gave them out.
Let vs fway-on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmerland.

Bijb. What well-appointed Leader fronts vs here?

Mow. I thinke it is my Lord of Westmerland.

Wefi. Health, and faire greeting from our Generall,
The Prince, Lord John, and Duke of Lancaster.

Bijb. Say on (my Lord of Westmerland) in peace:
What doth concern your comming?

Wefi. Then (my Lord)

Vnto your Grace doe I in chief adrefle
The fubfance of my Speech. If that Rebellion
Came like it felfe, in bafe and abfurd Routs,
Led on by bloody Youth, guarded with Rage,
And countenaunce'd by Boyes, and Beggerie:
I fay, if damn'd Commotion fo appeare,
In his true, natue, and moft proper shape,
You (Reuerend Father, and thefe Noble Lords)
Had not beene here, to drefs the ougley forme
Of bafe, and bloody Infurrection,
With your faire Honors. You, Lord Arch-bifhop,
Whole Sea is by a Ciuiti Peace maintaine'd,
Whole Beard, the Siluer Hand of Peace hath touch'd,
Whole Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd,
Whole white Inveiments figure Innocence,
The Dowe, and very blefled Spirit of Peace,
Wherefore doe you fo ill tranflate your felfe,
Out of the Speech of Peace, that bears fuch grace,
Into the harf and boytrous Tongue of Warre?
Turning your Bookes to Graues, your Inke to Blood,
Your Pennes to Launces, and your Tongue diuine
To a lowd Trumpet, and a Point of Warre.

Bijb. Wherefore doe I this? fo the Queftion stands.
Briefely to this end: Wee are all difeas'd,
And with our forfeittings, and wanton howres,
Have brought our felues into a burning Feuer,
And wee muft bleed for it: of which Difcase,
Our late King Richard (being infected) dy'd.
But (my moft Noble Lord of Westmerland)
I take not on me here as a Phyfician,
Nor doe I, as an Enemy to Peace,

Troope in the Throng of Militarie men:
But rather fhew a while like fearefull Warre,
To dyet ranke Minde, fick of Happineffe,
And purge th'oiberufions, which begin to stop
Our very Veines of Life: hear me more plainly.
I haue in equall balance iuftly weigh'd,
What wrongs our Arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And finde our Griefes heauier then our Offences.
Wee fee which way the freame of Time doth runne,
And are enforc'd from our moft quiet there,
By the rough Torrent of Occafion,
And haue the fummarie of all our Griefes
(When time shall ferue) to shew in Articles;
Which long ere this, wee offer'd to the King,
And might, by no Suit,ayne our Audience:
When wee are wrong'd, and would vnfold our Griefes,
Wee are deny'd access unto his Perfon,
Euen by thofe men, that moft haue done vs wrong.
The dangers of the daies but newly gone,
Whole memorie is written on the Earth
With yet appearing blood; and the examples
Of every Minutes incantane (prefent now)
Hath put vs in thefe ill-befeeing Armes:
Not to brake Peace, or any Branch of it,
But to eftabliff here a Peace indeafe,
Concurring both in Name and Qualitie.

Wefi. When ever yet was your Appeal deny'd?
Wherein haue you beene galled by the King?

What Peere hath beene fuborn'd, to grate on you,
That you should feale this lawleffe bloody Booke
Of forg'd Rebellion, with a Seale diuine?

Bijb. My Brother generall, the Common-wealth,
I make my Quarrell, in particular.

Wefi. There is no neede of any fuch redrefs:
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mow. Why not to him in part, and to vs all,
That feele the bruises of the daies before,
And affuer the Condition of these Times
To lay a haue and veneuell Hand vpon our Honors?

Wefi. O my good LordMembray,
Confreure the Times to their Necelfities,
And you hall fay (indeede) it is the Time,
And not the King, that doth you injuries.

Yet for your part, it not appears to me,
Either from the King, or in the prefent Time,
That you should have an yach of any ground
To build a Griefe on: were you not refidor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolkes Seignories,
Your Noble, and right well remembred Fathers?

Mow. What thing, in Honor, had my Father loft,
That need to be reui'd, and breath'd in me?
The King that lou'd him, as the State flood then,
Was forc'd, perforce compell'd to banifie him:
And then, that HenryBallingleby and hee
Being mounted, and both rowfed in their Seats,
Their neighing Courfiers daring of the Sperre,
Their armed Staues in charge, their Beauers downe,
Their eyes of fire, sparkling through fights of Steele,
And the lowd Trumpet blowing them together.
Then, then, when there was nothing could haue fay'd
My Father from the Breaf of Ballingleby;
O, when the King did throw his Wader downe,
(As his owne Life hung vpon the Staife hee threw)
Then threw hee downe himfelfe, and all their Lives,
That by Indictment, and by dint of Sword,
Haue since mil-carried vnder Ballingleby.
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Weft. You speak (Lord Mowbray) now you know not what. The Earl of Hereford was reputed then In England the most valiant Gentleman. Who knowe's, on whom Fortune would then have smil'd? But if your Father had beene Victor there, Hee ne're had borne it out of Countrie. For all the Countrie, in a generall voyce, Cry'd hate vpon him: and all their prayers, and lour, Were set on Herford, whom they doted on, And blest'd, and grac'd, and did more then the King. But this is meere digression from my purpose. Here come I from our Princely Generall, To know your Grieues; to tell you, from his Grace, That hee will give you Audience: and wherein It shal appear, that your demands are just, You shall enjoy them, ever thing set off, That must so much as thinke you Enemies. Men. But hee hath forc'd vs to compel this Offer, And it proceeds from Policy, not Love. Weft. Mowbray, you ouer-weene to take it fo: This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Fear. For loe, within a Ken our Army lyes, Vpon mine Honor, all too confident To give admittance to a thought of Fear. Our Battailse is more full of Names then yours, Our Men more perfect in the wfe of Armes, Our Armor all as strong, our Caufe the best; Then Reason will, our hearts should be as good. Say you not then, your Offer is compell'd. Men. Well, by my will, wee shall admit no Parley. Weft. That argues but the shame of your offence: A rotten Cafe abides no handling. Hoft. Hath the Prince John a full Commission, In very ample vertue of his Father, To hear, and abolutely to determine Of what Conditions wee shall stand vpon? Weft. That is intended in the Generals Name: I mow you may so much as think of a Question. Bifh. Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Schedule, For this contains our generall Grievances: Each seuerall Article herein redres'd, All members of our Caufe, both here, and hence, That are infinewed to this Action, Acquited by a true subfiantall forme, And prefent execution of our wills, To vs, and to our purposes confin'd, Wee come within our awfull Banks againe, And knit our Powers to the Arme of Peace. Weft. This will I fwo the Generall: Please you Lords, In fight of both our Battailses, wee may meete At either end in peace: which Heauen fo frame, Or to the place of difference call the Swords, Which must decide it. Bifh. My Lord, wee will doe fo. Men. There is a thing within my Boforme tells me, That no Conditions of our Peace can stand. Hoft. Fear ye not, that if wee can make our Peace Vpon such large termes, and fo absolute, As our Conditions shall confit vpon, Our Peace shall stand as firme as Rockie Mountains. Men. I, but our valuation shall be fuch, That every flight, and falfe-derived Caufe, Yes, every idle, nice, and wanton Reason, Shall, to the King, taffe of this Action: That were our Royall faiths, Martyrs in Love, Wee shall be winnowed with fo rough a winde,
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Vnder the counterfeited Zeale of Heaven,
The Subiects of Heaven's Substitute, my Father,
And both against the Peace of Heaven, and him,
Hauie here vp-iwarmed them.

Bijb. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your Fathers Peace:
But (as I told my Lord of Westmerland)
The Time (mil-order'd) doth in common fence
Crowd vs. and crucr vs., to this monstroes Forme,
To hould our safetie vp, I sent your Grace.
The parcels, and particulars of our Grievs,
The which hath beene with fcorne shou'd from the Court:
Whereon this Hydra-Sonne of Warre is borne,
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charmed asleepe,
With graunt of our most luft and right deires;
And true Obedience, of this Madneffe cur'd,
Stoope tamely to the foot of Malefie.

Mow. If not, wee readie are to trye our fortunes,
To the laft man.

Haft. And though wee here fall downe,
Wee haue Supplies, to fecome our Attempt:
If they mil-carry, theirs shall secound them.
And fo, facceu of Michlefe shall be borne,
And Heire from Heire shall hold this Quarrell vp,
Whiles England shall haue generation.

Iohn. You are too shallow (Haftings)
Much too shallow,
To found the bottome of the after-Times.

Weft. Pleaseth your Grace, to anfwere them directly,
How farre-forth you doe like their Articles.

Iohn. I like them all, and doe allow them well;
And Ieware here, by the honor of my blood,
My Fathers purpos have beene mis frooke,
And fome, about him, have too lufily
Wrested his meaning, and Authoritie.
My Lord, these Grievses shall be with speed redrect;
Upon my Life, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your Powers vnto their feueral Counties,
As wee will ours: and here, betweene the Armies,
Let's drinke together friendly, and embrace,
That all their eyes may beare thofe Tokens home,
Of our restored Loue, and Amitie.

Bijb. I take your Princely word, for these redressers.

Iohn. I glie it you, and will maintaine my word:
And thereupon I drinke vnto your Grace.

Haft. Goe Captain, and deliver to the Armie
This news of Peace: let them haue pay, and part:
I know, it will well please them.

High thee Captain. Exit.

Bijb. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.

Weft. I pledge your Grace:
And if you know what paines I haue benev'd,
To breede this present Peace,
You would drinke freely: but my loue to you,
Shall shew it felle more openly hereafter.

Bijb. I doe not doubt you.

Weft. I am glad of it.

Health to my Lord, and gentle Cousin Mowbray.

Mow. You with me health in very happy felacion,
For I am, on the sodaine, something ill.

Bijb. Against ill Chances, men are ever merry,
But heauenelye fore-runnens the good event.

Weft. Therefore be merry (Cooze) fince sodaine sorrow
Serves to fay thus: some good thing comes to morowe.

Bijb. Believe me, I am paffing light in spirit.

Mow. So much the worfe, if your owne Rule be true.

John. The word of Peace is render'd: hearkie how they shouht.

Mow. This had beene chearfull, after Victorie.

Bijb. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:
For then both parties nobly are sub'd
And neither partie looser.

Iohn. Goe (my Lord)
And let our Army be discharged too:
And good my Lord (fo please you) let our Traines
March by vp, that wee may perufe the men
Exit.

Bijb. Goe, good Lord Haftings:
And ere they be difmis'd, let them march by.

Iohn. I trueth(Lords) wee shall lyee to night together.

Enter Westmerland.

Now Cousin, wherefore stands our Army still?

Weft. The Leaders having charge from you to stand,
Will not goe off, untill they heare you speake.

Iohn. They know their duties. Enter Haftings.

Haft. Our Army is dispers'd:
Like youthfull Steeres, vnoak'd, they took their courie
East, West, North, South: or like a Schoole, broke vp,
Each hurries towards his home, and (porting place).

Weft. Good tidings (my Lord Haftings) for the which,
I doe areft thee (Traytor) of high Treason:
And you Lord Arch-bishop, and you Lord Mowbray,
Of Captall Treason, I attach you both.

Mow. Is this proceeding luft, and honorable?

Weft. Is your Amembly to?

Bijb. Will you thus breake your faith?

Iohn. I pawn'd thee none:
I promis'd you redrefs of these fame Grievances
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine Honor,
I will performe, with a moft Chriftian care.
But for you (Rebels) looke to tafe the due
Meet for Rebellion, and such Acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these Armes commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolifhly fent hence.
Strike vp your Drummes, purufe the scattard fray,
Heaven, and not wee, haue safely fought to day.
Some guard these Traitors to the Block of Death,
Treasons true Bed, and yeelder yp of breath.

Exeunt. Enter Falstaffe andColleuile.

Falst. What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you?
And of what place, I pray?

Col. I am a Knight, Sir.

And my Name is Colleuile of the Dale.

Falst. Well then, Colleuile is your Name, a Knight is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale.
Colleuile shall be your Name, a Traytor your Degree, and the Dungeon your Place, a place deepe enough: so shall you be Colleuile of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaffe?

Falst. As good a man as he fir, who ere I am: doe yee yeedle fir, or shall I weate for you? If doe weate, they are the drops of thy Louers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowze vp Feare and Trembling, and do obler-ance to my mercy.

Col. I thinke you are Sir John Falstaffe, & in that thought yield me.

Fal. I haue a whole Schoole of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all, speakes anie other word but my name: and I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simplye the moft actiue fellow in Europe:
my wombe, my wombe, my wombe vndoes mee. Here comes our Generall.

§§ 3
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Enter Prince Iohn, and Wetherard.

Iohn. The heat is past, follow no farther now: Call in the Powers, good Cousin Wetherard. Now Falkoff, where have you beene all this while? When every thing is ended, then you come. Thefe tardie Tricks of yours will (on my life) One time, or other, brake some Gallowses back. Falst. I would bee forry (my Lord) but it shou'd bee thus: I newr knew yet, but rebuske and checke was the reward of Valour. Do you think me a Swallow, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Haue I, in my poore and old Motion, the expedition of Thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest ynh of possibillity. I have sowned nine score and oddie Pontes: and heere (trauell-tainted as I am) haue, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sir Iohn Collitile of the Dale, a most furious Knight, and valorous Enemy: But what of that? bee faw me, and yeelded: that I may iulfy fay with the hookes-nee'd fellow of Rome, I came, faw, and ouer-came.

Iohn. It was more of his Courtesie, then your despering.

Falst. I know not: heere hee is, and heere I yeeld him: and I befeech your Grace, let it be book'd, with the rest of this dayes dneys; or I fware, I will have it in a particular Ballad, with mine owne Picture on the top of it (Collitile kifing my foot:) To the which courfe, if I be enfor'd, if you do not all shew like gilt two-pences to me; and, I, in the cleare Skie of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the Full Moone doth the Cynders of the Element (which shew like Pinnes-heads to her) beleue not the Word of the Dale: therefore let me haue right, and let defcrit mount.

Iohn. Thine's too heaute to mount. Falst. Let it shine then.

Iohn. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falst. Let it doe something (my good Lord) that may doe me good, and call it what you will.

Iohn. Is thy Name Collitile?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

Iohn. A famous Rebell art thou, Collitile.

Col. And a famous true Subject tooke him.

Iohn. I am (my Lord) but as my Betters are, That led me hither: had they beene rul'd by me, You shou'd haue wonne them dearer then you haue.

Falst. I know not how they fold themselues, but thou like a kinde fellow, gau'th thy fefe away; and I thanke thee, for thee.

Enter Wetherard.

Iohn. Haue you left pursuitt?

Wef. Retreat is made, and Execution flay'd.

Iohn. Send Collitile, with his Confederates, To Yorke, to perform Execution.

Blunt, leade him hence, and fee you guard him fure.

Exit with Collitile.

And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords) I heare the King, my Father, is fore ficke. Our Newes shalloe goe befor vs, to his Maiestie, Which (Cousin) you shall bare, to comfort him: And wee with fober fpeece will follow you. Falst. My Lord, I befeech you, give me leaue to goe through Gloucestershire: and when you come to Court, fland my good Lord, pray in your good report.

Iohn. Fare you well, Falkoff: 1, in my condition, Shall better speake of you, then you deferve. Exit.

Falst. I would you had but the wit: twere better then your Dukedome. Good faith, this fame young bo-ler-blooded Boy doth nor loue me, nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no maraile, hee drinks no Wine. There's never any of thedem Boyes come to any profe: for thynne Drinkhe doth fo ouer-coole their blood, and making many Fift-Mesles, that they fall into a kinde of Male Greene-ficknoffe: and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fooles, and Cowards: which some of vs shou'd be too, but for inflamation. A good Sherris-Sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the Braine, dryes me there all the foolish, and dull, and cruddie Vapours, which enuiron it: makes it apprehensive, quicke, forger- tiue, full of nimble, fierie, and deeleatable shapes; which delier'd o're to the Voyage, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The second property of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood: which before (cold, and fettled) left the Luer white, and pale; which is the Badge of Paffifianmitie, and Cowar- dize: but the Sherris warmes it, and makes it come from the inwards, to the parts extremes: it illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) guies warming to all the reft of this little Kingdom (Man) to Arme: and then the Vitall Commoners, and in-land pettie Spirits, mufter me all to their Captaine, the Heart; who great, and puffit vp with his Retinue, doth any Deed of Courage: and this Valour comes of Sherris. So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack (for that fets it a-woeke:) and Learning, a meere Hoord of Gold, kept by a Deuill, till Sack commences it, and fets it in act, and vfe. Hereof comes it, that Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood hee did naturally inherit of his Father, bee hath, like leane, firrill, and bare Land, manured, husbanded, and tyll'd, with excellent endeavoure of drinking good, and good flore of fertile Sherris, that hee is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thofand Sonnes, the firft Principle I would teach them, shou'd be to forfsware thine Potious, and to addift themselves to Sack. Enter Bardolph. How now Bardolph?

'Bard. The Arme is discharged all, and gone. Falst. Let them goe: Ile through Gloucestershire, and there will I vfit Master Robert Sallow, Esquire: I haue him alreadie tempering betweene my finger and my thombe, and shortly will I feale with him. Come away. Extent.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Warwick, Clarence, Gloucester.

King. Now Lords, if Heauen doth give successefull end To this Debate, that biteeth at our doors, Wee will our Youth lead on to higher Fields, And draw no Swords, but what are fanfhyd. Our Nauie is adreffed, our Power collected, Our Substitutes, in abfence, well inuested, And every thing lyes leuell to our wiit; Onely wee want a little perfonall Strength: And pawfe vs, till these Rebels, now a-foot, Comevnderneath the yoake of Gouvernement.

War. Both which we doubt not, but your Maiestie Shall foon enioy.

King. Hum-
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

King. Humphrey (my Sonne of Gloucester) where is the Prince, your Brother?
Glo. I think he's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Windsor.
King. And how accompanied?
Glo. I do not know (my Lord.)
King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?
Glo. No (my good Lord) he is in presence here, Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?
King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence. How chance thou art not with the Prince, thy Brother? Hee loves thee, and thou dost neglect him (Thomas.) Thou hast a better place in his Affection, Then all thy Brothers: cherish it (my Boy) And Noble Offices thou may'ft effect Of Mediation (after I am dead) Betweene his Greatness, and thy other Brethren. Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Loue, Nor lose the good advantage of his Grace, By tempting cold, or careless of his will. For she is gracious, if she be obserued: Hee hath a Care for Little, and a Hand Open (as Day) for melting Charity: Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's Flint, As humorous as Winter, and as sudden, As Flawes congealed in the Spring of day, His temper therefore must be well obserued: Chide him for faults, and doe it reuerently, When you perceiue his blood enclin'd to mirth: But being moodie, give him Line, and scope, Till that his paffions (like a Whale on ground) Confound themselues with working. Learn this Thomas, And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends, A Hoope of Gold, to binde thy Brothers in; That the united Vesell of their Blood (Mingled with Venom of Suggestion, As force, perforce, the Age will powre it in) Shall never leake, though it doe worke as strong As Aconitum, or rafh Gun-powder.
Clar. I shall observe him with all care, and loue.
King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him (Thomas?)
Clar. Hee is not there to day; hee dines in London.
King. And how accompanied? Canst thou tell that?
Clar. With Points, and other his continuall folo-wers.
King. Most subiect is the fatted Soyle to Weedes: And hee (the Noble Image of my Youth) Is ouer-spread with them: therefore my grieue Stretches it selfe beyond the howre of death. The blood weepes from my heart, when I doe shape (In formes imaginarie) th'vnguided Davies, And rotten Times, that you shal looke vpon, When I am sleeping with my Ancestors. For when his head-strong Riot hath no Curbe, When Rage and hot-Blood are his Counsailors, When Meanes and lauifh Manners meete together; Oh, with what Wings shall his Afection flye Towards fronting Peril, and oppo'd Decay?
War. My gracious Lord, you looke beyound him quite: The Prince but studies his Companions, Like a strange Tongue: wherein, to gaine the Language, "Tis needfull, that the most immodest word Be look'd vpon, and learn'd: which once attayned: Your Highnesse knowes, comes to no farther vfe, But to be knowne, and hated. So, like grosse termes, The Prince will, in the perfectnesse of time, Caft off his followers: and their memorie Shall as a Patterne, or a Measure, liue, By which his Grace must meete the liues of others,Turning past-euills to advantages.
King. 'Tis feldome, when the Bee doth leaue her Combe In the dead Carriage.
Enter Walfmerland.
Who's heere? Walfmerland?
Welf. Health to my Soueraigne, and new happinesse Added to that, that I am to deliver. Prince Iohn, your Sonne, doth kiffe your Graces Hand: eMowbray, the Bishop, Scottro, Haffings, and all, Are brought to the Correction of your Law. There is not now a Rebel Sword vnheath'd, But Peace puts forth her Olieue every where: The manner how this Action hath beene borne, Here (at more leyture) may your Highnesse reade, With every courfe, in his particular.
King. O Walfmerland, thou art a Summer Bird, Which euer in the hauchof Winter fings The lifting vp of day.
Enter Harcourt.
Looke, heere's more newes.
Har. From Enemies, Heauen kepe your Maiestie: And when they stand against you, may they fall, As thofe that I am come to tell you of. The Earle Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolfe, With a great Power of England, and of Scots, Are by the Sherife of Yorkshere ouerthrowne: The manner, and true order of the fight, This Packet (pleas it you) containes at large.
King. And wherefore should these good newes Make me fickle? Will Fortune noe come with both hands full, But write her faires words fill in foule Letters? Shee eyther glues a Stomack, and no Foode, (Such are the poore, in health) or else a Feast, And takes away the Stomack (such are the Rich, That have abundance, and enjoy it not.) I should rejoyce now, at this happy newes, And now my Sight fayles, and my Braine is giddie. O me, come neere me, now I am much ill.
Glo. Comfort your Maiestie.
Cl. Oh, my Royall Father.
Welf. My Soueraigne Lord, cheare vp your felfe, looke vp.
War. Be patient (Princes) you doe know, thefe Fits Are with his Highnesse very ordinarie. Stand from him, give him ayre: Hee's straitly beare well.
Clar. No, no, hee cannot long hold out: these pangs, Thriceinfall care, and labour of his Minde, Hath wrought the Mure, that should confine it in, So thinne, that Life looks through, and will breake out.
Glo. The people feare me: for they doe obserue Vnfather'd Heires, and loathly Births of Nature: The Seasons change their manners, as the Yeere Had found some Moneths asleepe, and leaped them ouer.
Clar. The Riuier hath thrice flow'd, no ebbie betweene: And the old folke (Times doting Chronicles) Say it did fo, a little time before That our great Grand-fire Edward fick'd, and dy'de.

War. Speake
Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?
Clar. I am here (Brother) full of hauneffe.
P. Hen. How now? Raine within doores, and none abroad? How doth the King?
Glo. Exceeding ill.
P. Hen. Hear hee the new good yet?
Tell it him.
Glo. Hee alter'd much, ypon the hearing it.
P. Hen. If hee be sickes with Ioy, Hee'srecovered without Physickes.
War. Not so much noyse (my Lords)
Sweet Prince speake lowe,
The King, your Father, is dijpons'd to sleepe.
Clar. Let vs with-draw into the other Room.
War. Will't please your Grace to goe along with vs?
P. Hen. No: I will fit, and watch here, by the King.
Why doth the Crowne lye there, ypon his Pillow, Being so troublesome a Bed-fellow?
O pollisht Perturbation! Golden Care!
That keep't the Ports of Slumber open wide,
To many a watchfull Night: sleepe with it now,
Yet not so found, and halfe so deeply sweete,
As hee whose Brow (with homely Biggen bound)
Snore out the Watch of Night, O Malefie!
When thou dost pinch thy Bearer, thou dost st
Like a rich Armor, worn in heat of day,
That scald't with fattenie: by his Gates of breath,
There lyes a downley feather, which fitteres not:
Did hee usfure, that light and weightlesse dowline
Perforce must moue. My gracious Lord, my Father,
This sleepe is found indeede: this is a sleepe,
That from this Golden Rigoll hath diuorc'd
So many English Kings. Thy due, from me,
Is Tares, and heauie Sorrows of the Blood,
Which Nature, Loue, and filiall tenderness,
Shall (O deare Father) pay thee plentifully.
My due, from thee, is this Imperiall Crowne,
Which (as immediate from thy Place and Blood)
Derives it elfe to me. Loe, heere it stis,
Which Heauen hiall guard:
And put the worlds whole strenght into one gyant Arme,
It shall not force this Lineall Honor from me.
This, from thee, will I to mine leaue,
As 'tis left to me.

Exit Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence.

King. Warwicke, Gloucester, Clarence.
War. What would your Malefie? how fares your Grace?
Warwick. Why did you leave me here alone(my Lords?)
Glo. We left the Prince(my Brother)here(my Liege)
Who vndertooke to fit and watch by you.
King. The Prince of Wales? where is hee? let mee fee him.
War. This doore is open, hee is gone this way.
Glo. Hee came not through the Chamber where wee stayd.
King. Where is the Crowne? who tooke it from my Pillow?
War. When wee with-drew (my Liege) wee left it here.
King. The Prince hath tane it hence:
Goe fekke him out.
Is hee so hastie,that hee doth suppoze
My sleepe, my death? Finde him(my Lord of Warwick)
Chide him hither: this part of his conioyes
With my diifeafe, and helps to ende me.
See Sonnes, what things you are:
How quickly Nature falls into reuel,
When Gold becomes her Obieft?
For this, the foolish ouer-carefull Fathers
Haue broke their sleepe with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with induftry.
For this, they have ingroflled and pyl'd vp
The canker'd heapes of strange-atchieved Gold:
For this, they have beeene thoughtfull, to inueft
Their Sonnes with Arts, and Martiall Exercitides:
When,like the Bee, culling from euerie flower
The vertuous Sweetes,our Thighes packt with Wax,
Our Mouthes with Honey, wee bring it to the Hieue;
And like the Bees, are murthered for our paines.
This bitter taffe yeilds his engroffements,
To the ending Father.

Enter Warwick.
Now, where is hee, that will not stay so long,
Till his Friend Sickneffe hath determin'd me?
War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Room,
Washing with kindly Tares his gentle Cheekes,
With such a depe demeane, in great sorrow,
That Tyranny, which neuer quaffit but blood,
Would(by beholding him)haue walt'd his Knife
With gentle eye-drops. Hee is comming hither.
*King.*But wherefore did hee take away the Crowne?

Enter Prince Henry.
Loe, where hee comes. Come hither to me(Harry)
Depart the Chamber, leaue vs heere alone.

Exit.
P. Hen. I neuer thought to heare you speake againe.
King. Thy wish was Father(Harry)to that thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weare thee.
Do't thou so hunger for my emplie Chayre,
That thou wilt needs inueit thee with mine Honors,
Before thy howre be ripe? O foolish Youth!
Thou seek'st the Greatneffe, that will ouer-whelme thee.
Stay but a little: for my Cloud of Dignifte
Is held from falling, with so weake a winde,
That it will quickly drop: my Day is dimme.
Thou haft ftoine that, which after some few howres
Wore thine, without offence: and at my death
Thou haft feald vp my expectation.
Thy Life did manifest, thou lou'dft me not,
And thou wilt haue me dye affur'd of it.
Thou haid't a thoufand Daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou haft whetted on thy fonie heart,
To ftab at halfe an howre of my Life.
What? canft thou not forbeare me halfe an howre?
The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Then get thee gone, and digge my graue thy selfe, And bid the merry Bells ring to thy ear That thou art Crowned, not that I am dead. Let all the Teares, that should bedew my Hearse Be drops of Balm, to fancifie thy head: Onely compound me with forgotten durt. Glue that, which gaue thee life, vnto the Wormes: Plucke downe my Officers, breake my Decrees; For now a time is come, to mocke at forme. Henry the fift is Crown'd: Vp Vanity, Downe Royall State: All you fage Counsellors, hence; And to the English Court, affemble now From eu'ry Region, Apes of Idlenesse. Now neighbor-Confine, purge you of your Scum: Have you a Ruffian that will wake? drinke? dance? Reuell the night? Rob? Murder? and commit The oldste finnes, the neweste kinds of wayes? Be happy, he will trouble you no more: England, shall double gill'd, his trouble guilt. England, shall give him Office, Honor, Might: For the Fift Harry, from curd' Licenf-pluckes The muzzle of Refraining; and the wilde Dogge Shall fleas his tooth in every Innocent. O my poore Kingdom (ficke, with ciull blowes) When that my Care could not with-hold thy Ryots, What wilt thou do, when Ryt is thy Care? O, thou wilt be a Wilderneffe againe, Peopled with Wolves (thy old Inhabitants. Prince. O pardon mee (my Liege) But for my Teares, The moft Impediments vnto my Speech, I had fore-thall'd this deere, and deep Rebuke, Ere you (with greefe) had spooke, and I had heard The courfe of it fo farre. There is your Crowne, And he that weares the Crowne immortally, Long guard it yours. If I affect it more, Then as your Honour, and as your Renowne, Let me no more from this Obedience rife, Which my moft true, and inward duteous Spirit Teacheth this proftrate, and extiour bending. Heauen witnesse with me, when I heere came in, And found no courfe of breath within your Maiestie, How cold it frooke my heart. If I do faire, O let mee, in my present wildenesse, dye, And neuer liue, to shew th'incredulous World, The Noble change that I have purposed. Comming to looke on you, thinking you dead, (And dead almoft (my Liege) to thinke you were) I spake vnto the Crowne (as hauing fenfe) And thus vpbraided it. The Care on thee depending, Hath fed upon the body of my Father, Therefore, thou best of Gold, art worth of Gold. Other, leffe fine in Charrarct, is more precious, Prefering life, in Med'cine potable: But thou, moft Fine, moft Honour'd, moft Renown'd, Haft eate the Bearer vp. Thus (my Royall Liege) Accusing it, I put it on my Head, To try with it (as with an Enemie, That had before my face murdred my Father) The Quarell of a true Inheritor. But if it did infect my blood with Joy, Or swell my Thoughts, to any straine of Pride, If any Rebell, or vaine spirit of mine, Did, with the least Affection of a Welcome, Glue entertainment to the might of it,

Let heauen, for euer, keepe it from my head, And make me, as the poorest Vassalle is, That doth with awe, and terror kneele to it. King. O my Sonne! Heauen put it in thy minde to take it hence, That thou might't joyn the more, thy Fathers loue, Pleading fo wisely, in excufe of it. Come hither Harrrie, fit thou by my bedde, And heare (I thinke, the very latef Counsell That eu'r I fhall breath : Heauen knowes, my Sonne) By what by-pathes, and indireft crook'd-ways I met this Crowne : and I my felfe know well How troublefome it fate vpon my head. To thee, it shall defend with better Quiet, Better Opinion, better Confirmation: For all the foyle of the Atchieuement goes With me, into the Earth. It feem'd in mee, But as an Honour fnaotch'd with boy'rrous hand, And I had many luing, to vpraiide My gaine of it, by their Affiiances, Which dayly grew to Quarell, and to Blood-shed, Wounding suppofted Peace. All thefe bold Feares, Thou feest (with perill) I haue anwered : For all my Reigne, hath beene but as a Scene Acting that argument. And now my death Changes the Moode: For what in me, was purchas'd, Failles vpon thee, in a more Fayrer fort. So thou, the Garland wear't fuccefffully. Yet, though thou flant'd more fure, then I could do, Thou art not firme enough, fince greefes are greene: And all thy Friends, which thou muft make thy Friends Haue but their flings, and teeth, newly tak'n out, By whofe fell working, I was fir't aduan'd, And by whose power, I well might lodge a Feare To be againe diplac'd. Which to auowy, I cut them off: and had a purpofe now To leade out many to the Holy Land; Leaft reft, and lying ftil, might make them looke Too neere vnto my State. Therefore (my Harrie) Be it thy courfe to buie giddy Mindes With Forraigne Quarells: that Actio[n hence borne out, May wafe the memory of the former dayes. More would I, but my Lungs are wafted fo, That strenghe of Speech is vterly deni'de mee. How I came by the Crowne, O heauen forgiue: And grant it may, with thee, in true peace liue. Prince. My gracous Liege: You wonne it, wore it: kept it, gave it me, Then plaine and right muft my possefion be; Which I, with more, then with a Common paine, 'Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintaine.

Enter Lord Iohn of Lancaster, and Warwick.

King. Looke, looke, Heere comes my Iohn of Lancaster: Iohn. Health, Peace, and Happinesse, To my Royall Father. King. Thou bring'ft me happinesse and Peace (Sonne Iohn : But health (allacke) with youthfull wings is flowne From this bare, wither'd Trunke. Vpon thy fight My worldly businesse makes a period. Where Where is my Lord of Warwicke?

Trin. My Lord of Warwicke.

King. Doth any name particular, belong unto the Lodging, where I first did woon'd?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalie, my Noble Lord.

King. Laud be to heaven:

Even there my life must end.

It hath beene prophefi de to me many yeares, I should not dye, but in Jerusalie:

Which (vainly) I suppos'd the Holy-Land.

But bear me to that Chamber, there Ile lye:

In that Jerusalie, shal Harry dye.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Shallow, Silence, Falstaff, Bardolfe, Page, and Davie.

Shal. By Cocke and Pye, you shall not away to night.

What Davy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, M. Robert Shalowe.

Shal. I will not excuse you: you shall not be excused. Excuses shall not be admitted: there is no excus make here: you shall not be excus'd.

Why Davy, Sir.

Davie. Heere fir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see (Davy) let me see: William Cooke, bid him come hither. 'Sir John,' you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry fir, thus: those Precepts cannot bee feru'd: and againe fir, shall we sawe the head-land with Wheate?

Shal. With red Wheate Davy. But for William Cook: are there no yong Pigeons?

Davy. Yes Sir.

Here is now the Smithes note, for Shooving, and Plough-Irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and payde: Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Sir, a new linke to the Bucket must needs bee had: And Sir, do you mean to stoppe any of Williams Wages, about the Sacke he left the other day, at Hinkley Fayre?

Shal. He shall answere it:

Some Pigeons Davy, a couple of short-legg'd Hennes: a joynet of Mutton, and any pretty little time Kickhawes, tell William Cooke.

Davy. Doth the man of Warre, stay all night sir?

Shal. Yes Davy:

I will vse him well. A Friend i'th Court, is better then a penny in purse. Vse his men well Davy, for they are arrant Knaues, and will backe-bite.

Davy. No worfe then they are bitten. Sir: For they have maruellous fowle linnen.

Shalow. Well conformed Davy: about thy Businesse, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you sir,

To countenance William Ufier of Woncot, against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many Complaints Davy, against that Ufier, that Ufier is an arrant Knaue, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your Worship, that he is a knaue Sir: But yet heaven forbid Sir, but a Knaue shalbe have some Countenance, at his Friends request. An honest man fir, is able to speake for himselfe, when a Knaue is not. I have feru'd your Worshipp trueley fir, these eight yeares: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter beare out a knaue, against an honest man, I haue but a very little credite with your Worshipp. The Knaue is mine honest Friend Sir, therefore I beseech your Worship, let him bee Countenance'd.

Shal. Go too, I say he shall have no wrong: Looke about Davy.

Where are you Sir John? Come off, with your Boots.

Glue me your hand M. Bardolfo.

Bard. I am glad to see your Worship.

Shal. I thanke thee, with all my heart, kinde Master Bardolfe: and welcome my tall Fellow:

Come Sir John.

Falstaff. Ile follow you, good Master Robert Shalow.

Bardolfe. looke to our Horse's. If I were faw'de into Quantities, I should make foure dozen of such bearded Hermes staues, as Master Shalow. It is a wonderfull thing to see the semblable Coherence of his mens spirits, and his: They, by obleruing of him, do beare themselves like foolishe Juflices: Hee, by converuing with them, is turn'd into a Juflice-like Seruungman. Their spirits are jo married in Conjunction, with the participation of Society, that they flocke together in content, like so many Wilde-Geefe. If I had a fute to Mayfer Shalow, I would honour his men, with the imputation of being neere their Mayfer. If to his Men, I would currie with Mayfer Shalow, that no man could better command his Seruants. It is certaine, that either wife bearing, or ignorant Carriage is caught, as men take disfauces, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their Company. I will deuile matter enough out of this Shalow, to keepe Prince Harry in continuall Laughter, the wearing out of fixe Fashion's (which is foure Tearmes) or two Actions, and he shall laugh with Internallum. O it is much that a Lye (with a flight Oath) and a lef't (with a fadde brow) will doe, with a Fellow, that never had the Ache in his Shoulders. O you shall see him laugh, till his Face be like a wet Cloake, ill laid vp. (end)

Shal. Sir John.

Fal. I come Master Shalow, I come Master Shalow.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Earl of Warwick, and the Lord Chief Justice.

Warwick. How now, my Lord Chief Justice, whether away?

Cb. Just. How doth the King?

War. Exceding well: his Cares are now, all ended.

Cb. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. Hee's walk'd the way of Nature, and to our purpose, he liues no more.

Cb. Just. I would his Maiesty had call'd him with him,
The seruice, that I truly did his life, Hath left me open to all injuries.

War.
War. Indeed I thinke the yong King loues you not.
Ch. Iuft. I know he doth not, and do arme my selfe.
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot looke more hideously vpon me,
Then I have drawn it in my fantase.

Enter John of Lancastre, Gloucester, and Clarence.

War. Heere come the heavy issue of dead Harrie:
O, that the liuing Harrie had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike faile, to Spirits of vilde fort?
Ch. Iuft. Alas, I feare, all will be outer-turn'd.
John. Good morrow Cofin Warwick, good morrow.
John. We meete, like men, that had forgot to speake.
War. We do remember: but our Argument
Is all too heauy, to admit much talke.
Isb. Well: Peace be with him, that hath made vs heauy.
Ch. Iuft. Peace be with vs, leafe we be haue.
Glow. O, good my Lord, you have loft a friend indeed:
And I dare fwear, you bore that face
Of seeming forrow, it is sure your owne.
John. Though no man be affurd what grace to finde,
You stand in coldeft expefation.
I am the forrier, 'twere otherwife.
Clu. We, you must now speake Sir John Faffaffa faire,
Which swimmes againste your streame of Quality.
Ch. Iuft. Sweet Princes: what I did, I did in Honor,
Led by th'Imperiall Conduct of my Soule,
And neuer shall you fee, that I will begge
A raged, and forre-flall'd Remiffion.
If Troth, and vpright Innocency fayle me,
Ile to the King (my Mafter) that is dead,
And tell him, who hath lent me after him.
War. Heere comes the Prince.

Enter Prince Henrie.
Ch. Iuft. Good morrow: and heauen faue your Maiestie.
Prince. This new, and gorgeous Garment, Maiestie,
Sits not so eafe on me, as you thinke.
Brothers, you mixe your Sadneffe with some Feare:
This is the English, not the Turkish Court:
Not Amurab, an Amurab succeeds,
But Harry, Harry: Yet be fad (good Brothers)
For (to speake truth) it very well becomes you:
Sorrow, so Royally in you appeares,
That I will deeply put the Fashion on,
And weare it in my heart. Why then be fad,
But entertaine no more of it (good Brothers)
Then a loynt burthen, laid vpon vs all.
For me, by Heauen (I bid you be affurd)
Ile be your Father, and your Brother too:
Let me but beare your Loue, Ile beare your Cares;
But weepe that Harrie's dead, and fo will I.
But Harry liues, that shall convert those Teares
By number, into houres of Happineffe.
John, &c. We hope no other from your Maiestie.
Prin. You all looke strangely on me: and you moft,
You are (I thinke) affurd, I love you not.
Ch. Iuft. I am affurd (if I be meaufur'd rightly)
Your Maiestie hath no iuft caufe to hate me.
Pr. No! How might a Prince of my great hopes forget
So great Indignities you laid vpon me?

What! Rate! Rebuoke! and roughly send to Prifon Th'immediate Heire of England? Was this eafe?
May this be waf't in Lette, and forgotten?
Ch. Iuft. I then did vfe the Perfoun of your Father:
The Image of his power, lay then in me,
And in th'administration of his Law,
While I was bufie for the Commonwealth,
Your Highneffe pleased to forget my place,
The Maiestie, and power of Law, and Iuftice,
The Image of the King, whom I preferred,
And brooke me in my vse State of Judgement:
Whereon (as an Offender to your Father)
I gaue bold way to my Authoritie,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the Garland,
To have a Sonne, set your Decrees at naught?
To plucke downe Iustice from your awefull Bench?
To trip the courfe of Law, and blunt the Sword
That guards the peace, and safety of your Perfoun?
Nay more, to ipurne at your most Royall Image,
And mocke your workings, in a Second body?
Quetion your Royall Thoughts, make the cafe yours:
Be now the Father, and propone a Sonne:
Heare your owne dignity to much prophane'd,
See your most dreadfull Lawes, so loofely flighted;
Behold your selfe, so by a Sonne disdained:
And then imagine me, taking you part,
And in your power, soft filencing your Sonne:
After this cold confidence, sentence me
And, as you are a King, speake in your State,
What I have done, that misbecame my place,
My perfon, or my Lieges Soueraignitie.
Prin. You are right Iustice, and you weigh this well:
Therefore still beare the Ballance, and the Sword:
And I do with your Honors may encreafe,
Till you do liue, to fee a Sonne of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I liue, to speake my Fathers words:
Happy am I, that have a man fo bold,
That dares do Iustice, on my proper Sonne;
And no leffe happy, having such a Sonne,
That would deliuer vp his Greatneffe so,
Into the hands of Iustice. You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand,
Th'offended Sword that you haue vs'd to beare:
With this Remembrance; That you vfe the fame
With the like bold, iuft, and impartiall spirit
As you have done 'gainft me. There is my hand,
You shall be as a Father, to my Youth:
My voice shall found, as you do prompt mine eare,
And I will floope, and humble my Intents,
To your well-prafile'd, wife Directions.
And Princes all, beleue me, I beleefch you:
My Father is gone wilde into his Graue,
(For in his Tombe, Iye my Affections)
And with his Spirits, sadly I furuiue,
To mocke the expedation of the World;
To frustrate Prophecies, and to race out
Rotten Opinion, who hath writ me downe
After my feemings. The Tide of Blood in me,
Hath provdly flow'd in Vanity, till now.
Now doth it turne, and ebbe backe to the Sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of Floods,
And flow henceforth in formall Maiesty.
Now call we our High Court of Parliament,
And let vs choose such Limbes of Noble Counfaile,
That the great Body of our State may go
In equal ranke, with the best govern'd Nation,
That Warre, or Peace, or both at once may be
As things acquainted and familiar to vs,
In which you (Father) shall have formost hand.
Our Coronation done, we will accite
(As I before remembered) all our State,
And heauen (configning to my good intents)
No Prince, nor Peere, shall have juft caufe to fay,
Heauen shorten Harries happy life, one day. — Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Silence, Bardolph, Page, and Piffoll.

Shal. Nay, you fhall fee mine Orchard: where, in an Arbor we will cate a laft yeares Pippin of my owne grafs-fing, with a dith of Carraways, and so forth (Come Co-fin Silence), and then to bed.

Fal. You have heere a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren: Beggers all, beggers all
Sir John: Marry, good ayre. Spread Davy, spread Davie:
Well said Davie.

Fal. This Davie terues you for good ves: he is your Servingman, and your Husband.

Shal. A good Varlet,a good Varlet,a very good Var-let, Sir John: I have drunke too much Sacke at Supper.
A good Varlet. Now fit downe, now fit downe: Come Co-fin.

Sil. Ah sirra(quotch-a) we fhall doe nothing but eate, and make good cheere, and praffe heauen for the merrie yeere: when ftreth is cheape,and Females deere, and lufffe Lads rom heere,and there : fo merrily, and ever among fo merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart, good M.Silence, Ile glue you a health for that anon.

Shal. Good M.Bardolph: fome wine, Davie.

Sil. Sweet fir, fit: Ile be with you anon: moft sweete fit, fit. Master Page, good M.Page, fit: Proface. What you want in meate, weel have in drinke: but you beare, the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry M.Bardolph, and my little Souldiour there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife ha's all.

For women are Shrewes, both short, and tall:
'Tis merry in Hall, when Beards wagge all;
And welcome merry Shrouetide. Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not thinke M.Silence had bin a man of this Mettle.

Sil. Who if? I have beene merry twice and once, ere now.

Davy. There is a dith of Lethercoats for you.

Shal. Davie.

Dau. Your Worfhip: Ile be with you ftraight. A cup of Wine, fir?

Sil. A Cup of Wine, that's briske and fine, & drinke into the Leman min: and a merry heart lyes long-a.

Sil. If we fhall be merry,now comes in the frewe of the night.

Sil. Fill the Cuppe, and let it come. Ile pledge you a mile to the bottome.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: If thou want't any thing, and wilt not call, befrew thy heart. Welcome my little tynie theefef, and welcome indeed too: Ile drinke to M.Bardolph, and to all the Caullerioes about London.

Dau. I hope to fee London, once ere I die.

Shal. If I might fee you there, Davie.

Sil. You'll crucke a quart together? Ha, will you not
M.Bardolph?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thanke thee: the knaue will flichke by thee, I can affure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Bar. And Ile flichke by him, fir.

Shal. Why there spoke a King: lack nothing, be merry.

Looke, who's at doore there, ho : who knockes?

Fal. Why now you have done me right.

Sil. Do me right, and dub me Knight, Saminge. Is't not fo?

Fal. 'Tis fo.

Sil. Let's fay? Why then fay an old man can do fomwhat.

Dau. If it pleafe your Worfhippe, there's one Piffoll come from the Court with newes.

Fal. From the Court? Let him come in.

Enter Piffoll.

How now Piffoll?

Piff. Sir John, 'fave you fir.

Fal. What winde blew you hither, Piffoll?

Piff. Not the ill winde which blowes none to good,
Sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greateft men in the Realme.

Sil. Indeed, I thinke he bee, but Goodman Puffe of Barfon.

Piff. Puffe? puffe in thy teeth, moft recreant Coward base. Sir John, I am thy Piffoll, and thy Friend: helter skelter haue I rode to thee, and tydings do I bring, and lucke loyes, and golden Times, and happie News of price.

Fal. I prethee now deliver them, like a man of this World.

Piff. A footra for the World, and Worldlings base,
I speake of Africa, and Golden loyes.

Fal. O bafe Affyrlian Knight, what is thy newes?
Let King Cotith know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarlet, and John.

Piff. Shall dunghill Curres confront the Hellicons?

And shall good newes be baffel'd?

Then Piffoll lay thy head in Furies lappe.

Shal. Honest Gentleman,
I know not your breeding.

Piff. Why then Lament therefore.

Shal. Glue me pardon, Sir.

If fir, you come with news from the Court, I take it, there is but two ways, either to vter them, or to conceale them. I am Sir, vnder the King, in fome Authority.

Piff. Vnder which King?

Bressian, speake, or dye.

Shal. Vnder King Harry.

Piff. Harry the Fourth? or Fift?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Piff. A footra for thine Office.

Sir John, thy tender Lamb-kinne, now is King,
Harry the Fift's the man, I speake the truth.

When Piffoll lyes, do this, and figge-me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal.
Fal. What is the old King dead?
Piil. As naile in doore.
The things I speake, are true.
Fal. Away Bardolfe, Sadle my Horse,
Mater Robert Shallow, choose what Office thou wilt
In the Land, 'tis thine. Piifol, I will double charge thee
With Dignities.
'Bard. O joyfull day:
I would not take a Knighthood for my Fortune.
Fal. Carrie Master Silence to bed: Mater Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortunes Steward.
Get on thy Boots, wee'1 ride all night. Oh sweet Piifoll:
Away Bardolfe! Come Piifoll, vter more to mee: and withall deuise something to do thy selfe good. Boote, boote Mater Shallow, I know the young King is sick for
mee. Let vs take any mans Horses: The Lawes of England are at my command'ment. Happie are they, which have beene my Friends: and vse wto my Lord Chief Juifice.
Piif. Let Vultures vil'de feize on his Lungs alfo:
Where is the life that late I led, fay they?
Why heere it is, welcome thole pleafant dayes. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Hofteffe Quickly, Del Teare-brettle, and Beadles.

Hofteffe. No, thou arrant knaue: I would I might dy, that I might have thee hang'd: Thou haft drawne my shoulder out of ictyn.
Off. The Confables haue deliuerd her ouer to mee:
and shee shall haue Whipping cheere enough, I warrant her. There hath beene a man or two (lately)kill'd about her.
Del. Nut-booke, nut-booke, you Lye: Come on, I le tell thee what, thou damnd' Tripe-vifag'd Raffall, if the Childe I now go witht, do miCarrie, thou hadft better thou haft strooke thy Mother, thou Paper-fac'd Villaine.
Hof. O that Sir John were come, hee would make this a bloody day to some body. But I would the Fruite of her Wombe might miCarrie.
Officer. If it do, you shall have a dozen of Cusliers againe, you haue but eleuen now. Come, I charge you both go with me: for the man is dead, that you and Pifoll beate among you.
Del. Ile tell thee what, thou thin man in a Centor; I will haue you as soundly swing'd for this, you blew-Bottel'd Rogue: you filthy famih'd Correftioner, if you be not swing'd, Ile forfweare halfe Kirltes.
Off. Come, come, you thee-Knight-arrant, come.
Hof. O, that right should thus o'recome might. Wel of fufferance, comes eafe.
Del. Come you Rogue, come:
Bring me to a Juifice.
Hof. Yes, come you faru'd Blood-hound.
Del. Goodman death, goodman Bones.
Hof. Thou Anatomy, thou.
Del. Come you thinne Thing:
Come you Raffall.

The second Part of King Henry the Fourth.

Scena Quinta.

Enter two Groomes.
1.Groo. More Rufhies, more Rufhes.
2.Groo. The Trumpets haue founded twice.
1.Groo. It will be two of the Clocke, ere they come from the Coronation. Exit Groo.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Piifoll, Bardolfe, and Page.

Falstaff. Stand heere by me, M. Robert Shallow, I will make the King do you Grace. I will leere vpon him, as he comes by: and do but marke the countenance that hee will give me.
Piifoll. Blesse thy Lungs, good Knight.
Fal. Come heere Piifoll, stand behind me. O if I had had time to haue made new Luieries, I would have belowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But it is no matter, this poore shew doth better: this doth infevere the zeale I had to fee him.
Diel. It doth fo.
Piifoll. It shewes my earnesntnesse in affection.
Piif. It doth fo.
Fal. My devotion.
Piif. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were, to ride day and night,
And not to deliberate, not to remember,
Not to have patience to shift me.
Diel. It is moft certaine.
Fal. But to ftand flaigned with Trauisle, and fweating with defire to fee him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affayres in obliuion, as if there were nothing els to bee done, but to fee him.
Piif. 'Tis temper idem: for absque hoc nihil est. 'Tis all in every part.
Diel. 'Tis fo indeed.
Piif. My Knight, I will enflame thy Noble Luer, and make thee rage. Thy Dol, and Helen of thy noble thoughts is in base Durance, and contagious prifon; Hall't dither by moft Mechanicall and durty hand, Rowze vppe Reuenge from Ebon den, with fell Alecio's Snake, for Dol is in Piifoll, ftpeakes nought but troth.
Fal. I will deliver her.
Piifoll. There roar'd the Sea: and Trumpet Clangour found.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henrie the Fift, Brothers, Lord Chiffe
Juifice.

Falstaff. Saue thy Grace, King Hall, my Royall Hall.
Piif. The heavenes thee guard, and keep, moft royall
Impe of Fame.
Fal. 'Saue thee my sweet Boy.
King. My Lord Chief e Juifice, speake to that vaine
man.
Ch.Juif. Haue you your wits?
Know you what 'tis you speake?
Falstaff. My King, my Ioue; I speake to thee, my heart.
King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy Prayers:
How ill white haires become a Fool, and Iefter?
I haue
I have long dream'd of such a kinde of man,
So surfeit-fwel'd, fo old, and fo prophane:
But being awake, I do defpife my dreame.
Make lefte thy body (hence) and more thy Grace,
Leaue gourmandizing; Know the Graue doth gape
For thee, thrice wider then for other men.
Reply not to me, with a Foole-borne left,
Presume not, that I am the thing I was,
For heaven doth know (so shall the world perceiue)
That I have turn'd away my former Selfe,
So will I those that kept me Company.
When thou dost hear I am, as I haue bin,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast
The Tutor and the Feeder of my Riots:
Till then, I banish thee, on paine of death,
As I have done the rest of my Misleaders,
Not to come neere our Person, by ten mile.
For competence of life, I will allow you,
That lacke of meanes enforce you not to cuill:
And as we heare you do reforme your felues,
We will according to your strength, and qualities,
Glue you aduancement. Be it your charge (my Lord)
To see perform'd the tenure of our word. Set on.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.
Shal. I marry Sir John, which I befeeche you to let me have home with me.
Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow, do not you grieue at this: I shall be sent for in priuate to him: Looke you, he must feeeme thus to the world: feare not your aduancement: I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceiue how, vnleffe you should giue me your Doublet, and stuff me out with Straw. I befeeche you, good Sir John, let mee haue five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard, was but a colour.

Shal. A colour I feare, that you will dye, in Sir John.

Fal. For those colours, go with me to dinner:
Come Lieutenant Pisil, come Bardolf,
I shall be sent for foone at night.

Ch. Iust. Go carry Sir John Fulhaffe to the Fleete,
Take all his Company along with him.

Fal. My Lord, my Lord.
Ch. Iust. I cannot now speake, I will heare you foone: Take them away.

Pisil. Si fortuna me tormenta, fitera me contento.

Exit. Mant Lancaster, and Chief Justice.

John. I like this faire proceeding of the Kings:
He hath intent his wonted Followers
Shall all be very well prouided for:
But all are banish't, till their conuerceptions
Appeare more wife, and modest to the world.

Ch. Iust. And fo they are.

John. The King hath call'd his Parliament,
My Lord.

Ch. Iust. He hath.

John. I will lay oddes, that ere this yeere expire,
We heare our Civill Swords, and Natuer fire
As farre as France. I heare a Bird so fling,
Whose Musick (to my thinking) pleas'd the King.
Come, will you hence?

FINIS.
EPILOGVE.

FIRST, my Fear: then, my Curtse: last, my Speech. My Fear, is your Displeasure: My Curtse, my Dutie: And my Speech, to Begge your Pardons. If you looke for a good speech now, you undoe me: For what I have to say, is of mine owne making: and what (indeed) I should say, will (I doubt) prooue mine owne marring. But to the Purpose, and to the Venture. Be it knowne to you (as it is very well) I was lately heere in the end of a displeasing Play, to pray your Patience for it, and to promise you a Better: I did meane (indeede) to pay you with this, which if (like an ill Venture) it come unluckily home, I breake; and you, my gentle Creditors lose. Here I promisf you I would be, and here I commit my Bodie to your Mercies: Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and (as most Debtors do) promise you infinitely.

If my Tongue cannot entreate you to acquit me: will you command me to use my Legges? And yet that were but light payment, to Dance out of your debt: But a good Conscience, will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the Gentlewomen heere, haue forgien me, if the Gentlemen will not, then the Gentlemen do not agree with the Gentlewomen, which was never scene before, in such an Assembly.

One word more, I beseech you: if you be not too much coid with Fat Meate, our humble Author will continue the Story (with Sir John in it) and make you merry, with faire Katherine of France: where (for any thing I know) Falstaffe shall dye of a sweat, unlesse already he be kill'd with your hard Opinions: For Old-Castle dyed a Martyr, and this is not the man. My Tongue is weariie, when my Legs are too, I will bid you good night; and so kneele downe before you: But (indeed) to pray for the Queene.

The Life of Henry the Fift.

Enter Prologue.

O For a Muse of Fire, that would ascender
The brighteiff Heaven of Invention:
A Kingdome for a Stage, Princes to All,
And Monarchis to behold the sounding Scene.
Then shoule the Warlike Harry, like himselfe,
Assume the Port of Mars, and at his heels
(Leave in, like Hounds) shoule Famine,Sword, and Fire
Croach for employment. 'But pardon, Gentles all:
The flat unravied Spirits, that bathe dar'd,
On this unworthy Scaffold, to bring forth
So great an Obieft. Can this Cock-Pit bold
The waggfe fields of France? Or may we cramme
Within this Wooden O, the very Cakes
That did affright the Ayre at Agincourt?
O pardon: since a crooked Figure may
Arife in little place a Million,
And let vs, Cyphers to this great Accompt,
On your imaginair Forces worke.
Suppose within the Girdle of these Walls
Are now confin'd two mightie Monarchies,
Whole high, cap-reared, and abutting Fronts,
The perilous narrow Ocean parts atunder.
Peace out our imperfections with your thoughts:
Into a thousand parts divide one Man,
And make imaginair Puisance.
Thinke when we talk of Horses, that you fee them;
Printing their proud Hooves i'th receiving Earth:
For 'tis your thoughts that now muft deck our Kings,
Carry them here and there: lumping o're Times;
Turning th'accomplishment of many yeeres
Into an Houre-glaffe: for the which supplie,
Admit me Chorus to this Historie;
Who Prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to bear, kindly to judge our Play.

Enter the two Bishops of Canterbury and Ely.

Bifh. Cant. The King is full of grace, and faire regard.
Bifh. Ely. And a true louver of the holy Church.
Bifh. Cant. The coursers of his youth promis'd it not.
Bifh. Ely. The breath no sooner left his Fathers body,
Bifh. Cant. But that his wiltnesse, mortify'd in him,
Bifh. Ely. Seem'd to dye too: yes, at that very moment,
Bifh. Cant. Consideration like an Angell came,
Bifh. Ely. And whipt th'offending Adam out of him;
Bifh. Cant. Leauing his body as a Paradife,
Bifh. Ely. T'is evill and containeth Celeftiall Spirits.
Bifh. Cant. Neuer was such a fondaine Scholler made:
Bifh. Ely. Neuer came Reformation in a Flood,
Bifh. Cant. With such a heady curance scouring faults:
Bifh. Ely. Nor neuer Hidra-headed Wilfulnephe
Bifh. Cant. So foone did looфе his Seat; and all at once;
Bifh. Ely. As in this King.
Bifh. Cant. We are blessed in the Change.
Bifh. Ely. Heare him but reafon in Diuinie;
Bifh. Ely. And all-admiring, with an inward wish
Bifh. Cant. You would defire the King were made a Prelate;
Bifh. Ely. Heare him debate of Common-wealth Affairs;
Bifh. Cant. You would fay, it hath been all in all his study;
Bifh. Ely. Lift his discourse of Warre; and you shall heare
A fearefull Battle rendred you in Muique.
Turne him to any Caufe of Pollicy,
The Gordan Knot of it he will vnloose,
Familiar as his Garter: that when he speakes,
The Ayre, a Charter'd Libertine, is fill'd,
And the mute Wonder lurketh in mens eares,
To stale his sweet and honied Sentences:
So that the Art and Præftrute part of Life,
Mute be the Miſtreffe to this Theorique.
Which is a wonder how his Grace should gleane it,
Since his addition was to Courſes vaine,
His Companies vnletter'd, rude, and shallow,
His Hours fill'd vp with Ryts, Banquets, Sports;
And no her Rind in him any flude,
Any retrenchment, any fqueerification,
From open Haunts and Popularite.

B.Ely. The Strawberry grows vnderneath the Nettle,
And holefome Berries trie and ripe beft,
Neighbour'd by Fruit of bafer qualitie :
And so the Prince obfcur'd his Contemplation
Vnder the Veyle of Wildnelle, which (no doubt)
Grew like the Summer Graffe, faithe by Night;
Vnfeene, yet creffuite in his facultie.
B.Cant. It must be fo; for Miracles are caft:
And therefore we muft needs admit the meanes,
How things are perfected.

B.Ely. But my good Lord :
How now for mitigation of this Bill,
Vrg'd by the Commons? doth his Maieftie
Incline to it, or no?
B.Cant. He feemes indifferent :
Or rather ifaying more vpon our part,
Then cherishing the exhibitors againft vs:
For I have made an offer to his Maieftie,
Vpon our Spiritual Conuation,
And in regard of Caufes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to glue a greater Summe,
Then euer at one time the Clergie yet
Did to his Predecessors part withall.

B.Ely. How did this offer feeme recei'd, my Lord?
B.Cant. With good acceptance of his Maieftie :
Saue that there was not time enough to heare,
As I percei'd his Grace would faine have done,
The fawers and vnhiden paffages
Of his true Titles to fome certaine Dukefdomes,
And generally, to the Crowne and Seat of France,
Deriu'd from Edward, his great Grandfather.

B.Ely. What was that impediment that broke this off?
B.Cant. The French Embaffador vpon that infant
Crau'd audience; and the howre I thinke is come,
To give him hearing: Is it foure a Clock?
B.Ely. It is.
B.Cant. Then goe we in, to know his Embaffie:
Which I could with a ready guffe declare,
Before the Frenchman speake a word of it.

B.Ely. Ile wait vpon you, and I long to heare it.

Enter two Bishops.
B.Cant. God and his Angels guard your sacred Throne,
And make you long become it.
King. Sure we thank you.
My learned Lord, we praty you to proceed,
And iuftly and religioufely vndo, Why the Law Saith that they have in France,
Or should or or should not barre vs in our Clayme:
And God forbid, my deare and faithfull Lord,
That you should fation, weft, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your vnderftanding Soule,
With opening Titles miscreate, whose right
Sutes not in native colours with the truth:
For God doth know, how many now in health,
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what your reverence fhall incite vs to.
Therefore take heed how you impawne our Perfon,
How you awake our fleeping Sword of Warre;
We charge you in the Name of God take heed:
For yeuer two fuch Kingdomes did contend,
Without much fall of blood, whose guiltileffe drops
Are every one, a Woe, a foie Complaint,
'Gainft him, whose wrongs giues edge vnto the Swords,
That makes fuch waft in briefe mortallitie.
Vnder this Coniuracion, fpeake my Lord:
For we will hear, note, and beleue in heart,
That what you fpeake, is in your Confequence waft,
As pure as finne with Baptifme.
B.Can. Then heare me gracious Soueraign, & you Peers,
That owe your felves, your lives, and fortunes,
To this Imperiall Throne. There is no barre
To make againft your Highnesse Clayme to France,
But this which they produce from Pharamond,
In terram Salicam Mulleres ne succedant,
No Woman shall succeed in Salique Land:
Which Salique Land, the French vnjuftly glowe
To be the Realeme of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this Law, and Female Barre.
Yet their owne Authors faithfully affirm,
That the Land Salique is in Germanie,
Betwenee the Flouds of Sala and of Elue:
Where Charles the Great hauing fubdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and fetted certaine French:
Who being in difdain of the German Women,
For some difhonof manners of their life,
Eftablifht then this Law; to wit, No Female
Should be Inheretrix in Salique Land :
Which Salique (as I faid) 'twixt Elue and Sala,
Is at this day in Germanie, call'd Meifen.
Then doth it well appeare, the Salique Law
Was not deuided for the Realeme of France:
Nor did the French poiffle the Salique Land,
Vntill foure hundred one and twentie yeeres
After definition of King Pharamond,
Idly fuppos'd the founder of this Law,
Who died within the yeere of our Redemption,
Foure hundred twentie fix: and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons, and did fost the French
Beyond the Ruer Sala, in the yeere
Eight hundred five. Befides, their Writers fay,
King Pepin, which depofed Childerik,
Did as Heire Generall, being defcended
Of Blitbild, which was Daughter to King Clothair,
Make Clayme and Title to the Crowne of France.
Hugh Capet alfo, who vfurpt the Crowne
Of Charles the Duke of Loraine, sole Heire male
Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the Great:
To find his Title with some fheues of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Convey'd himselfe as th'Heire to th'Lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemaine, who was the Sonne
To Lewis the Emperor, and Lewis the Sonne
Of Charles the Great: allo King Lewis the Tenth,
Who was sole Heire to the V gorpet Capet,
Could not keepe quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the Crowne of France, 'll satisfied,
That faire Queene Isabel, his Grandmother,
Was Lineall of the Lady Ermengarde,
Daughter to Charles the forefaid Duke of Loraine:
By the which Marriage, the Lyne of Charles the Great
Was re-vnited to the Crowne of France.
So, that as cleare is as the Summers Sunne,
King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capets Clayme,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appeare
To hold in Right and Title of the Female:
So doe the Kings of France vnto this day,
Howbeit, they would hold vp this Salique Law,
To barre your Highness claiming from the Female,
And rather chufe to hide them in a Nef,
Then amply to imbarre their crooked Titles,
Vfurpt from you and your Progenitors.

King. May I with right and confidence make this claim?

Bifb. Cant. The finne vnpon your head, dread Soueraigne:
For in the Booke of Numbers is it writ,
When the man dyes, let the Inheritance
Defend vnnto the Daughter. Gracious Lord,
Stand for your owne, vnwind your bloody Flagge,
Looke back into your mightie Ancitores:
Goe my dread Lord, to your great Grandfires Tombe,
From whom you clame; invoque his Warlike Spirit,
And your Great Vneckles, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedie,
Making defeat on the full Power of France:
Whiles his moft mightie Father on a Hill
Stood fmingling, to behold his Lyons Whelpe
Forrage in blood of French Nobilitie.
O Noble Englifh, that could entertaine
With halfe their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another halfe fland laughing by,
All out of worke, and cold for action.

Bifb. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puiffant Arme renew their Feats;
You are their Heire, you fit vnpon their Throne:
The Blood and Courage that renowned them,
Runs in your Veines: and your thrice-puiffant Liege
Is in the very May-Morne of his Youth,
Ripe for Exploits and mightie Enterprizes.

Exe. Your Brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth
Doe all except, that you should rowe your selfe,
As did the former Lyons of your Blood.

Wifh. They know your Grace hath cause, and means,
And so hath your Highneffe: neuer King of England
Had Nobles richer, and more loyall Subiectes,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And Iye pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Bifb. Cant. O let their bodies follow my deare Liege
With Bloods, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right:
In syde whereof, we of the Spiritualitie
Will rayfe your Highneffe such a mightie Summe,
As never did the Clergie at one time
Bring in to any of your Ancestors.

King. We muft not onely arme t'invade the French,
But lay downe our proportions, to defend
Against the Scot, who will make roade vpon vs,
With all advantages.

Bifb. Cant. They of those Marches, gracious Soueraigne, Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pilfering Borderers.

King. We do not meane the couring nahchers onely,
But feare the maine intendement of the Scot,
Who hath been fill a giddy neighbour to vs:
For you shall readie, that my great Grandfather
Neuer went with his Forces into France,
But that the Scot, on his vnfurfnift Kingdome,
Came pouring like the Tyde into a breach,
With ample and brim fulniffe of his force,
Galling the gleaned Land with hot Affayes,
Girding with grievous siege, Castles and Townes.
That England being emtie of defence,
Hath shooke and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood.

B. Cant. She hath bin the more fear'd the harm'd, my Liege:
For heare her but exampl'd by her felfe,
When all her Cheualrie hath been in France,
And fhe a mourning Widow of her Nobles,
Shee hath her felfe not onely well defended,
But taken and impounded as a Stray,
The King of Scots; whom fhe did fend to France,
To fill King Edwards fame with prifoner Kings,
And make their Chronicle as rich with pratyfe,
As is the Owfe and bottome of the Sea
With funken Wrack, and fum-jeffe Treauries.

Bifb. Ely. But there's a faying very old and true,
If that you will France win, then with Scotland firft begin.
For once the Eagle (England) being in prey,
To her vnguarded Nef, the Weaver (Scot)
Comes sneaking, and fo fucks her Principly Eggs,
Playing the Mouse in abfence of the Cat,
To tame and hauocke more then she can eate.

Exe. It follows theu, the Cat muft stay at home,
Yet that's but a cruft'd neceffity,
Since we haue lockes to safegard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty theues.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th'aduised head defends it felfe at home:
For Government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keepe in one confent,
Congreasing in a full and natural clofe,
Like Muficke.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven diuide
The flate of man in diuers functions,
Setting endeouur in continual motion:
To which is fixt as an ayme or butt,
Obediencie: for fo worke the Hony Bees,
Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach
The Act of Order to a peopled Kingdome.
They haue a King, and Officers of forts,
Where fome like Magiftrates correct at home:
Others, like Merchante, &c. Trade abroad;
Others, like Souldiers armed in their flings,
Make boote vpon the Summers Valuet buddes:
Which pillage, they with merry march bring home.
To the Tent-royal of their Emperor:
Who bufed in his Maieties furies
The finging Mafons building roofes of Gold,
The civil Citizens kneading vp the hone;
The poore Mechanicke Porters, crowding in Their heavy burthen at his narrow gate:
The Life of Henry the Fift.

That all the Courts of France will be disturb'd With Chances. And we understand him well, How he comes o're vs with our wilder days, Not measuring what vfe we made of them. We never valew'd this poor feate of England, And therefore living hence, did give us sife To barbarous license: As 'tis ever common, That men are merryed, when they are from home. But tell the Dolphin, I will keepe my State, Be like a King, and shew my fyle of Greatneffe, When I do rowne me in my Throne of France. For that I haue layd by my Maiestie, And plodded like a man for working days: But I will rife there with fo full a glorie, That I will dazle all the eyes of France, Yea strike the Dolphin blinde to looke on vs, And tell the pleafant Prince, this Mocke of his Hath turn'd his baiies to Gun-diones, and his foule Shall fland forre charged, for the waitfull vengeance That fhall flye with them: for many a thousand widows Shall this his Mocke, mocke out of their dear husbands; Mocke mothers from their fonnes, mocke Caftles downe: And some are yet vngotten and vnborne, That fhall have caufe to curfe the Dolphins fcorne. But this Iyes all within the wil of God, To whom I do appeale, and in whose name Tell you the Dolphin, I am comming on, To venge me as I may, and to put forth My rightfull hand in a wel-hallow'd caufe. So get you hence in peace: And tell the Dolphin, His left will favour but of hallow'd caufe. When thousands weep more then did laugh at it. Conuey them with life conduct. Fare you well. Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exe. This was a merry Meffage. King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it: Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy howre, That may give furth'rance to our Expedition: For we have now no thought in vs but France, Sawe thofe to God, that runne before our busineffe. Therefore let our proportions for thefe Warres Be foono collected, and all things thought vpon, That may with reasonable twisfullneffe add: More Fathers to our Wings by France before, We're chide this Dolphin at his fathers doore. Therefore let every man now taske his thought, That this faire Action may on foot be brought. Exeunt. Flourish. Enter Oburis. Now all the Youth of England are on fire, And fliken Dalliance in the Wardrobe lyes: Now thrive the Armorers, and Honors thought Reignes solely in the breath of every man. They fell the Paffure now, to buy the Horfe; Following the MIRROR of all Chriftian Kings, With winged heales, as English Mercuries. For now fit Exeption in the Ayre, And hides a Sword, from Hills vnto the Point, With Crownes Imperiall, Crownes and Coronets, Promis'd to Harry, and his followers. The French aduis'd by good intelligence Of this moft dreadfull preparation, Shake in their fear, and with pale Pollicy Seeke to diuer the English purposes. O England: Modell to thy inward Greatneffe, Like little Body with a mighty Heart:
What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kinde and natural:
But feat thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A neft of hollow bofomes, which he fillis
With treacherous Crownes, and three corrupt men:
One, Richard Earle of Cambridge, and the second
Henry Lord Scroope of Masham, and the third
Sir Thomas Grey Knight of Northumberland,
Have for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed)
Confirm'd Conspiracy with fearefull France,
And by their hands, this grace of Kings muft dye.
If Hell and Treafon hold their promis,
Ere he take flight for France; and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on, and we'll defign
Th' abuse of diſfance; force a play:
The fume is payde, the Traitors are agreed,
The King is fet from London, and the Scene
Is now transported (Gentles) to Southampton.
There is the Play-houfe now, there muft you fit,
And thence to France fhall we convey you safe,
And bring you backe: Charming the narrow feas
To give you gentle Peace: for if we may,
Wee'rt not offend one flomacke with our Play.
But till the King come forth, and not till then,
Vnto Southampton do we shift our Scene.

Enter Corporall Nym, and Lieutenant Bardolf.
Bar. Well met Corporall Nym.
Nym. Good morrow Lieutenant Bardolf.
Bar. What, are Ancient Piffall and you friends yet?
Nym. For my part, I care not: I fay little but when
Time fhall ferue, there fhall be fimiles, but that fhall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will winke and hold out mine yron: it is a fimple one, but what though? It will toffe Cheefe, and it will endure cold, as another mans fword will: and there's an end.
Bar. I will beftow a breakfast to make you friends, and wee'lt bee all three fomere brothers to France: Let's be fo good Corporall Nym.
Nym.Faith, I will live fo long as I may, that's the certaine of it: and when I cannot live any longer, I will doe as I may: That is my ref, that is the rendezvous of it.
Bar. It is certaine Corporall, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainely she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.
Nym. I cannot tell, Things muft be as they maymen may flepe, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and fome fay, knives have edges: It muft be as it may, though patience be a tyred name, yet fhee will plodde, there muft be Conclufions, well, I cannot tell.

Enter Piffall, & Quickly.
Bar. Heere comes Ancient Piffall and his wife: good Corporall be patient heere. How now mine Hofte Piffall?
Piff. Bafe Tyke, cal't thou mee Hofte, now by this hand I fware I forne the terme: nor fhall my NeI keep Lodgers.
Hoft.No by my troth, not long: For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourtenee Gentlemens that live honeftly by the pricke of their Needles, but it will bee thought we keepe a Bawdy-house fraught. O welladay Lady, if he be not hewne now, we fhall fee wilful adultery and myther committed.
Bar. Good Lieutenant, good Corporall offer nothing heere.
Nym. Piff.
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Nym. I shall have my Noble?
Pif. In cauth, most iuilly payd.
Nym. Well, then that the humor of't.

Enter Hobbes.

Hob. As euer you come of women, come in quickly to sir John: A poor heart, hee is so thale'd of a burning quotient Tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold.

Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The King hath ran bad humors on the Knight, that's the euen of it.
Pif. Nym, thou haft spoke the right, his heart is fraed and corroborate.

Nym. The King is a good King, but it must bee as it may: hee pays some humors, and carreeers.
Pif. Let vs condole the Knight, for (Lambekins) we will live.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, & Westminster.

Bed. Fore God his Grace is bold to trust these traitors Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

WeVS. How smooth and even they do bear themselves, As if allegiance in their bosomes fate
Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend, By interception, which they dreame not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours; That he shoulde for a foraigne purbe, so fell
His Soueraigne life to death and treachery.

Sound Trumpeats.

Enter the King, Scroope, Cambridge, and Gray.

King. Now fits the winde faire, and we will aboord.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kinde Lord of Moftram, And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts: Think you not that the powres we bear with vs Will cut their paffage through the force of France?
Doing the execution, and the aete,
For which we haue in head assembled them.

Sco. No doubt my Liege, if each man do his best.

King. I doubt not that, since we are well perfwaded
We carry not a heart with vs from hence, That grows not in a faire content with ours:
Nor leave not one behinde, that doth not with Succeffe and Conquett to attend on vs.

Cam. Neuer was Monarch better fear'd and lou'd,
Then is your Maiesty; there's not I thinke a fubieqt
That fits in heart-greefe and vnafineffe
Under the fweet shade of your government.

Kai. True: thofe that were your Fathers enemies, Have feep'd their gauls in hony, and do ferue you With hearts create of duty, and of zeale.

King. We therefore haue great caufe of thankfulness, And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner then quittance of defert and merit,
According to the weight and vnafineffe.

Sco. So fervice shall with fteelne fnewes toyle, And labour shall refresh it felfe with hope
To do your Grace inceffant fervice.

King. We judge no leffe, Vnkle of Exeter,
Inlarge the man committed yestreday,
That rayl'd against our perfon: We confider
It was exceffe of Wine that fet him on,
And on his more aduice, We pardon him,

Sco. That's mercy, but too much security:
Let him be puni'd Soueraigne, leaft example
Breed (by his fuffereance) more of fuch a kind.

King. O let vs yet be mercifull.

Cam. So may your Highneffe, and yet punish too.

Gray. Sir, you shew great mercy if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction.

King. Alas, you too much loue and care of me,
Are heavy Orifons'gainst this poore wretch:
If little faults proceeding on diftemper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how fhall we fretch our eye
When capitall crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and diged,
Appeare before vs? We'll yet inlarge that man,
Though Cambrige, Scroope, and Gray, in their deere care
And tender prefervation of our perfon
Wold haue him puni'd. And now to our French caufes,
Who are the late Commonwealthers?

Cam. I one my Lord,
Your Highneffe bad me aske for it to day.

Sco. So did you me my Liege.

Gray. And I my Royall Soueraigne.

King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours:
There yours Lord Scrope of Moftram, and Sir Knight:
Gray of Northumberland, this fame is yours:
Reade them, and know I know your worthineffe.

My Lord of Westminster, and Vnkle Exeter,
We will aboord to night. Why how now Gentlemen?
What fee you in thofe papers, that you loofe
So much complexion? Looke ye how they change:
Their cheecks are paper. Why, what reade you there,
That haue so cowarded and chac'd your blood
Out of apparence.

Cam. I do confesse my fault,
And do submit me to your Highneffe mercy.

Gray. Sco. To which we all appeale.

King. The mercy that was quiche in vs but late,
By your owne counfaile is suppreft and kill'd:
You must not dare (for shame) to talk of mercy,
For your owne reafons turned into your boomes,
As dogs upon their maillers, worrying you:
See you my Prince, and my Noble Peeres,
These English monsters: My Lord of Cambridge heere,
You know how apt our loue was, to accord
To furnih with all appertinent
Belonging to his Honour; and this man,
Hath for a few light Crownes, lightly conspir'd
And fwoone vnto the prafites of France.
To kill vs heere in Hampton. To the which,
This Knight no leffe for bounty bound to vs.
Then Cambridge is, hath likewife fwoone.
But O, What fhall I lay to thee Lord Scroope, thou cruel,
Ingrateful, fauage, and inhumane Creature?
Thou that didst beare the key of all my counfailes,
That knew'ft the very bottome of my foule,
That (almost) might'ft haue cown'd me into Golde,
Would't thou haue praftis'd on me, for thy vfe?
May it be poible, that foraigne hyer
Could out of thee extrack one fparkel of euill
That might annoy my finger? 'Tis fo strange,
That though the truth of it stands off as groffe
As blacke and white, my eye will scarcely fee it.
Treafon, and murther, ever kept together,
As two yoake diuelles fwoone to eythers purpofe,
Working fo groffely in an naturall caufe,
That admiration did not hoope at them.
But thou (gainft all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to waite on treafon, and on murther:
And whatfoever cunning feades it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously,
Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:
And other diuels that suspett by treasons,
Do botch and bungle vp damnation,
With patches, colours, and with formes being fetched
From gilt'ring fembiances of piety:
But he that temper'd thee, bad thee stand vp,
Gauze thee no infance why thou shouldest do treason,
Vnleffe to dub thee with the name of Traitor.
If that fame Daemen that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his Lyon-gate walke the whole world,
He might returne to valtie Tartar backe,
And tell the Legions, I can never win
A foule so eafe as that Englishmans

Oh, how haft thou with leaflous infection
The sweetneffe of affiance? Shew men dutifull,
Why fo difd thou: seme they grave and learned?
Why fo difd thou. Come they of Noble Family?
Why fo difd thou. Seme they religious?
Why fo difd thou. Or are they spare in diet,
Free from grosse paftion, or of mirth, or anger,
Confiant in spirit, not fweruing with the blood,
Garnisht'd and deck'd in mocke complemet,
Not working with the eye, without the eare,
And but in purged judgement trufting neither,
Such and fo finely boyled difd thou seme:
And thus thy fall hath left a kinde of blor,
To make thee full fraught man, and beft indue
With some fubfition, I will weep for thee.
For this reuolt of thine, me thinkes is like
Another fall of Man, Their faults are open,
Arreft them to the anwer of the Law,
And God acquitt them of their praifles.

Exe. I arreft thee of High Treafon, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge .
I arreft thee of High Treafon, by the name of Thomas Lord Scoope of Marfham .
I arreft thee of High Treafon by the name of Thomas
Gray, Knight of Northumberlائد .
&c. Our purpose, God joyful hath difcouer'd,
And I repent my fault more then my death,
Which I befeech your Highneffe to forgive,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motue,
The sooner to effect what I intended :
But God be thanked for preuention,
Which in fufferance heartily will reconcile,
Beecching God, and you, to pardon mee.

Gray. Neuer difd faithfull fubjeete more rejoicet
At the difcouery of moft dangerous Treafon,
Then I do at this houre joy ore my felfe,
Preuented from a dammed enterprize ;

My fults, but not my body, pardon Soueraigne.

King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your fentence
You have confipr'd againft Our Royall perfon,
Joynd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his Coffers,
Recey'd the Golden Earneft of Our death:
Wherein you would have fold your King to slaughter,
His Princes, and his Peeres to feruitude,
His Subiects to oppreffion, and contempet,
And his whole Kingdom into defolation :
Touching our perfon, feeke we no renuenge,
But we our Kingdomes safety wuft fo tender,
Whose ruine you sought, that to her Lawes
We do deluer you. Get you therefore hence,
(Poore mirifable wretches) to your death:
The taffe whereof, God of his mercy give

You patience to induere, and true Repentance
Of all your deare ofiences. Beare them hence.

Now Lords for France: the enterprize whereof
Shall be to you as vuile, like glorious.
We doubt not of a faire and luckie Warre,
Since God fo graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous Treafon, lurking in our way,
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now,
But every Rubbe is smoothet on our way.
Then forth, deare Countreymen : Let vs deliver
Our Pulfiance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Chearely to Sea, the fignes of Warre aduance,
No King of England, if not King of France.

Fleurifb. Enter Piffall, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hoffaffe.

Hoffaffe. 'Prythhee honey sweet Husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Bard. Would I were with him, whereforemee hee is, eyther in Heauen, or in Hell.

Hoffaffe. Nay fare, hee's not in Hell: hee's in Arthur's Bofome, if ever man went to Arthur's Bofome: a made a finer end, and went away and it had beene any Chriftoffe Child: a parted eu'n luft betweene Twelue and One, eu'n at the turning o'th Tyde: for after I few him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and fume vpone his fingers, I knew there was but one way: for his Nofe was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of greene fields. How now Sir John (quoth I') what man? be a good cheere: fo a cried out, God, God, God, three or foure times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a shoulde not think of God; I hop'd there was no neede to trouble himfelfe with any fuch thoughts yet: fo a bad me lay more Clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any fone: then I felt to his knees, and fo vp-pee'r'd, and vpward, and all was as cold as any fone.

Nim. They fay he cried out of Sack.

Hoffaffe. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women.

Hoffaffe. Nay, that a did not.

Boy. Yes that a did, and faid they were Deules incarne.

Woman. A could neuer abide Carnation, 'twas a Co colour he neuer lik'd.

Boy. A faid once, the Deule would have him about

Woman. Hoffaffe. A did in some fort (indeed) handle Women:
but then hee was rumatique, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Doe you not remember a faw a Flea flieke vpon Bardolfs Nofe, and a faid it was a blacke Soule burning in Hell.

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintaing that fere:
thats all the Riches I got in his feruice.

Nim. Shall wee thog't? The King will be gone from Southampton.

Pift. Come, let's a way. My Loue, glue me thy Lippes:
Looke to my Chattells, and my Moeables: Let Sences rule: The world is, Pitch and pay: trust none: for Oatthes are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold-fali is the onely Dogge: My Ducke, therefore Cauevo bee thy Counfllor. Goe, cleare thy Chryfalle. Yokefelloues in Armes, let vs to France, like Horfe-leeches.

lecches my Boyes, to fucke, to fucke, the very blood to fucke.
But that's but venomofse food, they say.
Wits Touch her soft mouth, and March.
Vard. Farewell Hooftelfe.

Nim. I cannot kisse, that is the humor of it: but adieu.

Pist. Let Huswiferie appeare: keep e close, I thee command.

Hooftelfe. Farewell: adieu.

Exeunt.

Flourish.
Enter the French King, the Dolphin, the Dukes

King. Thus comes the English with full power upon vs, And more then carefully it vs concerns, To answer Royally in our defences. Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britaine, Of Brabant and of Orleanc, shall make forth, And you Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch To lyne and new repairye our Townes of Warre With men of courage, and with meanes defendant: For England his approaches makes as fierce, As Water to the fucking of a Gulfe. It fits vs then to be as prudent, As seare may teach vs, out of late examples Left by the fatal and neglected English, Vpon our fields.

Dolphin. My most redoubted Father, It is most meet we arme vs 'gainst the Foe: For Peace it felpe shold not to doul a Kingdome, (Though War nor no knowne Quarrel were in question) But that Defences, Munif, Preparations, Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected, As were a Warre of Berry and Britaine. Therefore I say, 'ts meet we all goe forth, To view the sick and feeble parts of France: And let vs doe it with no shew of feare, No, with no more then if we heard that England Were bufied with a Whitfon Morrice-dance, For, my good Liege, thee is fo idly King'd, Her Scepter fo phantastically borne, By a vaine idle shallow humorous Youth, That fear attends her not.

Godl. O peace, Prince Dolphin, You are too much miiftaken in this King: Question your Grace the late Embassadors, With what great State he heard their Embassie, How well supply'd with Noble Councillors, How modest in exception; and whithall, How terrible in constant resolution: And you shall find, his Vanities fore-spent, Were but the out-side of the Roman Brutus, Conuering Diuersion with a Coat of Folly; As Gardener doe with Ordie hide thoie Routs That shall first spring, and be most delicate.

Dolphin. Well, 'ts not so, my Lord High Constable. But though we thinke it fo, it is no matter: In cases of defence, 'ts best to weigh The Enemy more mightie then he seemes, So the proportions of defence are fill'd: Which of a weake and niggardly protection, Doth like a Mifer fpoyle his Coat, with fchanting A little Cloth.

King. Think we King Harry strong: And Princes, looke you strongly arme to meet him. The Kindred of him hath beene fleflht vpon vs:

And he is bred out of that bloodie straine, That haunted vs in our familiar Pathes: Witnesse our too much memorable shame, When Creffy Battell fatly was strucke, And all our Princes captiv'd, by the hand Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales: Whiles that his Mountaine Sire, on Mountaine standing Vp in the Ayre, crown'd with the Golden Sunne, Saw his Heroicall Seed, and smil'd to see him Mangle the Worke of Nature, and deface The Patternes, that by God and by French Fathers Had twenteie yeeres beene made. This is a Stem Of that Victorious Stock: and let vs feare The Natiue mightinesse and fate of him.

Enter a Message.

Mess. Embassadors from Harry King of England, Doe crave admittance to your Maiestie.

King. Weele give them preuent audience. Goe, and bring them. You fee this Chaft is holy followed, friends.

Dolphin. Turne head, and stop pursui'to coward Dogs Most spend their mouths, who what they seem to threaten Runs farre before them. Good my Soueraigne Take yp the English short, and let them know Of what a Monarchie you are the Head: Selfe-loue, my Liege, is not fo vile a finne, As selfe-neglecting.

Enter Exeter.

King. From our Brother of England?

Exe. From him, and thus he greetts your Maiestie:

He wills you in the Name of God Almightie, That you declue your fley, and lay apart The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heauen, By Law of Nature, and of Nations, longs To him and to his Heires, namely, the Crowne, And all wide-stretched Honors, that pertaine By Cuthome, and the Ordinance of Times, Vnto the Crowne of France: that you may know 'Tis no finifter, nor no awk-ward Clayme, Pickt from the worne-holes of long-vanifht dayes, Nor from the duft of old Obliuion raket, He fends you this most memorable Lyne, In every Branch truly demonstrative: Willing you ouer-looke this Pedigree: And when you find him eveny deriu'd From his moft fam'd, of famous Anceftors, Edward the third; he bids you then refigne Your Crowne and Kingdome, indirecly held From him, the Natiue and true Challenger.

King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint: for if you hide the Crowne Euen in your hearts, there will he ralke for it. Therefore in fierce Tempeste is he comming, In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a Cote: That if requiring fale, he will compell. And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord, Deliuer yp the Crowne, and to take mercie On the poore Souls, for whom this hungry Warre Opens his vaffe lawes: and on your head Turning the Widowes Tears, the Orphans Cryes, The dead-mens Blood, the pruity Maidens Groanes, For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothed Louers, That shall be swallowed in this Controuerifie. This is his Clayme, his Threatning, and my Message: Vnleffe the Dolphin be in prefence here; To whom expressly I bring greeting to.

King. For
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

King. For vs, we will consider of this further:
To morrow shal ye beare our full intent
Back to our Brother of England.

Dolph. For the Dolphin,
I stand here for him: what to Him from England?

Exe. Scoone and defiance, slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not mis-become
The mightie Sender, doth he prize you at.
The mightie Sender, if your Fathers Highness
Doe not, in granted all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter Mock you sent his Maiestie;
Hee'le call you to so hot an Answer of it,
That Caues and Wombie Vaultages of France
Shall chide your Trefpas, and returne your Mock
In second Accent of his Ordinance.

Dolph. Say: if my Father render faire returne,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but Oddes with England.
To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanitie,
I did present him with the Paris-Balls.

Exe. Hee'le make your Paris Loure shakke for it,
Were it the Midtreffe Court of mightie Europe:
And be affurd, you'le find a difference,
As we his Subjectes haue in wonder found,
Betwenee the promife of his greener dayes,
And the hee matters now: now he weighs Time
Even to the utmost Graines: that you shall reade
In your owne Loffes, if he play in France.

King. To morrow shall you know my mind at full.

Flourish.

Exe. Dispatch vs with all speed, leaft that our King
Come here himselfe to question our delay;
For he is footed in this Land already.

King. You haile soone dispatch, with faire conditions.
A Night is but small breathe, and little pawe,
To answer matters of this conseqüence.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift Scene flyes,
In motion of no leafe celerity then that of Thought.

Suppose, that you have seene
The well-appointed King at Doner Peer,
Embarke his Royaltie: and his brave Fleet,
With sullen Streamers, the young Phebas pavynge
Play with your Fancies: and in them behold,
Vpon the Hengkap Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing;
Heare the shrill Whistle, which doth order gue
To founds confus'd: behold the threaden Sayles,
Borne with th'inusible and creeping Wind,
Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea,
Bretling the loftie Surge. O, doe but thinke
You stand vpon the Riuage, and behold
A City on th'inconftant Billowes dauncing:
For fo appeares this Fleet Maiestical,
Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow:
Grapple your minds to ternage of this Nauie,
And leave your England as dead Mid-night, till,
Guarded with Grandfires, Babyes, and old Women,
Eyther paft, or not arriu'd to pyth and puifance:
For who is he, whose Chin is but enricht
With one appearing Hayre, that will not follow
These cull'd and choyfe-drawne Cavaliers to France?
Worke, worke your Thoughts, and therein see a Siege:
Behold the Ordinance on their Carriages,
With fatall mouths gaping on girded Harflew.
Suppose th'Embassador from the French comes back:
Tells Harry, that the King doth offer him
Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Dowrie,
Some petty and vnprofitable Dukedomes.
The offer likers not: and the nimble Gunner
With Lynfock now the diuellish Cannon touches,
Alarum, and Chambers gee off.
And downe goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eech out our performance with your mind.

Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Gloucefter.

Alarum: Scaling Ladders at Harflew.

King. Once more unto the Breach,
Deare friends, once more;
Or close the Wall vp with our English dead:
In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest fillinesse, and humilitie;
But when the blast of Warre blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the Tygers:
Stiffen the finews, commune vp the blood,
Diquisite faire Nature with hard-fauour'd Rage:
Then lend the Eye a terrible asfect:
Let it pry through the portage of the Head,
Like the Braffe Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelme it,
As fearefully, as doth a called Rocke
O're-hang and iuty his confounded Bafe,
Swill'd with the wild and waftfull Ocean.
Now fet the Teeth, and fretch the Nothrill wide,
Hold hard the Breath, and bend vp every Spirit
To his full height. On, on, you Nobilis English,
Whole blood is fet from Fathers of Warre-proufe:
Fathers, that like fo many Alexanders,
Haue in these parts from Morne till Euen fought,
And sheath'd their Swords, for lack of argument,
Difhonour not your Mothers: now atte.
That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you.
Be Coppie now to me of groffer blood,
And teach them how to Warre. And you good Yeomen,
Whole Lymes were made in England: fiew vs here
The meteell of your Pature: let vs fauer,
That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not:
For there is none of you fo mean and base,
That hath not Noble lutter in your eyes.
I fee you stand like Grey-hounds in the slips,
Straying vpon the Start. The Game's afoot:
Follow your Spirit; and vpon this Charge,
Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. George.

Alarum, and Chambers gee off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Piftoll, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, on, to the breach, to the breach.

Nim. 'Pray thee Corporall flay, the Knockes are too hot:
And for mine owne part, I have not a Cave of Lues:
The humor of it is too hot, that is the very plaine-Song of it.

Pift. The plaine-Song is most iuft: for honors doe abound: Knockes goe and come: Gods Vafils drop and dye: and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doth winne immortal fame.

Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London: I would glue all my fame for a Pot of Ale, and safetie.

Pift. And
The Life of Henry the Fifth.

Pift. And I: If wishes were preuayle with me, my purpose should not sacle with me; but thither would I hight.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth fing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Vp to the breach, you Dogges; auant you Cullions.

Nim. These be good humors: your Honor wins bad humors.

Boy. As young as I am, I have obferu'd these three Swafters: I am Boy to them all three, but all three they, though they would ferue me, could not be Man to me; for indeed three such Antiques do not amount to a man: for Bardolph, hee is white-lui'd, and red-fac'd; by the meanes whereof, a faces it out, but fights not; for Pifhull, hee hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the meanes whereof, a breaks Words, and keeps whole Weapons: for Nim, hee hath heard, that men of few Words are the beft men, and therefore hee fcornes to fay his Prayers, left a should be thought a Courage: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few Good Deeds; for a neuer broke any mans Head but his owne, and that was againft a Poft, when he was drunke. They will reale any thing, and call it Purchase. Bardolph fole a Lute-cafe, bare it twelue Leagues, and fold it for three halfeipence. Nim and Bardolph are Iworne Brothers in filching: and in Callice they fole a fire-fhouell. I knew by that piece of Seruice, the men would carry Coales. They would haue me as familiar with mens Pockets, as their Gloues or their Hand-kercers: which makes much againft my Manhood, if I should take from another Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plaine pocketing vp of Wrongs. I must leue them, and feeke some better Seruice: their Villany goes againft my weake stomacke, and therefore I must call it vp.

Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Captain Fluellen, you must come prefently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucester would fpeak with you.

Flu. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not fo good to come to the Mynes; for looke you, the Mynes is not according to the disciplines of the Warrre the concauties of it is not fufficient: for looke you, th'utherarie, you may discoufe into the Duke, looke you, is digt himfelfe foure yard vnder the Countermines: by Chejbu, I think a will plowe vp all, if there is not better directiouns.

Gower. The Duke of Gloucefter, to whom the Order of the Siege is guen, is altogther directed by an Irish man, a very valiant Gentleman vflathe.

Welch. It is Captaine Mackmorries, is it not?

Gower. I thinke it be.

Welch. By Chejbu he is an Affe, as in the World, I will vverie as much in his Bead: he ha's no more directiouns in the true discouiers of the Warrres, looke you, of the Roman discouiers, then is a Puppy-dog.

Enter Mackmorries, and Captaine Iamy.

Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captaine, Captaine Iamy, with him.

Welch. Captaine Iamy is a maruellous falarious Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'aunciant Warrres, upon my particular knowledge of his directiouns: by Chejbu he will maintain his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the discouiers of the Prifinate Warrres of the Romans.

Sct. I say gudday,Captaine Fluellen.

Welch. Godden to your Worhip, good Captaine Iamy.

Gower. How now Captaine Mackmorries, haue you quitted the Mynes? haue the Pioneers guen o're?

Irifh. By Chrifh Law tifh ill done: the Worke ifh glue ouer, the Trompet found the Retreat. By my Hand I swear, and my fathers Soule, the Worke ifh ill done: it ifh glue ouer: I would have blown vp the Towne, fo Chrifh faue me law, in an houre. O tifh ill done, tifh ill done: by my Hand tifh ill done.

Welch. Captaine Mackmorries, I beseech you now, will you voutaffa me, looke you, a few dispuitions with you, as partly touching or concerning the discouiers of the Warre, the Roman Warrres, in the way of Argument, looke you, and friendly communication: partly to fatisfie my Opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, looke you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Militarie discipline, that is the Point.

Sct. It fall be vary gud, gud feith, gud Captens bath, and I fall quit you with gud leue, as I may pick occasion: that fall I mar.

Irifh. It is no time to discouere, fo Chrifh faue me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warrres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to discouere, the Town is befeuch'd: and the Trumpet call vs to the breech, and we talke, and be Chrifh do nothing, tis shame for vs all: so God fa'me tis shame to hand still, it is shame by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Worke to be done, and there ifh nothing done, fo Chrifh fa'me law.

Sct. By the Mes, ere thefe eyes of mine take themselfes to flobber, ayle de gud fheriue, or Ile ligge 'th' grund for it; ay, or goe to death: and Ile pay't as valourously as I may, that fall I furerly do, that is the breff and the long: mar, I wad full faine hearde fome queftion tween you tway.

Welch. Captaine Mackmorries, I thinke, looke you, vnder your correction, there is not many of your Nation.

Welch. Looke you, if you take the matter otherwise then is meant, Captaine Mackmorries, peraduenture I shall thinke you doe not vfe me with that afabilitie, as in discouere you ought to vfe me,looke you, being as good a man as your felle, both in the discouiers of Warre, and in the deriuation of my Birth, and in other particularites.

Irifh. I doe not know you so good a man as my felle: so Chrifh faue me, I will cut off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will mitake each other.

Sct. A, that's a foule fault.

A Parle.

Gower. The Towne founds a Parle.

Welch. Captaine Mackmorries, when there is more better opportunitie to be required, looke you, I will be fo bold as to tell you, I know the discouiers of Warre: and there is an end.

Exit.

Enter the King and all his Traine before the Gates.

King. How yet refolves the Gouernour of the Towne?

This is the latest Parle we will admit:

There-
The Life of Henry the Fift.

Therefore to our best mercy give your felues,
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defe vs to our wort ; for as I am a Souldier,
A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best;
If I begin the batt’rie once again,
I will not leave the half-stachted Harflaw,
Till in her ashes the eye buried.
The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut vp,
And the flesh’d Souldier, rough and hard of heart,
In libertie of bloody hand, shall range,
With Conscience wise as Hell, moving like Graffe
Your fresh faire Virgins, and your flowing Infants.
What is it then to me, if impious Warre,
Arrayed in flames like to the Prince of Fiends,
Doe with his myrrch complexion all fell feats,
Enlynckt to waft and defolation;
What is’t to me, when you your felues are cause,
If your pure Maydens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing Violation?
What Reyne can hold licentious Wickedneffe,
When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriere ?
We may as bootleffe spend our vaine Command,
Upon th’enrag’d Souldiers in their fpyole,
As fend Precepts to the Leuithan, to come ahere.
Therefore, you men of Harflaw,
Take pitty of your Towne and of your People,
Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command,
Whiles yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace
O’re-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds
Of headly Murther, Spoyle, and Villany.
If not : why in a moment looke to fee
The blind and bloody Souldier, with foule hand
Desire the Locks of your thrill-shrinking Daughters:
Your Fathers taken by the finer Beards,
And their moft reuerend Heads daft to the Walls:
Your naked Infants spitted vp on Pykes,
Whilest the mad Mothers, with their howles confus’d,
Doe breake the Clouds: as did the Wives of Lewry,
At Herods bloody-hunting flaughters-men.
What fay you? Will you yeeld, and this ayoud?
Or guiltie in defence, be thus deftroy’d.

Enter Gouverneur.

Governor. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dolphin, whom of Successs we entreated,
Returns vs, that his Powers are yet not ready,
To rayle so great a Siege: Therefore great King,
We yeeld our Towne and Lives to thy soft Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispofe of vs and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Vnckle Exeter,
Goe you and enter Harflaw; there remaine,
And fortifie it strongly ’gainst the French:
Vfe mercy to them all for vs, deare Vnckle.
The Winter comming on, and Sickness growing
Vpon our Souldiers, we will retire to Calis,
To night in Harflaw will we be your Gueft,
To morrow for the March are we addrest.
Flourish, and enter the Towne.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.

Kateb. Alice, tu as efe en Angleterre, & tu bien parlas le Language.

Alice. En peu Madame.

Kateb. Il te prie m’enfignes, il faut que te apprend a par-len: Comiet appelle you le main en Anglais ?

Alice. Le main il & appelle de Hand.

Kateb. De Hand.

Alice. E le doy.

Kateb. Le doyts, ma foy Ie oublie, e doyts mayts, je me soumeray le doyts tu pense qu’ils ont apelle de fngres, ou de fngres.

Alice. Le main de Hand, le doyts le Fngres, je pense que je suis le bon efboier.

Kateb. T’ay-gynié dux mots d’ Anglois visement, comappelle vous le anglais?

Alice. Le anglais, les appelions de Nayles.

Kateb. De Nayles fistte : dites moy, je te parle bien de:
Hand, de Fngres, e de Nayles.

Alice. C’est bien dit Madame, il & fort bon Anglois.

Kateb. Dites moy l’ Anglois pour le bras,

Alice. De Arme, Madame.

Kateb. E de coudes.

Alice. D’Elbow.

Kateb. D’Elbow : Ie men fay le repiticio de tous les mots que vous mariez, apprins des a prefent.

Alice. Il & trop difficile Madame, comme le pense.

Kateb. Escuye moy Alice efjoutez, d’Hand, de Fngres, de Nayles, d’Arme, de Bilbow.

Alice. D’Elbow, Madame.

Kateb. O Seigneur Dieu, ie men oublie d’Elbow, comen ap-pelle vous le col.

Alice. De Nick , Madame.

Kateb. De Nick, e le menton.

Alice. De Chin.

Kateb. De Sin : le col de Nick, le menton de Sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf voyfere bonneur en verite vous pronon-cies les mots aux droit, que le Natifs d’Angleterre.

Kateb. Je ne doute point d’apprendre par de grace de Dieu, & en peu de temps.

Alice. N’auz vos y defy oublie ce que ie vous a ennuye.

Kateb. Nome le recitera a vous promptiement, d’Hand, de Fngres, de Mayles.

Alice. De Nayles, Madame.

Kateb. De Nayles, de Arme, de Bilbow.

Alice. Sans voyffe bonneur d’Elbow.

Kateb. Ainsi de je d’Elbow, de Nick, & de Sin : comen ap-pelle vous les pied & de reba.

Alice. Le Foot Madame, & le Count.

Kateb. Le Foot, & le Count : O Seigneur Dieu, il font le mots de fon mauvais corruptible groffe & impudique, & non pour le Dames de Honore d’ofuer : il ne voudray prononcer ce mots devant le Seigneurs de France, pour toute le monde, fo le Foot & le Count, neant moy, Je recitera un autrefoy ma leon enfembles, d’Hand, de Fngres, de Nayles, d’Arme, d’Elbow, de Nick, de Sin, de Foot, le Count.

Alice. Excellens, Madame.

Kateb. C’aft affes pour une foys, alons nous a diner.

Exit.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Confiable of France, and others.

King. Tis cecinre he hath paft the River Some.

Conft. And if be he not fought withall, my Lord,

Let vs not liue in France : let vs quit all,
And give our Vineyards to a barbarous People.

Dolph. O Dieu vivant : Shall a few Sprays of vs,
The emptying of our Fathers Luxurie,
Our Syens, put in wilde and sauge Stock,

Spirit vs go suddenly into the Clouds,
And ouer-lookie their Grafters?

Brit.Normans, but baftard Normans, Norman bastards,
Mort du ma vie, if they march along

Vnfought withall, but I will fell my Dukedome,
The Life of Henry the Fift.

To buy a hobbry and a durtie Farne
In that nooke-fotten Ile of Albion.

Cont. Dieu de Batailles, where haue they this mettell?
Is not their Clymatge foggy, raw, and dulli?
On whom, as is desigsight, the Sunne lookest pale,
Killing their Fruit with frownnes, Can fodden Water,
A Drench for fur-reyn'd Iaides, their Barly broth,
Deaco't their cold blood to fuch valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine,
Seeme frofite t, O, for honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like rooping Iyckles
Vpon our Houfes Thatch, whiles a more frofite People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poore we call them, in their Naturs Love.

Dolphin. By Faith and Honor,
Our Madames mock at vs, and plainly say,
Our Mettell is bred out, and they will glue
Their bodys to the Luft of English Youth,
To new-flore France with Baylard Warriors.

Brit. They bid us to the English Dancing-Schooles,
And call a Lauzets' high, and swift Carrants',
Saying, our Grace is only in our Heeles,
And that we are most loftie Run-aways.

King. Where is Montoy the Herald? sped him hence,
Let him gett England with our harpe defiance.
Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honor edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabret, High Conftable of France,
You Dukes of Orleans, Burbon, and of Berry,
Alaunfo, Brabant, Bar, and Burgonie,
Inquas Castillon, Rambarques, Pandemon,
Leamoto, Grand Pree, Ruffi, and Faulconbridge,
Leys, Lefrale, Bouquiall, and Charaloyet,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings;
For your great Seats, now quit you of great flames:
Barre Harry England, that swepe through our Land
With Penons painted in the blood of Harflew:
Ruth on his Hoof, as doth the melted Snow
Vpon the Valleys, whole low Vaflall Seat,
The Alpes doth ifp, and void his rheume vpon.
Goe downe vpon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captaine Chariot, into Roan
Bring him our Prifoner.

Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers fiek, and famifht in their March:
For I am sure, when he shall fee our Army,
Hee'le drop his heart into the finck of feare,
And for achitenuemen, offer vs his Randome.

King. Therefore Lord Conftable, haft on Montoy,
And let him fay to England, that we fend,
To know what willing Randome he will giue.
Prince Dolph, you fhall affay with vs in Roan.

Dolph. Not fo, I doe befearch your Majestie.

King. Be patient, for you fhall remaine with vs.
Now forth Lord Conftable, and Princes all,
And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall.

Enter Captaine, English and Welch, Gower and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captaine Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?
Flu. I affay you, there is very excellent Seruices committed at the Bridge.

Gower. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?
Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aga-memon, and a man that I love and honour with my foule, and my heart, and my dutie, and my lue, and my liuing, and my vtermoft power. He is not, God be prafied and bleshed, any hurt in the World, but keeps the Bridge moff valiantly, with excellent discipline.

There is a aunchient Lieutenant there at the Pridge, I thinke in my very confidence hee is as valiant a man as Marke Anthony, and hee is a man of no efimation in the World, but I did fe him doe as gallant service.

Gower. What doe you call him?

Flu. Hee is call'd auncient Piftell.

Gower. I know him not.

Enter Piftell.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pift. Captaine, I thee befeech to doe me favours: the Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. I, I praye God, and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pift. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and found of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruel Fate, and giddie Fortunes furious fickle Wheele, that Goddefe blind, that stands on the rolling refleffe Stone.

Flu. By your patience, auncient Piftell: Fortune is painted blinde, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to fignifie to you, that Fortune is blinde: and thee is painted alfo with a Wheele, to fignifie to you, which is the Morall of it, that thee is turning and inconfant, and mutabilitie, and variation: and her foot, looke you, is fixed vpon a Spherical Stone, which rowles, and rowles, and rowles:
in good truth, the Poet makes a moft excellent defcription of it: Fortune is an excellent Morall.

Pift. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frownnes on him:
for he hath ftoine a Pox, and hanged must a be: a damned death: let Gallowes gape for Dogge, let Man goe free, and let not Hempe his Wind-pipe fuffocate: but Exeter hath gien the doome of death, for Pox of little price.
Therefore goe fpeeke, the Duke will hear thy voyce;
and let not Bardolphs vitall thred bee cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speake Captaine for his Life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Auncient Piftell, I doe partly vnderfand your meaning.

Pift. Why then reioyce therefore.

Flu. Certainly Auncheint, it is not a thing to reioyce at: for if, looke you, he were my Brother, I would deare the Duke to vfe his good pleafure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vfed.

Pift. Dye, and be dam'd, and Figo for thy friendship.

Flu. It is well.

Pift. The Figg of Spaine. Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gower. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rafcall, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purfe.

Flu. Ile affure you, this is vtr'd as prae words at the Pridge, as you shall fee in a Summers day: but it is very well what he ha's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is ferue.

Gower. Why 'tis a Gull, a Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himselfe at his returne into London, vnder the forme of a Souldier: and fuch fellowes are perfet in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learne you by rote where Scrucies were done;
at fuch and fuch a Sconce, at fuch a Breach, at fuch a Convoy: who came off brufely, who was shot, who difgrac'd, what termes the Enemy flood on: and this they conne perfectly in the phrafe of Warre; which they tricke vp with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generalls Cut, and a horrid Sute of the Campe, will doe amoungst burning Fomales, and Ale-wafth Wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learne to know such Vlonders of the age, or else you may be maruellously mifhtooke.

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Genero: I doe perceiue hee is not the man that hee would gladly make theu to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my minde: heare you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and bis poore Soldiers.

Flu. God please your Maiestie.
King. How now Fluellen, cam'th thou from the Bridge?
Flu. If, so please your Maiestie: The Duke of Exeter ha's very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and most praine passages: marry, th'athuerfarie was haue polleffion of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Maiestie, the Duke is a praine man.

King. What men haue you loft, Fluellen?
Flu. The perditation of th'athuerfarie hath bene very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I think the Duke hath loft neuer a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maiestie know the man: his face is all bubeckles and wheelkes, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blows at his nofe, and it is like a coale of fire, sometimes plew, and sometimes red, but his nofe is executed, and his fire's out.

King. Wee would have all such offenders so cut off: and wee give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French vpbrayd or subfert in declineful Language; for when Lewtie and Crueltie play for a Kingdome, the gentle Gamefter is the fooonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountioy.
Mountioy. You know me by my habit.
King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?
Mountioy. My Maf ters mind.
King. Vnfold it.
